

Date and Time: Sunday, October 22, 2023 1:20:00 PM CST

Job Number: 208634710

Documents (100)

1. Merkle v. Aetna Health, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47586

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

2. Riley v. R.I. Dep't of Envtl. Mgmt., 2005 R.I. Super. LEXIS 62

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

3. Genesee Vending, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17442

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

4. In re Monosodium Glutamate Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8424

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

5. Bassett v. NCAA, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17570

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

6. Brennan v. Concord EFS, Inc., 369 F. Supp. 2d 1127

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

7. Am. Needle, Inc. v. New Orleans La. Saints, 385 F. Supp. 2d 687

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

8. Able Sales Co. v. Compania de Azucar, 406 F.3d 56

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

9. In re Polyester Staple Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47179

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

10. JES Props., Inc. v. USA Equestrian, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43122

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
11. S. Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63364
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
12. George Miller Brick Co., Inc. v. Stark Ceramics, Inc., 9 Misc. 3d 151
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
13. TXU Generation Co., L.P. v. PUC of Tex., 165 S.W.3d 821
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
14. Xcaliber Int'l Ltd., LLC v. Edmondson, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26705
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
15. California ex rel. Lockyer v. Safeway, Inc., 371 F. Supp. 2d 1179
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

16. Dixie Gas & Food, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12010

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

17. Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Or. v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 411 F.3d 1030

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

18. Shaw v. United States, 371 F. Supp. 2d 265

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

19. Investors Corp. v. Bayer AG, 2005 Vt. Super. LEXIS 92

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

20. Nilavar v. Mercy Health System-Western Ohio, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60941

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

21. Ramallo Bros. Printing, Inc. v. El Dia, Inc., 392 F. Supp. 2d 118

---

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

22. Mothershed v. Justices of the Supreme Court, 410 F.3d 602

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

23. Miller's Pond Co., LLC v. City of New London, 273 Conn. 786

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

24. Bradburn Parent Teacher Store, Inc. v. 3M, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11375

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

25. Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp. \(In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig.\), 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11520

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

26. J.B.D.L. Corp. v. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11676

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

27. MacArthur v. San Juan County, 416 F. Supp. 2d 1098

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

28. Freeman v. Lasky, Haas & Cohler, 410 F.3d 1180

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

29. In re Enron Corp., 327 B.R. 526

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

30. Stand Energy Corp. v. Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., 373 F. Supp. 2d 631

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

31. United States v. Gosselin World Wide Moving, N.V., 411 F.3d 502

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
32. Tex. Commer. Energy v. TXU Energy, Inc., 413 F.3d 503
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
33. Minn. Life Ins. Co. v. AXA Inv. Mgr, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12320
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
34. Am. Express Travel Related Servs. Co. v. Visa U.S.A., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42852
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
35. Tippecanoe Assocs. II, LLC v. Kimco Lafayette 671, Inc., 829 N.E.2d 512
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022
36. ASAP Paging Inc. v. Centurytel of San Marcos Inc., 137 Fed. Appx. 694
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

37. Med. Sav. Ins. Co. v. HCA, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20206

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

38. Asociacion de Detallistas de Gasolina de P.R., Inc. v. Shell Chem. Yabucoa Inc., 380 F. Supp. 2d 40

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

39. Am. Copper & Brass, Inc. v. Donald Boliden AB, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43642

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

40. In re Enron Corp., 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 3470

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

41. Sickles v. Cabot Corp., 379 N.J. Super. 100

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

42. Chase Med., LP v. CHF Techs., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13731

---

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

43. In re Enron Corp., 326 B.R. 257

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

44. Jackson, Tenn. Hosp. Co. v. W. Tenn. Healthcare, Inc., 414 F.3d 608

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

45. Sanderson v. Culligan Int'l Co., 415 F.3d 620

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

46. Teamsters Local Union No. 117 v. Sysco Food Servs. of Seattle, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43789

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

47. Schor v. Abbott Labs., 378 F. Supp. 2d 850

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

48. Meijer, Inc. v. 3M, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13995

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

49. Olstad v. Microsoft Corp., 2005 WI 121

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

50. In re GlaxoSmithKline PLC, 699 N.W.2d 749

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

51. Medtronic Navigation, Inc. v. BrainLAB Medizinische Computersystems GmbH, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21695

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

52. In re Enron Corp., 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 3471

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

53. In re Acacia Media Techs. Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37009

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

54. Briggs & Stratton Corp. v. Kohler Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14808

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

55. eMag Solutions LLC v. Toda Kogyo Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44512

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

56. Lundsford v. Callaway Golf Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59896

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

57. Mothershed v. Justices of the Supreme Court, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 14812

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

58. In re Enron Corp., 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 3472

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

59. Loeffel Steel Prods. v. Delta Brands, Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 794

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

60. Polygram Holding, Inc. v. FTC, 416 F.3d 29

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

61. Kendall v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21449

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

62. Kendall v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21450

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

63. People's Choice Wireless, Inc. v. Verizon Wireless, 131 Cal. App. 4th 656

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

64. Banner Pharmacaps, Inc. v. Perrigo Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37842

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

65. McBee v. Delica Co., 417 F.3d 107

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

66. In re Enron Corp., 328 B.R. 75

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

67. Wine & Spirits Retailers, Inc. v. Rhode Island, 418 F.3d 36

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

68. N. Jackson Pharm., Inc. v. Caremark RX, Inc., 385 F. Supp. 2d 740

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

69. Smith Wholesale Co. v. Philip Morris USA Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18078

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

70. Guichard v. Mandalay Pictures, LLC, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45410

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

71. Wilson Learning Corp. v. Schlechte, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39631

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

72. Adeduntan v. Hosp. Auth. of Clarke County, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18281

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

73. Florida v. Tenet Healthcare Corp., 420 F. Supp. 2d 1288

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

74. Freeman Indus. LLC v. Eastman Chem. Co., 172 S.W.3d 512

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

75. Hydril Co., L.P. v. Grant Prideco, L.P., 385 F. Supp. 2d 609

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

76. Insignia Sys., Inc. v. News Corp., Ltd., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42851

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

77. MGA Entm't, Inc. v. Mattel, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18594

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

78. Mpt, Inc. v. Marathon Labels, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18270

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

79. Reifert v. S. Cent. Wis. Mls Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23431

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

80. Andrx Pharms., Inc. v. Elan Corp., PLC, 421 F.3d 1227

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

81. In re Wireless Tel. Servs. Antitrust Litig., 385 F. Supp. 2d 403

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

82. Ariz. Cartridge Remanufacturers Ass'n v. Lexmark Int'l, Inc., 421 F.3d 981

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

83. In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18693

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

84. Alaska Vill. Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Crowley Marine Servs., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39668

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

85. Creative Copier Servs. v. Xerox Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19402

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

86. Basic Med. Care Plus, Inc. v. N.C. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33033

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

87. Geneva Pharm. Tech. Corp. v. Barr Labs., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19069

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

88. Schermer v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 702 N.W.2d 898

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

89. Tritent Int'l Corp. v. Commonwealth, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20233

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

90. Slattery v. Apple Comput., Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50531

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

91. Corey Airport Servs. v. City of Atlanta, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62370

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

92. K&R Nursing Servs. v. Genesis Health Ventures of Windsor, Inc., 2005 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2473

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

93. Lde Corp. v. Dyno Nobel, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60985

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

94. Texas v. Organon USA Inc. \(In re Remeron End-Payor Antitrust Litig.\), 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27011

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

95. Harrison Aire, Inc. v. Aerostar Int'l, 423 F.3d 374

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

96. Pelfresne v. Village of Lindenhurst, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23094

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

97. Strawflower Elecs., Inc. v. Radioshack Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45205

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

98. Flying Eagle Espresso, Inc. v. Host Int'l, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37679

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

99. Howard Hess Dental Labs. Inc. v. Dentsply Int'l, Inc., 424 F.3d 363

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

100. PSN III., Inc. v. Ivoclar Vivadent, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21044

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 26, 2004 to Dec 31, 2022

Merkle v. Aetna Health, Inc.

United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida

April 27, 2005, Decided; April 27, 2005, Entered on Docket

CASE NO. 04-61713-CIV-COHN

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47586 *; 2005 WL 6151455

PETER F. MERKLE, M.D., P.A., Plaintiff, v. AETNA HEALTH, INC., NEIGHBORHOOD HEALTH PARTNERSHIP, INC., HEALTH OPTIONS, INC. and VISTA HEALTHPLANS, INC., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Related proceeding at, Motion granted by, Settled by Merkle v. Vista Healthplan, Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146761 \(S.D. Fla., Aug. 16, 2010\)

Core Terms

---

providers, private right of action, motion to dismiss, allegations, predicate act, subscribers, reimbursement, conspiracy, wire fraud, mail, antitrust claim, state law claim, particularity, disclose, racketeering activity, dispute resolution, restraint of trade, customary charge, enterprise, rates

Counsel: [*1] For M.D.,P.A. Peter F. Merkle, Plaintiff: Douglas Alan Blankman, Lawrence M. Kopelman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kopelman & Blankman, Fort Lauderdale, FL; Eric Lee, LEAD ATTORNEY, Lee & Amtzis, P.L., Boca Raton, FL; Nicole Reid Avallone, LEAD ATTORNEY, Lerach Coughlin Stoia Geller Rudman & Robbins, Boca Raton, FL; Patrick William Lawlor, LEAD ATTORNEY, Law Office of Patrick W. Lawlor, Deerfield Beach, FL; Paul Jeffrey Geller, Stuart Andrew Davidson, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, Boca Raton, FL.

For Aetna Health Inc., Defendant: Christine Marie Nanfeldt, Hilarie Bass, Mark Paul Schnapp, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Greenberg Traurig, Miami, FL; Geoffrey M. Sigler, Miguel A. Estrada, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Gibson Dunn & Crutcher, Washington, DC; Glenn Jerrold Waldman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Waldman Trigoboff Hildebrandt Marx & Calnan, P.A., Weston, FL; Kevin R. Nowicki, LEAD ATTORNEY, Gibson Dunn & Crutcher, Irvine, CA; Richard J. Doren, LEAD ATTORNEY, Gibson Dunn & Crutcher, Los Angeles, CA.

For Neighborhood Health Partnership, Inc., Defendant: Patrick S. Coffey, LEAD ATTORNEY, Scott J. Fisher, Gardner Carton & Douglas, Chicago, IL; William Edward McIntyre, LEAD ATTORNEY, Daniel Alter, Bunnell Woulfe Kirschbaum [*2] Keller McIntyre & Gregoire, Fort Lauderdale, FL.

For Health Options,Inc., Defendant: Michael Garrett Austin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Steven E. Siff, McDermott Will & Emery LLP, Miami, FL.

For Vista Healthplan Inc, Defendant: Steven Mark Ziegler, LEAD ATTORNEY, Andres Gonzalez, Steven M. Ziegler PA, Hollywood, FL; Dorothy Frances Easley, Easley Appellate Practice PLLC, Miami, FL.

Judges: JAMES I. COHN, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: JAMES I. COHN

Opinion

---

FINAL ORDER GRANTING MOTIONS TO DISMISS

THIS CAUSE is before the Court upon Defendant Vista Healthplans, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 52], Vista Healthplans' Motion for Judicial Notice [DE 53], Defendant Neighborhood Health Partnership, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 55], Defendant Aetna Health, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 56], and Defendant Health Options, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 60]. The Court has carefully considered the motions, responses, replies and the argument of counsel made at a hearing held on April 19, 2005.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff, an orthopedic physician, filed this class action against four health maintenance organizations ("HMO's") asserting claims for violation of the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), federal antitrust [*3] law, quantum meruit, unjust enrichment, and violation of Florida Statute Section 641.513. Plaintiff alleges that beginning on or about May, 2003, the four Defendants engaged in a scheme to violate Florida law and federal law by paying non-participating emergency physicians at a rate below the usual and customary charges for those services.

Plaintiff and the putative class of plaintiffs ("Plaintiffs") are physicians who provide emergency services in hospitals. These physicians can be specialists in a variety of fields. The Defendants are health maintenance organizations offering health insurance to their insureds ("subscribers"), some of whom have required emergency care from Plaintiffs. Plaintiffs do not have a contract with these Defendants to provide such care. However, pursuant to Florida Statute § 641.513, Plaintiffs are required to provide emergency treatment to Defendants' subscribers. Plaintiffs are also prohibited from billing these subscribers for any amount over the copayment or coinsurance required by Defendants, pursuant to Florida law and the contract between Defendants and the subscribers. In return, Defendants must compensate Plaintiffs. Section 641.513\(5\) states that [*4] such compensation shall be the lesser of: (a) the provider's charges; (b) the usual and customary provider charges for similar services in the community where the services were provided; or (c) the charge mutually agreed to by the health maintenance organization and the provider within 60 days of the submittal of the claim. If there is no agreement, disputes arise regarding the meaning of subsection (b), in particular the amount of the "usual and customary" charges.

To resolve these disputes, in 2000, the Florida legislature enacted Florida Statutes § 408.7057, which creates a voluntary, but binding, dispute resolution process for resolving claims between health care providers and health maintenance organizations. See Health Options, Inc. v. Agency for Health Care Administration, 889 So.2d 849, 851-52 \(Fla. 1st DCA 2004\). The Agency for Health Care Administration ("AHCA"), a state agency, has selected Maximus, Inc., an independent, third-party claim dispute resolution entity to review these claim disputes. 889 So.2d at 850. Under § 408.7057, AHCA does not have discretion to accept or reject a Maximus' decision, but rather must accept such decision and issue a final agency order within [*5] 30 days. Id. at 852. Defendants have submitted to the Court several decisions by AHCA approving payment of claims from providers similarly situated to Plaintiffs at 120% of Medicare reimbursement rates as being the usual and customary charges contemplated by § 641.513\(5\)\(b\) [DE 53].<sup>1</sup>

In this action, therefore, based upon the Complaint and Defendant's motions to dismiss, there appear to be few facts, if any, in dispute. Defendants essentially admit, at least for purposes of the motions to dismiss, that after Maximus and AHCA approved 120% of Medicare reimbursement rates to providers covered by § 641.513 on June 11, 2003, they each separately decided to reduce their reimbursement rates to this level.<sup>2</sup> Nonetheless, the Court analyzed each of the four Defendants' motions to dismiss under a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) standard. As many of Defendants' arguments overlap and are similar, they will be discussed together.

---

<sup>1</sup>The Court will grant, without any opposition in the record, Vista Healthplans' Motion for Judicial Notice of the Maximus/ACHA decisions.

<sup>2</sup>On June 11, 2003, Maximus rendered its initial decision in a claims dispute between BayCare Health System, Inc. and Blue Cross Blue Shield of Florida/Health [*6] Options. Following BayCare's withdrawal of its claims, on August 11, 2003, AHCA rendered its final decision dismissing the matter. Exhibit D to Plaintiff's Omnibus Consolidated Opposition to Defendants' Motions [DE 67]. The First District Court of Appeal reversed this dismissal in the Health Options opinion cited supra.

II. DISCUSSION

In ruling upon the motions to dismiss, despite the apparent lack of facts in dispute, the Court nonetheless views the factual allegations of the complaint as true and must be read to include any theory on which the plaintiff may recover. See Linder v. Portocarrero, 963 F.2d 332, 334-336 \(11th Cir. 1992\) (citing Robertson v. Johnston, 376 F.2d 43 \(5th Cir. 1967\)). With regard to the particular claims, the Court notes that although a principal issue in dispute is whether a private right of action exists for providers pursuant to Florida Statute 641.513, the non-existence of such a cause of action does not automatically doom Plaintiffs' RICO and antitrust claims. Plaintiffs have also plead predicate acts in the RICO claims based upon mail fraud, wire fraud, and extortion. The Court will thus first discuss the RICO and antitrust claims without reliance upon the [*7] existence of a private right of action under Section 641.513.

A. RICO Issues

In order to prove any RICO violation, Plaintiffs must prove the existence of an "enterprise" and a "pattern of racketeering activity." 18 U.S.C. § 1962; Beck v. Prupis, 162 F.3d 1090 \(11th Cir. 1998\). A "pattern of racketeering activity" requires the plaintiff to establish "at least two acts of racketeering activity." 18 U.S.C. § 1961\(5\); Republic of Panama, 119 F.3d at 948. When mail or wire fraud are alleged as the predicate acts that are indictable as racketeering activity, as in the instant case, a plaintiff must allege facts sufficient to support the element of intentional misrepresentation that is part of a "scheme to defraud." Beck, 162 F.3d at 1095; Republic of Panama, 119 F.3d at 949 (plaintiff must allege facts to support each element for at least two predicate acts).

1. Enterprise

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' allegations of the enterprise in this case are insufficient. See Compl. ¶¶ 135-143. Plaintiffs assert that pursuant to U.S. v. Goldin, 219 F.3d 1271, 1274-75 \(11th Cir.\), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1015, 121 S. Ct. 573, 148 L. Ed. 2d 491 (2000) and In re Managed Care Litigation, 298 F.Supp.2d 1259, 1277 \(S.D.Fla. 2003\) the allegations [*8] of the Complaint in this case are sufficient. Defendants assert that pursuant to United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 583, 101 S. Ct. 2524, 69 L. Ed. 2d 246 \(1981\), Plaintiffs have pled insufficient allegations of participation and control in the alleged enterprise. However, upon a review of Plaintiffs' allegations in the Complaint, the Court concludes that pursuant to Goldin, an Eleventh Circuit decision made after Turkette (for which review was denied), Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged an enterprise and Defendants' participation and control thereof.

2. Predicate Acts

Defendants assert several shortcomings with respect to Plaintiffs' allegations regarding the predicate acts. As noted above, though Defendants argue that violations of § 641.513 cannot constitute a predicate act as no private right of action exists, the RICO claims could be based upon predicate acts of mail or wire fraud,<sup>3</sup> irrespective of the existence of a private right of action under § 641.513.

---

<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs also attempt to assert acts of extortion as predicate acts. There are at least two reasons to reject this attempt. First, in Scheidler v. NOW, 537 U.S. 393, 123 S. Ct. 1057, 154 L. Ed. 2d 991 \(2003\), the Supreme Court held that a plaintiff must allege that a RICO defendant acquire [*9] some property from injured plaintiffs. Though Plaintiffs assert that Defendants have withheld money belonging to Plaintiffs, rather than an act of extortion, the parties actually have a dispute over interpretation of "usual and customary" charges. Second, in this case the medical providers are required to provide services by statute and cannot balance

Defendants also assert that the allegations of mail and wire fraud lack the requisite particularity required by Rule 9\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 9\(b\) provides that "[i]n all averments of fraud . . . the circumstances constituting fraud . . . shall be stated with particularity." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\). The particularity requirement of Rule 9\(b\) serves an important purpose in fraud actions by "alerting defendants to the precise misconduct with which they are charged and protecting spurious charges of immoral and fraudulent behavior." Ziemba v. Cascade Int'l, Inc., 256 F.3d 1194 (11th Cir. 2001) (internal quotation marks omitted). The application [*10] of Rule 9\(b\), however, must not abrogate the concept of notice pleading under the federal rules, Id.; Friedlander v. Nims, 755 F.2d 810, 813 n.2 (11th Cir. 1985) ("[A] court considering a motion to dismiss for failure to plead fraud with particularity should always be careful to harmonize the directives of rule 9\(b\) with the broader policy of notice pleading."). Allegations of date, time, or place satisfy the requirement of Rule 9\(b\) that the circumstances of the fraud be alleged with particularity, but alternative means are also available to satisfy the rule. Durham v. Business Management Associates, 847 F.2d 1505, 1512 (11th Cir. 1988).

Plaintiffs argue that the Complaint does provide sufficient particularity. See Compl. ¶¶ 153-156. Plaintiffs' theory of mail and wire fraud is that the Defendants' sending of Explanation of Benefits ("EOB's") to Plaintiffs containing the unlawful low paid amount fails to disclose that Defendants have concluded that the "usual and customary" requirement in § 641.513 can be met by payment of 120% of Medicare rate. Plaintiffs assert that the failure to disclose the wrongfully calculated payment amounts to a deception.

While the Court tends to agree with [*11] Plaintiff that at first glance the requisite particularity has been alleged by use of the EOB's, the problem with Plaintiffs' argument is that the sending of the EOB's is not deceptive. As discussed in oral argument and agreed upon by counsel for Plaintiffs, to constitute mail or wire fraud, the acts must contain some deception and intent to deceive. There appears to be no dispute that the EOB's contain accurate information - that is, the amount stated on the EOB is the amount paid. See Exhibits 3, 5, 6 and 7 to Complaint.<sup>4</sup> Plaintiffs further argue that the Defendants knew that their payments were based upon 120% of the Medicare reimbursement rate, which cannot be in compliance with the "usual and customary charges" requirement in § 641.513.

Defendants [*12] argue that Florida law does not require them to disclose the underlying computation of proprietary rates. In Langford v. Rite Aid of Alabama, Inc., 231 F.3d 1308, 1312 -1313 (11th Cir. 2000), the Eleventh Circuit affirmed the granting of a motion to dismiss in a case in which uninsured customers alleged pharmacists had a duty to disclose the differential pricing between uninsured versus insured customers. The Court held that a district court must look beyond statutory/regulatory duties, and also look beyond normal state common law duties, since "concealment of critical data, even without a formalized duty to disclose that data, can constitute mail and/or wire fraud in certain situations." 231 F.3d at 1312. The Eleventh Circuit ultimately found no duty to disclose this differential in pricing and affirmed the granting of a motion to dismiss the RICO claims in Langford. Id. at 1314.

Plaintiffs, however, reply upon Judge Moreno's decision in In re Managed Care Litigation, 298 F.Supp.2d at 1278. Judge Moreno followed the Langford decision quoted above, but denied the motion dismiss by concluding that: "these failed disclosures alleged in the [Second Amended Complaint] go to 'the heart of [*13] their relationship' and disclosure was necessary to prevent the doctors from being misled by Defendants' apparent actions and statements." In oral argument, Plaintiff relied solely upon this decision to distinguish the present case from the Langford decision.

The allegations in Judge Moreno's case are distinguishable from the allegations in this case. As described by Plaintiffs' counsel at the hearing on Aetna's Motion to Transfer, in this case there are no allegations of "downcoding" bill their HMO patients. Thus, Defendants are not making any threats to Plaintiffs regarding their property, but rather are simply (allegedly) not paying enough under the statute.

---

<sup>4</sup> The Court may consider documents referred to by a plaintiff in a complaint which are central to the plaintiff's claim for purposes of a motion to dismiss without conversion of the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment. Brooks v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Fla., 116 F.3d 1364, 1369 (11th Cir. 1997) (opinion of then United States District Court Judge Stanley Marcus attached to Eleventh Circuit opinion); Smith Barney, Inc. v. Scanlon, 180 F.R.D. 444, 446 (S.D.Fla. 1998).

or affirmative misrepresentations on the EOB's. See Transcript of Hearing at pp. 14-16 [DE 69]. Thus, the Court concludes that as this case is more like Langford, in that the Defendants' EOB's are accurate but reflect undisclosed changes in rate calculations, the EOB's cannot form the basis of a claim of mail or wire fraud as predicate acts under RICO.<sup>5</sup>

In response to Plaintiff's argument that the Court must assume that the Maximus decision interpreting § 641.513 as allowing 120% of Medicare rates to be considered "usual and customary charges" is wrong, the Court concludes that the relevant issue before the Court is not whether the Maximus' decisions, as accepted by ACHA, are wrong or not, but rather whether Plaintiff can allege predicate acts and a pattern of racketeering activity necessary to state a RICO claim when the acts complained of are approved by a Florida state agency.<sup>6</sup> The fact of Maximus' decision, coupled with the lack of deception in the alleged predicate acts, leads this Court to conclude that it appears beyond a doubt that Plaintiffs can prove no set of facts in support of the RICO claims which would entitle them to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957).

B. Antitrust Issues

Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiff's claims of a conspiracy to restrain trade in the pursuant to Section 1 of the Sherman Act. The Eleventh Circuit has stated that:

Section 1 of the Sherman Act broadly prohibits "[e]very contract, combination ... or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce ...." A § 1 conspiracy to restrain trade does not need to allege the specific element of a conspiracy to monopolize, but must allege 1) an agreement to enter a conspiracy, 2) designed to achieve an unlawful objective. It is fundamental that a plaintiff establish an agreement between two or more persons to restrain trade; unilateral conduct is not prohibited by § 1.

Aquatherm Industries, Inc. v. Florida Power & Light Co., 145 F.3d 1258, 1262 (11th Cir. 1998), [*16] cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1050, 119 S. Ct. 1356, 143 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1999) (internal citations omitted).

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs have not alleged a specific geographic market, in that emergency services are generally provided to a local market, not an entire state. Defendants also assert that allegations of companies acting in parallel (parallelism) are insufficient to state a conspiracy in restraint of trade. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986) ("conduct as consistent with permissible competition as with illegal conspiracy does not, standing alone, support an inference of antitrust conspiracy"). The Eleventh Circuit has held that "price fixing plaintiffs must demonstrate the existence of 'plus factors' that remove their evidence from the realm of equipoise and render that evidence more probative of conspiracy than of conscious parallelism." Williamson Oil Co., Inc. v. Philip Morris USA, 346 F.3d 1287, 1301 (11th Cir. 2003).<sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs respond by stating that they have alleged several plus factors, including motive to conspire

<sup>5</sup> As for the letters Defendants' sent to subscribers informing them that the providers cannot bill the subscribers for the unpaid balance (Exhibit 2 to Complaint), these too are accurate statements containing no deception. Furthermore, as the Plaintiffs were not the recipients of those letters, Plaintiffs conceded that they cannot use these letters as predicate [*14] acts which caused injury to Plaintiffs. Byrne v. Nezhat, 261 F.3d 1075, 1110 (11th Cir. 2001), citing Pelletier v. Zweifel, 921 F.2d 1465, 1499 (11th Cir. 1991).

<sup>6</sup> Though not necessary at this point (though the issue was fully briefed and argued), the Court does reject Defendants' argument that Plaintiffs cannot show any reliance upon Defendants' acts of sending [*15] the EOB's because the providers are required to treat the patients before they are aware of the reimbursement rate. The providers are relying upon receipt from Defendants of "the usual and customary charges," pursuant to § 641.513, in return for their provision of emergency services to HMO subscribers. Thus, under the particular statutory duties of provision of care and payment to providers, the Court will infer that the reliance element is present in this case.

(financial gain), opportunity to conspire (use of same reimbursement guidelines and participation in industry coordination); [*17] and sharp departure from normal business practices (sudden onset of reimbursement reductions). See Plaintiffs' Omnibus Consolidated Memorandum at 41-43 [DE 67].

This Court agrees with Defendants that their conduct in lowering reimbursement payments is consistent with each Defendant's self interest. Other than the sharp onset of the lowered [*18] reimbursements, and access to industry software and guidelines, Plaintiffs have failed to allege any other plus factors. Moreover, though this conclusion is based upon a motion to dismiss standard, it is undisputed that the timing of the onset of Defendants' lowering of payments is explained by the Maximus ruling of June 11, 2003.

In addition, Plaintiffs have failed to sufficiently allege how competition is negatively affected by Defendants' conduct or what unlawful objective is to be achieved. Defendants and Plaintiffs do not compete. In fact, § 641.513 requires Plaintiffs to provide emergency care to Defendant's customers, and requires Defendants to pay providers for these services. Defendants' actions treat all providers equally. Defendants do not benefit from driving providers out of the business of providing health care services. Thus, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have failed to state an antitrust claim.

C. ERISA Preemption

Before turning to whether to consider Plaintiffs' state law claims, Defendant Aetna Health asserts in their brief that any such state law claims would be preempted by ERISA. Pursuant to ERISA "super-preemption," a state common law claim is removable if [*19] it relates to an ERISA plan. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 481 U.S. 58, 66-67, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 \(1987\). Four elements are required for complete preemption: 1) there must be a relevant ERISA plan; 2) plaintiff must have standing to sue under that plan; 3) the defendant must be an ERISA entity; and 4) the complaint must seek compensatory relief akin to that available under 29 U.S.C. § 1132\(a\) (typically this will be a claim for benefits due under the plan). Butero v. Royal Maccabees Life Insurance Company, 174 F.3d 1207, 1212 \(11th Cir. 1999\). In this case, Plaintiff argues that the standing to sue element is missing.

Although providers can obtain ERISA standing through an assignment from a beneficiary, Hobbs v. Blue Cross Blue Shield of Alabama, 276 F.3d 1236 \(11th Cir. 2001\), Plaintiff argues that it seeks reimbursement as a non-participating provider pursuant to § 641.513, and not as an assignee under the ERISA plan. This Court agrees. Therefore, if Plaintiffs could bring a state law claim, such claims should not be dismissed on grounds of ERISA preemption.

D. Section 1367(c)- Declining to assert supplemental jurisdiction

Defendants Health Options, Vista, and Neighborhood Health urge this Court [*20] to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over any remaining state law claims. With the dismissal of the federal claims, 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(c\)\(3\) allows a district court to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction when all claims over which it has original jurisdiction have been dismissed, as is now the case herein.

The Court notes that the issue of whether Plaintiffs have a private right of action under § 641.513 is a close question.<sup>8</sup> Defendants put forth several arguments against reading § 641.513 as containing a private right of action. First, the language of the statute itself does not contain an explicit right of action. Second, the overall statutory scheme in Florida for HMO's includes a voluntary, though binding, dispute resolution provision in § 408.7057. Third, Defendants submitted extensive legislative history wherein attempts to include a private right of action have been defeated, and, a version of the HMO act which included a private right of action was vetoed by then Gov. Lawton Chiles because of such a suit provision (according to Defendants) [DE 54]. Defendants also assert that the legislative history of the current act contains no inference of a private right [*21] of action. Finally, Defendants assert that the Florida Supreme Court has rejected a private right of action for subscribers against HMO's under the HMO Act. Villazon v. Prudential Health Care Plan, 843 So.2d 842 \(Fla. 2003\).

<sup>7</sup> Examples of "plus" factors include: "(1) signaling of intentions; (2) permanent allocations programs; (3) monitoring of sales; (4) actions taken contrary to economic self-interest, including (a) little analysis of whether to follow price increases, (b) [competitors] pulling away from the discount cigarette market, (c) the May 1995 price increase lead by RJR and followed by Philip Morris, (d) Philip Morris' agreement to base the initial [Management Science Associates] ... payments on market capitalization rather than market share, and (e) 'excessive' price increases after the MSA; (5) nature of the market; (6) strong motivation; (7) reduction in the number of price tiers; (8) opportunities to conspire; (9) pricing decisions made at high levels; (10) the smoking and health conspiracy; and (11) foreign conspiracies." Williamson Oil Co., 346 F.3d at 1305.

Plaintiffs also make credible arguments in favor of inference of a private right of action. For example, other parts of the health care laws support inference of a private right of action for providers to enforce § 641.513. For example, § 641.3154\(4\), within the HMO Act, states in part that:

this prohibition [against balance billing the HMO subscriber] applies during the pendency of any claim for payment made by the provider to the organization for payment of the services and any legal proceedings or dispute resolution process to determine whether the organization is liable for the [*22] services if the provider is informed that such proceedings are taking place.

Fla. Stat. § 641.3154\(4\) (emphasis added).<sup>9</sup> Plaintiffs also argue that prior to legislative enactment of a cause of action, Florida courts inferred a private right of action for automobile injuries under the Personal Injury Protection ("PIP") statutory scheme in Fla. Stat. § 627.736.

Perhaps Plaintiffs' best argument is that § 641.513 was intended to require HMO's to pay for emergency care, in exchange for requiring providers to provide such care without billing subscribers beyond their copay. Thus, without a provider right of action to collect usual and customary charges from the HMO, no remedy is available.

Plaintiffs further contend that the voluntary Maximus dispute resolution process is not a viable remedy. Plaintiffs argue that the Maximus decisions have no legal value, as they are the result of "some unknown Maximus employee" making a determination that a payment rate of 120% of Medicare was appropriate. Plaintiffs also seek to distinguish Villazon as a case involving subscriber suits under the HMO Act, [*23] which Villazon described as Fla. Stat. §§ 641.17-641.3923, not including § 641.513. Moreover, subscribers do have contractual remedies not available to non-participating providers, who care for HMO subscribers pursuant to statute, not pursuant to a contract.

Plaintiffs also provide examples of other statutes where private rights of action have been inferred by the Courts. First, three District Court of Appeals have held that hospitals are liable for failing to enforce requirements that physicians who obtain hospital privileges have malpractice insurance or meet the conditions to not have such insurance. Mercy Hosp., Inc. v. Baumgardner, 870 So.2d 130, 131 \(Fla.App. 3 Dist. 2003\); Robert v. Paschall, 767 So.2d 1227 \(Fla. 5th DCA 2000\), review denied, 786 So. 2d 1187 (Fla.2001); Baker v. Tenet Healthsystem Hosps., Inc., 780 So. 2d 170 \(Fla. 2d DCA 2001\). However, the 4th DCA recently reached the opposite conclusion. Plantation General Hosp. Ltd. Partnership v. Horowitz, 895 So. 2d 484, 2005 WL 293031, \*2 \(Fla.App. 4 Dist. 2005\).

While all of Plaintiffs' arguments regarding analogous statutes are well taken, each situation involves a Florida court inferring a private right of action in a state statute. As [*24] a federal court, this Court must be particularly careful when inferring a new state law cause of action. Swerhun v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 979 F.2d 195, 198 \(11th Cir. 1992\) (citing Farlow v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 874 F.2d 791, 795 \(11th Cir. 1989\)). In addition, given the novel nature of the claim and uncertainty over whether a private cause of action exists, it is all the more appropriate for this Court, pursuant to Section 1367\(c\)\(1\) ("novel or complex issue of State law") and \(c\)\(3\) (dismissal of all federal claims), to exercise its discretion and dismiss the state law claims set forth in Counts V through VII.

---

<sup>8</sup> With regard to Plaintiffs' claims of unjust enrichment or quantum meruit, counsel for Health Options appeared to concede, upon questioning by the Court of Plaintiffs' available remedies if no private right of action exists, that such claims could be brought in state court. The Court need not decide if such a concession was made, as it will decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction.

<sup>9</sup> The Court notes that Defendant Aetna asserts that this reference is intended to mean ERISA litigation.

III. CONCLUSION

The Court further concludes that affording Plaintiffs leave to file an amended complaint as to the RICO and antitrust claims would be futile in this case. As noted above, there are no material facts in dispute. Defendants, at least for purposes of this motion to dismiss, admit that they took the actions Plaintiffs assert form the basis of the RICO and antitrust claims. What is in dispute is whether those acts state a valid claim. In addition, the Court notes that Plaintiffs did not seek leave to amend as an alternative basis to deny the motions [*25] to dismiss with prejudice.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. Vista Healthplans' Motion for Judicial Notice [DE 53] is hereby GRANTED;
2. Defendant Vista Healthplans, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 52] is hereby GRANTED;
3. Defendant Neighborhood Health Partnership, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 55] is hereby GRANTED;
4. Defendant Aetna Health, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 56] is hereby GRANTED;
5. Defendant Health Options, Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss [DE 60] is hereby GRANTED;
6. The RICO and antitrust claims are hereby DISMISSED with prejudice, while the state law claims in Counts V through VII are hereby DISMISSED, without prejudice;
7. The Clerk may close this case and deny any other motions as moot.

DONE AND ORDERED in Chambers at Fort Lauderdale, Broward County, Florida, this 27th day of April, 2005.

/s/ James I. Cohn

JAMES I. COHN

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

Riley v. R.I. Dep't of Envtl. Mgmt.

Superior Court of Rhode Island, Providence

April 27, 2005, Filed

C.A. NO. PC 04-0987

Reporter

2005 R.I. Super. LEXIS 62 *; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,814

STEVEN RILEY v. RHODE ISLAND DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT, and FREDERICK J. VINCENT, in his capacity as interim director of the RHODE ISLAND DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT

Subsequent History: Affirmed by Riley v. R.I. Dep't of Envtl. Mgmt., 941 A.2d 198, 2008 R.I. LEXIS 15 \(R.I., Feb. 14, 2008\)

Disposition: [*1] Court denies the declaratory relief prayed for by the Appellant and affirms the decision of the D.E.M Hearing Officer.

Core Terms

---

license, fishery, fishing, regulation, fundamental rights, commercial fishing, general assembly, rights, Marine, hearing officer, Sherman Act, moratorium, resources, substantial evidence, new license, endorsements, finfish, classification, argues, plenary power, occupation, provisions, violates, declaratory judgment, equal protection, summary judgment, anti trust law, exemption, fishermen, shellfish

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN1 State & Territorial Governments, Licenses

See R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-5\(1\)\(ii\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

HN2 State Declaratory Judgments, Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act

The Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act, R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-30-1 (1956) et seq., grants the Superior Court power to declare rights, status, and other legal relations whether or not relief is or could be claimed. The Declaratory Act also provides that the Superior Court may grant additional affirmative relief based on the declaratory judgment whenever necessary or proper provided subsequent supplementary proceedings are brought pursuant thereto.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

HN3 [] Judgments, Declaratory Judgments

See R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-30-2 (1956).

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > Discretionary Jurisdiction

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act

HN4 [] State Declaratory Judgments, Discretionary Jurisdiction

The purpose of the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act, R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-30-1 et seq. (1956), is to facilitate the termination of controversies. The decision to issue a declaratory judgment lies within the trial justice's broad discretion. R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-30-12 (1956) provides that the Declaratory Act should be liberally construed and administered. Existence of alternate methods of relief, including administrative, do not preclude declaratory judgment.

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > General Overview

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > General Overview

HN5 [] Judicial Review, Standards of Review

Judicial review of contested agency decisions is governed by R.I. Gen. Laws § 42-35-15\(g\) (1956).

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > General Overview

HN6 [] Judicial Review, Standards of Review

See R.I. Gen. Laws § 42-35-15\(g\) (1956).

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > Substantial Evidence

Environmental Law > Administrative Proceedings & Litigation > Judicial Review

HN7 Standards of Review, Substantial Evidence

The reviewing court is precluded from substituting its judgment for that of the agency regarding witness credibility or the weight of evidence concerning questions of fact. The court's review is limited to determining whether substantial evidence exists to support the agency's decision. Substantial evidence means such relevant evidence that a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion, and means an amount more than a scintilla but less than a preponderance. The court will reverse factual conclusions of administrative agencies only when they are totally devoid of competent evidentiary support in the record. In deference to the agency, the court must uphold the agency's conclusions when they are supported by any legally competent evidence in the record.

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Legislative Controls > Explicit Delegation of Authority

Governments > Legislation > Enactment

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > General Overview

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

HN8 Legislative Controls, Explicit Delegation of Authority

When an agency promulgates regulations pursuant to specific authority granted by the Rhode Island General Assembly, the regulations are legislative rules that carry the force and effect of law and enjoy a presumption of validity. To determine whether a rule is to be classified as legislative or interpretive, one must consider the power assigned to the administrative agency. If a statute expressly delegates power to interpret and define certain legislation to an agency, regulations promulgated pursuant to that power are legislative rules having the force of law. Legislative rules are valid if they are within the power granted by the General Assembly, are issued pursuant to proper procedure, and are reasonable as a matter of due process.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > General Overview

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > Arbitrary & Capricious Standard of Review

Constitutional Law > ... > Case or Controversy > Constitutionality of Legislation > General Overview

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Judicial Review > Standards of Review

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Nature & Scope of Protection

HN9 Fundamental Rights, Procedural Due Process

If a regulation is challenged on constitutional due process or equal protection grounds and does not infringe upon a fundamental constitutional right or implicates a suspect class, the regulation must be rationally related to furthering a legitimate state interest in order to be upheld. Only if a regulation is without any reasonable basis and purely arbitrary will it be found unconstitutional under this standard.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Nature & Scope of Protection

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN10 [blue icon] Constitutional Law, Substantive Due Process

In regard to R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-1 et. seq. (1956), the scope of the fundamental right protected in R.I. Const. art. I, § 17, is that all the inhabitants of the state shall continue to enjoy and freely exercise equal access to the state's fishery resources. This gives the benefits of fishery to all the people in equal measure. The very nature and scope of the right to fish that R.I. Const. art. I, § 17 protects is not unqualified; rather, it anticipates that reasonable legislative regulation is necessary to properly effectuate that right. If a statute or regulation contained restrictions that infringed upon the fundamental right of the inhabitants of the state to have equal access to the rights of fishery, then such a regulation or law would be subject to strict-scrutiny analysis. Such fishing is not merely for the profit and emolument of the fishermen engaged in the business. In addressing the substantive due process claim, the burden is on the plaintiffs to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the provisions of the statute lack a substantial relation to the public health, safety, and welfare, or to the Legislature's constitutionally prescribed duty to protect and conserve the fishery resources of the state. There is no violation of equal protection or due process rights and the statute is constitutional.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Judicial Review > Standards of Review

Governments > Legislation > Enactment

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Legislatures

HN11 [blue icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Within the Rhode Island Constitution's broad grant of legislative power to the Rhode Island General Assembly lies its plenary power to regulate the fishing resources of the state. Furthermore, the whole subject of fisheries is under the fostering care of the General Assembly. Not all legislative classifications, however, are impermissible. The Legislature enjoys a wide scope of discretion in enacting laws that affect some classes of citizens differently from others. Strict scrutiny applies when a fundamental right has been impinged upon, or a suspect classification arises. The court will employ a minimal-scrutiny analysis, however, when assessing economic or social regulations that neither infringe on a fundamental right, nor result in a classification that is "suspect." The scope of the liberty interests protected by the Fourteenth Amendment includes the right of the individual to engage in the common occupations of life, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men.

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Legislatures

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN12 [blue icon] State & Territorial Governments, Legislatures

The power to regulate the rights of fishery is, therefore, derived directly from the Rhode Island Constitution, not merely from a legislative enactment, and such constitutional authorizations are subject to an unquestionably strong and favorable presumption. It is well settled that the Rhode Island General Assembly has plenary power to regulate fisheries as dictated by R.I. Const. art. I, § 17. Additionally, R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-1 (1956) provides that the General Assembly has plenary authority and responsibility to provide for the conservation of natural resources of the state, including its marine fisheries. The General Assembly has plenary power to regulate the fisheries and as such, can reasonably regulate the number of commercial fishing licenses.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Real Property Law > Water Rights > Nonconsumptive Uses > Fishing

Real Property Law > Water Rights > Nonconsumptive Uses > Watersports

HN13 [blue icon] Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

Under R.I. Const. art. I, § 17, the rights of fishery, and the privileges of the shore include but are not limited to fishing from the shore, the gathering of seaweed, leaving the shore to swim in the sea and passage along the shore. The "right of fishery" is defined as the general and common right of the citizens to take fish from public waters, such as the sea, great lakes, etc. Such rights are restricted however, by federal and state laws that establish fishing seasons, licensing requirements, catch limits, etc.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Legislatures

HN14 [blue icon] Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

See R.I. Const. art. I, § 17.

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Legislatures

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN15 [blue icon] State & Territorial Governments, Legislatures

R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-1\(7\) (1956) sets forth the Rhode Island General Assembly's findings which include a need to make the statutes and programs for marine fisheries management and licensure adaptable to changing conditions and circumstances. The purpose of the statute need only be legitimate, such that even if the fish populations were abundant, it would still be legitimate for the Rhode Island General Assembly to regulate the licensure and entry into the fishing industry. The fundamental purpose of the system of licensure adopted is to preserve, enhance, and allow for any necessary regeneration of the fisheries of the state, for the benefit of the people of the state, as an ecological asset and as a source of food and recreation. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-2 outlines numerous legislative purposes. As such, the regulation of fishing resources need only be reasonably related to a legitimate governmental purpose under the rational basis test, which presumptively favors the constitutionality of the statute.

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN16 [  ] State & Territorial Governments, Licenses

R.I. Gen. Stat. § 20-2.1-13 states that the provisions of the licensing statute are necessary for the welfare of the Rhode Island and its inhabitants, and shall be construed liberally so as to effectuate its purposes.

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Judicial Review > Standards of Review

HN17 [  ] Judicial Review, Standards of Review

Social and economic legislation that does not employ suspect classifications or impinge on fundamental rights must be upheld when the legislative means are rationally related to a legitimate governmental purpose. Under the rational basis test, the challenged regulation is afforded a strong presumption of validity. The rational basis test is satisfied if any reasonably conceivable set of facts could establish a rational relationship between the challenged regulation and the government's legitimate ends.

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Nature & Scope of Protection

Governments > Police Powers

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Judicial Review > Standards of Review

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN18 [  ] Equal Protection, Nature & Scope of Protection

The liberty interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment includes the right of the individual to engage in the common occupations of life. The constitutional guarantee of a free fishery gives no peculiar rights to those resorting to it for commercial purposes. Preventing a person from obtaining a commercial fishing license to catch the fish with the highest market value simply does not violate that person's constitutionally protected rights. A license is in the nature of a privilege entitling the licensee to do something that he would not be entitled to do without the license. The right of personal liberty and the right to earn a livelihood in any lawful calling and to pursue any lawful trade or vocation is subject to the governmental right to require a license where justified under the police power. Additionally, a classification based on the possession of a sporting license does not burden a suspect group or a fundamental right and is, therefore, subject to review under the rational basis standard.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > Police Powers

Real Property Law > Water Rights > Nonconsumptive Uses > Fishing

HN19 [  ] Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

R.I. Const. art. I, § 17 grants people the freedom to exercise all the rights of fishery but simultaneously grants the government the police power to regulate and control the natural resources for the preservation, regeneration, and restoration of the natural environment.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > Scope

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

Real Property Law > Water Rights > Nonconsumptive Uses > Fishing

HN20 [L] Constitutional Law, Substantive Due Process

Nothing in the Rhode Island Constitution grants the people a fundamental right to commercial fishing licenses. Fundamental rights to the fishery exist, but they are not unfettered or unrestricted.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN21 [L] Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-5\(3\) (1956) provides for new licenses such that, in order to obtain the multipurpose or principal effort license a person should first have the basic license for two years. This statute does not make the two year prerequisite recommendation a requirement, but priority is given to those basic license holders. In addition, § 20-2.1-5\(3\) states that adding new licensees to the total number of licensees is permissible consistent with the management plan for issuance effective January 1 based on status of resource and economic condition of fishery. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-5\(3\)\(iii\).

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Real Property Law > Zoning > Comprehensive Plans

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

HN22 [L] Zoning, Comprehensive Plans

In regard to fishing, it may be true that any moratorium that lasts for more than one year should be viewed with special skepticism. However, it cannot possibly be concluded that every delay of over one year is constitutionally unacceptable.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Real Property Law > Zoning > Comprehensive Plans

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN23 [L] Zoning, Comprehensive Plans

R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-3-1 (1956) creates the Marine Fisheries Council, on which eight private citizens sit, after being appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate. The Council shall serve in an advisory capacity only to the state and agencies of the state regarding marine fisheries issues and to the director of the department of environmental management for the planning, management, and regulation of marine fisheries. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-3-2. The Council shall advise the director on the development of the regulatory agenda for marine fisheries and shall have the power to initiate rule making by petition as provided for in R.I. Gen. Laws § 42-35-6. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-10 provides powers and duties of the Council with regard to licensure. Annually, the Council must report to the governor and various members of the legislature any recommendations it may have for maintaining, improving, or changing laws, regulations, or management programs for marine fisheries. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-3-2\(b\). In this way, the Council serves as an oversight committee, which can be petitioned by any interested party. Because of the existence of the Council, a mechanism exists by which private citizens can affect changes to Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management policies and rules, and the ban on new licenses does not necessarily and explicitly endure in perpetuity.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > General Overview

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

HN24 Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

See R.I. Gen. Laws § 42-35-6.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

HN25 Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

The Marine Fisheries Council is required to report annually to the governor, speaker of the house, president of the senate and other legislative members with regard to the advice it gave to state agencies, the response it received to the advice it gave, and any findings it has with regard to the status of the fisheries. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-3-2\(b\).

Constitutional Law > Equal Protection > Judicial Review > Standards of Review

HN26 Judicial Review, Standards of Review

To satisfy the rational basis test, the challenged regulation need not be the best means of promoting a legitimate government interest. A legislative choice is not subject to courtroom fact-finding and may be based on rational speculation unsupported by evidence or empirical data. Moreover, the challenged regulation need not be the least burdensome or the most effective means of accomplishing the regulatory goal. In fact, issues as to the degree, if any, that the limitations will in fact benefit fishery preservation are not relevant to a constitutional analysis.

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > Fish & Wildlife Protection

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Licenses

HN27 Natural Resources & Public Lands, Fish & Wildlife Protection

There is no dispute that the conservation of coastal fishery resources is a legitimate governmental objective. R.I. Gen. Laws § 20-2.1-2 explicitly provides for restrictions on the number of license holders as a valid principle for adaptive fisheries management.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN28 [L] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

The Sherman Act makes no mention of the state as such, and gives no hint that it is intended to restrain state action or official action directed by a state. The Sherman Act's purpose is to suppress combinations to restrain competition and attempts to monopolize by individuals and corporations, which abundantly appears from its legislative history. In the alternative, there is no question that the state or its municipality becoming a participant in a private agreement or combination by others for restraint of trade violates the Sherman Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > General Overview

HN29 [L] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Sherman Act serves a salutary purpose in ensuring that the marketplace remain reasonably free and open, and in preventing combinations within the private sector from abridging that fundamental freedom in impermissible ways. But, states themselves have historically been accorded safe harbor in these stormy seas. Congress never intended that the Act be employed to handcuff state governments in the pursuit of their traditional regulatory functions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN30 [L] Antitrust & Trade Law, Exemptions & Immunities

R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-36-8 provides an exemption for state action, stating that nothing contained in it shall be construed to apply to activities or arrangements approved by any regulatory body or officer acting under statutory authority of this state or of the United States. The statute also provides that the exemptions shall be liberally construed in harmony with federal statutes and ruling judicial interpretations of the United States courts. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-36-8. The Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management is a regulatory agency that exists by legislative grant of power, and, as such, its actions in regulating the fishing industry are presumed valid and exempt from attack under antitrust law.

Judges: INDEGLIA, J.

Opinion by: INDEGLIA

Opinion

DECISION

INDEGLIA, J. Before this Court is an appeal from a decision of the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management (D.E.M.), denying Appellant Steven Riley a commercial fishing license with certain finfish and shellfish endorsements. Appellant has also presented a motion for declaratory relief requesting that this Court declare G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5\(1\)\(ii\) and Rule 7 of the Rules and Regulations Governing the Management of Marine Fisheries (Rule 7) unconstitutional, and order that Appellant be given the requested multi-purpose fishing license. Jurisdiction is pursuant to G.L. 1956 § 42-35-15 and G.L. 1956 § 9-30-1.

FACTS AND TRAVEL

Appellant Steven Riley (Riley) sought and was denied a commercial fishing license. Riley applied for a principal effort commercial fishing license with shellfish/quahog and restricted finfish endorsements under G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5. The Rhode Island [*2] Department of Environmental Management (D.E.M.) denied his request based on the statutory language of § 20-2.1-5 that allowed only those who had such licenses as of December 31, 2002 (the end of the previous year) to obtain the license again, essentially prohibiting any new applicants from receiving said license.<sup>1</sup> [*3] Riley was granted a commercial fishing license with lobster, non-quahog shellfish, and non-restricted finfish endorsements. Riley admitted that he had not possessed any commercial fishing licenses since the early 1970s. Additionally, Rule 7 states that there were no new principal effort licenses with quahog or restricted finfish endorsements available in 2003. Riley received the initial denial on February 27, 2003 and on March 9, 2003 timely filed a request for reconsideration with the Commercial Fishing License Review Board.<sup>2</sup>

On May 21, 2003, Riley timely filed a notice of appeal to the Administration Adjudication Division (A.A.D.) requesting a hearing; however, on or about June 6, 2003, the A.A.D. remanded the matter to the Commercial Fishing License Review Board for a hearing, which took place on July 21, 2003. On August 2, 2003, in a letter which stated that Riley had failed to meet the standard set for the in § 20-2.1-12 (b), Riley was denied at the Commercial Fishing License Review Board as well. On or about August 20, 2003, the D.E.M. gave its final denial to Riley.

On January 21, 2004, the parties presented oral argument before Chief Hearing Officer Kathleen Lanphear, who granted D.E.M.'s motion for summary judgment on January 26, 2004. Riley then filed the instant appeal in this Court, arguing that he has a fundamental right to choose his occupation [*4] and, as such, cannot be denied the commercial fishing license, and that the statute violates equal protection and due process principles. He further argued that the Hearing Officer's decision was arbitrary and capricious and finally that the statute and Rule 7 violates the Sherman Act. The Rhode Island Attorney General's Office informed Riley on March 10, 2004 that it would not intervene unless the Court felt such an intervention to brief constitutional issues would be helpful. However, the Attorney General's Office reserved the right to reconsider and intervene upon appeal.<sup>3</sup> A decision is herein rendered.

---

<sup>1</sup> Section 20-2.1-5\(1\)\(ii\) provides that HN1 [↑] "duly licensed persons in a fishery as of December 31 of the immediately preceding year, shall be eligible to obtain a principal effort license for the fishery sector for which they were licensed on December 31 of the immediately preceding year, which principal effort license shall allow its holder to fish in a fishery sector at the full harvest and gear levels."

<sup>2</sup> Prior to receiving any decision of the Commercial Fishing License Review Board, Riley was notified on April 22, 2003 that said Review Board had not yet been fully appointed. Riley asserts that the Board had, in fact, been appointed on April 16, 2003.

<sup>3</sup> This Court notes that the opinion of the Attorney General is not needed based on this Court's decision herein.

STANDARDS OF REVIEW

Declaratory Judgment

HN2 [↑] The Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act (Declaratory Act), G.L. 1956 § 9-30-1 et seq., grants the Superior Court "power to declare rights, status, and other legal relations whether or not relief is or could [*5] be claimed." The Declaratory Act also provides that the Superior Court may grant additional affirmative relief "based on the declaratory judgment 'whenever necessary or proper' provided subsequent 'supplementary proceedings' are brought pursuant thereto." Capital Properties, Inc. v. State, 749 A.2d 1069, 1080 (R.I. 1999) (citing §§ 9-30-8, 9-30-12; Sousa v. Langlois, 97 R.I. 196, 199, 196 A.2d 838, 841 (1964)). Section 9-30-2 provides in part, that

HN3 [↑] "any person . . . whose rights, status, or other legal relations are affected by a statute, municipal ordinance, contract, or franchise, may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the instrument, statute, ordinance, contract, or franchise and obtain a declaration of rights, status, or other legal relations thereunder."

HN4 [↑] The purpose of the Declaratory Act is "to facilitate the termination of controversies." Capital Properties, Inc., 749 A.2d at 1080. The decision to issue a declaratory judgment lies within the trial justice's broad discretion. Cruz v. Wausau Ins. Co., 866 A.2d 1237, 1240 (R.I. 2005); Sullivan v. Chafee, 703 A.2d 748, 751 (R.I. 1997) [*6] (citing Woonsocket Teachers' Guild Local Union 951 v. Woonsocket Sch. Comm., 694 A.2d 727, 729 (R.I. 1997)). Section 9-30-12 provides that the Declaratory Act should be "liberally construed and administered." See also Taylor v. Marshall, 119 R.I. 171, 180, 376 A.2d 712, 716-17 (1977) (stating existence of alternate methods of relief, including administrative, do not preclude declaratory judgment).

Administrative Appeal

HN5 [↑] Judicial review of contested agency decisions is governed by G.L. 1956 § 42-35-15\(g\) which provides:

HN6 [↑] "The court shall not substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact. The court may affirm the decision of the agency or remand the case for further proceedings, or it may reverse or modify the decision if substantial rights of the appellant have been prejudiced because the administrative findings, inferences, conclusions, or decisions are:

- (1) In violation of constitutional or statutory provisions;
- (2) In excess of the statutory authority of the agency;
- (3) Made upon unlawful procedure;
- (4) Affected by other error of law;

(5) [*7] Clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record; or
(6) Arbitrary or capricious or characterized by abuse of discretion or clearly unwarranted exercise of discretion."

HN7 [↑] The reviewing court is precluded from substituting its judgment for that of the agency regarding witness credibility or the weight of evidence concerning questions of fact. Costa v. Registry of Motor Vehicles, 543 A.2d 1307, 1309 (R.I. 1988); Carmody v. Rhode Island Conflict of Interest Comm'n, 509 A.2d 453, 458 (R.I. 1986). This Court's review is limited to determining whether substantial evidence exists to support the agency's decision. Newport Shipyard v. Rhode Island Comm'n for Human Rights, 484 A.2d 893 (R.I. 1984). "Substantial evidence . . . means such relevant evidence that a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion, and means an amount more than a scintilla but less than a preponderance." Caswell v. George Sherman Sand & Gravel Co., Inc., 424 A.2d 646, 647 (R.I. 1981) (citing Apostolou v. Genovesi, 120 R.I. 501, 508, 388 A.2d 821, 824-25 (1978)). [*8] This Court will "reverse factual conclusions of administrative agencies only when they are totally devoid of competent evidentiary support in the record." Milardo v. Coastal Resources Management Council, 434 A.2d 266, 272 (R.I. 1981). In deference to the agency, this Court "must uphold the agency's conclusions when they are supported by any legally competent evidence in the record." Rocha v. State Public Utilities Comm'n, 694 A.2d 722, 725 (R.I. 1997) (quoting Rhode Island Public Telecommunications Authority v. Rhode Island Labor Relations Bd., 650 A.2d 479, 485 (R.I. 1994)).

HN8 When an agency promulgates regulations pursuant to specific authority granted by the General Assembly, "the regulations are legislative rules that carry the force and effect of law and enjoy a presumption of validity." Parkway Towers Assoc. v. Godfrey, 688 A.2d 1289, 1293 (R.I. 1997); see also Newport Court Club Assocs. v. Town Council of Town of Middletown, 800 A.2d 405, 409 (R.I. 2002) (quoting Rhode Island Depositors Economic Protection Corp. v. Brown, 659 A.2d 95, 100 (R.I. 1995)). "To determine whether [*9] a rule is to be classified as legislative or interpretive, one must consider the power assigned to the administrative agency. If a statute expressly delegates power to interpret and define certain legislation to an agency, regulations promulgated pursuant to that power are legislative rules having the force of law." Lerner v. Gill, 463 A.2d 1352, 1358 (R.I. 1983) (citing Batterton v. Francis, 432 U.S. 416, 53 L. Ed. 2d 448, 97 S. Ct. 2399 (1977)); see also In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 732 A.2d 55, 69 (R.I. 1999). "Legislative rules are valid if they are within the power granted by the General Assembly, are issued pursuant to proper procedure, and are reasonable as a matter of due process." Id. at 1358; see also, Parkway Towers, 688 A.2d at 1293.

HN9 If the regulation is challenged on constitutional due process or equal protection grounds and does not infringe upon a fundamental constitutional right or implicates a suspect class, the regulation must be rationally related to furthering a legitimate state interest in order to be upheld. Newport Court Club Assocs., 800 A.2d at 415; Rhode Island Depositors Economic Protection Corp. v. Brown, 659 A.2d 95, 100 (R.I. 1995); [*10] In re Advisory Opinion to the House of Representatives, 519 A.2d 578, 583 (1987). Only if a regulation is "without any reasonable basis and . . . purely arbitrary" will it be found unconstitutional under this standard. Rhode Island Depositors Econ. Prot. Corp., 659 A.2d at 100.

ANALYSIS

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE STATUTE AND RULE

At the outset, Riley argues that he has a fundamental right to pursue a livelihood, which is protected by his right to life, liberty, and property under the Equal Protection and Due Process Clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. Riley further posits that even if no fundamental right to pursue a livelihood exists, he would still prevail constitutionally under a rational basis test on the grounds that the statute has irrationally created two classes: those with licenses as of December 31, 2002, and those without licenses as of that date. Riley alleges that treating similarly situated citizens differently in this allegedly arbitrary manner violates equal protection and due process rights. Riley also maintains that § 20-2.1-5 is unconstitutional because it violates [*11] the state police powers. Riley also contends that § 20-2.1-5 and Rule 7 exceed the enabling statute's (G.L. 1956 § 20-3-2) authority.

D.E.M. responds by arguing that § 20-2.1-1 et seq. and Rule 7 are constitutional because legislative provisions enjoy a presumption of validity and the Appellant must prove unconstitutionality beyond a reasonable doubt, which he has not done. D.E.M. notes that the General Assembly has plenary power to regulate the fishing industry. D.E.M. also argues that the statute and rule do not violate equal protection because not all legislative classifications (in this case license and non-license holders) are constitutionally impermissible. D.E.M. contends that no fundamental right is involved and therefore, minimal scrutiny must be applied, under which the statute and rule withstand constitutional attack. Additionally, D.E.M. maintains that the statute neither violates substantive due process rights because regulation of commercial fishing licenses is not the type of state action that "shocks the conscience," nor has Appellant shown that a fundamental right been violated. Lastly, D.E.M. opines that the basis of Riley's present action [*12] is merely his desire to fish the seafood stock that fetches higher market prices, when in actuality, he received a license to fish for other species and categories, just not those that bring the highest prices.

Recently the Rhode Island Supreme Court examined constitutional issues involving fishing statutes in Cherenzia v. Lynch, 847 A.2d 818 (R.I. 2004). In Cherenzia, a group of commercial fishermen argued that a statute barring use of SCUBA gear to harvest shellfish from four coastal ponds violated their substantive due process and equal protection rights. Id. at 820. The fishermen argued the statute violated their fundamental rights of fishery and discriminated against a single class of fishermen -- those who use SCUBA gear -- and as such, strict scrutiny applied. Id. at 821-22. The State argued that the statute enjoyed a presumption of validity, the General Assembly had plenary power to regulate the fishing industry, and no fundamental right was implicated; thus only minimal scrutiny need be applied. Id. at 822.

Our Supreme Court held that the provisions of the statute in question that prohibited use of SCUBA [*13] gear in harvesting shellfish did not "infringe on a fundamental constitutional right, nor [did] they create a suspect classification." Cherenzia, 847 A.2d at 823. The Supreme Court stated that HN10 the "scope of the fundamental right protected in art. I, sec. 17, is that all the inhabitants of the state 'shall continue to enjoy and freely exercise' equal access to the state's fishery resources." Id. "This 'gives the benefits of fishery to all the people in equal measure.'" Id. (quoting Opinion of the Senate, 87 R.I. 37 at 38, 137 A.2d 525 at 525-26). The Supreme Court concluded that "the very nature and scope of the right to fish that art. I, sec. 17 protects is not unqualified; rather, it anticipates that reasonable legislative regulation is necessary to properly effectuate that right." Id. at 824 (referencing State v. Cozzens, 2 R.I. 561, 563 (1850)). "If a statute or regulation contained restrictions that infringed upon the fundamental right of the inhabitants of the state to have equal access to the "rights of fishery," then such a regulation or law would be subject to strict-scrutiny analysis." Id. (Emphasis added. [*14] ) The Court also noted that such fishing was "not merely for the profit and emolument of the fishermen engaged in the business." Id. (quoting Opinion to the Senate, 87 R.I. 37, 38-39, 137 A.2d 525, 526 (1958)). In addressing the substantive due process claim, our Supreme Court held that "the burden was on [the plaintiffs] to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the provisions of [the statute] lacked a substantial relation to the public health, safety, and welfare, or to the Legislature's constitutionally prescribed duty to protect and conserve the fishery resources of the state." Id. at 826 (citing Brunelle v. Town of South Kingstown, 700 A.2d 1075, 1084 (R.I. 1997)). The Court found there was no violation of equal protection or due process rights and the statute was constitutional. Id. at 826-27.

Our Supreme Court has further recognized that HN11 "within the constitution's broad grant of legislative power to the General Assembly lies its plenary power to regulate the fishing resources of the state." Id. at 822 (citing Opinion to the Senate, 87 R.I. 37, 40, 137 A.2d 525, 526 (1958) and other cases). Furthermore, it noted [*15] that "the whole subject of fisheries . . . [is] under the fostering care of the General Assembly." Id. (citing State v. Kofines, 33 R.I. 211, 239, 80 A. 432, 443 (1911)). With regard to the fisherman's claim of equal protection violations because of the alleged discrimination against the "class" of fisherman using SCUBA gear, the Court clarified that "not all legislative classifications, however, are impermissible." Id. at 823 (citing Kennedy v. State, 654 A.2d 708, 712 (R.I. 1995)). The Court reiterated that "the Legislature enjoys "a wide scope of discretion in enacting laws that affect some classes of citizens differently from others." Id. (quoting Boucher v. Sayeed, 459 A.2d 87, 91 (R.I. 1983)). Strict scrutiny applies when a fundamental right has been impinged upon, or a suspect classification arises. Id. Our Supreme Court, "will employ a 'minimal-scrutiny' analysis, however, when assessing economic or social regulations that neither infringe on a fundamental right, nor result in a classification that is 'suspect.'" <sup>4</sup> Id. (referencing Kennedy, 654 A.2d at 712). The Court also recognized [*16] that the United States Supreme Court has held that "the scope of the liberty interests protected by the Fourteenth Amendment" includes "the right of the individual to engage in the common occupations of life, and 'generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized . . . as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men.'" Id. (citing Lynch v. Gontarz, 120 R.I. 149, 156, 386 A.2d 184, 188 (1978)).

---

<sup>4</sup> Other jurisdictions have held that regulations involving commercial fishing are properly reviewed under rational basis scrutiny. "Fishing, whether commercial or recreational, is not a fundamental right and those engaged in these activities are not a suspect class." *Vickers v. Egbert, 359 F. Supp. 2d 1358, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3333, *10-12 (S.D. Fla. 2005)* (citing *Sisk v. Texas Parks & Wildlife Dep't, 644 F.2d 1056, 1058 n.5 (5th Cir. 1981); United Boatmen of NJ v. Mosbacher, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 664, *26-27 (D.N.J. 1992); LaBauve v. Louisiana Wildlife & Fisheries Comm'n, 444 F. Supp. 1370, 1382 (E.D. La. 1978); Gilbert v. Dep't of Fish & Game, Bd. of Fisheries, 803 P.2d 391, 399 (Ak. 1990); California Gillnetters Ass'n v. Dep't of Fish & Game, 39 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1154-55, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338, 343 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995); Lane v. Chiles, 698 So. 2d 260, 263 (Fla. 1997); State v. Weaver, 805 So. 2d 166, 170 (La. 2002)*).

[*17] In the case at bar, Riley's fundamental "rights of fishery" have not been violated because he was granted a commercial license and maintains the right to fish recreationally.<sup>5</sup> The Cherenzia case expressly held that said fundamental rights of fishery deal with equal access to the fish resources, subject however, to reasonable state regulation. 847 A.2d at 824. HN12↑ The power to regulate the rights of fishery is, therefore, derived directly from the Rhode Island Constitution, not merely from a legislative enactment, and such constitutional authorizations are subject to an unquestionably strong and favorable presumption.<sup>6</sup> [*19] It is well settled that the General Assembly has plenary power to regulate fisheries as dictated by the Rhode Island Constitution in Article 1, Section 17. Id. at 822-23. Additionally, § 20-2.1-1 provides that the General Assembly has "plenary authority and responsibility . . . to provide for the conservation of natural resources of the state, including its marine fisheries." In this matter, the D.E.M. cited the need to regulate and preserve the fish populations while not shortening the season or causing "overcrowding" in the fishing [*18] industry.<sup>7</sup> Though Riley argues that the fish populations are not in danger of being depleted, this belief is not the deciding factor. The General Assembly has plenary power to regulate the fisheries and as such, can reasonably regulate the number of commercial fishing licenses.

HN15↑ Section 20-2.1-1 sets forth the General Assembly's findings which include a need to make the "statutes and programs for marine fisheries management and licensure . . . adaptable to changing conditions and circumstances." Section 20-2.1-1(7). The purpose of the statute need only be legitimate, such that even if the fish populations were abundant, it would still be legitimate for the General Assembly to regulate the licensure and entry into the fishing industry.<sup>8</sup> The fundamental [*20] purpose of the system of licensure adopted is to "preserve, enhance, and allow for any necessary regeneration of the fisheries of the state, for the benefit of the people of the state, as an ecological asset and as a source of food and recreation." Section 20-2.1-2 (outlining numerous legislative purposes). As such, the regulation of fishing resources need only be reasonably related to a legitimate governmental purpose under the rational basis test, which presumptively favors the constitutionality of the statute.<sup>9</sup> Cherenzia, 847 A.2d at 825 (citing Kennedy v. State, 654 A.2d 708, 712-13 \(R.I. 1995\)).

---

<sup>5</sup> HN13↑ Under the Rhode Island Constitution, art. 1, sec. 17, "the rights of fishery, and the privileges of the shore . . . include but [are] not limited to fishing from the shore, the gathering of seaweed, leaving the shore to swim in the sea and passage along the shore." Black's Law Dictionary defines the "right of fishery" as "the general and common right of the citizens to take fish from public waters, such as the sea, great lakes, etc. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U.S. 1, 14 S. Ct. 548, 38 L. Ed. 331. Such rights are restricted however, by federal and state laws that establish fishing seasons, licensing requirements, catch limits, etc." Black's Law Dictionary 637 (6th ed. 1990).

<sup>6</sup> The Rhode Island Constitution provides that:

HN14↑ "it shall be the duty of the general assembly to provide for the conservation of the air, land, water, plant, animal, mineral and other natural resources of the state, and to adopt all means necessary and proper by law to protect the natural environment of the people of the state by providing adequate resource planning for the control and regulation of the use of the natural resources of the state and for the preservation, regeneration and restoration of the natural environment of the state." R.I. Const. art. 1, sec. 17.

<sup>7</sup> This Court agrees that a shortened fishing season would be problematic both for the commercial fishing industry and the economy in Rhode Island. Without comprehensive regulation of the fishing industry through licensing, etc. the number of parties fishing would likely increase and catch quotas would be met sooner, resulting in a significantly abbreviated fishing season. Though Appellant argues the fishing industry could regulate itself, the reality of a "Tragedy of the Commons" type instructs us otherwise. Too many participants lead to premature depletion of the resource, in this case, fish and shellfish species.

<sup>8</sup> HN16↑ Section 20-2.1-13 states that the provisions of the licensing statute are "necessary for the welfare of the state and its inhabitants, [and] shall be construed liberally so as to effectuate its purposes."

<sup>9</sup> HN17↑ "Social and economic legislation . . . that does not employ suspect classifications or impinge on fundamental rights must be upheld . . . when the legislative means are rationally related to a legitimate governmental purpose." Hodel v. Indiana, 452 U.S. 314, 331, 69 L. Ed. 2d 40, 101 S. Ct. 2376 \(1981\) cited in Medeiros v. Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Comm'n, 327 F. Supp. 2d 145, 151 \(D. R.I. 2004\). "Under the rational basis test, the challenged regulation is afforded a 'strong presumption of validity.'" Medeiros, 327 F. Supp. 2d at 151 (quoting F.C.C. v. Beach Communications, Inc., 508 U.S. 307, 314, 124 L. Ed. 2d

[*21] With respect to the subject regulation, Riley attempts to trigger strict scrutiny thereof, by alleging a violation of his fundamental right to engage in the occupation of his choosing. However, he has not presented to this Court any compelling case law that recognizes such a fundamental right. Our Supreme Court has acknowledged that HN18 [↑] the liberty interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment includes "the right of the individual to engage in the common occupations of life . . ." 847 A.2d at 823 (quoting Lynch v. Gontarz, 120 R.I. 149, 156, 386 A.2d 184, 188 \(1978\)). Even if one were to consider fishing a "common occupation," it would be of little significance because Riley was granted a commercial fishing license, albeit a basic one. Our Supreme Court "has recognized that the constitutional guarantee of a ? free fishery ... gives no peculiar rights to those resorting to it for commercial purposes." Opinion to the Senate, 87 R.I. 37, 38, 137 A.2d 525, 526 \(1958\). Riley was not prevented from entering the field of commercial fishermen, but rather was simply denied an expanded license that allowed him to fish for certain types of fish, [*22] which may be more profitable. Preventing a person from obtaining a commercial fishing license to catch the fish with the highest market value simply does not violate that person's constitutionally protected rights. "A license is in the nature of a privilege . . . entitling the licensee to do something that he would not be entitled to do without the license." 51 Am. Jur. 2d Licenses & Permits § 1 (2000). "The right of personal liberty and the right to earn a livelihood in any lawful calling and to pursue any lawful trade or vocation is subject to the governmental right to require a license where justified under the police power." 51 Am. Jur. 2d Licenses & Permits § 16 (2000). Additionally, "[a] classification based on the possession of a sporting license does not burden a suspect group or a fundamental right and is, therefore, subject to review under the rational basis standard." Animal Legal Defense Fund, Inc. v. Fisheries & Wildlife Bd., 416 Mass. 635, 624 N.E.2d 556, 560 \(Mass. 1993\). As such, Riley's right to engage in the common occupations of life has not been infringed [*23] upon, and the standard of review remains a rational basis.

HN19 [↑] Article 1, Section 17 of the Rhode Island Constitution grants people the freedom to "exercise all the rights of fishery" but simultaneously grants the government the police power to regulate and control the natural resources "for the preservation, regeneration, and restoration of the natural environment." R.I. Const. art. 1, sec. 17. Indeed, said section states that "it shall be the duty of the general assembly to provide for the conservation of the air, land, water, plant, animal, mineral and other natural resources of the state, and to adopt all means necessary and proper by law." Id. HN20 [↑] Nothing in the Rhode Island Constitution grants the people a fundamental right to commercial fishing licenses. The Cherenzia case affirms that the fundamental rights to the fishery exist, but they are not unfettered or unrestricted. 847 A.2d at 824.

HN21 [↑] Section 20-2.1-5\(3\) provides for new licenses such that, in order to obtain the multipurpose or principal effort license that Riley sought, a person should first have the basic license for two years. This statute does not make the two year prerequisite recommendation a requirement, [*24] but priority is given to those basic license holders. In addition, § 20-2.1-5\(3\) states that adding new licensees to the total number of licensees is permissible "consistent with the management plan for issuance effective January 1 . . . based on status of resource and economic condition of fishery." Section 20-2.1-5\(3\)\(iii\). Riley received a basic license, and perhaps after 2 years, he will be granted a license with greater privileges. Indeed, D.E.M. does issue principal effort licenses to new entrants after old licenses are traded in or retired.<sup>10</sup> Even if the D.E.M. decided not to issue additional new permits, instead choosing to preserve the status quo insofar as the number of permits issued, then such an action is permitted under the police power statute and presumed valid.

[*25] Appellant argues that the statutory ban on issuing new licenses is unconstitutional. Such a prohibition on the issuance of new licenses under G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5 and Rule 7 amounts to what is essentially a moratorium on new principal effort and multi-purpose fishing licenses. Neither the statute nor the rule specifically states when such a moratorium would end, but rather, as drafted could prohibit new license applicants from entering the industry indefinitely. Recently, the Rhode Island Supreme Court held that a three year moratorium that prevented a company from entering the high speed ferry business was valid under the relevant statute granting regulatory power to the agency. Interstate Navigation Co. v. Div. of Pub. Utils. and Carriers of the State of Rhode Island, 824 A.2d 1282 (R.I. 2003). The United States Supreme Court has also examined moratoriums in Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc. v. Tahoe Reg'l Planning Agency, 535 U.S. 302, 152 L. Ed. 2d 517, 122 S. Ct. 1465 (2002). In Tahoe-Sierra, the U.S. Supreme Court stated HN22 "it may be true that any moratorium that lasts for more than one year should be viewed with special [*26] skepticism." 535 U.S. at 341. However, the Court also said that it "could not possibly conclude that every delay of over one year is constitutionally unacceptable." Id. at 341-42 (acknowledging some moratoria last more than one year which interfere with expectations). In fact, "moratoriums have been approved when they form a part of a comprehensive plan to remedy a problem situation." Q.C. Constr. Co., Inc. v. Gallo, 649 F. Supp. 1331, 1337 (D. R.I. 1986) (citing numerous cases).

---

211, 113 S. Ct. 2096 \(1993\)). "The rational basis test is satisfied 'if any reasonably conceivable set of facts could establish a rational relationship between [the challenged regulation] and the government's legitimate ends.'" Id. (citing Montalvo-Huertas v. Rivera-Cruz, 885 F.2d 971, 978 \(1st Cir. 1989\)).

<sup>10</sup> At oral argument, D.E.M. stated that thirteen licenses were issued to new entrants consistent with established priority methodology and D.E.M.'s exit/entrance procedures. See G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5\(3\); see also G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-9(4) (setting forth matters considered in establishing license programs under statute).

In this case, while the moratorium on new principal effort licenses may be able to last indefinitely, there are mechanisms to amend or reevaluate such a ban with respect to its relation to a comprehensive regulatory scheme. See id. (stating moratoriums valid when part of plan to remedy problems); see also Westwood Forest Estates, Inc. v. Village of So. Nyack, 23 N.Y.2d 424, 244 N.E.2d 700, 702, 297 N.Y.S.2d 129 (N.Y. 1969) (holding zoning moratorium on new construction improper where not in furtherance of comprehensive plan). HN23 Section 20-3-1 creates the Marine Fisheries Council (Council), on which eight private citizens sit, after being appointed by the governor [*27] with the advice and consent of the senate.<sup>11</sup> G.L. 1956 § 20-3-1. The Council "shall serve in an advisory capacity only to the state and agencies of the state regarding marine fisheries issues and to the director of the department of environmental management . . . for the planning, management, and regulation of marine fisheries . . ." Section 20-3-2. "The Council shall advise the director on the development of the regulatory agenda for marine fisheries and shall have the power to initiate rule making by petition as provided for in § 42-35-6."<sup>12</sup> Section 20-2-1-10 (providing powers and duties of Council with regard to licensure). Annually, the Council must report to the governor and various members of the legislature "any recommendations it may have for maintaining, improving, or changing laws, regulations, or management programs for marine fisheries."<sup>13</sup> Section 20-3-2(b). In this way, the Council serves as an oversight committee, which can be petitioned by any interested party, presumably including someone similarly situated to Riley. Because of the existence of the Council, a mechanism exists by which private citizens can affect changes to D.E.M. policies [*28] and rules, and the ban on new licenses does not necessarily and explicitly endure in perpetuity.

[*29] Additionally, though the moratorium on new licenses may not be the best possible method of reaching the D.E.M.'s stated goals, under a rational basis review, it need not be. In fact, HN26 "to satisfy the rational basis test, the challenged regulation need not be 'the best means of promoting a legitimate government interest.'" Medeiros v. Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Comm'n, 327 F. Supp. 2d 145, 151 (D. R.I. 2004) (quoting New York State Trawlers Ass'n v. Jorling, 16 F.3d 1303, 1309 (2d Cir. 1994)) (emphasis in original). "[A] legislative choice is not subject to courtroom fact-finding and may be based on rational speculation unsupported by evidence or empirical data." Id. (quoting F.C.C. v. Beach Communications, Inc., 508 U.S. 307, 314, 124 L. Ed. 2d 211, 113 S. Ct. 2096 (1993)). "Moreover, the challenged regulation need not be the least burdensome or the most effective means of accomplishing the regulatory goal." Id. (citing Starlight Sugar, Inc. v. Soto, 253 F.3d 137, 146 (1st Cir.

<sup>11</sup> The Council is chaired by the director of the D.E.M. or whomever the director may designate. G.L. 1956 § 20-3-1. The eight private citizen members of the Council "shall be chosen from among those with skill, knowledge, and experience in the commercial fishing industry, the sportfishing industry, and in the conservation and management of fisheries resources . . ." Id.

<sup>12</sup> Section 42-35-6 of the Rhode Island General Laws provides that HN24 "any interested person may petition an agency requesting the promulgation, amendment, or repeal of any rule." In this way, any interested person could petition the Council with a challenge or amendment to Rule 7.

<sup>13</sup> Additionally, HN25 the Council is required to report annually to the governor, speaker of the house, president of the senate and other legislative members with regard to the advice it gave to state agencies, the response it received to the advice it gave, and any findings it has with regard to the status of the fisheries. Section 20-3-2(b).

2001)). In fact, "issues as to the degree, if any, that the [] limitations will in fact benefit fishery preservation are not [*30] relevant" to a constitutional analysis. Id. at 152. In this case, the ban on new licenses in G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5 and Rule 7 may not be the best or most effective method of achieving D.E.M.'s objectives as part of its comprehensive regulatory plan for the various fisheries. Still, it is nonetheless permissible because it is reasonable and rationally related to the government's legitimate purpose of regulating Rhode Island's natural fish resources.<sup>14</sup>

[*31] Riley carries the burden of proving the statute and rule are unconstitutional beyond a reasonable doubt, and has failed to do so. Additionally, Riley has not persuaded this Court that either a fundamental right or a suspect class is involved. Thus, Riley's arguments fail to trigger heightened constitutional scrutiny. Additionally, the legislative classifications are permissible, and in this case, the regulation of the number of fisherman with permits is reasonable in accomplishing stated goals explicitly set forth in the statute, G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-2. Accordingly, this Court declares that the General Assembly has the power to regulate in this area and in this manner.

VIOLATION OF THE SHERMAN ACT

Riley further argues that said statute and Rule 7 are preempted by antitrust laws and § 1 of the Sherman Act as a restraint on trade. Riley asserts that D.E.M. has created a monopoly in the existing licensees, which violates the Sherman Act. D.E.M. argues that the statute and rule are not preempted by antitrust laws and § 1 of the Sherman Act because the statute and rule were established pursuant to a valid grant of legislative power, which exempts [*32] them from the Sherman Act.

At the outset, Riley has presented no case law to override D.E.M.'s cited authority as to applicability, instead relying on the arguments of how the D.E.M.'s actions allegedly violate the Act by essentially creating a monopoly in the fishing industry with respect to certain finfish licenses. On the other hand, D.E.M. persuasively asserts the inapplicability of the Sherman Act based on the United States Supreme Court's decision in Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 87 L. Ed. 315, 63 S. Ct. 307 (1943) and the Rhode Island Federal District Court's decision in Healey v. Bendick, et al., 628 F. Supp. 681 (D. R.I. 1986).

In Parker, the United States Supreme Court held that HN28 [↑] the Sherman Act made "no mention of the state as such, and [gave] no hint that it was intended to restrain state action or official action directed by a state." 317 U.S. at 351. The Court continued, stating the Sherman Act's "purpose was to suppress combinations to restrain competition and attempts to monopolize by individuals and corporations, [which] abundantly appears from its legislative history." Id. The Court also noted, in the alternative, that [*33] there was "no question [that] the state or its municipality becoming a participant in a private agreement or combination by others for restraint of trade" violates the Sherman Act. Id. at 351-52 (referencing Union Pacific R. Co. v. United States, 313 U.S. 450, 85 L. Ed. 1453, 61 S. Ct. 1064 (1941)). The Supreme Court concluded that "the state in adopting and enforcing the [] program made no contract or agreement and entered into no conspiracy in restraint of trade or to establish monopoly but, as sovereign, imposed the restraint as an act of government which the Sherman Act did not undertake to prohibit." Id. at 352 (citing Olsen v. Smith, 195 U.S. 332, 344-45, 49 L. Ed. 224, 25 S. Ct. 52 (1904)).

In Healey, the Rhode Island Federal District Court followed the same reasoning of the Parker case. The Healey case involved the Rhode Island Marine Fisheries Council (M.F.C.). 628 F. Supp. at 681. The court stated that "inasmuch as the MFC's edicts were within the sphere of the authority delegated to that body by the Rhode Island General Assembly, the conduct that [plaintiff] castigates was undeniably the conduct of the state itself, [*34] and therefore immune from Sherman Act charges under the "state action" principle of Parker." Id. at 688. The court went on to say:

<sup>14</sup> HN27 [↑] "There is no dispute that the conservation of coastal [] fishery resources is a legitimate governmental objective." Medeiros, 327 F. Supp. 2d at 151 (citing New York State Trawlers Ass'n v. Jorling, 16 F.3d 1303, 1309 (2d Cir. 1994)). Section 20-2.1-2 explicitly provides for "restrictions on the number of license holders" as a valid principle for adaptive fisheries management. For findings of the General Assembly and other purposes of the statute in regulating commercial fishing licensure see G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-1 and G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-2. It is also noteworthy that the General Assembly enacted a moratorium on commercial fishing licenses from 1995 until 1998 and again from 2000 until 2003, during both of which, only renewal licenses were available.

HN29 [↑] "The Sherman Act serves a salutary purpose in ensuring that the marketplace remain reasonably free and open, and in preventing combinations within the private sector from abridging that fundamental freedom in impermissible ways. But, states themselves have historically been accorded safe harbor in these stormy seas. Congress never intended that the Act be employed to handcuff state governments in the pursuit of their traditional regulatory functions. Both the basic tenets of federalism and the compelling force of precedent require that [plaintiff's] Sherman Act claim, which is brought solely against state actors, be dismissed." Id. at 689.

Additionally, the Sherman Act's Rhode Island state law counterpart can be found at G.L. 1956 § 6-36-1 et seq. HN30 [↑] Section 6-36-8 provides an exemption for state action, stating that "nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed to apply to activities or arrangements approved by any regulatory body or officer acting under statutory authority [*35] of this state or of the United States." The statute also provides that "the exemptions shall be liberally construed in harmony with federal statutes and ruling judicial interpretations of the United States courts . . ." Section 6-36-8. The D.E.M. is a regulatory agency that exists by legislative grant of power, and, as such, its actions in regulating the fishing industry are presumed valid and exempt from attack under antitrust law. Thus, this Court declares that Riley's claim that D.E.M violated antitrust laws and the Sherman Act fails.

D.E.M.'S DECISION

With respect to the administrative appeal, Riley alleges that Hearing Officer's decision was not supported by substantial evidence and therefore fails to meet the standard required by G.L. 1956 § 42-35-15(g) and applicable case precedent. Newport Shipyard v. Rhode Island Comm'n for Human Rights, 484 A.2d 893 (R.I. 1984) (limiting court's review to determination of whether substantial evidence exists to support agency decision). Riley further argues that the hearing officer erred in granting summary judgment because discovery had not yet been completed. The [*36] D.E.M. counters that the Hearing Officer took all evidence into consideration, weighing both sides, and arrived at a conclusion, which it believes was correct. Additionally, D.E.M. contends that summary judgment before the hearing officer was appropriate because Riley was not statutorily eligible for a license and, as such, there could be no factual dispute.

The Chief Hearing Officer provided a written order/opinion that discussed the analysis she employed to reach her decision, upholding the denial of the license.<sup>15</sup> Here, this Court is satisfied that the Hearing Officer, based her denial on substantial evidence. The Hearing Officer made several findings of fact in reaching her decision, including the following:

1. The Applicant, Steven J. Riley, did not possess a commercial fishing license as of December 31, 2002.
2. On February 21, 2003 Steven J. Riley applied for a commercial fishing license (Principal Effort License) with quahog and restricted finfish endorsements.
3. The Office of Boat Registration and Licensing issued a final denial by letter dated August 20, 2003.
4. Applicant filed an appeal with the Administrative Adjudication Division on September 16, 2003." [*37] (Lanphear Decision at 7).

Additionally, the Hearing Officer made several conclusions of law prior to granting summary judgment in favor of D.E.M. including the following:

1. The Administrative Adjudication Division for Environmental Matters ("AAD") has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to R.I. GEN. LAWS § 42-17.7-2; R.I. GEN. LAWS § 20-2.1-12(c); and Rule 6.7-10(i) of the Rules and Regulations Governing the Management of Marine Fisheries.

---

<sup>15</sup> The Hearing Officer's authority prohibited her from addressing the constitutional issues raised by the Appellant.

2. The license sought by Applicant constitutes a new license as contemplated by R.I. GEN. LAWS § 20-2.1-5 \(1\)\(ii\) and the Rules and Regulations Governing the Management of Marine Fisheries.
3. Rule 7.2 of the Rules and Regulations Governing the Management of Marine Fisheries prohibits the issuance of new Principal Effort Licenses (including licenses with quahog and non-restricted finfish endorsements) for 2003.
4. Rule 7.2 of the Rules and Regulations Governing the Management of Marine Fisheries is consistent with R.I. GEN. LAWS § 20-2.1-5 \(1\)\(ii\) and furthers the statutory scheme and purposes of [*38] the statute.
5. Pursuant to R.I. GEN. LAWS § 20-2.1-5\(1\)\(ii\) Applicant is not eligible for a principal effort license with quahog and non-restricted finfish endorsements.
6. There is no dispute as to any genuine issue of material fact and the Office of Management Services is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." (Lanphear Decision at 7-8).

The Hearing Officer also cited to two previous administrative decisions that denied fishing licenses in the same manner, basing the decision on the applicant's lack of a license prior to the date that the ban went into effect under G.L. § 20-2.1-5\(1\)\(ii\). The record evidences that Riley was not even eligible, ab initio, to obtain a license with the endorsements that he sought. As such, this Court finds that the Hearing Officer's denial of said license was consistent with constitutional and statutory provisions, was not arbitrary or capricious or affected by error of law, and was supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. Additionally, since there were no material facts in dispute her grant of summary judgment was correct.

[*39] CONCLUSION

Riley has not met his burden of demonstrating that his rights of due process and equal protection have been violated. This Court finds that both G.L. 1956 § 20-2.1-5 and Rule 7 are constitutional because they are rationally related to the legitimate government purpose in protecting the welfare of the public and promoting conservation of natural fish resources through license limitations. Furthermore, antitrust laws, including the Sherman Act, do not apply to regulatory agencies, such as the D.E.M., on the facts of this case, due to a statutory exemption and valid precedent. For the reasons stated above, this Court finds that the police powers of the State and the plenary powers of the General Assembly to regulate the fisheries are determinative in this case. Additionally, substantial rights of the Appellant have not been prejudiced. The Hearing Officer's decision was based on reliable, probative, and substantial evidence, in accordance with constitutional and statutory provisions, and was not arbitrary or capricious or affected by error of law. Thus, this Court hereby denies the declaratory relief prayed for by the Appellant and affirms [*40] the decision of the D.E.M Hearing Officer.

Counsel shall submit an appropriate order consistent with this opinion.

Genesee Vending, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, Southern Division

May 2, 2005, Decided ; May 2, 2005, Filed

Case No. 04-71834

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17442 *; 2005-01 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,818

GENESEE VENDING, INC., et al., Plaintiffs, v. R.J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO CO., Defendant.

Disposition: [*1] Defendant's January 24, 2005 Motion to Dismiss DENIED.

Core Terms

---

Cigarette, retail, Plaintiffs', purchasers, allegations, price discrimination, competitors, favored, amended complaint, benefits, consumer, products

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN1 [] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) requires a complaint to contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. The rules do not require a claimant to set out in detail the facts upon which he bases his claim. To the contrary, all the Rules require is a short and plain statement of the claim that will give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and the grounds upon which it rests.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN2 [] Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), the factual allegations in the complaint must be regarded as true. The claim shall not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that a plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. To survive dismissal under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), a complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Primary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > General Overview

**HN3** Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

The Clayton Act is an antitrust law that primarily protected against primary line price discrimination, or price discrimination tending to injure the price discriminator's competitors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Primary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Secondary & Tertiary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

**HN4** Robinson-Patman Act, Coverage

The Robinson-Patman Act is intended to curb and prohibit all devices by which large buyers gained discriminatory preferences over smaller ones by virtue of their greater purchasing power. The Act protects against "primary-line" as well as "secondary-line" violations. "Secondary line" violations occur when a seller's discrimination impacts competition among the seller's customers; i.e., the favored purchasers and disfavored purchasers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Secondary & Tertiary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > General Overview

**HN5** Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

Section 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Act prohibits a supplier from discriminating in price between different purchasers of like grade and quality where the effect is substantially to lessen competition. 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\). To establish secondary-line price discrimination under § 2(a) of the Act, a plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) that the seller's sales were made in interstate commerce; (2) that the seller discriminated in price as between the two purchasers; (3) that the product or commodity sold to the competing purchasers was of the same grade and quality; and (4) that the price discrimination had a prohibited effect on competition. A private plaintiff must also show that it suffered actual injury to its business or property as a result of the price discrimination.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > Promotional Allowances & Services

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

**HN6** Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

Sections 2(d) and (e) of the Robinson-Patman Act deal with discrimination in the field of promotional services made available to purchasers who buy for resale. Among the "promotional services" covered by the Act are advertising, display materials, and promotional contests. The elements of a claim under § 2(d) and (e) differ from that under § 2(a) only in that it is unnecessary to prove a prohibited effect on competition. 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(d\), \(e\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > Promotional Allowances & Services

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

**HN7** Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

Plaintiffs in a Robinson-Patman Act action need not make reference to specific transactions or promotional programs in their complaint. Such pleading of the evidence is a matter for the discovery process, not for allegations of detail in the complaint. The complaint should not be burdened with possibly hundreds of specific instances. If it were, it would be comparatively meaningless at trial where the parties could adduce further pertinent evidence if discovered.

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

**HN8** Pleadings, Rule Application & Interpretation

Factual pleading is required only insofar as it is necessary to place a defendant on notice as to the type of claim alleged and the grounds upon which it rests, thereby enabling a defendant to prepare a responsive pleading.

Counsel: For Genesee Vending, Incorporated, Suing individually and on behalf of a class of similarly situated persons, Plaintiff: Douglas B. McFadden, John M. Shoreman, McFadden & Shoreman, Washington, DC.

For R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Defendant: Daniel P. Malone, Lynn A. Sheehy, Butzel Long, Detroit, MI; Thomas Demitack, Jones Day, Cleveland, OH.

Judges: John Corbett O'Meara, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: John Corbett O'Meara

Opinion

---

OPINION AND ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS AMENDED COMPLAINT

Before the court is Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint, filed January 24, 2005. The court heard oral argument on Defendant's motion on April 29, 2005, and took the matter under advisement. For the reasons stated below, Defendant's motion is denied.

BACKGROUND FACTS

Plaintiffs are 236 companies that own and operate cigarette vending machines in various locations across the country.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs are suing Defendant, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company ("RJR"), under the Robinson-Patman Act, alleging price discrimination. RJR manufactures cigarettes under brand names that include Winston, [**2] Camel, and Salem. Plaintiffs claim that RJR discriminates against them in favor of a competing class of retailers: convenience stores, gas stations, mini-marts, kiosks, and discount stores. According to Plaintiffs, RJR provides convenience stores with price rebates, inventory buy-down promotions, advertising and display allowances, and consumer promotions, which have the effect of lowering the per pack price of cigarettes for convenience store customers. Plaintiffs allege that they are excluded from these sales and advertising programs, to their competitive disadvantage.

For each plaintiff, the Amended Complaint details the plaintiff's location, a specific competitor that receives allegedly more favorable treatment, and the products at issue. The allegations are virtually identical for each plaintiff; an example of these allegations is as follows:

Baton Rouge Cigarette Service is located in [**3] Baton Rouge, LA and operates cigarette vending machines throughout Baton Rouge. Baton Rouge Cigarette Service owns and operates 714 cigarette vending machines. Baton Rouge Cigarette Service competes with other cigarette retail outlets, including but not limited to Swiftly's Food Mart, in the sale of Defendant's cigarette brands, including but not limited to Winston, Winston Lights, Camel, Camel Lights, Salem, and Salem Lights, to adult consumers. Baton Rouge Cigarette Service's retail competitors receive promotional benefits directly from Defendant, which include but are not limited to: advertising and display payments, inventory payments, consumer promotions, consumer price rebates and buy-down promotions. Neither the aforementioned promotional benefits, nor any proportionally equivalent benefits, are made available to Baton Rouge Cigarette Service. Defendant's cigarette brands and retail promotional benefits move continuously in a stream of interstate commerce. Defendant's discrimination in price and benefits against Baton Rouge Cigarette Service and in favor of its other retail customers has the effect of substantially lessening competition in the sale of cigarettes on a per pack [**4] basis to adult consumers in the marketplace. Defendant's misconduct adversely affects and injures, suppresses and eliminates competition between Baton Rouge Cigarette Service and Defendant's favored retail customers. By reason of Defendant's discrimination in price and benefits, Baton Rouge Cigarette Service has been injured in its business and property through losses in sales and profits in an amount not less than $ 2,499,000.00. Defendant's continued misconduct in violation of the law threatens Baton Rouge Cigarette Service with future losses and injuries attributable directly to the violation.

---

<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs have styled their complaint as a class action. The court has not, however, ruled upon this issue.

Pls.' First Amended Compl. at P21 (Count I).

Defendant claims that Plaintiffs' amended complaint is flawed pursuant to Rule 8\(a\) and Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) because they fail to allege that they "competed against a retailer that bought directly from RJRT" and that retailer "received a discount that RJRT did not offer to that plaintiff." Def.'s Br. at 4. According to Defendant, "no plaintiff identifies a favored competing buyer, the product that each of them purchased from RJRT, when each of them bought it, the quantity that it purchased or the amount of the claimed price difference." Defendant [*5] claims that these are "basic elements of a Section 2\(a\) [Robinson-Patman] violation." Plaintiffs contend that their allegations are sufficient to state a claim under the Robinson-Patman Act.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

I. Standard of Review

HN1[] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8\(a\) requires a complaint to contain "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. . . ." The rules "do not require a claimant to set out in detail the facts upon which he bases his claim. To the contrary, all the Rules require is 'a short and plain statement of the claim' that will give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and the grounds upon which it rests." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 \(1957\).

HN2[] Under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), "the factual allegations in the complaint must be regarded as true. The claim should not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Scheid v. Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc., 859 F.2d 434, 436 \(6th Cir. 1988\) (citations omitted); see also [*6] Conley, 355 U.S. at 45-46. To survive dismissal under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), a complaint "must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory." Scheid, 859 F.2d at 436 (citations omitted) (emphasis in original).

II. Elements of a Robinson-Patman Claim

The Robinson-Patman Act was passed in 1936 as an amendment to the Clayton Act. HN3[] "The Clayton Act is an antitrust law that primarily protected against 'primary line' price discrimination, or price discrimination tending to injure the price discriminator's competitors." Lewis v. Philip Morris Inc., 355 F.3d 515, 520 \(6th Cir. 2004\). Congress passed the Robinson-Patman Act to "protect small retail stores from the concentrated buying power of larger chain stores." Id. at 520. HN4[] The Act was intended to "curb and prohibit all devices by which large buyers gained discriminatory preferences over smaller ones by virtue of their greater purchasing power." Id. The Act protects against "primary-line" as well as "secondary-line" violations. "Secondary line" violations occur "when [*7] a seller's discrimination impacts competition among the seller's customers; i.e., the favored purchasers and disfavored purchasers." Id. (citation omitted). This case involves an alleged secondary-line violation, because it is the competitors of the "favored purchasers" that are claiming discrimination, rather than the competitors of R.J. Reynolds.

Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint alleges violations of Sections 2(a), 2(d), and 2(e) of the Robinson-Patman Act (15 U.S.C. §§13\(a\), \(d\), \(e\)). HN5[] Section 2(a) of the Act prohibits a supplier from "discriminating in price between different purchasers of like grade and quality where the effect is substantially to lessen competition." Id. at

521 (citing 15 U.S.C. § 13(a)). To establish secondary-line price discrimination under section 2(a) of the Act (Plaintiffs' Count I), the plaintiff must demonstrate:

(1) that the seller's sales were made in interstate commerce; (2) that the seller discriminated in price as between the two purchasers; (3) that the product or commodity sold to the competing purchasers was of the same grade and quality; and (4) that the price discrimination [*8] had a prohibited effect on competition.

Industrial Burner Sys., Inc. v. Maxon Corp., 275 F. Supp. 2d 878, 882 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (citing George Haug Co. v. Rolls Royce Motor Cars, Inc., 148 F.3d 136, 141 (2d Cir. 1998)). A private plaintiff must also show that "it suffered actual injury to its business or property as a result of the price discrimination." Id.

HN6 [↑] Sections 2(d) and (e) of the Act "deal with discrimination in the field of promotional services made available to purchasers who buy for resale." Lewis, 355 F.3d at 521-22. Among the "promotional services" covered by the Act are advertising, display materials, and promotional contests. Id. at 522. The elements of a claim under Sections 2(d) and (e) differ from that under Section 2(a) only in that it is unnecessary to prove a prohibited effect on competition. See Lewis, 355 F.3d at 522 n.6, 7; 15 U.S.C. § 13(d), (e).

III. Sufficiency of Plaintiffs' Complaint

Defendant complains that Plaintiffs do not sufficiently allege violations of Sections 2(a), (d), or (e) in their complaint. According to Defendant, [*9] Plaintiffs' Section 2(a) claim is deficient because "none of the eleven Count I plaintiffs alleges that it competed against a retailer that bought directly from RJRT, as required by the statute, and that [the retailer] received a discount that RJRT did not offer to plaintiff. No plaintiff identifies a favored competing buyer, the product that each of them purchased from RJRT, when each of them bought it, the quantity that it purchased or the amount of the claimed price difference." Def. Br. at 4. Defendant contends that Plaintiffs' Section 2(d) and (e) claim is insufficient because Plaintiffs do not allege that "RJR provided a promotional allowance or service to a retailer against which the plaintiff competed, while not providing that promotional service to plaintiff." Id.

The pleading requirements for a Robinson-Patman claim are not as stringent as Defendant alleges. Defendant relies upon Mountain View Pharmacy v. Abbott Laboratories, 630 F.2d 1383 (10th Cir. 1980) and Chawla v. Shell Oil Co., 75 F. Supp. 2d 626 (S.D. Tex. 1999) for the proposition that Plaintiffs' complaint must set forth greater factual specificity or be dismissed. In [*10] Mountain View, however, the plaintiffs' complaint failed "to specify any products that were the subject of discriminatory treatment, nor does it identify the favored and disfavored purchasers of a particular product. In view of the number of plaintiffs [13], defendants [28], and products involved in this suit, a complaint that fails to allege at least some of this information does not give fair notice of the grounds upon which the Robinson-Patman claim rests." Mountain View, 630 F.2d at 1388. See also Chawla, 75 F. Supp. 2d at 653-54 (holding that in case with 73 plaintiffs, the "case must be analyzed from the perspective of each Plaintiff separately. Plaintiffs have not even attempted to meet their individual pleading burden.").

In contrast, in this case, Plaintiffs have identified the products that were the subject of discriminatory treatment (cigarettes, including the Winston, Camel, and Salem brands) and at least one specific favored purchaser and disfavored purchaser for each plaintiff. See, e.g., Compl. at P21 (allegations specific to each plaintiff); National Assoc. of College Bookstores, Inc. v. Cambridge University Press, 990 F. Supp. 245, 253 (S.D. N.Y. 1997) [*11] (distinguishing Mountain View and finding complaint sufficient where it "does identify products that were subject to discriminatory treatment, favored purchasers, and disfavored purchasers"). Plaintiffs also generally allege that (1) Defendant's sales were made in interstate commerce (Compl. at P15); (2) Defendant discriminated in price between Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs' retail competitors, by providing "rebates, buy-back and buy-down payments" to Plaintiffs' competitors, but not to Plaintiffs (Compl. at P18); (3) Defendant sells cigarettes of "identical grade and quality to Plaintiffs and to each individual Plaintiff's retail competitors" (Compl. at P15); and (4) that the price discrimination had a prohibited effect on competition (Compl. at P19). These are the required elements of a price discrimination claim under Section 2(a) and a claim under Sections 2(d) and (e). See, e.g., Industrial Burner Sys., 275 F. Supp. 2d at 882; Lewis, 355 F.3d at 522 n.6, 7; 15 U.S.C. §§ 13(a), (d), (e).

Contrary to Defendant's suggestion, HN7[<sup>1</sup>] Plaintiffs need not make reference to specific transactions or promotional programs in their complaint. [*12]

Such pleading of the evidence . . . is a matter for the discovery process, not for allegations of detail in the complaint. The complaint should not be burdened with possibly hundreds of specific instances. . . if it were, it would be comparatively meaningless at trial where the parties could adduce further pertinent evidence if discovered.

National Assoc. of College Bookstores, 990 F. Supp. at 252 (quoting Nagler v. Admiral Corp., 248 F.2d 319, 326 (2d Cir. 1957)). See also Mountain View, 630 F.2d at 1388 ("We are not demanding an inordinate level of factual specificity in the amended complaint. We recognize that HN8[<sup>1</sup>] factual pleading is required only insofar as it is necessary to place a defendant on notice as to the type of claim alleged and the grounds upon which it rests, thereby enabling a defendant to prepare a responsive pleading.").

In this case, Plaintiffs have given Defendant notice of the type of claim alleged and the grounds upon which it rests. Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint comports with the requirements of Rule 8\(a\) and Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), in that Plaintiffs have plead all the elements of a Robinson-Patman [*13] claim. Defendant can obtain further factual development of Plaintiffs' claims during discovery.

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Defendant's January 24, 2005 Motion to Dismiss is DENIED.

John Corbett O'Meara

United States District Judge

Dated: May 2, 2005

---

End of Document

In re Monosodium Glutamate Antitrust Litig.

United States District Court for the District of Minnesota

May 2, 2005, Decided

Civil File No. 00-MDL-1328 (PAM)

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8424 *; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,781

In re Monosodium Glutamate Antitrust Litigation

Subsequent History: Reconsideration granted by, Complaint dismissed at *Inquivosa, S.A. v. Ajinomoto Co., Inc. \(In re Monosodium Glutamate Antitrust Litig.\), 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39641 \(D. Minn., Oct. 26, 2005\)*

Prior History: *Conopco, Inc. v. Daesang Japan, Inc. \(In re Monosodium Glutamate Antitrust Litig.\), 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23237 \(D. Minn., Dec. 23, 2003\)*

Core Terms

---

domestic, Defendants', commerce, anti-competitive, prices, subject matter jurisdiction, anti trust law, antitrust, Plaintiffs', conspiracy, cartel, effects, nucleotides, Sherman Act, profits, abroad, comity, purchasers, injuries, international cartel, motion to dismiss, allegations, causation, inflated, linked, resale

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN1 [down arrow] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under *Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(1\)* may challenge the complaint either on its face or on the factual truthfulness of its averments. Where a defendant challenges the complaint on its face, the court reviews the pleadings and affords the plaintiff the same protections that it would receive on a *Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\)* motion to dismiss. A court takes the factual allegations as true and will only dismiss the complaint if the plaintiff fails to allege an essential element for subject matter jurisdiction.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN2 [down arrow] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

When determining whether to grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, a court must construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, and view the facts alleged in the complaint as true. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\). The court also must draw all reasonable inferences in the non-moving party's favor. The court may dismiss a claim only if relief cannot be afforded under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations.

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

**HN3** International Aspects, Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act

The Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act provides that the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., applies to foreign conduct only if: (1) the conduct has a direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect on United States commerce, and (2) such effect gives rise to a claim under the Sherman Act. 15 U.S.C.S. § 6a\(1\)-\(2\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

International Trade Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

**HN4** Sherman Act, Claims

The purpose of the Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act (FTAIA) is to establish that restraints on export trade only violate the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., if they have a direct and substantial effect on commerce within the United States or a domestic firm competing for foreign trade. The FTAIA is not intended to confer jurisdiction on injured foreign persons when that injury arose from conduct with no anticompetitive effects in the domestic marketplace.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

International Trade Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

**HN5** Private Actions, Remedies

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., does not apply when a plaintiff cannot show a causal link between the domestic effect and their alleged injury. Rather, to invoke the protections of the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must show that the defendant's conduct affected United States commerce and that the domestic effect gave rise to the plaintiff's injury.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

International Trade Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act

International Law > Authority to Regulate > General Overview

HN6 [down] Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Jurisdiction Over Actions

The existence of a single, global conspiracy does not relieve the plaintiff's burden of satisfying the Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act. Instead, the plaintiff must allege that its injury arose from the conspiracy's proscribed effects on United States commerce.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Comity

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Jurisdictional Sources > Statutory Sources

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Relations With Governments

International Law > Dispute Resolution > Comity Doctrine > General Overview

International Law > ... > Comity Doctrine > Areas of Law > Commercial Transactions

International Trade Law > General Overview

HN7 [down] Courts, Judicial Comity

The Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act does not preclude the application of comity as a basis upon which to assert jurisdiction over foreign conduct, even where that conduct might otherwise be determined to have a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable anticompetitive effect on United States commerce. Where a court determines that the requirements for subject matter jurisdiction are met, a statute has no effect on the court's ability to employ notions of comity or otherwise to take account of the international character of the transaction.

Contracts Law > Contract Formation > Mistake > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

**HN8** [blue] Contract Formation, Mistake

A court ordinarily construes ambiguous statutes to avoid unreasonable interference with the sovereign authority of other nations. That rule of statutory construction cautions courts to assume that legislators take account of the legitimate sovereign interests of other nations when they write American laws. It thereby helps the potentially conflicting laws of different nations work together in harmony.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Comity

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

International Law > ... > Comity Doctrine > Areas of Law > Commercial Transactions

**HN9** [blue] Courts, Judicial Comity

America's antitrust laws, when applied to foreign conduct, can interfere with a foreign nation's ability independently to regulate its own commercial affairs. But American courts hold that application of our antitrust laws to foreign anticompetitive conduct is nonetheless reasonable, and hence consistent with principles of prescriptive comity, insofar as they reflect a legislative effort to redress domestic injury that foreign anticompetitive conduct has caused.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

International Trade Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

**HN10** [blue] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., applies to foreign conduct that was meant to produce, and did in fact produce, some substantial effect in the United States.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Jurisdiction

International Law > Authority to Regulate > General Overview

International Trade Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

**HN11** [blue] Sherman Act, Jurisdiction

Any major activities on an international cartel would likely have the requisite impact on United States commerce to trigger U.S. subject matter jurisdiction under the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq. For example, if a domestic export cartel were so strong as to have a "spillover" effect on commerce within the U.S. by creating a world wide shortage or artificially inflated world wide price that had the effect of raising domestic prices, the cartel's conduct would fall within the reach of U.S. antitrust laws. Such an impact would, at least over time, meet the test of a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on domestic commerce.

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Foreign Corporations > General Overview

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN12 International Aspects, International Application of US Law

American antitrust law is based on the principle that deterrence will be effective only if conspirators' anticipated sanctions exceed their potential profits. To deny a foreign plaintiff injured by an antitrust violation the right to sue would defeat these purposes. It would permit a price fixer or a monopolist to escape full liability for his illegal actions and would deny compensation to certain of his victims, merely because he happens to deal with foreign customers. An exclusion of all foreign plaintiffs would lessen the deterrent effect of treble damages. The conspiracy alleged by the respondents in this case operated domestically as well as internationally. If foreign plaintiffs were not permitted to seek a remedy for their antitrust injuries, persons doing business in both this country and abroad might be tempted to enter into anticompetitive conspiracies affecting American consumers in the expectation that the illegal profits they could safely extort abroad would offset any liability to plaintiffs at home. If, on the other hand, potential antitrust violators must take into account the full costs of their conduct, American consumers are benefitted by the maximum deterrent effect of treble damages upon all potential violators.

Antitrust & Trade Law > International Aspects > International Application of US Law > General Overview

International Law > Authority to Regulate > Anticompetitive Activities

International Trade Law > General Overview

International Law > Authority to Regulate > General Overview

HN13 International Aspects, International Application of US Law

With respect to an international cartel, United States antitrust sanctions are ineffective at deterring anticompetitive conduct in the U.S. if they merely approximate the cartel's profits in the U.S. To ensure that international cartels are truly deterred and deprived of the fruits of their illegality, U.S. antitrust laws must also apply to foreign injury. Thus, when the anticompetitive conduct of an international cartel adversely affects U.S. commerce, which in turn causes foreign injury, the foreign plaintiff may seek recourse under the U.S. antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

HN14[ Private Actions, Standing

To establish standing in an antitrust case, plaintiffs must prove more than injury casually linked to an illegal presence in the market. Plaintiffs must prove an antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. In addition, plaintiffs must establish that there was proximate causation between their harm and the alleged illegal market restraint. Thus, if plaintiffs' injuries are too remote and damages are too speculative, plaintiffs will fail to satisfy the standing requirement.

Counsel: [*1] For Inquivosa SA, Plaintiff: Daniel E Gustafson, Karla M Gluek, Renae Diane Steiner, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Mpls, MN; Donald L Perelman, Fine Kaplan & Black, Philadelphia, PA; Gerald J Rodos, Barrack Rodos & Bacine, Philadelphia, PA; Guido Saveri, R Alexander Saveri, Saveri & Saveri Inc, San Francisco, CA; Heidi M Silton, Richard A Lockridge, W Joseph Bruckner, Lockridge Grindal Nauen PLLP, Mpls, MN; Howard J Sedran, Levin Fishbein Sedran & Berman, Philadelphia, PA; Ira Neil Richards, Rodriguez & Richards, Philadelphia, PA; Jared B Stamell, Stamell & Schager, New York, NY; Joseph Goldberg, Freedman Boyd & Daniels, Albuquerque, NM; Joseph M Patane, Richard J Kilsheimer, Not Admitted; Marc H Edelson, Hoffman & Edelson, Doylestown, PA; Mark A Griffin, Keller Rohrback, Seattle, WA; Martin D Chitwood, Chitwood Harley Harnes LLP, Atlanta, GA; Robert N Kaplan, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer, New York, NY; Samuel D Heins, Susan E MacMenamin, Heins Mills & Olson, PLC, Mpls, MN.

For Petbowe Chemtrade Corp, Plus Sun Co., Ltd., Menssing Chemiehandel & Consultants, GmbH (MCC), on behalf of all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs: Daniel E Gustafson, Karla M Gluek, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Mpls, MN; [*2] Donald L Perelman, Fine Kaplan & Black, Philadelphia, PA; Gerald J Rodos, Barrack Rodos & Bacine, Philadelphia, PA; Howard J Sedran, Levin Fishbein Sedran & Berman, Philadelphia, PA; Joseph Goldberg, Freedman Boyd & Daniels, Albuquerque, NM; Martin D Chitwood, Chitwood Harley Harnes LLP, Atlanta, GA; Richard A Lockridge, W Joseph Bruckner, Lockridge Grindal Nauen PLLP, Mpls, MN; Samuel D Heins, Heins Mills & Olson, PLC, Mpls, MN.

For Ajinomoto Co, Ajinomoto Company, Inc., Defendant: Michael A Lindsay, Dorsey & Whitney LLP - MN, Mpls, MN.

For Takeda Chemical Industries, Ltd., Defendant: Joseph T Dixon, Jr, Henson & Efron, Mpls, MN.

For Kyowa Hakko Kogyo Co., Ltd., Defendant: Christopher V Roberts, Weil Gotshal & Manges - NY, New York, NY; Douglas R Boettge, William L Greene, Leonard Street and Deinard - Mpls, Mpls. MN.

Judges: Paul A. Magnuson, United States District Court Judge.

Opinion by: Paul A. Magnuson

Opinion

---

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

This document relates to:

Inquivosa, S.A., et al. v. Ajinomoto Co., Inc., et al., Civ. No. 03-2997

This matter is before the Court on Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction and Standing. For the reasons [*3] that follow, the Court denies the Motion.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs are foreign corporations who purchased monosodium glutamate ("MSG") and/or nucleotides directly from one or more Defendants in transactions that occurred outside of the United States.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs allege that Defendants and an undetermined number of unnamed co-conspirators participated in a global price-fixing and market allocation scheme to increase the world-wide price of MSG and nucleotides. Plaintiffs also claim that Defendants' conduct in forming and implementing the global conspiracy exerted direct and substantial effects on United States trade and commerce by inflating the prices paid by purchasers in the United States. (Am. Compl. PP 13-28.) In addition, Plaintiffs allege that price movements in one geographic sub-market were inextricably linked to all other markets so that the prices charged by Defendants and their co-conspirators in other countries were highly correlated with United States prices. (Id. PP 39-42.)

[*4] According to Plaintiffs, Defendants fixed United States prices and controlled United States markets not merely to capture cartel profits in the United States, but also to allow the cartel to be effective anywhere in the world. Because MSG and nucleotides are fungible commodities, Defendants and their co-conspirators allegedly "knew that their conspiracy would not succeed unless they coordinated their prices and market shares in markets across the world." (Id. P 43.) Thus, Defendants allegedly included the United States in the cartel precisely to extract cartel profits from purchasers around the world without risk of arbitrage. (Id.)

Plaintiffs' alleged injury is that they purchased overpriced MSG and nucleotides abroad because Defendants' unlawful conspiracy prevented them from buying competitively priced MSG and nucleotides from the United States. (Id. PP 54-56.)

Defendants Ajinomoto Co. Inc., Ajinomoto U.S.A., Inc., Takeda Pharmaceutical Company Limited (f/k/a Takeda Chemical Industries, Ltd.), Kyowa Hakko Kogyo Co., Ltd. now seek dismissal of the Amended Complaint under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(1\) and 12\(b\)\(6\) [*5] .<sup>2</sup>

DISCUSSION

A. Standard of Review

HN1 [↑] A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Rule 12\(b\)\(1\) may challenge the complaint either on its face or on the factual truthfulness of its averments. *Titus v. Sullivan*, 4 F.3d 590, 593 \(8th Cir. 1993\). When a defendant challenges the complaint on its face, the Court reviews the pleadings and affords the plaintiff the same protections that it would receive on a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss. See *Osborn v. United States*, 918 F.2d 724, 729 n.6 \(8th Cir. 1990\). [*6] The Court takes the factual allegations as true and will only dismiss the complaint if the plaintiff fails to allege an essential element for subject matter jurisdiction. See *Titus*, 4 F.3d at 593.

HN2 [↑] When determining whether to grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, the Court must construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, and view the facts alleged in the complaint as true. See *Fed.R.Civ.P. 12\(b\)\(6\)*; *Hamm v. Groose*, 15 F.3d 110, 112 \(8th Cir. 1994\). The Court also must draw all reasonable inferences in the non-moving party's favor. *United States v. Stoltz*, 327 F.3d 671, 674 \(8th Cir. 2003\). The Court may dismiss a claim only if relief cannot be afforded under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations. *Hafley v. Lohman*, 90 F.3d 264, 266 \(8th Cir. 1996\).

---

<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs are attempting to sue on behalf of themselves and all foreign purchasers of MSG or nucleotides from any of the named Defendants or Defendants' co-conspirators from January 1, 1984, through November 1, 1999. (Am. Compl. P 45.)

<sup>2</sup> Defendants CJ Corp. (f/k/a Cheil Jedang Corporation) and CJ America, Inc. joined and adopted this Motion. Defendant Archer Daniels Midland Company also joined this Motion, and filed a Motion of its own based on the statute of limitations. On March 17, 2005, Plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed with prejudice all claims asserted against Archer Daniels Midland. Eight other Defendants failed to appear for this Motion. It is unclear whether service has been effected or refused by these Defendants.

B. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Defendants contend that the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over this action because the Sherman Act does not apply to Plaintiffs' antitrust claim. Plaintiffs counter that the Court [*7] has subject matter jurisdiction because the effect of Defendants' conspiracy on United States commerce "gave direct rise to Plaintiffs' antitrust claims and injuries." (Am. Compl. P 4.)

Congress enacted the Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act ("FTAIA") in 1982 to clarify the application of United States antitrust laws to international business transactions. See 15 U.S.C. § 6a. Specifically, HN3 the FTAIA provides that the Sherman Act applies to foreign conduct only if: (1) the conduct has a "direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect" on United States commerce, and (2) "such effect gives rise to a claim" under the Sherman Act. Id. at § 6a\(1\)-\(2\); see also H.R. Rep 97-686, 1982 WL 25066, at *8 HN4 (the purpose of the FTAIA is to "establish that restraints on export trade only violate the Sherman Act if they have a direct and substantial effect on commerce within the United States or a domestic firm competing for foreign trade"); Id. at *11(the FTAIA is not intended "to confer jurisdiction on injured foreign persons when that injury arose from conduct with no anti-competitive effects in the domestic marketplace").

The United [*8] States Supreme Court recently addressed the scope of the FTAIA in F. Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd v. Empagran, S.A., 542 U.S. 155, 159 L. Ed. 2d 226, 124 S. Ct. 2359 \(2004\). In Empagran, the price-fixing conduct significantly and adversely affected customers both within and outside the United States. However, the adverse foreign effect was independent of any adverse domestic effect. The Supreme Court held that HN5 the Sherman Act did not apply when a plaintiff cannot show a causal link between the domestic effect and their alleged injury. Id. at 2366-71. Rather, to invoke the protections of the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must show that the defendant's conduct affected United States commerce and that the domestic effect gave rise to the plaintiff's injury. Id. at 2371-72.

1. Foreign Injury Dependent on Domestic Effect

The Empagran Court expressly declined to address the issue presented in this case: whether subject matter jurisdiction exists when a plaintiff's foreign injury is allegedly linked to the domestic effects of the allegedly anti-competitive conduct. Id. at 2372. Instead, it remanded the issue to the District of Columbia Circuit Court [*9] of Appeals.

Notably, however, the Supreme Court referred to Industria Siciliana Asfalti, Bitumi S.p.A. v. Exxon Research & Eng'r Co., 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17851, 1977 WL 1353 \(S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 1977\), and distinguished that case from the scope of its holding. In Industria Siciliana, the district court found that it had subject matter jurisdiction to decide a Sherman Act claim based on a foreign injury suffered by a foreign company. When discussing the case in Empagran, the Supreme Court expressly noted that the foreign injury in Industria Siciliana was "inextricably bound up with . . . domestic restraints of trade, and that the plaintiff was injured . . . by reason of an alleged restraint of our domestic trade." 124 S. Ct. at 2370 (internal citations and quotations omitted). Reference to Industria Siciliana indicates that subject matter jurisdiction exists when a plaintiff shows that its foreign injury arose from the domestic effect of the defendant's conduct.

Since Empagran, few courts have squarely addressed the issue of whether subject matter jurisdiction exists when the foreign injury is dependent on the domestic effect of anti-competitive conduct. See, [*10] e.g., MM Global Servs. v. Dow Chem. Co., 329 F. Supp. 2d 337 \(D. Conn. 2004\). In MM Global, the defendants allegedly compelled the plaintiffs to engage in a price maintenance conspiracy with respect to the resale of Union Carbide products in India, and refused to accept orders if the prospective resale prices to end-users in India were below certain levels. Id. at 340. By doing so, the defendants allegedly sought to ensure that prices charged by the plaintiffs to end-users in India would not erode the prices to the end-users in the United States. Id. As a result of this price fixing, the plaintiffs alleged that competition in the sale and resale of Union Carbide products was improperly diminished and restrained. Id. The amended complaint further alleged:

As a direct and proximate result of the defendants' fixing of minimum resale prices and other terms of sale, competition in the sale and resale of products in and from the United States was improperly diminished and restrained, and as the result of such effect on competition, the plaintiffs were injured by being precluded from effectively and fully competing and maximizing their sales [*11] of products.

Id. at 342 (emphasis in original).

The district court found that the plaintiffs sufficiently alleged that the defendants' conduct had an effect on competition in and from the United States and that the foreign plaintiffs were injured as a result of that effect. It therefore denied the motion to dismiss. Id.

2. Causation

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' claim must fail because Plaintiffs do not and cannot allege that the United States prices were the direct cause of the alleged foreign price-fixing. In Empagran, the Supreme Court recognized that a claim based on foreign injury that depends on the domestic effect of the defendant's anti-competitive conduct involves but-for causation. 124 S. Ct. at 2372. Defendants contend that but-for causation cannot meet the requirements of the FTAIA. They argue that the "gives rise to" language in § 6a\(2\) requires that Plaintiffs show that they were injured directly and immediately by the effect on United States commerce.

Defendants rely on Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Counsel of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 \(1983\) and Den Norske Stats Oljeselskap AS v. HeereMac VOF, 241 F.3d 420 \(5th Cir. 2001\) [*12] to argue that direct causation is required. In Associated General Contractors, the Supreme Court found that the complaint contained only "somewhat vaguely defined links" between the plaintiffs' injury and the alleged restraint in the construction market, and consequently held that the alleged harm resulting from a violation of the antitrust laws was too attenuated and speculative to set forth a claim. 459 U.S. at 540-46.

In Den Norske, a Norwegian oil corporation conducting business exclusively in the North Sea brought an antitrust conspiracy claim against providers of heavy-lift barge services, alleging that the defendants' conduct inflated the plaintiff's operating costs in the North Sea and also inflated oil prices in the United States market. Notably, the plaintiff did not allege that the higher prices in the United States market gave rise to its claim. Rather, it alleged that the conspiracy compelled it to charge higher prices for the crude oil it exported to the United States. Thus, it was the plaintiff's injury in the North Sea that was a "necessary prerequisite" to the injury suffered in the United States domestic market. Id. at 422-25. Because the [*13] plaintiff failed to show that the effect on United States commerce gave rise to the plaintiff's claim, the Fifth Circuit dismissed the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Id. at 427. The court emphasized that HNG the existence of a single, global conspiracy did not relieve the plaintiff's burden of satisfying the FTAIA. Instead, the plaintiff must allege that its injury arose from the conspiracy's proscribed effects on United States commerce. Id. at 427 n. 24.

The allegations in the Amended Complaint distinguish this case from both Associated General Contractors and Den Norske. Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' anti-competitive conduct adversely affected United States commerce and that their injury was inextricably intertwined with the injury Defendants inflicted on the United States market. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that prices in the United States were directly and substantially linked with the prices Plaintiffs paid and that Defendants' unlawful conduct deliberately prevented Plaintiffs from purchasing MSG and nucleotides from the United States. (Am. Compl. PP 41, 43.) In addition, Plaintiffs allege that the adverse domestic effect of Defendants' [*14] anti-competitive conduct was "necessary to achieve Plaintiffs' injuries abroad." (Id. P 56.) They reason that Defendants could not have maintained their international price fixing cartel -- and therefore Plaintiffs would not have suffered their foreign injuries -- without the adverse effect on United States commerce. In addition, Plaintiffs contend that if the cartel had not affected the United States market, Plaintiffs would have obtained MSG and/or nucleotides from the United States market at competitive prices. (Id.)

These allegations aver a far more direct causal relationship between the domestic effect and Plaintiffs' injury than Associated General Contractors, Den Norske, and other cases where the plaintiffs allegedly suffered foreign injury independent of domestic harm. Cf. Eurim-Pharm v. Pfizer Inc., 593 F. Supp. 1102, 1106-07 \(S.D.N.Y. 1984\) (motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction granted when plaintiff failed to allege that defendants' alleged foreign price-fixing and market allocation scheme resulted in an anti-competitive effect on United States commerce or any facts demonstrating a causal connection between the defendants' [*15] conduct in Europe and the price increase in United States), with MM Global Servs., 329 F. Supp. at 342 (subject matter jurisdiction exists when foreign plaintiffs injured abroad assert a causal connection between their injuries and the United States effects of defendants' conduct). Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have alleged a sufficient link between the domestic effect caused by Defendants' anti-competitive conduct and Plaintiffs' injury.

3. Policy Considerations

Defendants also argue that the Court should dismiss this action for comity considerations. HN7[] The FTAIA does not preclude the application of comity as a basis upon which to assert jurisdiction over foreign conduct, even where that conduct might otherwise be determined to have a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable anti-competitive effect on United States commerce. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. California, 509 U.S. 764, 798, 125 L. Ed. 2d 612, 113 S. Ct. 2891 \(1993\); see also H.R. Rep. 97-686, 1982 WL 25066, at *13 ("If a court determines that the requirements for subject matter jurisdiction are met, this bill would have no effect on the court's ability to employ notions of comity . . . [*16] . or otherwise to take account of the international character of the transaction.").

Indeed, the Supreme Court greatly considered the issue of comity in Empagran:

HN8[] This Court ordinarily construes ambiguous statutes to avoid unreasonable interference with the sovereign authority of other nations . . . This rule of statutory construction cautions courts to assume that legislators take account of the legitimate sovereign interests of other nations when they write American laws. It thereby helps the potentially conflicting laws of different nations work together in harmony -- a harmony particularly needed in today's highly interdependent commercial world.

HN9[] No one denies that America's antitrust laws, when applied to foreign conduct, can interfere with a foreign nation's ability independently to regulate its own commercial affairs. But our courts have long held that application of our antitrust laws to foreign anticompetitive conduct is nonetheless reasonable, and hence consistent with principles of prescriptive comity, insofar as they reflect a legislative effort to redress domestic injury that foreign anticompetitive conduct has caused.

124 S. Ct. at 2366. [*17] Ultimately, the Supreme Court found it unreasonable to apply United States antitrust laws to foreign conduct insofar as that conduct causes independent foreign harm and that foreign harm alone gives rise to the plaintiff's claim. Id. at 2367.

Defendants piggyback on the reasoning in Empagran and argue that finding subject matter jurisdiction in this case would unjustifiably interfere with foreign sovereigns' antitrust enforcement systems. Specifically, Defendants note that the application of American private treble-damages remedies to anti-competitive conduct taking place abroad has generated significant controversy. See id. at 2368 (courts should not allow private foreign entities to come to the United States and "bypass their own less generous remedial schemes, thereby upsetting a balance of competing considerations that their own domestic antitrust laws embody").

However, the policy concerns reflected in Empagran are not present in this case, where Plaintiffs allege that the foreign harm they suffered was inextricably related to the anti-competitive conduct's effect on domestic commerce. Indeed, the Empagran court limited its invocation [*18] of comity to cases where "foreign conduct . . . causes independent foreign harm and that foreign harm alone gives rise to the plaintiff's claim." Id. at 2367 (emphasis added); see also Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 509 U.S. at 796 HN10[] ("It is well established by now that the Sherman Act applies to foreign conduct that was meant to produce and did in fact produce some substantial effect in the United States"). Furthermore, legislative history indicates that Congress intended to apply the Sherman Act to international cartel activity that impacted United States commerce:

HN11[] Any major activities on an international cartel would likely have the requisite impact on United States commerce to trigger United States subject matter jurisdiction. For example, if a domestic export cartel were so strong as to have a "spillover" effect on commerce within this country -- by creating a world-wide shortage or artificially inflated world-wide price that had the effect of raising domestic prices -- the cartel's conduct would fall within the reach of our antitrust laws. Such an impact would, at least over time, meet the test of a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable [*19] effect on domestic commerce.

H.R. Rep. 97-686, 1982 WL 25066, at *13.

In addition to the comity considerations, the Court notes that Plaintiffs allege that Defendants were keenly aware that they had to include the United States in their cartel to extract cartel profits throughout the world. HN12 [↑] American antitrust law is based on the principle that deterrence will be effective only if conspirators' anticipated sanctions exceed their potential profits. As the Supreme Court explained in Pfizer, Inc. v. Government of India, 434 U.S. 308, 54 L. Ed. 2d 563, 98 S. Ct. 584 \(1978\):

To deny a foreign plaintiff injured by an antitrust violation the right to sue would defeat these purposes. It would permit a price fixer or a monopolist to escape full liability for his illegal actions and would deny compensation to certain of his victims, merely because he happens to deal with foreign customers.

Moreover, an exclusion of all foreign plaintiffs would lessen the deterrent effect of treble damages. The conspiracy alleged by the respondents in this case operated domestically as well as internationally. If foreign plaintiffs were not permitted to seek a remedy for their antitrust injuries, [*20] persons doing business in both this country and abroad might be tempted to enter into anti-competitive conspiracies affecting American consumers in the expectation that the illegal profits they could safely extort abroad would offset any liability to plaintiffs at home. If, on the other hand, potential antitrust violators must take into account the full costs of their conduct, American consumers are benefitted by the maximum deterrent effect of treble damages upon all potential violators.

Id. at 315.

HN13 [↑] As it relates to an international cartel, United States antitrust sanctions are ineffective at deterring anti-competitive conduct in the United States if they merely approximate the cartel's profits in the United States. To ensure that international cartels are truly deterred and deprived of the fruits of their illegality, United States antitrust laws must also apply to foreign injury. Thus, when the anti-competitive conduct of an international cartel adversely affects United States commerce, which in turn causes foreign injury, the foreign plaintiff may seek recourse under the United States antitrust laws. See H.R. 97-686, 1982 WL 25066, at * [*21] 13 ("Any major activities of an international cartel would likely have the requisite impact on United States commerce to trigger United States subject matter jurisdiction").

C. Standing

Defendants also maintain that Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing and therefore fail to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Specifically, Defendants contend that Plaintiffs' harm is too remote and is not the type of injury covered by United States antitrust law. Defendants also submit that Plaintiffs are not the proper party to bring this action.

HN14 [↑] To establish standing, Plaintiffs "must prove more than injury casually linked to an illegal presence in the market. Plaintiffs must prove an antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 \(1977\); see also Assoc. Gen. Contractors, 459 U.S. at 538-45 (setting forth factors to determine whether a plaintiff lacks antitrust standing). In addition, Plaintiffs must establish that there was proximate causation between their harm and [*22] the alleged illegal market restraint. Int'l Travel Arrangers v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 723 F. Supp. 141, 149 \(Magnuson, J.\). Thus, if Plaintiffs' injuries are too remote and damages are too speculative, Plaintiffs will fail to satisfy the standing requirement. Int'l Travel Arrangers, 723 F. Supp. at 149-50; see also de Atucha v. Commodity Exch., Inc., 608 F. Supp. 510, 518 \(S.D.N.Y. 1985\) (plaintiff lacked standing because the alleged relationship between the plaintiff's injury and United States effects was too attenuated to allow the antitrust claim; any recovery for a foreign injury would not accurately reflect congressional intent).

Plaintiffs allege that they were direct purchasers of overpriced MSG and/or nucleotides who were forced to pay inflated prices abroad because Defendants' conspiracy prevented them from buying competitively priced MSG and/or nucleotides from the United States. Plaintiffs also allege that the injury was direct and was specifically intended by Defendants. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that their injury arose from the United States effects of Defendants' anti-competitive actions. [*23] Moreover, although the Court believes that damages will be difficult and complex in this case, they are not too speculative as to deny standing. Finally, Plaintiffs are proper enforcers of the antitrust laws since domestic direct purchasers cannot bring a claim to disgorge Defendants' overseas profits and domestic indirect purchasers would lack standing. See III. Brick Co. v. State of Ill., 431 U.S. 720, 737-38, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707, 97 S. Ct. 2061 (1977). Considering all of these factors, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have standing to bring their claims.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs have craftily plead the Amended Complaint to allege a claim based upon the alternative theory recognized by the United States Supreme Court in F. Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd. v. Empagran, S.A., 124 S. Ct. 2359 (2004). They have sufficiently alleged that Defendants' anti-competitive conduct had a "direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect" on United States commerce, and that Plaintiffs' harm is directly related to the adverse domestic effect. In addition, Plaintiffs have sufficiently set forth allegations to establish antitrust standing. Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

1. [*24] Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (Clerk's Doc. No. 532) is DENIED; and
2. The parties shall conduct discovery exclusively relating to the alleged nexus between the domestic effects of Defendants' anti-competitive and Plaintiffs' alleged harm.

Dated: May 2, 2005

s/ Paul A. Magnuson

Paul A. Magnuson

United States District Court Judge

---

End of Document

Bassett v. NCAA

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky

May 3, 2005, Decided

Civil Action No. 5:04-425-JMH

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17570 *; 2005-01 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,822

CLAUDE L. BASSETT, Plaintiff, v. THE NATIONAL COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION, THE SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE, and THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Motion denied by Bassett v. NCAA, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39660 \(E.D. Ky., Nov. 8, 2005\)

Affirmed by Bassett v. Ncaa, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 12248 \(6th Cir.\) \(6th Cir. Ky., 2008\)

Core Terms

---

allegations, antitrust, motion to dismiss, coaching, resignation, fraud claim, football, prospective contractual relation, civil conspiracy, Defendants', interview, Athletic, tape, antitrust violation, conspiracy, schools, ban

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) tests the sufficiency of the complaint.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN2 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Under the liberal notice pleading rules, a complaint need only put a party on notice of the claim being asserted against it to satisfy the federal rule requirement of stating a claim upon which relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN3 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A federal court may dismiss a complaint only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN4 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A court ruling on a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and accept as true all well-pleaded factual allegations.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN5 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Construing the complaint in the light most favorable to the petitioner, dismissal is proper only if it appears beyond doubt that the petitioner can prove no set of facts in support of his claims that would entitle him to relief."

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

HN6 Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit interprets Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) as requiring plaintiffs to allege the time, place, and content of the alleged misrepresentation on which he or she relied; the fraudulent scheme; the fraudulent intent of the defendants; and the injury resulting from the fraud. While Rule 9\(b\) requires the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake to be stated with particularity, malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN7 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN8 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

While § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, says "every," the United States Supreme Court has long held that Congress intended to outlaw only "unreasonable" restraints of trade.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Clayton Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Prioritizing Resources & Organization for Intellectual Property Act

HN9 [+] Standing, Clayton Act

Section 4 of the Clayton Act creates a private cause of action for antitrust law violations and provides treble damages to any person injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws. 15 U.S.C.S. § 15.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Colleges & Universities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN10 [+] Higher Education & Professional Associations, Colleges & Universities

By its plain language, § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, only applies to the alleged antitrust violation if such violation is commercial in nature.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Colleges & Universities

Education Law > Intercollegiate & Interscholastic Athletics > Athletic Associations

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN11 [+] Higher Education & Professional Associations, Colleges & Universities

Some National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) rules have been held to be commercial in nature and thus subject to antitrust scrutiny. Other NCAA rules, however, have been found to further the NCAA's noncommercial objectives; courts have held that the Sherman Act does not apply to these rules.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Colleges & Universities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Sports > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Education Law > Intercollegiate & Interscholastic Athletics > Athletic Associations

HN12 [+] Higher Education & Professional Associations, Colleges & Universities

For purposes of the Sherman Act, the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Two-in-Four rule is commercial in nature as it regulates games that constitute sources of revenue for both member schools and promoters.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Colleges & Universities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN13 [+] Higher Education & Professional Associations, Colleges & Universities

The Sherman Act does not apply to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's promulgation of eligibility requirements.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Colleges & Universities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN14 [+] Higher Education & Professional Associations, Colleges & Universities

To state a claim for an antitrust violation, a plaintiff must allege an antitrust injury in his complaint. An "antitrust injury" is an (1) injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and an (2) injury that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. Because the purpose of the antitrust laws is to protect competition rather than competitors, a plaintiff must allege injury, not only to himself, but to a relevant market. Thus, failure to allege an anticompetitive impact on a relevant market amounts to a failure to allege an antitrust injury.

Torts > Business Torts > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

HN15 [ ] Business Torts, Fraud & Misrepresentation

A viable fraud claim under Kentucky law requires that the defendant (a) made a material misrepresentation; (b) which was false; (c) which was known to be false or made recklessly; (d) which was made with inducement to be acted upon; (e) which plaintiff acted in reliance upon; and (f) which caused plaintiff injury.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN16 [ ] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In order to survive a motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\), a plaintiff's complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Torts > Business Torts > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

HN17 [ ] Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), a complaint alleging fraud must allege with particularity those circumstances constituting fraud.

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Indispensable Parties

Civil Procedure > Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Parties > Joinder of Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

HN18 [ ] Compulsory Joinder, Indispensable Parties

Fed. R. Civ. P. 19 provides a three-part test. First, the court determines whether a party should be joined (i.e., whether the party is necessary under Rule 19\(a\)). If so, the court asks whether joinder is feasible. If it is, the party is to be joined. If not, the court determines under Rule 19\(b\) whether "in equity and good conscience," the action should continue without him or be dismissed (i.e., whether the party is indispensable).

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

HN19 [blue icon] Compulsory Joinder, Necessary Parties

Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a) states that a person is "necessary" and should be joined as a party if, in the person's absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

HN20 [blue icon] Compulsory Joinder, Necessary Parties

A party is not "necessary" where it has not claimed an interest in the outcome of an action and complete relief can be ordered in its absence.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > Elements

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > General Overview

HN21 [blue icon] Conspiracy, Elements

A viable cause of action for civil conspiracy requires that a plaintiff prove an unlawful/corrupt combination or agreement between the alleged conspirators to do by some concerted action an unlawful act.

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Time Limitations

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > Defenses

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > General Overview

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > General Overview

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > Elements

HN22 [blue icon] Statute of Limitations, Time Limitations

Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 413.140(1)(c) prescribes a one-year statute of limitations for civil conspiracy. This statute begins to run at the commission of the last act in furtherance of the conspiracy.

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

HN23 [blue icon] Commercial Interference, Contracts

Kentucky law recognizes the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations as articulated in the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 766B.

Torts > ... > Prospective Advantage > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN24 [blue icon] Intentional Interference, Elements

One who intentionally and improperly interferes with another's prospective contractual relation (except a contract to marry) is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary harm resulting from loss of the benefits of the relation, whether the interference consists of (a) inducing or otherwise causing a third person not to enter into or continue the prospective relation or (b) preventing the other from acquiring or continuing the prospective relation.

Torts > ... > Prospective Advantage > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN25 [blue icon] Intentional Interference, Elements

Thus, to set forth a cognizable claim for tortious interference with prospective contractual relations, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant intentionally and improperly interfered with his prospective contractual relations.

Counsel: [*1] For Claude L. Bassett, Plaintiff: Joseph Edward Conley, Jr., Buechel & Conley - Crestview Hills, Crestview Hills, KY.; Rasheed A. Simmonds, Robert R. Furnier, Suraj J. Bhakta, Furnier & Thomas, LLP, Cincinnati, OH.

For National Collegiate Athletic Association, Defendant: Edward H. Stopher, Scott Allen Davidson, Boehl, Stopher & Graves, Louisville, KY.

For Southeastern Conference, Defendant: Katherine Gordon Maynard, Mark W. Merritt, Robert W. Fuller, III, Robinson, Bradshaw & Hinson, Charlotte, NC.

For University of Kentucky Athletic Association, Defendant: Douglas L. McSwain, Sarah Charles Wright, Stephen Lewis Barker, Kevin G. Henry, Sturgill, Turner, Barker & Moloney PLLC, Lexington, KY.

Judges: Joseph M. Hood, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Joseph M. Hood

Opinion

---

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

***

This matter is before the Court on Defendants' motions to dismiss [Record Nos. 5, 7, and 9 respectively]. Plaintiff filed an omnibus memorandum in response to Defendants' motions to dismiss [Record No. 22/23], and each of the Defendants have replied [Record Nos. 31, 32, and 33 respectively]. Accordingly, this matter is now ripe for decision.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

[*2] Plaintiff, Claude Bassett ("Bassett"), resigned from his position as assistant coach/recruiting coordinator for the University of Kentucky football team on November 19, 2000. He was employed by the University of Kentucky Athletic Association ("UKAA"). The catalyst for Bassett's resignation were allegations of impropriety relating to alleged National Collegiate Athletic Association ("NCAA") Rules violations.

On November 19, 2000, the University of Kentucky's Athletic Director, Larry Ivy, confronted Coach Bassett with allegations of impropriety. At the end of the meeting, Ivy gave Bassett a choice: (a) resign and, in exchange, no further action would be taken on the allegations made against him, or (b) face an investigation, potential criminal prosecution, and sure dismissal. In his complaint, Bassett claims he resigned believing that his resignation would end any further inquiry into his conduct and avoid the scandal that ultimately ensued. In resigning, Bassett asserts that he lost the due process protections enjoyed by athletics department employees subject to disciplinary action. Bassett claims that, had he known the University of Kentucky ("UK") would initiate a NCAA inquiry, [*3] he never would have resigned.

The day after Bassett's resignation, on November 20, 2000, UK publicly disclosed that Bassett, along with several other assistants in the football program, had been fired. That day, UK made the decision to conduct an internal investigation of its football program for possible NCAA Rules violations. UK notified the NCAA Enforcement Services of the dismissals and of its intent to investigate. With the assistance of the Southeastern Conference ("SEC") Commissioner, UK undertook an investigation that lasted through February 2001. Meanwhile, through counsel, Bassett contacted the UK Compliance Officer, Sandy Bell ("Bell"), requesting that a meeting be arranged between Bassett and UK officials to discuss the allegations against him. This request was declined.

On January 4, 2001, Coach Bassett was interviewed; present were Bell, SEC Commissioner Roy Kramer, and SEC investigator Bill Seviers. Bassett consented to the request that his interview be tape-recorded. Bassett claims he was assured a copy of the tape. At the end of the first day, Bassett was told that, pursuant to NCAA Rules, he had a 24-hour window to reconsider his responses and submit to another [*4] interview to correct any discrepancies. The next day, January 5, 2001, Bassett returned to correct his prior testimony, again allowing his interview to be tape-recorded.

Bassett claims that when he tried to obtain his interview tape UK Compliance Officer, Bell, disputed ever having promised him a copy. Moreover, Bassett claims Bell indicated to him that all taped interviews of witnesses were solely in the SEC's possession. When Bassett requested the SEC provide him with a copy of his taped interview, the SEC said they would make the tape available to him at a law firm located in Lexington, Kentucky. Bassett claims that, due to his limited resources, sending his counsel to Lexington, Kentucky to listen to a tape was a "luxury he could not afford."

On February 28, 2001, UK submitted the results of its internal investigation to the NCAA enforcement staff. In response, on March 30, 2001, the NCAA forwarded a preliminary inquiry to UK. NCAA enforcement staff later issued letters of official inquiry to Bassett, UK, and former head football coach Hal Mumme. Bassett's counsel responded to the allegations contained in the official inquiry by letter dated October 12, 2001. The letter stated [*5] that, because of financial constraints, Coach Bassett will be unable to appear before the NCAA Division I Committee on Infractions during its November 16-18, 2001 meeting when this matter will be considered. This letter will, hence, be his only response to the allegations barring any further NCAA inquiry with new allegations or request for additional explanation or information.

The NCAA released its Infractions Report on January 31, 2002. UK appealed one of the penalties imposed by the NCAA Division I Committee on Infractions - the imposition of a ban on post-season competition by the UK football team following the 2002 season - to the NCAA Division I Infractions Appeals Committee. On September 7, 2002, the Appeals Committee concluded that the ban was not excessive or inappropriate and affirmed the penalties imposed by the Committee on Infractions.

More than two years later, on September 17, 2004, Bassett filed a complaint against the NCAA, the SEC, and the UKAA alleging antitrust violations, fraud, civil conspiracy, and tortious interference with prospective contractual relations.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

HN1<sup>1</sup> A motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) [*6] tests the sufficiency of the complaint. Thus, HN2<sup>1</sup> under the liberal notice pleading rules, a complaint need only put a party on notice of the claim being asserted against it to satisfy the federal rule requirement of stating a claim upon which relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\); Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 508, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1, 122 S. Ct. 992, \(2002\) (holding that HN3<sup>1</sup> a court may dismiss a complaint only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations). HN4<sup>1</sup> A court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and accept as true all well-pleaded factual allegations. Cooper v. Parrish, 203 F.3d 937, 944 \(6th Cir. 2000\). HN5<sup>1</sup> Construing the complaint in the light most favorable to the petitioner, dismissal is proper only if "it appears beyond doubt that the [petitioner] can prove no set of facts in support of [his] claims that would entitle [him] to relief." Forest v. United States Postal Serv., 97 F.3d 137, 139 \(6th Cir. 1996\) (quoting American Eagle Credit Corp. v. Gaskins, 920 F.2d 352, 353 \(6th Cir. 1990\)). [*7]

UKAA and the SEC also argue that Plaintiff's fraud claim should be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) for failing to plead with the requisite particularity. HN6<sup>1</sup> The Sixth Circuit interprets Rule 9\(b\) as requiring plaintiffs to "allege the time, place, and content of the alleged misrepresentation on which he or she relied; the fraudulent scheme; the fraudulent intent of the defendants; and the injury resulting from the fraud." Coffey v. Foamex L.P., 2 F.3d 157, 161-162 \(6th Cir. 1993\) (quotation omitted). While Rule 9\(b\) requires the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake to be stated with particularity, "malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\).

DISCUSSION

I. Count I: Antitrust

Bassett's first claim, and purported basis for jurisdiction in federal court, accuses the NCAA, the SEC, and the UKAA of conspiring to prevent him from coaching at any of the NCAA's member schools. This conspiracy, Bassett alleges, violates the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1-2, and the Clayton [*8] Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, as it amounts to an unlawful group boycott.

HN7<sup>1</sup> Section 1 of the Sherman Act provides that, "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal." 15 U.S.C. § 1.<sup>1</sup> HN8<sup>1</sup> While the statute says "every," the Supreme Court has long held that Congress intended to outlaw only "unreasonable" restraints. State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 10, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199, 118 S. Ct. 275 \(1997\). The trade restraint alleged here is the group boycott of Bassett arising from NCAA imposed sanctions.

HN10<sup>1</sup> By its plain language, Section One of the Sherman Act only applies to the alleged antitrust violation [*9] if such violation is commercial in nature. See Worldwide Basketball & Sport Tours, Inc. v. NCAA, 388 F.3d 955, 958 \(6th Cir. 2004\). Bassett claims that the antitrust violation alleged here, the alleged conspiracy to prevent him from coaching at any of the NCAA's member schools, arises from the NCAA's imposed sanctions. It is undisputed that sanctions imposed on Bassett stemmed from the NCAA's enforcement of its rules governing recruiting, improper inducements, and academic fraud. Thus, in order for Section One of the Sherman Act to apply, the NCAA enforcement program, and the imposed sanctions arising therefrom, must be commercial in nature.

---

<sup>1</sup> HN9<sup>1</sup> Section 4 of the Clayton Act creates a private cause of action for antitrust law violations and provides treble damages to any person "injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 15.

HN11[] Some NCAA rules have been held to be commercial in nature and thus subject to antitrust scrutiny. See Worldwide Basketball, 388 F.3d 955 (6th Cir. 2004) (finding that HN12[] the NCAA's Two in Four rule is commercial in nature as it regulates games that constitute sources of revenue for both member schools and promoters); National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Board of Regents, 468 U.S. 85, 98, 82 L. Ed. 2d 70, 104 S. Ct. 2948 (1984) (finding NCAA's rules restricting television coverage of intercollegiate football games violated the Sherman Act). [*10] Other NCAA rules, however, have been found to further the NCAA's noncommercial objectives; courts have held that the Sherman Act does not apply to these rules. See Smith v. NCAA, 139 F.3d 180, 186 (3d Cir. 1998) vacated on other grounds by NCAA v. Smith, 525 U.S. 459, 142 L. Ed. 2d 929, 119 S. Ct. 924 (1999) (finding that HN13[] the Sherman Act does not apply to the NCAA's promulgation of eligibility requirements).

Like the NCAA's eligibility rules, enforcement of the rules at issue here is not within the purview of antitrust law as it is not related to the NCAA's commercial or business activities. Rather than intending to provide the NCAA or any of its member schools with a commercial advantage, enforcement of rules governing recruiting, improper inducements, and academic fraud "primarily seek[s] to ensure fair competition in intercollegiate athletics." Id. at 185. Because the NCAA's enforcement program is not commercial in nature, sanctions arising therefrom do not constitute an illegal group boycott.

Moreover, even if the defendants' actions were subject the Sherman Act, Bassett's allegation of an antitrust violation still fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted [*11] as he has failed to allege an antitrust injury. HN14[] To state a claim for an antitrust violation, a plaintiff must allege an antitrust injury in his complaint. Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977). An "antitrust injury" is an (1) "injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent" and an (2) injury "that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." Id. Because the purpose of the antitrust laws is to protect competition rather than competitors, a plaintiff must allege injury, not only to himself, but to a relevant market. See Banks v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 977 F.2d 1081, 1087 (7th Cir. 1992); Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 320, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510, 82 S. Ct. 1502 (1962). Thus, failure to allege an anti-competitive impact on a relevant market amounts to a failure to allege an antitrust injury. Id.

Bassett asserts, both in his complaint and in his response brief, that an alleged denial of due process caused him to be unjustly punished and that this amounts to an antitrust injury. The Court disagrees. At best, Bassett alleges injury to himself as a competitor in the marketplace and not [*12] an injury to competition in a relevant market. Bassett's complaint fails to allege any anticompetitive effect on an identifiable market as a result of his being "banned" from coaching at NCAA schools. It is clear that the complaint alleges harm only to Bassett and not to competition itself. While, Bassett's response brief states that unjustified bans hurt competition among college football teams and create a competitive imbalance, he has not alleged any decrease in the supply or quality of coaching services, increase in the cost of coaching services, or any harm to consumers resulting from his punishment. In essence, he has not alleged how the college football coaching market, or the college football market, have suffered any anticompetitive effect by the application of facially neutral disciplinary rules. Bassett's conclusory allegations of an antitrust injury - unsupported by any factual allegations that resemble a cognizable antitrust claim - are insufficient.

In conclusion, the Court finds that Bassett's antitrust count must be dismissed for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted.

II. Count II: Fraud and Civil Conspiracy

Count II of Plaintiff's [*13] complaint alleges that the three defendants engaged in fraud and civil conspiracy, precluding him from rejoining the college coaching ranks. Specifically, it alleges that UKAA and SEC employees lied to Bassett in an effort to encourage him to take actions that would, and did, deprive him of certain due process guarantees, and that the NCAA relied upon knowingly tainted evidence to ban Bassett from college coaching. Defendants' assert that Bassett's complaint fails to allege facts sufficient to support these causes of action.

A. Fraud

HN15 A viable fraud claim under Kentucky law requires that the defendant (a) made a material misrepresentation; (b) which was false; (c) which was known to be false or made recklessly; (d) which was made with inducement to be acted upon; (e) which plaintiff acted in reliance upon; and (f) which caused plaintiff injury. Rivermont Inn, Inc. v. Bass Hotels & Resorts, Inc., 113 S.W.3d 636, 640 \(Ky. Ct. App. 2003\). HN16 In order to survive a motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\), a plaintiff's "complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements [*14] to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory." Glassner v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 223 F.3d 343, 346 \(6th Cir. 2000\) (quoting Scheid v. Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc., 859 F.2d 434, 436 \(6th Cir. 1988\)). Furthermore, HN17 under Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), "a complaint alleging fraud must allege with particularity those circumstances constituting fraud." Glassner v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 223 F.3d 343, 346 \(6th Cir. 2000\) (citing VanDenBroeck v. CommonPoint Mortg. Co., 210 F.3d 696, 701 \(6th Cir. 2000\)).

1. NCAA

The Court will first address the fraud claim as it applies to the NCAA. Simply, as a matter of law, Bassett's complaint fails to state a viable claim of fraud against the NCAA. None of the statements present in Bassett's complaint can possibly be construed as alleging one, much less all six, of the elements required under Kentucky law to state a cause of action for fraud against the NCAA. Bassett does not allege that the NCAA lied to him or that he acted in reliance upon any misrepresentation made by the NCAA. Moreover, in his response to the Defendants' motions to [*15] dismiss, Bassett admits that his fraud claim focuses primarily upon the UKAA and the SEC. His claim of fraud against the NCAA consists only of an allegation that the NCAA relied on a distorted record to impose punishment. This allegation, on its own, is clearly insufficient to withstand the NCAA's Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss.

2. SEC

Bassett's fraud claim against the SEC also fails. Bassett claims that the Defendants' fraudulent conduct encouraged him to take actions that deprived him of due process protections to which he was entitled as an employee of the UKAA, which, in turn, resulted in a disproportionate punishment. Assuming these allegations are true, which the Court must at this stage of the litigation, Bassett's complaint simply does not allege that the SEC caused any of his injuries. Bassett makes clear that his resignation is what led to his loss of due process protections. Bassett's complaint, however, does not allege that the SEC had any role in his resignation. Without allegations that the SEC had a role in the conduct causing Plaintiff his only alleged injuries, no fraud claim against the SEC can stand.

3. [*16] UKAA

Finally, the Court turns to Bassett's fraud claim as it applies to the UKAA. Bassett alleges that on November 19, 2000, acting on behalf of the UKAA, University of Kentucky Athletic Director Larry Ivy informed him that, if he resigned, no NCAA investigation would ensue. Bassett claims that, in reliance on this representation, he resigned and, in so doing, gave up his due process rights as a UKAA employee. Bassett seems to take the position that, as a result of this alleged fraud, he received an unjust punishment from the NCAA. These allegations set forth the elements required to state a common law fraud claim under Kentucky law.

The UKAA argues that, regardless of whether Bassett's complaint alleges the elements necessary to state a claim for fraud, his complaint must still be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(b\), failure and inability to join an indispensable but immune party, to wit, the University of Kentucky. HN18 Rule 19 provides a three-part test. First, the Court determines whether a party should be joined (i.e., whether the party is necessary under Rule 19\(a\)). If so, the Court asks whether joinder is feasible. If it is, [*17] the party is to be joined. If not, the Court determines under Rule 19\(b\) whether "in equity and good conscience," the action should continue without him or be dismissed (i.e., whether the party is indispensable).

As it applies to the case sub judice, HN19↑ Rule 19\(a\) states that a person is "necessary" and should be joined as a party if, "in the person's absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties." Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\)\(1\). Bassett claims that Ivy, acting on behalf of the UKAA, made a material misrepresentation upon which Bassett detrimentally relied. Accordingly, the wrong, if any, was committed by Ivy acting on behalf of Bassett's employer, the UKAA. If Bassett's fraud claim involves the University of Kentucky, it does so only tangentially as Bassett seeks nothing from the University. Thus, the UKAA has failed to show that, in the University's absence, complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties.

In the alternative, Defendant UKAA argues that the University of Kentucky is a necessary party because disposition of the case in the University's absence may impair or impede the University's ability [*18] to protect its interest. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\)\(2\). The University, however, has not claimed an interest relating to the subject matter of the action sub judice. HN20↑ A party is not "necessary" where it has not claimed an interest in the outcome of an action and complete relief can be ordered in its absence. Ferrofluidics Corp. v. Advanced Vacuum Components, Inc., 968 F.2d 1463, 1472 (1st Cir. 1992).

Because the University of Kentucky is not a "necessary" party under Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\), Defendant's motion to dismiss based on Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(b\) fails.

B. Civil Conspiracy

HN21↑ A viable cause of action for civil conspiracy requires that a plaintiff prove "an unlawful/corrupt combination or agreement between the alleged conspirators to do by some concerted action an unlawful act." James v. Wilson, 95 S.W.3d 875, 897 (Ky. Ct. App. 2002) (citing Montgomery v. Milam, 910 S.W.2d 237, 239, 42 12 Ky. L. Summary 39 (Ky. 1995)).

Bassett's complaint accuses the NCAA of fraud not as a primary actor, but as a coconspirator. Assuming Bassett's [*19] complaint alleges facts necessary to state a claim of civil conspiracy, it still must be dismissed on the grounds that it is barred by the applicable statute of limitations. HN22↑ KRS 413.140\(1\)\(c\) prescribes a one-year statute of limitations for civil conspiracy. This statute begins to run at the commission of the last act in furtherance of the conspiracy. District Union Local 227 v. Fleischaker, 384 S.W.2d 68 (Ky. Ct. App. 1964). Construing the complaint in the light most favorable to Bassett, the latest possible date of any act in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy was September 17, 2002, when the NCAA Infraction Appeals Committee issued its report and upheld the sanctions imposed by the Infractions Committee. Plaintiff, however, did not file his complaint until September 17, 2004, more than two years after the last alleged act. Accordingly, Bassett's claim for civil conspiracy is time-barred and must be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\).

In Bassett's response to NCAA's motion to dismiss, he claims that the NCAA may also have liability for aiding and abetting. Nowhere in the complaint, [*20] however, is there any allegation of aider and abettor liability. Because it was not plead, the Court will not engage in a legal analysis of liability under this theory of law.

III. Count III: Tortious Interference

The Court now turns to Bassett's state law claim of tortious interference with prospective contractual relations. Bassett claims that the NCAA intentionally and improperly interfered with his prospective contractual relations insofar as it forbid NCAA member institutions from hiring him.

HN23↑ Kentucky law recognizes the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations as articulated in the Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766B:

HN24[] One who intentionally and improperly interferes with another's prospective contractual relation (except a contract to marry) is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary harm resulting from loss of the benefits of the relation, whether the interference consists of

- (a) inducing or otherwise causing a third person not to enter into or continue the prospective relation or
- (b) preventing the other from acquiring or continuing the prospective relation.

Cullen v. South East Coal Co., 685 S.W.2d 187, 189-90 (Ky. Ct. App. 1983). [*21] HN25[] Thus, to set forth a cognizable claim under this theory, Bassett must allege that the NCAA intentionally and improperly interfered with his prospective contractual relations. Bassett's complaint does this; it clearly states that, by forbidding its member institutions from hiring him, the NCAA intentionally and improperly interfered with Bassett's prospective contractual relations.

The NCAA sets forth many persuasive arguments in its motion to dismiss. Such arguments, however, are more properly geared toward a motion for summary judgment. At this time, the Court cannot dismiss Bassett's claim against the NCAA for intentional interference with his prospective contractual relations as he has alleged facts sufficient to support such a claim.

CONCLUSION

Assuming as true the allegations set forth in Plaintiff's complaint,

IT IS ORDERED,

- (1) that UKAA's motion to dismiss [Record No. 5] be, and the same hereby is, GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART;
- (2) that Bassett's claim of fraud, found in Count II of his complaint, as it applies to the UKAA, survives the UKAA's motion to dismiss;
- (2) that NCAA's, motion to dismiss [Record No. 7] be, and the same hereby is, [*22] GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART;
- (3) that Count III of Bassett's complaint - tortious interference with prospective contractual relations - survives NCAA's motion to dismiss;
- (4) that SEC's motion to dismiss [Record No. 9] be, and the same hereby is, GRANTED.

This the 3rd day of May, 2005.

Signed By:

Joseph M. Hood

United States District Judge

Brennan v. Concord EFS, Inc.

United States District Court for the Northern District of California

May 4, 2005, Decided ; May 4, 2005, Filed

No C-04-2676 VRW

Reporter

369 F. Supp. 2d 1127 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9243 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,815

PAMELA BRENNAN et al, Plaintiffs, v CONCORD EFS, INC et al, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Motion granted by In re ATM Fee Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36195 \(N.D. Cal., Dec. 5, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

interchange, motion to dismiss, joint venture, banks, network, issuing bank, conspiracy, allegations, rule of reason, cooperative, plaintiffs', transactions, price fixing, horizontal, card, pleadings, realtor, fixing, zero, fair notice, defendants', subsidiary, antitrust, surcharge, entities, motions, procompetitive, withdrawals, ancillary, appears

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

On a motion to dismiss, all well-pleaded allegations of material fact are taken as true and construed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN2 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motions to dismiss essentially test whether a cognizable claim has been pleaded in the complaint.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN3 [] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) states that a plaintiff's pleadings must contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, provides the standard for judging whether such a cognizable claim exists. This standard is a liberal one that does not require a plaintiff to set forth all the factual details of the claim; rather, all that the standard requires is that a plaintiff give the defendant fair notice of the claim and the grounds for making that claim. To this end, a plaintiff's complaint should set forth either direct or inferential allegations with respect to all the material elements of the claim.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Dismissal > Involuntary Dismissals > Failure to State Claims

HN4 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), a complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of its claim which would entitle it to relief. All material allegations in the complaint must be taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to plaintiff.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Joint Contracts

Business & Corporate Law > Joint Ventures > General Overview

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > Joint Ventures

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Exempt Cartels & Joint Ventures

HN5 [] Types of Contracts, Joint Contracts

Antitrust law doesn't frown on all joint ventures among competitors--far from it. If a joint venture benefits consumers and doesn't violate any applicable per se rules, it will often be perfectly legal.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Joint Contracts

Business & Corporate Law > Joint Ventures > Formation

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > Joint Ventures

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Exempt Cartels & Joint Ventures

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > Antitrust Statutes > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Joint Ventures > General Overview

HN6 [] Types of Contracts, Joint Contracts

369 F. Supp. 2d 1127, *1127 LEXIS 9243, **9243

"Joint venture" is not a mantra to escape per se analysis: It is not the case that the mere existence of a bona fide joint venture means that participating companies may use the enterprises to do anything they please with full immunity from per se analysis under § 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, including price fixing. The issue with respect to legitimate joint ventures is whether the price fixing is "naked" (in which case the restraint is illegal) or "ancillary" (in which case it is not).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN7 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason

The core question of whether a restriction such as fixing automatic teller machines interchange fee is a "naked" restraint or an "ancillary" restraint is quintessentially one of fact.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Joint Contracts

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > Antitrust Statutes > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Joint Ventures > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN8 Types of Contracts, Joint Contracts

The law is this: Horizontal restraints in the context of a procompetitive joint venture remain unlawful per se unless they are necessary to (or, in certain formulations, "reasonably ancillary to") the achievement of the joint venture's procompetitive benefits.

Evidence > Judicial Notice > General Overview

HN9 Evidence, Judicial Notice

Judicial notice at the pleadings stage is properly invoked to fill in a small gap in an otherwise complete portrait painted by the complaint.

Counsel: [\[\*\*1\]](#) For Pamela Brennan, Terry Crayton, Darla Martinez, on behalf of themselves & all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs: Joseph R. Saveri, Jahan C. Sagafi, Lieff Cabraser Heiman & Bernstein, LLP, San Francisco, CA; Andrew W. Hutton, Channel P. Townsley, Deborah Brown McIlhenny, Hutton & Hutton, LLC, Wichita, KA; Anthony J. Bolognese, Bolognese & Associates, LLC, Philadelphia, PA; Bart D. Cohen, Merrill G. Davidoff, Berger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Daniel B. Allanoff, Joel Cary Meredith, Meredith Cohen Greenfogel & Skirnick, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Daniel E. Gustafson, Karla M. Gluek, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; George A. Shohet, Attorney at Law, Venice, CA; Gretchen M. Nelson, Law Offices of Gretchen M. Nelson, Los Angeles, CA; Joseph C. Kohn, William E. Hoese, Kohn Swift & Graf, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Joshua P. Davis, University of San Francisco School of Law, San Francisco, CA; Kim Keevers, Michael J. Brickman, Richardson Patrick Westbrook &

369 F. Supp. 2d 1127, *1127LÁ2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9243, **1

Brickman, Charleston, SC; Marc S. Moller, Kreindler & Kreindler LLP, New York, NY; Mark G. Ayesha, Ayesha Law Offices, Wichita, KS; W. Joseph Bruckner, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN.

For Concord EFS, [**2] Inc., Defendant: Brian Wallach, Peter Edward Moll, Esq., Howrey Simon Arnold & White, LLP, Washington, DC; Buckmaster DeWolf, Howrey Simon Arnold & White, LLP, Menlo Park, CA.

For First Data Corp., Defendant: Brian Wallach, Peter Edward Moll, Esq., Howrey Simon Arnold & White, LLP, Washington, DC; Charles H. Samel, Howrey Simon Arnold & White, Los Angeles, CA; Buckmaster DeWolf, Howrey Simon Arnold & White, LLP, Menlo Park, CA.

For Bank of America Corporation, Defendant: Sonya D. Winner, Covington & Burling, San Francisco, CA.

For Bank One Corporation, Defendant: Kathryn Ann Vaclavik, Diane E. Pritchard, Morrison & Foerster LLP, San Francisco, CA.

For Bank One, N.A., J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., Defendants: Kathryn Ann Vaclavik, Diane E. Pritchard, Morrison & Foerster LLP, San Francisco, CA; Jesse William Markham, Jr., Morrison & Foerster LLP, San Francisco, CA.

For Citibank (West), F.S.B., Defendant: Carrie M. Anderson, James Christopher Egan, Jr., Peter D. Isakoff, Steven A. Newborn, Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP, Washington, DC; Sarkis Ohannes Beudjekian, Weil Gotshal & Manges LLP, Silicon Valley Office, Redwood Shores, CA.

For Wachovia Corporation, Wachovia [**3] Bank NA, Defendants: Michele D. Floyd, Reed Smith Crosby Heafey LLP, San Francisco, CA.

For Wells Fargo & Co., Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., Defendants: Donald Baker, Baker and Miller, Washington, DC; J. Thomas Rosch, Joshua N. Holian, Mark Jeremy Seifert, Latham & Watkins LLP, San Francisco, CA.

For Servus Financial Corp., Defendant: Joshua N. Holian, Mark Jeremy Seifert, Latham & Watkins LLP, San Francisco, CA.

Judges: VAUGHN R WALKER, United States District Chief Judge.

Opinion by: VAUGHN R WALKER

Opinion

---

[*1128] ORDER

In this putative class action, plaintiffs assert that defendants -- banks and other entities involved in the processing of withdrawals from automated teller machines (ATMs) in the "Star" ATM network ("Star") -- have engaged in horizontal price fixing declared illegal by section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 USC § 1. Plaintiffs argue that defendants' conduct is condemned per se; they disclaim any intention of proceeding on a rule of reason theory. Several defendants move to dismiss the complaint (or for judgment on the pleadings) on the ground that Star is a procompetitive cooperative joint venture subject only to rule of reason analysis. Doc # # 26, 29, [**4] 42. Other defendants move to dismiss on the ground that the complaint does not sufficiently allege their involvement in setting the terms of Star's operations. Doc # # 17, 33.

I

HN1 "On a motion to dismiss, all well-pleaded allegations of material fact are taken as true and construed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party." Wyler Summit Partnership v Turner Broadcasting System, Inc, 135 F3d 658, 661 \(9th Cir 1998\) (citing Parks School of Business, Inc v Symington, 51 F3d 1480, 1484 \(9th Cir 1995\)). Accordingly, what follows is drawn from plaintiffs' complaint (Doc # 1), taking its allegations as true.

As almost anyone who has an ATM card knows, withdrawals can be made from an account at one bank -- the bank that issues the ATM card (the "issuing bank") -- using an ATM owned by a third party (the "ATM owner"). Only banks can issue ATM cards, but banks and non-banks alike can operate ATMs. Transactions in which the issuing bank is not the ATM owner -- known as "foreign ATM transactions" -- are mediated by an ATM network that connects the ATM to the issuing bank. One such network (the subject of this suit) is Star, which is owned by defendant [**5] Concord EFS, Inc ("Concord EFS"); Concord EFS is a wholly owned subsidiary of First [*1129] Data Corp ("First Data"). Compl (Doc # 1) P 8. Transactions in which the issuing bank is also the ATM owner -- known as "on us" transactions, see Doc # 26 at 6 n4 -- do not involve the ATM network; such transactions are not the subject of this suit.

Another thing that ATM cardholders know is that while "on us" transactions are typically free, foreign ATM transactions involve fees. First, there is the "ATM surcharge," which is typically displayed on the ATM screen and collected by the ATM owner as part of the cardholder's withdrawal. The ATM surcharge ranges from zero (offered as an promotional enticement by some ATM operators) to $ 3.00 or more. Second, there is the "foreign ATM fee," which is assessed by the issuing bank and typically appears on the cardholder's bank statement as a fee. The foreign ATM fee ranges from zero (offered by banks that own few ATMs and are at a competitive disadvantage relative to banks that own many ATMs) to about $ 2.00 (currently the fee charged by the large banks that are defendants here). Third, there is a "switch fee" on the order of $ 0.05 paid by the issuing [**6] bank to the ATM network (Star in this case) for the network's services in mediating a foreign ATM transaction. Fourth, there is an "interchange fee" of $ 0.45 or $ 0.55 paid by the issuing bank to the ATM owner for use of the foreign ATM. See Compl (Doc # 1) P 1 (defining fees); P 2 & Fig A (diagraming typical foreign ATM transaction); P 52 (describing current foreign ATM fees); P 57 (describing interchange fees).

This suit concerns the interchange fee, which is fixed by Star and applies to all foreign ATM transactions mediated by the network. Presently, the interchange fee is $ 0.45 for on-bank-premise cash withdrawals and $ 0.55 for off-bank-premise cash withdrawals. Id P 57. The interchange fee is supposedly passed on to plaintiffs -- ATM cardholders who have paid (or expect to pay) foreign ATM fees for transactions mediated by Star -- in the form of artificially inflated foreign ATM fees.

The complaint is somewhat fuzzy on Star's corporate constitution, but at a minimum, see id P 8, Star is controlled directly or indirectly via its board of directors by a host of large banks that are defendants in this case: Bank of America Corp ("B of A"); Bank One Corp; Bank One NA; J P [**7] Morgan Chase & Co ("JPMorgan Chase"); Citibank (West) FSB ("Citibank"); SunTrust Banks, Inc ("SunTrust"); Wachovia Corp ("Wachovia"); Wells Fargo & Co; Wells Fargo Bank, NA; Servus Financial Corp ("Servus") (collectively, the "defendant banks"). The whirlwind of bank mergers and acquisitions in the last five years makes for quite a tangle of rights and liabilities, but the complaint clearly states that each of the defendant banks either (1) is entitled to appoint outside directors to the Star board of directors, or (2) controls or succeeded to the rights and liabilities of an entity that was so entitled. Id PP 9-14. (The one exception is Wachovia Bank NA, which appears in the complaint's caption but is mentioned nowhere in the complaint.) Through this control structure the defendant banks "have caused Star to continue to impose [i]nterchange [f]ees," from which the defendant banks benefit, both because they charge foreign ATM fees and because the defendant banks receive interchange fees to the extent they own ATMs. Id P 61.

Although the defendant banks control Star, an ATM network derives value from the participation of a large number of issuing banks and ATM owners -- indeed, [**8] the complaint effectively concedes that Star is a joint venture that benefits consumers and fosters competition among issuing banks by allowing smaller banks that cannot afford to deploy a large number of [*1130] ATMs nonetheless to compete with larger banks that do own many ATMs. Id P 49. As such, Star accepts as members issuing banks and ATM owners other than the defendant banks. Id P 50. Although bound by Star's network policies, those issuing banks and ATM owners have "virtually no role" in setting network policies; but the bank defendants "have a significant role in establishing network policies." Id. On information and belief, plaintiffs allege that "some or all of the [b]ank [d]efendants" serve on an advisory committee "with the authority to veto or propose operating rules for the network and external [interchange rates and fees payable between or passed to network participants." Id P 58. Although plaintiffs implicitly concede that some horizontal restraints are necessary to create Star and thereby benefit consumers, plaintiffs contend that "[i]mposing fixed [i]nterchange [f]ees is unnecessary to Star operations." Id P 64.

Plaintiffs seek both damages (for past payment of [**9] putatively inflated foreign ATM fees) and an injunction (against future fixing of interchange fees). Plaintiffs propose to proceed on behalf of four classes: two classes of California residents (one seeking retrospective damages relief; the other seeking injunctive relief), and two classes of non-California residents (seeking similar relief). Combined, those classes would roughly comprise all persons and business entities who (1) opened a bank account with a bank defendant and (2) either (a) paid a foreign ATM fee directly to a bank defendant or its affiliate or (b) currently have a bank account with a bank defendant.

II

Several dispositive motions are now before the court. Some are motions to dismiss pursuant to FRCP 12\(b\)\(6\) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; some are motions for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to FRCP 12\(c\). The pertinent legal standard is the same. *In re World War II Era Japanese Forced Labor Litigation*, 114 F Supp 2d 939, 944 \(ND Cal 2000\) (citing *Enron Oil Trading & Transp Co v Walbrook Insurance Co*, 132 F3d 526, 529 \(9th Cir 1997\)). [**10] aff'd sub nom *Deutsch v. Turner Corp.* 324 F.3d 692 (9th Cir 2003). Accordingly, the court will treat all pending motions under FRCP 12\(b\)\(6\) and refer to them as "motions to dismiss."

HN2 FRCP 12\(b\)\(6\) motions to dismiss essentially "test whether a cognizable claim has been pleaded in the complaint." *Scheid v Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc*, 859 F2d 434, 436 \(6th Cir 1988\). HN3 FRCP 8\(a\), which states that a plaintiff's pleadings must contain "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief," provides the standard for judging whether such a cognizable claim exists. *Lee v City of Los Angeles*, 250 F3d 668, 679 \(9th Cir 2001\). This standard is a liberal one that does not require a plaintiff to set forth all the factual details of the claim; rather, all that the standard requires is that a plaintiff give the defendant fair notice of the claim and the grounds for making that claim. *Leatherman v Tarrant County Narcotics Intell & Coord Unit*, 507 US 163, 168, 122 L. Ed. 2d 517, 113 S. Ct. 1160 \(1993\) (citing *Conley v Gibson*, 355 US 41, 47, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 \(1957\)). [**11] To this end, a plaintiff's complaint should set forth "either direct or inferential allegations with respect to all the material elements of the claim". *Wittstock v Van Sile, Inc*, 330 F3d 899, 902 \(6th Cir 2003\).

HN4 Under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), a complaint "should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of [its] claim which would entitle [it] to relief." *Hughes v Rowe*, 449 US 5, 9, 11311 66 L. Ed. 2d 163, 101 S. Ct. 173 \(1980\) (citing *Haines v Kerner*, 404 US 519, 520, 30 L. Ed. 2d 652, 92 S. Ct. 594 \(1972\)). See also *Conley*, 355 US at 45-46. All material allegations in the complaint must be taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to plaintiff. See *In re Silicon Graphics Inc Sec Litig*, 183 F3d 970, 980 n10 \(9th Cir 1999\).

The court will first take up the bank defendants' motions to dismiss on the ground that plaintiffs do not state a claim for a per se violation of the antitrust laws. Then the court will turn to the individual motions by Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase and by First Data to dismiss for failure adequately to allege those entities' involvement in setting [**12] Star's terms.

A

Citibank and Suntrust (the "Citibank movants") (Doc # 26) and B of A, Bank One Corp, Bank One NA and JPMorgan Chase (the "B of A movants") (Doc # 29) move to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a per se antitrust claim. Although the bank defendants' memoranda in connection with these motions run several dozen pages, the nub of their argument is a simple syllogism: (1) Restraints in furtherance of procompetitive cooperative joint ventures are subject to rule of reason analysis, see, e.g., *Broadcast Music, Inc v Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc*, 441 US 1, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1, 99 S. Ct. 1551 \(1979\) ("BMI"); *National Collegiate Athletic Association v Board of Regents*, 468 US 85, 82 L. Ed. 2d 70, 104 S. Ct. 2948 \(1984\) ("NCAA"); (2) fixing the interchange fee is necessary to the existence of Star, the joint venture at issue; therefore (3) the fixing of the interchange fee should be analyzed under the rule of reason.

Defendants' logic is impeccable, but the syllogism's minor premise -- that fixing the interchange fee is necessary -- is an inherently factual contention that cannot properly be resolved on a motion to dismiss. In fact, plaintiffs have pled exactly the opposite: "Imposing [**13] fixed [i]nterchange [f]ees is unnecessary to Star operations.

Interchange [f]ees neither create a product that would not exist absent the fees nor enhance or promote competition in the ATM market." Compl (Doc # 1) P 64. This is a factual contention and it is axiomatic that the court must accept it as true for purposes of the present motions. It is a plausible inference from plaintiffs' complaint, for example, that modern information technology could inexpensively automate competitive price setting among even the hundreds or thousands of Star members, making fixed interchange fees unnecessary to Star's existence. If plaintiffs are right, then horizontal price fixing is horizontal price fixing -- and it is beside the point that prices were fixed in the context of an otherwise-lawful joint venture.

The court must note at the outset that plaintiffs' challenge to the "fixed interchange fee" is susceptible of two interpretations, only one of which is the proper subject of a per se challenge. On the one hand, plaintiffs might seek to replace the $ 0.45 or $ 0.55 fee with a fee of $ 0.00 -- a "zero fee," so to speak. This interpretation is suggested by the historical account of [\[\*\*14\]](#) interchange fees described in PP 49-60 of the complaint and the conclusion in P 62 that "the widespread adoption of [s]urcharges has eliminated any purported justification for [i]nterchange [f]ees." Under the "zero fee" argument, plaintiffs would contend that although interchange fees were necessary back when ATM owners had no other source of remuneration (that is, when surcharges were banned), interchange fees can now be set at zero because ATM owners can fend for themselves through surcharges. But to say that interchange fees should be abolished (the same thing as "set at zero") is to concede that [\[\*1132\]](#) setting the interchange fee with certainty at some level is necessary to Star's existence -- which is fatal to plaintiffs' per se claim. (Indeed, such an argument is not an antitrust argument at all, for it amounts to a dispute over prices and competition law is not concerned with setting a proper price.) By contrast to the "zero fee" argument, plaintiffs do have a viable per se argument if what they seek is to permit competitive (e.g., bilateral) negotiation of interchange fees among issuing banks and ATM owners. The court proceeds -- as must plaintiffs to maintain a [\[\*\*15\]](#) per se case -- on the premise that a challenge to the "fixed interchange fee" is a challenge not to the fee's existence but to the fixed nature of the fee; that is, plaintiffs challenge the fixing of the interchange fee.

On that understanding, recent Ninth Circuit authority is squarely on plaintiffs' side. In *Freeman v San Diego Ass'n of Realtors, 322 F3d 1133 \(9th Cir 2003\)* (Kozinski, J), the Ninth Circuit considered a joint venture among several realtor associations to create a centralized multiple listing service (MLS) database. Access to the centralized MLS database, maintained by Sandicor, was sold to individual realtors, with the realtor associations providing billing services and technical support. Sandicor charged realtors $ 44 per month; the realtor associations agreed that Sandicor would pay $ 22.50 per month to each of them for each subscriber they supported. *Id. at 1146*. The plaintiffs -- realtors who contended they were overpaying for MLS services -- brought suit to challenge the fixed $ 22.50 price for support services. The Ninth Circuit held that the realtor associations' agreement to fix support services pricing was illegal [\[\*\*16\]](#) per se under *section 1 of the Sherman Act*. *Id. at 1150-54*. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit explicitly rejected the argument that "the inherent cooperative aspects of the MLS as a joint venture warrant more deferential review," explaining that "any elements of novelty and cooperation in the MLS are irrelevant to whether support fees are fixed or set competitively." *Id. at 1151*. Put succinctly:

HN5  Antitrust law doesn't frown on all joint ventures among competitors -- far from it. If a joint venture benefits consumers and doesn't violate any applicable per se rules, it will often be perfectly legal. The decision to combine MLS databases fits comfortably within this category. The further decision to fix support fees does not.

*Id. at 1157* (citation omitted).

The same point is made in *Dagher v Saudi Refining, Inc, 369 F3d 1108 \(9th Cir 2004\)*, petition for cert pending. Dagher concerned a joint venture between the oil refining and marketing companies Texaco and Shell; the joint venture included an agreement to fix prices in the retail market for gasoline produced under the joint venture. The Ninth Circuit summarized the question [\[\*\*17\]](#) presented and its holding:

The question we confront in this case * * * is not whether two companies engaged in run-of-the-mill price fixing. Instead, the defendants have asked us to find an exception to the per se prohibition on price-fixing where two entities have established a joint venture that unifies their production and marketing function, yet: continue to sell their formerly competitive products as distinct brands. In doing so, the companies fixed the prices of these two brands of gasoline, Texaco and Shell, by agreeing ex ante to charge the same price for each. We think the exception the defendants seek is inconsistent with the Sherman Act as it has been understood to date.

Id. at 1116. And again, the Ninth Circuit explained that HN6[ "joint venture" is not a mantra to escape per se analysis:

[*1133] It is not the case * * * that the mere existence of a bona fide joint venture means that participating companies may use the enterprises to do anything they please with full immunity from per se analysis under § 1, including price fixing. * * * [T]he issue with respect to legitimate joint ventures is whether the price fixing is "naked" [*18] (in which case the restraint is illegal) or "ancillary" (in which case it is not).

Id. at 1118 (citing Herbert Hovenkamp, XI Antitrust Law P 1908 (1998) ("[A] restraint is not saved from the 'naked' classification simply because it is included in some larger joint venture arrangement that is clearly efficient.")).

HN7[ The core question identified in Dagher -- whether a restriction such as fixing the interchange fee is a "naked" restraint or an "ancillary" restraint -- is quintessentially one of fact, and one that plaintiffs have pled in their favor in the complaint. If the restraint proves to be naked, it is subject to per se analysis and plaintiffs have stated a claim. Against these elementary propositions, the bank defendants offer several arguments, none of which persuades.

The B of A movants try to beg the question. See, e.g., Doc # 29 at 7:22-8:3 ("In the context of an arrangement like this, in which some form of agreement among the parties is necessary to permit the system to operate, it is well established * * * that the per se doctrine does not apply."); id at 9:5 (referring to the fixed interchange fee as "one of the many rules that have [*19] been adopted of necessity to make the network work"); id at 11:1-2 ("The challenged interchange fee is therefore plainly ancillary to a lawful joint enterprise * * *"). These conclusory statements are, of course, insufficient to sustain a motion to dismiss.

The Citibank movants do somewhat better in arguing that "[w]ithout [the] advance certainty of obligation [that comes from a fixed interchange fee], no bank would agree to pay out money to individuals with whom it has no depository relationship" and that "there is no way that each member bank [or ATM owner, presumably,] possibly could reach agreement with each and every other bank about the terms on which they will make their machines available to each other." Doc # 26 4:3-5, 11-13. The Citibank movants also make a game theoretical argument that in the absence of a collective promise by the issuing banks to pay a minimum interchange fee to ATM owners, individually self-interested issuing banks would set foreign ATM fees so high that ATM owners would be unable to collect a surcharge large enough to entice them to enter the market -- and there would be no ATM service. See Doc # 115 at 6-7. Whatever the merits of these arguments, [*20] they are intrinsically factual, contrary to plaintiffs' pleading and inappropriate for resolution at the motion to dismiss stage.

The bank defendants also rely on several cases to support their position, but they are distinguishable. For example, while BMI supports the bank defendants in stating that "[j]oint ventures and other cooperative arrangements are * * * not usually unlawful," the BMI Court immediately added the caveat "at least not as price-fixing schemes where the agreement on price is necessary to market the product at all." 441 US at 23. Moreover, the "blanket license" to musical compositions offered by BMI was upheld as lawful by the Court not at the pleadings stage, but after an eight-week trial on the merits; it was this trial that established that "[a] middleman with a blanket license was an obvious necessity if the thousands of individual negotiations, a virtual impossibility, were to be avoided." Id. at 20.

[*1134] Likewise, National Bancard Corp. (NaBanco) v. VISA U.S.A., Inc., 779 F.2d 592 (11th Cir 1986) ("NaBanco"), is distinguishable. There, the Eleventh Circuit based its rejection of a per se analysis on the fact that [*21] the interchange fee between banks operating the Visa credit card payment system was a "necessary" term without which the system would not function." Id. at 602. And again, that conclusion rested on the district court's finding of fact following a nine-week bench trial that the interchange fee was "an agreement on the terms of interchange necessary for VISA to market its product and be an effective competitor." National Bancard Corp. (NaBanco) v. VISA U.S.A., Inc., 596 F. Supp. 1231, 1253 (SD Fla 1984).

NCAA is not especially helpful to the bank defendants in that it too followed an "extended trial," 468 US at 88, and ultimately held the restraints in question to violate the Sherman Act (albeit under a rule of reason analysis). NCAA supports the bank defendants in one respect, however: NCAA treated the question whether "the agreement on price is necessary to market the product at all" as germane to an efficiencies defense under a rule of reason analysis, see id. at 113-15 (citing BMI), and (apparently) irrelevant to the threshold issue whether per se or rule of reason analysis governed the case, see id. at 100-04. [\[\*\*22\]](#) This analytical reordering -- rarely if ever seen outside the context of sports leagues -- appears to be the product of the Court's pronouncement (again, following a lengthy trial) that "what is critical is that this case involves an industry in which horizontal restraints on competition are essential if the product is to be available at all." Id. at 101. But a sports league, while appearing to be a joint venture of competitors (and on the field, they are), is really only one firm and cases involving the leagues may be essentially sui generis. See, e.g., Gary R. Roberts, Sports Leagues and the Sherman Act: The Use and Abuse of Section 1 to Regulate Restraints on Intraleague Rivalry, 32 UCLA L Rev 219 \(1984\). For present purposes, it suffices to say that the ATM industry may be as exceptional as the televised college sports industry, but that is subject to proof by defendants.

The one case cited by the bank defendants that is both legally and procedurally on point is the decision by Judge White of this court in Reyn's Pasta Bella LLC v Visa USA, Inc, 259 F Supp 2d 992 \(ND Cal 2003\). In Reyn's, the court determined on a motion to dismiss [\[\*\*23\]](#) that a horizontal price fixing challenge to the fixing of credit card interchange fees should be analyzed under the rule of reason. Three reasons persuade this court not to follow Judge White's opinion in this case: First, the Reyn's court had the benefit of NaBanco's decision on a very similar (if not identical) set of credit card interchange fees; this court does not have analogous appellate authority with respect to the ATM interchange fee in this case. (Though similar in name, the interchange fees in the two industries are structurally rather different.) While perhaps not unflinchingly faithful to the Eleventh Circuit's analytical path in NaBanco and distinguishing that decision in certain respects, the Reyn's decision pragmatically took the same path as NaBanco in analyzing the credit card interchange fee under the rule of reason. Second, Reyn's did not have the benefit of Dagher and Freeman: Dagher was decided over a year after Reyn's, and although Freeman had issued only weeks before Reyn's, Reyn's does not cite Freeman, which may not have been brought to Judge White's attention. Third, Reyn's quotes the canonical language [\[\*\*24\]](#) from BMI -- that the rule of reason applies "where the agreement on price is necessary to market the product at all" -- [\[\*1135\]](#) yet the analysis in Reyn's focuses entirely on whether the Visa payment system is a joint venture, and it ignores the "necessary" language of BMI. See 259 F Supp 2d at 1000.

In some respects, a better analogy to the case that plaintiffs have pled is a case not yet mentioned: United States v Topco Associates, 405 US 596, 31 L. Ed. 2d 515, 92 S. Ct. 1126 \(1971\). Topco was "a cooperative association of approximately 25 small and medium-sized regional supermarket chains." Id. at 598. The cooperative procured and distributed to its members a variety of food and nonfood items, branded under various names owned by Topco. Id. As a buying cooperative, Topco's "very existence * * * improved the competitive potential of Topco members with respect to other large and powerful chains." Id. at 600. Topco was, in more recent parlance, a cooperative procompetitive joint venture. But the darker side of Topco -- its bylaws required horizontal territorial division among the association's members -- led the Court to condemn it as a per se violation [\[\*\*25\]](#) of the Sherman Act. Id. at 608.

The parallels between this case and Topco are crystallized by Chief Justice Burger's dissent in Topco, in which he stressed the interbrand competition fostered by Topco's existence:

[W]e have here an agreement among several small grocery chains to join in a cooperative endeavor that, in my view, has an unquestionably lawful principal purpose; in pursuit of that purpose they have mutually agreed to certain minimal ancillary restraints that are fully reasonable in view of the principal purpose * * *.

Id. at 613 (Burger, CJ, dissenting). But of course, the Chief Justice's view did not prevail. HN8 The law is this: Horizontal restraints in the context of a procompetitive joint venture remain unlawful per se unless they are necessary to (or, in certain formulations, "reasonably ancillary to") the achievement of the joint venture's procompetitive benefits.

The bank defendants offer various reformulations of their basic argument, but the court is constrained to reject them at this stage. Accordingly, the bank defendants' motions to dismiss (Doc # # 26, 29) are DENIED.

B

Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase move [**26] to dismiss the complaint against them pursuant to FRCP 12\(b\)\(6\) on the ground that it fails adequately to allege their participation in the alleged conspiracy. Doc # 17. Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase contend that they are "nonoperating holding corporations," id at 1:22, and that the complaint does not explain how they participated in the alleged conspiracy or are liable for the actions of a subsidiary, Bank One NA. As alleged in the complaint, the holding company structure is this: JPMorgan Chase was created on July 1, 2004, by the holding company merger between J P Morgan Chase & Co and Bank One Corp. Bank One NA, which was a wholly owned subsidiary of Bank One Corp at the time of the July 2004 merger, had previously acquired Bank One of Arizona NA, which was entitled to appoint outside directors to Star's board. Compl (Doc # 1) P 10. In short, the complaint alleges that at present Bank One NA is a subsidiary of JPMorgan Chase; it is unclear whether Bank One Corp continues to exist following the July 2004 holding company merger. There is no dispute -- at least at this stage -- that Bank One NA has successor liability for Bank One of Arizona [**27] NA's actions.

Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase make two arguments, both of which the court would have to accept to grant their [*1136] motion to dismiss. One argument goes to vicarious liability, the other to conspiracy liability. As to vicarious liability, they contend that the complaint does not adequately plead alter ego liability on Bank One Corp's part for actions of Bank One NA; and that in turn, JPMorgan Chase cannot be liable because Bank One Corp had no liability to which JPMorgan Chase could have succeeded in the holding company merger. As for liability for conspiracy, Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase argue that the complaint's pleading format -- specifically, grouping them with the other bank defendants and alleging that the group in general conspired to fix interchange fees -- is inadequate under FRCP 8, which sets a minimum threshold of defendant-by-defendant specificity that a plaintiff must meet.

These arguments are convincing. The allegations of the complaint regarding both the vicarious liability and conspiracy theories are simply legal conclusions without supporting facts. For example, plaintiffs allege that "Bank One [Corp] exercised [**28] such dominion and control over Bank One, NA and Bank One Arizona that it is liable according to the law for the acts of Bank One, NA and Bank One Arizona." Compl (Doc # 1) P 10. See, e.g., Neilson v Union Bank of California, NA, 290 F Supp 2d 1101, 1116 \(CD Cal 2003\) ("Conclusory allegations of 'alter ego' status are insufficient to state a claim. Rather, a plaintiff must allege specifically both of the elements of alter ego liability, as well as facts supporting each.").

With respect to the conspiracy theory of liability, Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase are quite correct that the complaint lumps them in with the other bank defendants for purposes of pleading the conspiracy. They are equally correct that the allegations of the complaint doing the work under FRCP 8 of pleading the conspiracy are not the generalized allegations of, for example, P 61 ("The [b]ank [d]efendants * * * have caused Star to continue to impose [i]nterchange [f]ees * * *."), but rather the particularized allegations of PP 9-14 that state how each bank, individually, exerted control over Star's rulemaking. Consequently, there are no allegations in [**29] the complaint specifically connecting Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase to the alleged conspiracy that controlled Star. Cf In re Sagent Technology, Inc, Derivative Litigation, 278 F Supp 2d 1079, 1094 \(ND Cal 2003\) ("While FRCP 8 requires only that the a pleading set forth a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, the underlying requirement is that a pleading give fair notice of the claim being asserted and the grounds upon which it rests. A complaint that lumps together thirteen individual defendants, where only three of the individuals was alleged to have been present for the entire period of the events alleged in the complaint, fails to give fair notice of the claim to those defendants." (citation and quotation marks omitted)).

In response to this, plaintiffs argue principally that Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase are conspirators in this case for an entirely different reason -- to wit, because they exerted control over Visa USA Inc and Visa International Corp (collectively, "Visa") and Mastercard International Inc ("Mastercard"). Id PP 17-20. Visa and Mastercard own, respectively, [**30] Plus and Cirrus, the two worldwide ATM networks. Id PP 18-19. Plaintiffs contend -- and the complaint is far from clear on the causation or conspiracy in this -- that action by these two networks precipitated the adoption of ATM surcharges in all ATM networks. Id PP 54-55. This in turn rendered fixed interchange fees unnecessary. Id P 62. Plaintiffs' tale about the involvement of Bank One Corp and JPMorgan [*1137] Chase in all this is not totally improbable. But the complaint is so poorly developed in this particular respect that it does not give fair notice under FRCP 8 to Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase (or the court, for that matter) of the role they are alleged to have played in the conspiracy. Indeed, the complaint is ambiguous on just what the scope of the alleged conspiracy was: The complaint concentrates largely on the decisionmaking surrounding Star, yet Visa and Mastercard -- avowed competitors of Star, no less -- are announced as coconspirators, see Compl (Doc # 1) PP 17-18.

Accordingly, Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase's motion to dismiss is GRANTED. The defects in the complaint against these entities could possibly be resolved by an amended [**31] pleading; accordingly, plaintiff's are given leave to amend their complaint against Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase. See United States v Smithkline Beecham Clinic Labs, 245 F3d 1048, 1052 \(9th Cir 2001\). On the other hand, the parties may wish to defer resolution of the liability of Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase by entering into a tolling agreement pending the outcome of other issues. The choice is, in the first instance, plaintiff's and then, possibly, Bank One Corp's and JPMorgan Chase's.

C.

First Data moves to dismiss the complaint on the ground that it fails to allege First Data's involvement in the claimed conspiracy. Doc # 33. First Data proceeds from a simple premise: The complaint states that "Concord [EFS] was acquired by First Data * * *, the largest US credit card processor, and is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of First Data," Compl (Doc # 1) P 8, but beyond this, the complaint says nothing specific about First Data. Plainly, the allegation quoted above is insufficient to state a claim for alter ego liability on First Data's part for acts taken by its subsidiary Concord EFS. And although the complaint repeatedly refers to "the defendants" or "the [**32] bank defendants" in the aggregate -- groups that include First Data, even though it is not a bank -- there are no allegations in the complaint specific to First Data that suggest how it could have taken the actions ascribed to "the defendants" or "the bank defendants." The court agrees with First Data that the complaint does not give it fair notice of the claims against it.

Plaintiffs' response largely ignores their complaint. They assert that "First Data has now owned Star for over a year," Doc # 109 at 16:10-11, but of course, that is not what the complaint alleges: The complaint asserts that First Data owns a corporation that in turn owns Star. Plaintiffs rely on material outside the complaint to suggest that First Data acts as Star's agent. Id at 18-19. They ask the court to take judicial notice of several hundred pages of SEC filings made by First Data, Doc # 111, and they parse this material at length in their filings, Doc # 109 at 5-10. Perhaps under certain circumstances, SEC filings are the proper subject of judicial notice; the court expresses no view on this question. HNS↑ Judicial notice at the pleadings stage is properly invoked to fill in a small gap in an otherwise complete [**33] portrait painted by the complaint. But here, the canvass is missing as well as the image: Plaintiffs would defeat a motion to dismiss by piling a ream of SEC filings (literally) onto one half-sentence in their complaint. This is not proper at the pleadings stage -- not as a matter of procedure and certainly not as a matter of good practice. Plaintiffs are manifestly in command of vast knowledge about First Data's activities; the length of their opposition paper, which runs to the very limits of Civ L R 7-4(b), more than amply illustrates that. Distilling the material in plaintiffs' [*1138] opposition paper into an amended complaint should be trivial for plaintiffs, will likely give fair notice to First Data and will surely be a boon to the court.

Accordingly, First Data's motion to dismiss (Doc # 33) is GRANTED, and plaintiffs are given leave to file an amended complaint to amplify their allegations against First Data.

III

Plaintiffs have filed a paper styled "plaintiffs' submission regarding scheduling and arbitration." Doc # 120. Defendants have filed a paper in response. Doc # 125. Plaintiffs seek an order directing defendants (1) to state by a date certain their intentions to file a [**34] motion to compel arbitration and (2) if they so intend, to file such a motion by a date certain. The court is not entirely satisfied that it has the authority to force the issue, and even if the court were so empowered, the issue seems better resolved by litigating equitable defenses such as waiver and estoppel in the context of an actual motion to compel arbitration -- if and when such a motion should be presented to the court.

IV

In sum, the court DENIES the motions to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a per se antitrust claim (Doc # # 26, 29); GRANTS First Data's motion to dismiss (Doc # 33); and GRANTS Bank One Corp and JPMorgan Chase's motion to dismiss (Doc # 17). Plaintiffs are given leave to file an amended complaint. The parties may stipulate to a pleading schedule in accordance with their respective positions, but shall appear on July 13, 2005, at 10:00am for a hearing on any motions filed and for a scheduling conference, at which the parties should be prepared to address a discovery plan and any outstanding pleading issues. As previously set at the January 26, 2005, case management conference, defendants' initial disclosure are due 60 days from the date of [**35] this order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

May 4, 2005

VAUGHN R WALKER

United States District Chief Judge

---

End of Document

Am. Needle, Inc. v. New Orleans La. Saints

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

May 5, 2005, Decided ; May 5, 2005, Filed

No. 04 C 7806

Reporter

385 F. Supp. 2d 687 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9484 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,819

AMERICAN NEEDLE, INC., Plaintiff, vs. NEW ORLEANS LOUISIANA SAINTS, et al., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Reconsideration denied by Am. Needle, Inc. v. New Orleans La. Saints, 385 F. Supp. 2d 727, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18885 \(N.D. Ill., June 6, 2005\)

Motion denied by Am. Needle, Inc. v. New Orleans La. Saints, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22967 \(N.D. Ill., Oct. 5, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

trademarks, teams, apparel, logos, headwear, television, relevant market, carrying, license, sports, broadcasts, per se rule, manufacture, monopolize, antitrust, products, games, rule of reason, markets, league, definitions, consumers, football, courts, brand, motion to dismiss, interchangeable, defendants', cap, anti trust law

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > General Overview

HN1[] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss tests the sufficiency of the complaint, not the merits of the case. In deciding a motion to dismiss, the court must assume the truth of all well-pleaded allegations, making all inferences in the plaintiff's favor. The court should dismiss a claim only if it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN2[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. §2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

HN4[] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason

15 U.S.C.S. § 1 of the Sherman Act outlaws only unreasonable restraints of trade. Thus, to determine whether a restraint of trade violates antitrust law, courts employ the rule-of-reason test, taking into account a variety of factors, including specific information about the relevant business, its condition before and after the restraint was imposed, and the restraint's history, nature, and effect. Because of the costs of the rule-of-reason test, courts employ a per se rule to establish illegal restraint, where prior experience allows the court to reach a conclusive presumption that the restraint has a predictable and pernicious anticompetitive effect and limited potential for pro-competitive benefit. Courts do not employ the per se rule unless the effect of the restraint of trade is obvious.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN5[] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason

Judicial precedent rejects the per se rule when reviewing trade restraints imposed by sports leagues.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN6[] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

To determine whether a trade restraint runs afoul of antitrust law under the rule of reason, a court must determine the consequences of the restraint on the affected market. But, first, the relevant affected market must be defined. Likewise, claims of monopolization of trade under 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 of the Sherman Act also require a determination of the relevant market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

**HN7** [down] Market Definition, Relevant Market

A relevant market is composed of products whose use is interchangeable and for which there is a cross-elasticity of demand. In some cases, the relevant market for an antitrust action may be a distinct portion, or submarket, of a broader market. To determine whether there is a distinct product submarket, courts look to industry or public recognition of the submarket as a separate economic entity, the product's peculiar characteristics and uses, unique production facilities, distinct customers, distinct prices, sensitivity to price changes, and specialized vendors. Regardless of whether the relevant market is properly viewed as a submarket, a plaintiff may not limit a market definition by excluding reasonable product substitutes in order to establish an unreasonable restraint or a monopolizing effect on the market. Incomplete or improperly circumscribed market definitions effectively write the market requirement out of antitrust law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

**HN8** [down] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

In antitrust actions, courts repeatedly reject markets that are defined by a company's trademark.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

**HN9** [down] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

For purposes of an antitrust action, the distribution of sports-related intellectual property can be a market unto itself.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

**HN10** [down] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

In antitrust actions, a market is composed of products that have reasonable interchangeability for the purposes for which they are produced: price, use, and qualities considered.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Trademark Law > Conveyances > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Sports > General Overview

**HN11** [down] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

If a unique, separate market exists for the television rights of NCAA football games and NBA basketball games, the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, does not see how, as a matter of law, a unique market cannot exist for the manufacture and distribution of merchandise carrying National Football League trademarks.

Counsel: [\[\*\*1\]](#) For American Needle, Inc, Plaintiff: Jeffrey M. Carey, Law Office of Jeffrey M. Carey, Buffalo Grove, IL.

For National Football League, Defendant: Gregg Levy, Derek Ludwin, Covington & Burling, Washington, DC; Earl Edward Farkas, Eugene E. Gozdecki, Gozdecki and DelGiudice, Chicago, IL.

For Reebok International Ltd., Defendant: Timothy Bunker Hardwicke, Alice E Decker, Matthew B Mock, Latham & Watkins LLP, Chicago, IL; John Thomas Rosch, Latham & Watkins, San Francisco, CA.

Judges: JAMES B. MORAN, Senior Judge.

Opinion by: JAMES B. MORAN

Opinion

---

[*689] MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiff American Needle, Inc. (American Needle) brought this antitrust action against defendants, the National Football League (NFL), the individual owners of the NFL's member teams, National Football League Properties, Inc. (NFLP) and Reebok International, Ltd. (Reebok), for violation of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq. Defendants move to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim. The motion is granted in part and denied in part.

BACKGROUND

The following facts, taken from plaintiff's complaint, are, for purposes of this motion, accepted as true. American Needle, a [\[\*\*2\]](#) corporation headquartered in Buffalo Grove, Illinois, designs, manufactures, and sells headwear carrying the trademarked names and logos of various professional athletic teams. The NFL is an unincorporated association of professional football teams and their owners. The NFLP is a Delaware corporation established by the NFL and its member teams to license their trademarks. For many years, American Needle and other clothing manufacturers were licensed by the NFLP to use NFL teams' trademarks on their headwear and apparel. However, in December 2000, the NFL, NFLP and NFL team owners decided to change their licensing practices for the use of trademarks on headwear and apparel -- no longer would various manufacturers compete for licenses, nor would the NFLP grant multiple licenses. Instead, the NFLP would enter into an exclusive licensing agreement with one company for the manufacture, sale, and distribution of headwear and apparel carrying the trademarks of the NFL and its member teams. Subsequently, the NFLP entered into an exclusive licensing agreement with Reebok. American Needle's trademark license with the NFLP expired in March 2001 and was not renewed.

[\[\*690\]](#) Plaintiff filed a five-count [\[\*\*3\]](#) complaint on December 1, 2004, alleging that defendants' agreement to grant an exclusive license for the use of NFL teams' trademarks on headwear and apparel constitutes a monopolization, a conspiracy to monopolize, and an attempt to monopolize various markets (counts I-III), in violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. Plaintiff also contends that the agreement constitutes a restraint of trade under the per se rule and the rule of reason (counts IV and V), in violation of section 1 of the Act.

DISCUSSION

HN1 A Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss tests the sufficiency of the complaint, not the merits of the case. Triad Assocs., Inc. v. Chicago Hous. Auth., 892 F.2d 583, 586 \(7th Cir. 1989\). In deciding a motion to dismiss, the court must assume the truth of all well-pleaded allegations, making all inferences in the plaintiff's favor. Sidney S. Arst Co. v. Pipefitters Welfare Educ. Fund, 25 F.3d 417, 420 \(7th Cir. 1994\). The court should dismiss a claim only if it appears "beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his [**4] claim which would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 \(1957\).

Counts IV and V of plaintiff's complaint allege violations of section 1 of the Sherman Act, which states: HN2 "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any contract or engage in any combination or conspiracy hereby declared to be illegal shall be deemed guilty of a felony." 15 U.S.C. § 1. Counts I, II and III of plaintiff's complaint allege violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act, which states that HN3 "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony." 15 U.S.C. § 2.

In their motion to dismiss, defendants argue that plaintiff's claims for violations of the Sherman Act require it to identify the relevant market in which they have restrained and monopolized trade. [**5] See, e.g., Elliot v. United Center, 126 F.3d 1003, 1004-05 \(7th Cir. 1997\); Menasha Corp. v. News America Marketing In-Store, Inc., 238 F. Supp.2d 1024, 1032 \(N.D.Ill. 2003\). Defendants assert that plaintiff has failed to identify such a relevant market. Plaintiff first maintains that even if this were true it would not defeat count IV because it states a claim for a per se violation of the Sherman Act and therefore does not require the identification of a relevant market.

The complaint alleges that the 32 professional football teams that constitute the NFL agreed to restrict the use of their intellectual property, opting to allow the NFLP to control it, and that the NFLP agreed to grant Reebok an exclusive license to use the trademarked names and logos of NFL teams on headwear and apparel. Plaintiff claims that this constitutes horizontal price-fixing and a group boycott, per se violations of the Sherman Act, which necessarily results in decreased output and/or supra-competitive prices. In their reply, defendants counter that a per se standard is inapplicable to the NFLP's agreement with Reebok because agreements involving members [**6] of sports leagues must be analyzed under the rule of reason and these agreements cannot be labeled a group boycott or price-fixing. We agree that the per se rule does not apply to defendants' actions.

[*691] Over a century ago the Supreme Court established that HN4 section 1 of the Sherman Act outlaws only unreasonable restraints of trade. United States v. Joint-Traffic Association, 171 U.S. 505, 43 L. Ed. 259, 19 S. Ct. 25 \(1898\); see Arizona v. Maricopa County Medical Society, 457 U.S. 332, 343, 73 L. Ed. 2d 48, 102 S. Ct. 2466 \(1982\). Thus, to determine whether a restraint of trade violates antitrust law, courts employ the rule-of-reason test, "taking into account a variety of factors, including specific information about the relevant business, its condition before and after the restraint was imposed, and the restraint's history, nature, and effect." State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 10, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199, 118 S. Ct. 275 \(1997\). Because of the costs of the rule-of-reason test, courts have employed a per se rule to establish illegal restraint, where prior experience allows the court to reach a conclusive presumption that the restraint has a "predictable and pernicious anticompetitive effect" and "limited potential for procompetitive [**7] benefit." Id.; Maricopa County, 457 U.S. at 343. Courts do not employ the per se rule unless the effect of the restraint of trade is obvious. Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 49-50, 53 L. Ed. 2d 568, 97 S. Ct. 2549 \(1977\)("Per se rules of illegality are appropriate only when they relate to conduct that is manifestly anticompetitive.").

HN5 The Supreme Court has rejected the per se rule when reviewing trade restraints imposed by sports leagues. NCAA v. Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma, 468 U.S. 85, 100-101, 82 L. Ed. 2d 70, 104 S. Ct. 2948 \(1984\). In Board of Regents, members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) challenged the association's restraints on the sale of television broadcast rights. Id. Though the Supreme Court had found similar restraints to be illegal per se in other circumstances, it did not apply the per se rule but, rather, analyzed the restraints under the rule of reason. The court jettisoned the per se rule in that case because it involved "an industry in which horizontal restraints on competition are essential if the product [college football] is to be available at all." Id. In order to offer [**8] intercollegiate athletic competition, the NCAA required joint cooperation and conformity to rules. Id. Furthermore, the court found that many NCAA restraints resulted in a pro-competitive effect on the association's members, thus a fair evaluation of the restraints required consideration of the NCAA's justification for the regulations. Id. at 103.

Since the Supreme Court's decision in Board of Regents, courts have repeatedly rejected the per se rule when analyzing a trade restraint imposed by a sports league, opting instead for the rule of reason. See, e.g., Chicago Professional Sports Limited Partnership v. NBA, 961 F.2d 667, (7th Cir. 1992)(reviewing NBA's restriction on television broadcast rights under the rule of reason); National Hockey League Players' Association v. Plymouth Whalers Hockey Club, 325 F.3d 712, 719 (6th Cir. 2003)(reviewing hockey league's limitation on the eligibility of "overaged" players under rule of reason); Law v. NCAA, 134 F.3d 1010, 1019 (10th Cir. 1998)(stating that since athletic league competition requires horizontal agreements, "all horizontal agreements among NCAA [**9] members, even those as egregious as price-fixing, should be subject to a rule of reason analysis."); see also Overview: Looking Ahead at Sports and the Antitrust Law, 14 Antitrust 15, 16 (Spring 2000) ("It is now settled that the practices typically associated with the organization of professional sports leagues and other organizations such as the NCAA are not subject to the per se rule."). Thus, even if plaintiff's allegations describe a trade restraint that has been held unlawful, see *Denny's Marina, Inc. v. [*692] Renfro Productions, Inc.*, 8 F.3d 1217, 1220 (7th Cir. 1993) ("[A] horizontal price-fixing conspiracy . . . is per se an unreasonable restraint of trade."), a per se claim for violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act is inappropriate against the NFL.

Our analysis of section 1 of the Sherman Act does not end, however, because plaintiff also alleges a violation of the section based on the rule of reason. HN6↑ To determine whether a trade restraint runs afoul of antitrust law under the rule of reason, a court must determine the consequences of the restraint on the affected market. See Havco of America, Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 554 (7th Cir. 1980); [**10] see also 42nd Parallel North v. E. Street Denim Co., 286 F.3d 401, 404 (7th Cir. 2002). But, first, the relevant affected market must be defined. Adidas America, Inc. v. NCAA, 64 F.Supp.2d 1097, 1101(D. Kan. 1999) ("The first step in an antitrust analysis is defining the relevant market or markets."). Likewise, claims of monopolization of trade under section 2 of the Sherman Act also require a determination of the relevant market. United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 571, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 (1966); Bernard Food Industries, Inc. v. Dietene Co., 415 F.2d 1279, 1284 (7th Cir. 1969) ("A definition of the relevant market is an essential element of a violation under Section 2 of the Sherman Act." (superseded by statute on an unrelated issue)). Defendants assert that plaintiff has failed to identify a legitimate market on which it can base its remaining claims.

Plaintiff alleges that defendants' conduct has affected six relevant markets: (1) the market for licenses to use NFL and NFL teams' trademarks in the design, manufacture and sale of apparel, (2) the market for licenses to use these trademarks in the design, manufacture and sale of [**11] headwear, (3) the wholesale market for the sale and distribution of apparel with these trademarks, (4) the wholesale market for the sale and distribution of headwear with these trademarks, (5) the market for the manufacture of apparel with the NFL and NFL teams' trademarks, and finally, (6) the market for the manufacture of headwear with these trademarks. Defendants argue that none of these alleged markets, which are all defined by the use of trademarks, can support plaintiff's antitrust claims because market definitions contingent on trademarks are inadequate as a matter of law. In addressing defendants' argument, we do not determine whether or not the facts support plaintiff's market definitions, but only determine whether the law will permit the sort of market definitions alleged. Rohlfing v. Manor Care, Inc., 172 F.R.D. 330, 345 (N.D.Ill. 1997).

HN7↑ A relevant market is composed of products whose use is interchangeable and for which there is a "cross-elasticity of demand." Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 325, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510, 82 S. Ct. 1502 (1962); United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 394-95, 100 L. Ed. 1264, 76 S. Ct. 994 (1956) (stating that a relevant market [**12] consists of "commodities reasonably interchangeable by consumers for the same purposes."). In some cases, the relevant market for an antitrust action may be a distinct portion, or submarket, of a broader market. Brown Shoe Co., 370 U.S. at 325. To determine whether there is a distinct product submarket, courts look to "industry or public recognition of the submarket as a separate economic entity, the product's peculiar characteristics and uses, unique production facilities, distinct customers, distinct prices, sensitivity to price changes, and specialized vendors." Id. Regardless of whether the relevant market is properly viewed as a submarket, a plaintiff may not limit a market definition [*693] by excluding reasonable product substitutes in order to establish an unreasonable restraint or a monopolizing effect on the market. Adidas America, Inc., 64 F.Supp.2d at 1102. Incomplete or improperly circumscribed market definitions effectively write the market requirement out of antitrust law.

For this reason, HN8 courts have repeatedly rejected markets that are defined by a company's trademark. See, e.g., Generac Corp. v. Caterpillar Inc., 172 F.3d 971, 977 (7th Cir. 1999) [**13] ("Product markets are not defined in terms of one trademark or another."); Tunis Bros. Co., Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 952 F.2d 715, 723-24 (3d Cir. 1991)(collecting cases); Shaw v. Rolex Watch, U.S.A., Inc., 673 F.Supp. 674, 678 (S.D.N.Y. 1987)(collecting cases).<sup>1</sup> In these cases, parties have attempted to define a market based on a product's trademark, excluding interchangeable substitutes and ignoring the consumers' "cross-elasticity of demand" for products that serve a similar purpose. For example, in Generac Corp., the Seventh Circuit found that the proper market in which to analyze Caterpillar's allegedly anti-competitive activity was not Olympian-trademarked generator sets, but all generator sets. Id. at 977. The court explained that trademarks do not distinguish separate markets because they "simply identify the origin of a product." Id. It further noted that "not even the most zealous antitrust hawk has ever argued that Amoco gasoline, Mobil gasoline, and Shell gasoline are three separate product markets." Id. Even a prestigious trademark, such as Mercedes-Benz "protects only the name or symbol of the product. Market power, if [**14] any, is derived from the product, not from the name or symbol as such." Mozart Co. v. Mercedes-Benz of North America, Inc., 833 F.2d 1342, 1346 (9th Cir. 1987).

Yet, the analysis from these trademark cases cannot be readily applied to the facts of the instant case. The trademarks integral to plaintiff's market definitions -- the names and logos of the NFL and its member teams -- do not serve to "identify the origin" of the products [**15] that carry them. (The tag reading Reebok, as opposed to Nike or Adidas or Champion or American Needle, serves the generally accepted purpose of trademarks, informing the customer of the origin of the apparel and perhaps revealing something to the customer about its quality. But neither Reebok's trademark, nor that trademark's purpose, is relevant to our inquiry.) Nor is it clear that these NFL trademarks "protect only the name or symbol of the product." The NFL team names and logos that appear on apparel and headwear are not a "symbol" of the T-shirt or cap on which they appear. In fact, the NFL teams' trademarks carried on a T-shirt or cap may be more properly viewed as the product itself, rather than the T-shirt or cap.<sup>2</sup>

[**16] [*694] In Generac, the Seventh Circuit recognized the absurdity in claiming that one brand of gasoline was not interchangeable with another, and therefore constituted its own separate market. The same would be true in claiming that one brand of t-shirt or cap could not substitute for another brand. However, we must acknowledge that some portion of the market for headwear and apparel carrying NFL teams' trademarks has little to do with the items carrying the logos. Certainly some people purchase a shirt or hat with an NFL team's logo simply because they need a shirt or a hat. As defendants argue, apparel with a different logo or with no logo would serve as a reasonable substitute for these consumers. But, just as certainly, a significant segment of the market for NFL-branded headwear and apparel is purchasing the team logo. If a store sold out of hats carrying the Chicago Bears logo, these individuals would not necessarily find caps carrying logos for Spongebob, the University of Michigan, or even the Chicago Bulls to be reasonable substitutes. More likely, they would purchase a different item of apparel, such as a T-shirt or sweatshirt, or even a non-apparel item like a mug or key chain [**17] that carries the Bears logo. The product for these consumers is the trademarked logo. This is not the case with the trademarks Pine-Sol, Olympian, Rolex, or Shell. Though customers may prefer those brand names for any number of reasons, what they are buying is a disinfectant household cleaner, Clorox Co. v. Sterling Winthrop, 117 F.3d 50 (2d Cir. 1997), an electric generator, Generac Corp., 172 F.3d at 971, a high-end watch, Shaw, 673 F.Supp. at 674, or gasoline, Chawla v. Shell Oil Co., 75 F.Supp.2d 626, 642 (S.D.Tex. 1999), all of which have reasonable substitutes under other brand names. But for many people purchasing headwear or apparel with an NFL team's logo, they are purchasing the ability to be identified with a particular team -- the right to be recognized as a fan. Defendants state that "Relevant markets include not just brands that consumers may prefer but all alternatives to which consumers could practically turn' if prices become anticompetitive." For consumers seeking to wear something in support of an NFL team, what is the alternative to which they can practically turn if the NFLP's exclusive contract [**18] with Reebok allows this headwear and apparel to become anticompetitve?

<sup>1</sup> Nonetheless, courts have not foreclosed the possibility that under certain circumstances a well-defined, distinct market could consist of just one brand of a product. See U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Industries, Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 998 (11th Cir. 1993) ("A single branded product may, in rare cases, constitute its own relevant market.") (citing Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Commission v. NFL, 726 F.2d 1381, 1393 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 990, 83 L. Ed. 2d 331, 105 S. Ct. 397 (1984)); Tunis Bros. Co., Inc., 952 F.2d at 723.

<sup>2</sup> This is in contrast to the purpose of the NFL trademarks discussed in Weber v. NFL, 112 F. Supp. 2d 667 (N.D.Ohio 2000). In Weber, the plaintiff attempted to define a market around Internet domain names employing the trademarked names of NFL teams. The exact purpose of a domain name is to identify the origin and represent the content of the Internet site for which it serves as an address. Thus, the use of an NFL team name in a domain name does serve as a symbol of the product and the content one would find at that address.

Defendants cite Carell v. Shubert Organization, Inc., 104 F.Supp.2d 236 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), to support their contention that a market narrowly defined by a product's trademark does not suffice for an antitrust claim. Unlike the other cases cited above, Carell involves trademarks which do not simply serve to identify the origin of a product. In Carell, a make-up designer claimed that the producers of the musical Cats had monopolized the market for intellectual property rights related to the show. Id. at 241. The court denied plaintiff's antitrust claim because there was no plausible basis on which to find that Cats-related makeup designs and other intellectual property was a market unto itself. Id. at 264. The court explained that customer preference for Cats-related products did not create a market unto itself, just as consumers' choice of Pepsi, NBC or TWA, over their respective competitors, does not establish each of their branded products as its own market. Id. at 265 (quoting Global Discount Travel Services v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 960 F.Supp. 701, 705 (S.D.N.Y. 1997)). [**19] The court also found no reason why "products associated with other Broadway shows or other forms of entertainment are not reasonably interchangeable with products associated with Cats." Id. at 265. But it is not customers' preference for headwear and apparel carrying NFL teams' names and logos that would establish it as a [*695] separate market, it is the lack of reasonably interchangeable products. Declining to recognize a separate market for Cats-related products is more akin to declining to find a separate market for Chicago Bears-related headwear and apparel, than for all NFL-related headwear and apparel. Just as there are other Broadway plays and musicals, there are other NFL teams. However, we are not considering whether headwear and apparel carrying one NFL team's logo constitutes its own market, we are considering whether, as a matter of law, all headwear and apparel carrying NFL team logos cannot constitute a market unto itself. Both the Supreme Court and the Seventh Circuit have held in a different context -- the realm of television, not textiles -- that HN9[<sup>1</sup>] the distribution of sports-related intellectual property can be a market unto itself.

In Board of Regents, 468 U.S. at 111, [**20] the Supreme Court found that the district court properly held that college football broadcasts constituted their own market. Since the audience for these broadcasts was "uniquely attractive," advertisers and broadcasters did not have reasonable alternatives for this product. Id. Hence, the Supreme Court held that the NCAA had monopoly power over a product without substitutes on the market. Id. at 112. Three decades earlier, the Court held that the even-narrower market for the promotion of championship boxing contests was separate from the market for all professional boxing events. International Boxing Club of New York, Inc. v. United States, 358 U.S. 242, 250-51, 3 L. Ed. 2d 270, 79 S. Ct. 245 (1959). Acknowledging that HN10[<sup>1</sup>] a "market is composed of products that have reasonable interchangeability for the purposes for which they are produced -- price, use and qualities considered," the court held that championship boxing contests were sufficiently separate from boxing contests in general because, among other reasons, they were uniquely attractive to fans. Id. at 250 (quoting United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. at 404); Board of Regents, 468 U.S. at 112. [**21]

The Seventh Circuit also found that a sport's television broadcasts constitute their own market, though the court's reasoning varied from that in Board of Regents. See Chicago Professional Sports Limited Partnership v. NBA, 961 F.2d 667, 673-74 (7th Cir. 1992). In Chicago Professional Sports, the owners of the Chicago Bulls and the television station, WGN, brought an antitrust action against the NBA alleging that its cap on the number of televised games was illegal. Id. at 669. The NBA argued that its basketball broadcasts were a small fraction of all television entertainment, or even all televised sports, and therefore its restraints had a minimal impact on the overall market. Id. at 673. Although the Seventh Circuit did not find that the audience for NBA games distinguished a unique market for these broadcasts, it rejected the notion that the market could only be defined by the audience. Nor did it define the market as television entertainment or televised sports. See id. The court found that televised basketball games were the product and, therefore, caps on the number of games broadcast were a restraint on that [**22] product market.<sup>3</sup> Id. at 673-74.

[*696] Thus, in the case of a sport's broadcasts, whether a court looks to the broadcasts' audience or the product itself, it is a unique, separate market. Just as the Supreme Court and the Seventh Circuit distinguished televised collegiate football games and televised basketball games from the myriad of other television broadcasting, or even televised sports, so too could headwear and apparel carrying NFL teams' logos and other trademarks [**23] be distinguished from all other headwear and apparel, including headwear and apparel carrying one of the myriad of other possible logos, or even the logo of a non-NFL sports team. NCAA games draw a unique audience, and NBA games constitute a unique product. Therefore, the sale of the rights to televise them is a market unto itself. See Board of Regents, 468 U.S. at 112; Chicago Professional Sports, 961 F.2d at 673-74. The sale of television rights is a method for these sports associations to merchandise and promote their core product: the athletic competition in which their member teams engage. The sale of headwear and apparel branded with team logos is another method. HN11 [↑] If a unique, separate market exists for the television rights of NCAA football games and NBA basketball games, we do not see how, as a matter of law, a unique market cannot exist for the manufacture and distribution of merchandise carrying NFL trademarks.

Our analysis is limited to the issues raised in defendants' motion to dismiss. As pointed out above, we have not determined whether the markets plaintiff alleges do in fact exist, thereby supporting its claims. We have found only [**24] that the law does not preclude an antitrust claim based on such markets. Even though plaintiff's market definitions do not fail due to reliance on NFL trademarks, they may still be improper. As indicated in our analysis, if the true product in this case is NFL teams' logos, not the items that carry them, then there may be no justification for limiting the relevant market to headwear and apparel that carry these logos. Perhaps, the market would more properly include all merchandise carrying NFL logos. Of course, this broader market definition would then alter the impact of the exclusive contract with Reebok, which is allegedly limited to the manufacture and distribution of headwear and apparel.<sup>4</sup>

[**25] Many questions concerning the viability of plaintiff's claims remain. For example, it is far from clear, for a different reason, that NFL's control over the trademarks and logos is subject to the antitrust laws. The same reasoning that has led courts to reject the per se concept, when somewhat extended, can lead to the conclusion that the NFL should be viewed as a single source for the purpose of protecting the clubs' trademarks and logos. The league may be viewed much like a franchisor. The NFL may license others to use its trademarks and logos to affix to merchandise and apparel they make, just as McDonald's licenses its trademarks for use by others, who make hamburgers. The NFL may have as great an interest as McDonald's in protecting the good will inherent [*697] in their marks by selectively choosing who may use them. See Chicago Professional Sports Limited Partnership v. National Basketball Association, 95 F.3d 593, 599-600 (7th Cir. 1996). It is a rather dramatic assertion that the antitrust laws prohibit the NFL from determining who may use its trademarks and logos and, therefore, its good will. But we leave that consideration to another day, as the present [**26] contention is confined to whether or not there can be relevant markets. Given that plaintiff's market definitions are distinguishable from those that courts have found to be illegitimate due to their reliance on trademarks, and the fact that there is support in case law for distinguishing a separate market in this context, we deny defendants' motion to dismiss Counts I, II, III and V on the basis of improper market definitions.

<sup>3</sup> Though the markets in Board of Regents, 468 U.S. at 85, International Boxing Club, 358 U.S. at 242, and Chicago Professional Sports, 961 F.2d at 667, are more properly identified as "submarkets," this distinction is largely irrelevant since submarkets are legitimate markets for purposes of antitrust actions. Whether or not a market can be classified as a subset of another larger market does not impact the analysis if it is distinct enough to constitute its own legitimate market.

<sup>4</sup> Though it is not relevant to the inquiry before us and carries no weight at this stage in the litigation, it is worth noting that Reebok's 2004 Annual Report, contradicts the complaint's assertion that the company is "the exclusive provider of apparel and headwear bearing the Trademarks of the individual NFL Teams and the NFL." Reebok's Annual Report states that it has an exclusive right to manufacture and distribute NFL-branded replica jerseys, headwear, footwear and gloves and is the exclusive distributor of NFL-branded apparel and accessories in some distribution channels. However, it is "a non-exclusive distributor of NFL-branded apparel through catalogs, in retail stores that primarily carry NFL-branded products and in other retail channels."

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, defendants' motion to dismiss count IV is granted, and their motion to dismiss counts I, II, III and V is denied.

JAMES B. MORAN

Senior Judge, U. S. District Court

May 5, 2005.

---

End of Document

Able Sales Co. v. Compania de Azucar

United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit

May 6, 2005, Decided

No. 04-1922

Reporter

406 F.3d 56 *; 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7902 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,782; 33 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 711

ABLE SALES COMPANY, INC., Plaintiff, Appellee, v. COMPAÑIA DE AZUCAR DE PUERTO RICO, Defendant, Appellant.

Prior History: [**1] APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO. Hon. Juan M. Perez-Gimenez, U.S. District Judge.

Core Terms

---

commerce, sugar, refined sugar, imported, sales, raw, distributors, interstate, refinement, wholesalers, pricing, seller, district court, export, hundredweight, Robinson-Patman Act, intrastate, subject matter jurisdiction, transactions, inventory, discriminatory, processing, violations, argues, no evidence, Antitrust Law, competitor, regulation, predatory, selling

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN1 Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Primary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Secondary & Tertiary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN2 Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

The Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act encompasses two different types of violations: primary line violations and secondary line violations. Primary line violations are directed at injuring competition with the discriminating seller's direct competitors, whereas secondary line violations are directed at injuring competition among the discriminating seller's customers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Primary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN3 Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

In general, primary line violations involve a claim by the injured party that a business rival has priced its products in an unfair manner with an object to eliminate or retard competition and thereby gain and exercise control over prices in the relevant market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Jurisdiction

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Federal Powers

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > Secondary & Tertiary Line Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Constitutional Law > Congressional Duties & Powers > Commerce Clause > General Overview

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Boundaries

HN4 Robinson-Patman Act, Jurisdiction

Section 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act does not extend jurisdiction to the full extent of Congress's constitutional power granted by the Commerce Clause. The distinct "in commerce" language appears to denote only persons or activities within the flow of interstate commerce. The jurisdictional requirements of these provisions cannot be satisfied merely by showing that allegedly anticompetitive acquisitions and activities affect commerce. To satisfy the "in commerce" requirement, one of the discriminatory sales must cross a state line. As this requirement is jurisdictional, the burden to prove the interstate character of the sales is on the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > Commerce Requirement

HN5 Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

Following the language of the statute, the U.S. Supreme Court holds that, in order to satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of the § 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act, the defendant's activities must satisfy the following test: unless it appears that the defendant's alleged exclusive-dealing arrangements and discriminatory sales occur in the course of its interstate activities and that at least one of the defendant's allegedly discriminatory sales was made in interstate commerce, a plaintiff's claims must fail. In other words, if one of the discriminatory sales is in commerce, the seller is engaged in commerce and discrimination has occurred in the course thereof. The activities which must meet the in commerce requirements are the sales by the defendant seller.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Constitutional Law > Congressional Duties & Powers > Commerce Clause > General Overview

HN6 Contracts, Sales of Goods

The flow of commerce is thought to end when the goods are stored in a seller's warehouse or storage facility for general inventory purposes, subject to an exception for when the goods are purchased and then stored in the seller's warehouse in response to a particular customer's needs.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Governments > Agriculture & Food > Product Promotions

Constitutional Law > Congressional Duties & Powers > Commerce Clause > General Overview

HN7 Agriculture & Food, Food Product Promotions

In cases where the "flow of commerce" doctrine applies, the same entity engages in both the intrastate and interstate transaction. And courts hold that, to the extent that the purchasers are independent distributors in their pricing and marketing decisions, the flow of commerce is interrupted by the sale of the product.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN8 Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

Under the Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act, in a situation where a wholly independent buyer purchases from a defendant seller, and there is no evidence of collusion or control between the seller and the independent buyer, the flow of commerce has ended and the intrastate seller cannot be held to have made the sale in commerce as a result of a subsequent interstate sale made by the independent buyer.

Counsel: Gina Ismalia Gutierrez-Galang, with whom Law Office Pedro E. Ortiz Alvarez was on brief, for appellant.

Carlos A. Rodriguez Vidal, with whom Myriam Fernandez Gonzalez, and Goldman Antonetti & Cordova, P.S.C. were on brief, for appellee.

Judges: Before Selya and Lynch, Circuit Judges. *

Opinion by: LYNCH

Opinion

---

[*57] LYNCH, Circuit Judge. This case presents the issue of the meaning of the jurisdictional "in commerce" requirement of § 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act, 15 U.S.C. § 13.

Judgment was entered under the Act for Able Sales ("Able") and against Compania de Azucar de Puerto Rico ("CAPR"), a corporation that is primarily engaged in the refining of raw sugar and the subsequent sale of this sugar in the local Puerto Rico market. CAPR argues on appeal that the district court [*2] did not have subject matter jurisdiction to entertain the suit brought by Able because the "in commerce" requirement was not met. Able is a corporation primarily engaged in the importation and distribution of refined sugar [*58] in the local Puerto Rico market and a competitor of CAPR.

Specifically, CAPR argues that its sale of refined sugar to various local wholesalers and retailers in Puerto Rico does not satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of the statute. Able counters that any of three separate transactions -- (1) CAPR's importation of raw sugar into Puerto Rico for refinement and sale; (2) Able's importation of refined sugar from Florida; and/or (3) CAPR's sale of refined sugar to a local company which planned to export the sugar -- independently satisfy this requirement and thus provide a basis for subject matter jurisdiction in the district court.

The district court agreed and after a two day bench trial found that CAPR had violated § 2\(a\) of the Robinson-Patman Act and awarded $ 1,949,259.00 in damages to Able.

We hold that the transactions do not satisfy the "in commerce" requirement, reverse the judgment, and remand with directions that judgment be entered for CAPR. <sup>1</sup>

[**3] I.

We briefly recount the facts, largely as found by the district court. CAPR does not dispute the district court's characterization of the facts.

Until December of 2000, the Puerto Rico Sugar Corporation ("PRSC"), a public corporation created by a Resolution of the Board of Governors of the Puerto Rico Land Authority in 1973, was the sole supplier of "Snow White" brand refined sugar in Puerto Rico. The Puerto Rico Department of Consumer Affairs ("DACO") established regulations which required PRSC to sell all of its two and five pound bags of refined sugar to ten exclusive distributors, one of which was Able. These distributors then sold the bags to wholesalers and retailers; DACO fixed the maximum prices for sugar that the distributors could offer.

In January 2001, the Puerto Rico Legislature moved away from governmental ownership and privatized the local sugar industry. See 5 P.R. Laws Ann. § 430a. It transferred the operations and assets of the Mercedita Refinery to CAPR. Until September 2001, CAPR sold the existing inventory of refined sugar from the refinery to the distributors, * Circuit Judge Torruella participated in oral argument in this case, but has since recused himself and has not participated in the decision of the case. The remaining two panelists, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 46(d), issue this opinion.

---

<sup>1</sup> Because we set aside the judgment awarded to Able, we do not address CAPR's second argument on appeal: that the district court erred in the calculation of damages.

including Able, at the price of $ 43.23 per hundredweight, [**4] as established by DACO and as previously offered by the PRSC.

By September 2001, CAPR had sold all the Mercedita inventory and was unable to supply the local demand for refined sugar. Due to the lack of refined sugar, Able and another distributor, in agreement with DACO, imported refined sugar required for local consumption, with the expectation that CAPR would later import raw sugar, refine it, and resume the previous distributor system. Because the cost of the imported refined sugar was higher than the price established by DACO, DACO issued an order which allowed the importers to sell the refined sugar to other distributors and wholesalers at a higher price than had been previously permitted by regulation. The new, higher price for distributors was $ 46.10 per hundredweight; distributors sold to wholesalers at the price of $ 48.54 per hundredweight. This order was vacated in January of 2002, and the lower prices were reinstated.

CAPR, having sold all of its inventory of refined sugar, needed a new source of supply if it wished to continue in the business. [*59] It chose to import raw sugar to refine. In a one-time purchase, CAPR imported approximately 12,000 tons of raw sugar into Puerto [**5] Rico which it refined at its Mercedita facility. There is no evidence of any further importation of raw sugar by CAPR. Able attempted to buy refined sugar from CAPR (apparently refined from this one-time importation of raw sugar) at the distributors' price ($ 43.23 per hundredweight), but on December 26, 2001, CAPR notified Able that it was cutting distributors from its sales strategy and would no longer be selling to distributors. Instead, CAPR would be selling directly to wholesalers and retailers: if Able wanted to buy CAPR's refined sugar, it could do so at the wholesalers' price (not the lower distributors' price). Unfortunately for Able, this price was also the maximum price that Able could, by law, sell to its clients.

Thus CAPR moved from being a supplier to Able, which was a distributor, to being a direct competitor to Able, with CAPR also acting as a distributor and selling directly to wholesalers. Both CAPR and Able sold directly to wholesalers and retailers, all of which were local Puerto Rico entities. One wholesaler, Tropical, purchased refined sugar from CAPR for export.

In an effort to make a profit and compete with CAPR, from January to February of 2002, Able imported [**6] from Florida refined sugar at a cost of $ 44.63 per hundredweight under the trademark "Florida Crystal." In conformance with DACO guidelines, Able anticipated selling the sugar to wholesale clients at $ 47.54 per hundredweight.

Shortly thereafter, CAPR reduced the price of the sugar it had refined for sale to wholesalers from $ 47.54 to $ 45.10 per hundredweight. This was the beginning of the alleged period of predatory pricing. Able was forced to reduce its price as well to compete with CAPR.

At the end of April 2002, CAPR again reduced its price to wholesalers, this time to $ 43.30 per hundredweight. This lower price was not enough to cover CAPR's costs, which consisted of the costs of refining the raw sugar, the sale of the now-refined sugar, and the excise tax of $ 14.00 per hundredweight which CAPR was obligated to pay to the Puerto Rico Department of the Treasury. Throughout the time that CAPR was lowering its prices, it did not pay this excise tax as required by law.

Despite Able's efforts to compete with CAPR, it lost a number of its clients and its market share was reduced by between forty and fifty percent. The district court found that other distributors were eliminated [**7] from the market as a result of CAPR's pricing.<sup>2</sup> In September 2002, CAPR exhausted its inventories and did not purchase any additional raw sugar. There is no further evidence in the record as to whether CAPR has remained in the business of selling refined sugar to wholesalers after it had exhausted the inventory of sugar it had refined from the one-time import of the 12,000 tons of raw sugar.

---

<sup>2</sup>CAPR does point out that Able's chairman admitted at trial that the other two and five pound bag sugar distributors ceased operations on January 1, 2002, prior to the alleged predatory pricing period from February of 2002 to September of 2002. The district court's finding, however, has no bearing on whether or not there is subject matter jurisdiction; we merely note the discrepancy.

Able filed the verified complaint on May 22, 2002 averring its version of the facts and alleging that CAPR engaged in "predatory pricing" in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 13. Specifically, Able stated: [\[\*\*8\]](#)

[*60] Defendant's practice consists of distributing sugar at prices lower than the costs of its inventory. The objective of said pricing structure is to eliminate Able Sales from the market, to allow CAPR to prevail upon the market as the sole sugar distributor in Puerto Rico. . . . [This] practice will then enable [CAPR] to recoup the losses sustained during its current scheme of predatory pricing.

On June 5, 2002, the summons, a copy of the verified complaint, and Able's first set of interrogatories and requests for production were served on CAPR. On August 9, 2002, after two extensions of time, CAPR filed an answer. After CAPR's continual failure to comply with discovery orders, the district court, pursuant to an Order of October 28, 2003, struck CAPR's answer to the complaint and its affirmative defenses. CAPR does not appeal this order.

On November 12 and 13, 2003, a bench trial was held before the district judge. At trial, Able presented documentary evidence, testimony of the Chairman of the Board of Able Sales, and an expert who testified as to Able's damages. CAPR was given an opportunity to present evidence and to cross examine witnesses. CAPR declined to present [\[\*\*9\]](#) evidence, but did cross examine witnesses.

Having stricken the defendant's answers and affirmative defenses from the record, the court determined that CAPR engaged in primary line price discrimination in contravention of the Robinson-Patman Act. The court stated, "this case clearly entails a primary-line price discrimination, in which CAPR imported raw sugar from sources outside of Puerto Rico, refined it at the Mercedita Refinery, and sold the refined sugar at below cost so as to eliminate its competitors."

CAPR challenged the court's subject matter jurisdiction, contending the "in commerce" requirement was not satisfied. The court found that it did have subject matter jurisdiction based on either CAPR's importation of raw sugar which it found remained in the flow of commerce or Able's importation of refined sugar.<sup>3</sup>

[**10] II.

Price discrimination is made unlawful by § 2\(a\) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, which provides:

HN1 It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality . . . where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefit of such discrimination, or with customers of either of them . . . .

15 U.S.C. § 13\(a\); see Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 219-20, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578 \(1993\). HN2 The statute encompasses two different types of violations: primary line violations and secondary line violations. Primary line violations are directed at injuring competition with the discriminating seller's direct competitors, whereas secondary line violations are directed at injuring competition among the discriminating seller's customers. [\[\*\*11\]](#) See I\*611 Coastal Fuels of P.R., Inc. v. Caribbean Petroleum Corp., 79 F.3d 182, 188 \(1st Cir. 1996\); IA Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 267c, at 329-30 (2d ed. 2000). In this case, the district court found that CAPR had committed a primary line violation by engaging in predatory pricing.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> In a footnote, the district court referenced the transaction between Tropical and CAPR as a basis for subject matter jurisdiction and stated "CAPR did sell refined sugar for exportation."

<sup>4</sup> HN3 In general, primary line violations involve a claim by the injured party that "[a] business rival has priced its products in an unfair manner with an object to eliminate or retard competition and thereby gain and exercise control over prices in the

[**12] Whether the district court has subject matter jurisdiction over these types of violations is largely determined by the Supreme Court's decision construing § 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 13\(a\), in Gulf Oil Corp. v. Copp Paving Co., 419 U.S. 186, 42 L. Ed. 2d 378, 95 S. Ct. 392 \(1974\). Gulf Oil, which involved a secondary line violation, held, as all parties agree, that HN4 [§ 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Act] did not extend jurisdiction to the full extent of Congress's constitutional power granted by the Commerce Clause. Id. at 199-200. The Court stated:

The distinct "in commerce" language . . . appears to denote only persons or activities within the flow of interstate commerce . . . . The jurisdictional requirements of these provisions cannot be satisfied merely by showing that allegedly anticompetitive acquisitions and activities affect commerce.

Id. at 195. To satisfy the "in commerce" requirement, one of the discriminatory sales must cross a state line. See Id. at 195; Coastal Fuels, 79 F.3d at 190. As this requirement is jurisdictional, [**13] see Gulf Oil, 419 U.S. at 195, the burden to prove the interstate character of the sales is on the party asserting subject matter jurisdiction. See Bull HN Info. Sys. v. Hutson, 229 F.3d 321, 328 \(1st Cir. 2000\) (the party asserting jurisdiction has the burden of proving it).

In an effort to meet this burden, Able points to three transactions which it argues satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of § 2\(a\): (1) CAPR's importation of raw sugar into Puerto Rico for refinement and sale; (2) Able's importation of refined sugar from Florida; and (3) CAPR's sale of refined sugar to Tropical with the knowledge that Tropical planned to export this sugar.

A. Focus on Plaintiff's Activities

We first reject Able's argument that the "in commerce" element may be satisfied by reviewing the interstate activities of the plaintiff, whether or not the defendant has acted "in commerce." Specifically, Able argues that it imports refined sugar from Florida for sale in Puerto Rico, and this transaction crosses state lines. We disagree that the plaintiff's sales can be used to satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of § 2\(a\) of the Robinson-Patman Act [**14].

HN5 Following the language of the statute, the Supreme Court in Gulf Oil held<sup>5</sup> that in order to satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of the [§ 2\(a\) of the Robinson-Patman Act, the defendant's activities must satisfy the following test:

[*62] Unless it appears . . . that the [defendant's] alleged exclusive-dealing arrangements and discriminatory sales occur in the course of its interstate activities . . . and . . . that at least one of [defendant's] allegedly discriminatory sales was made in interstate commerce . . . , plaintiff's claims must fail.

Gulf Oil, 419 U.S. at 195.<sup>6</sup> In other words, "if one of the discriminatory sales is 'in commerce,' the seller is engaged in commerce and discrimination has occurred in the course thereof." IA Areeda and Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P relevant market." Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 222; see also III Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 745e, at 477 (2d ed. 2002). We express no view as to whether the district court correctly determined that the facts alleged by Able establish a primary line violation of § 2\(a\) of the Robinson-Patman Act. This issue has not been raised on appeal. The only question before us is whether the "in commerce" requirement of the Robinson-Patman Act is satisfied.

---

<sup>5</sup> We have excluded language concerning the requirements as to § 7 of the Clayton Act, as no § 7 allegations are made here.

<sup>6</sup> To support the finding that Able's transactions could satisfy the "in commerce" requirement, the district court erroneously read language in Gulf Oil that states, " § 2\(a\) applies where at least one of the two transactions which, when compared, generate a discrimination . . . crosses a state line." Gulf Oil, 419 U.S. at 200 (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). Gulf Oil involved

267c, at 329 (2d ed. 2000). The activities which must meet the in commerce requirements are the sales by the defendant seller.

[**15] A focus on the defendant's sales is consistent with Congressional purpose. As the Supreme Court stated in Standard Oil Co. v. FTC, 340 U.S. 231, 95 L. Ed. 239, 71 S. Ct. 240, 47 F.T.C. 1766 (1951), "the recognized purpose of the Robinson-Patman Act [is] to reach the operations of large interstate businesses in competition with small local concerns." Id. at 237-38. Congress was concerned with predatory pricing by defendants who engaged in interstate commerce, not by those who acted purely locally. See Gulf Oil, 419 U.S. at 200-01 (reading the clear language of § 2 to exclude from the reach of the statute "a multitude of local activities that hitherto have been left to state and local regulation").

To impose liability on a defendant seller for activities within the sole control of a plaintiff competitor would itself be anti-competitive, and contrary to the purposes of the Robinson-Patman Act. A defendant seller must be able to know when it is subject to Robinson-Patman Act liability in order to conform its behavior to the law. We focus therefore only on the defendant's behavior. We reject the argument that the sales activity of the plaintiff, Able's [**16] importation of refined sugar from Florida, can be the basis for satisfying the "in commerce" jurisdictional requirement of the statute.

B. Defendant's Alleged Interstate Transactions

1. CAPR's Importation of Raw Sugar Across State Lines

Able argues that even though CAPR's sales of refined sugar did not cross state lines, these sales satisfy the "in commerce" requirement because CAPR imported 12,000 tons of raw sugar,<sup>7</sup> and CAPR's refinement in Puerto Rico of this imported sugar did not remove the sugar from the "flow of commerce." This is an aspect of the doctrine concerned with the "flow backward" [*63] into interstate transactions in raw materials." IA Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 267b, at 324 (2d ed. 2000).

[**17] Whatever the present contours of the in the "flow of commerce" doctrine under the Robinson-Patman Act, it certainly does not apply when there are material differences between the product imported and the product sold after undergoing processing. The fact that the raw materials were imported into Puerto Rico does not necessarily mean that the "in commerce" requirement of § 2(a) of the Robinson-Patman Act is met. See Belliston v. Texaco, Inc., 455 F.2d 175, 180 (5th Cir. 1972) (The production of gasoline from crude oil is a "highly complex process" which interrupts the flow of commerce). Indeed the "flow of commerce" ends when these raw materials or goods are "transformed in a material way." See IA Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 267b, at 324 (2d ed. 2000).

CAPR argues that the imported raw sugar was transformed in such a material way when it underwent refining into refined sugar. CAPR states that the raw sugar was "extensively processed within Puerto Rico, resulting in an alteration of the nature of the product" and that the refinement process "extracts molasses and other non-sugar minerals [from] the raw sugar."

We agree that the refinement of [**18] raw sugar into refined sugar has transformed this product so that it cannot be fairly said to continue to be in the flow of commerce. This case is distinguishable from cases where courts have found the flow of commerce was not interrupted. This is not a case in which the same product was temporarily stored in the state of ultimate sale. See, e.g., Standard Oil Co., 340 U.S. at 237-38 (temporary storage of gasoline a secondary line violation which requires, among other things, the discriminating seller to sell to one buyer (the favored buyer) at a lower price than to another buyer (the disfavored buyer). The two transactions to be compared, as this court's opinion in Coastal Fuels explained, are "either the sale to the favored buyer or the sale to the buyer allegedly discriminated against." Coastal Fuels, 79 F.3d at 189. In either a primary line violation or a secondary line violation, it is the sales by the defendant which are the focus.

---

<sup>7</sup> CAPR suggests in its reply brief that the one-time importation of raw sugar cannot satisfy the "in commerce" requirement of § 2(a) because CAPR did not regularly import products from across state lines and there was not a "constant flow" of raw sugar into Puerto Rico. We express no view on the validity of this argument.

does not deprive the gasoline of its interstate characteristic). Nor is it a case in which the resulting sold product was essentially the same as the imported product. See, e.g., Dean Milk Co. v. FTC, 395 F.2d 696, 715 \(7th Cir. 1968\); Foremost Dairies, Inc. v. FTC, 348 F.2d 674, 678 \(5th Cir. 1965\) (both holding that the processing of milk imported from out of state before local resale is not enough to remove the milk from the flow of commerce).

Despite stating that the refinement of sugar involves "negligible processing" and that the processes involved in this case are similar to those involved in the processing of milk as in the examples given above, the plaintiff does not seriously dispute CAPR's claim [**19] as to the nature of the refinement process.<sup>8</sup> Accordingly Able has not met its burden of showing that the imported raw sugar remained in the flow of commerce. This transaction does not satisfy the "in commerce" requirement.

2. CAPR's Sale to Tropical for Export

In contrast with Able's previous argument concerned with backward interstate movement of materials, Able makes a forward flow argument as its final argument. See IA Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 267b, at 324 (2d ed. 2000). Whether CAPR's sale of sugar to Tropical, knowing that Tropical planned to export the sugar, can satisfy the "in commerce" requirement [**20] is a more complex question.

[*64] From the 2002 sales summary, it appears that CAPR apparently made six sales of an indeterminate number of two pound bags of refined sugar and four sales of five pound bags of refined sugar to Tropical in 2002. Two of those sales were in the $ 43 to $ 46 range per hundredweight, and the rest were in the $ 30 range. A notation next to the sales to Tropical suggests that those sales received a special discount because Tropical intended to export the sugar, presumably outside of Puerto Rico. These sales were likely discounted because CAPR does not have to pay an excise tax on such sales, as explained by Able's counsel.<sup>9</sup>

[**21] We take Able's argument to be a permutation of the "flow of commerce" theory: the initial sale between CAPR and Able took place intrastate, but the goods remained in the "flow of commerce" because they were to be exported by Tropical and CAPR's knowledge of that puts the goods into the flow of commerce. The interstate activity of the buyer is therefore attributed back to CAPR, the intrastate seller, under the theory.

This forward flow theory may be arguable on certain facts. Cases under statutes based on the full scope of Congress' constitutional commerce power over certain types of intrastate transactions have suggested "so far as the [intrastate] sales are for shipment to other States or to foreign countries, it is idle to contend that they are not sales in interstate or foreign commerce and subject to congressional regulation." Curran v. Wallace, 306 U.S. 1, 10, 83 L. Ed. 441, 59 S. Ct. 379 \(1939\) (challenging the Tobacco Inspection Act of 1935); see also United States v. Rock Royal Co-Op., 307 U.S. 533, 568-69, 83 L. Ed. 1446, 59 S. Ct. 993 \(1939\) (challenging the Secretary's regulation of the handling of milk in the New York metropolitan area under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 [**22]). But of course, the scope of the "in commerce" clause of the Robinson-Patman Act is less than the constitutional reach.

While Gulf Oil held that a mere nexus to interstate commerce was insufficient, it did not decide whether some intermediate definitions of "in commerce" to capture the "practical consequences" of a discriminatory sale on national markets might be within Congressional intent. Gulf Oil, 419 U.S. at 199. Indeed the Court specifically noted the absence of two claims: that the defendant made interstate sales or was "otherwise directly involved in national markets" or that the "local market . . . is an integral part of the interstate market in other component commodities or products." Id. at 195-96.

<sup>8</sup> The district court did not make a specific finding as to whether the refinement process interrupted the flow of commerce. In response to CAPR's argument that it did, the district court stated, "even if the CAPR's refined sugar is not considered to be in the flow of commerce, Able Sales' refined sugar, which does not undergo any processing, is undeniably within the flow of commerce."

<sup>9</sup> We do not understand Able to say it could not buy from CAPR at the same price Tropical did for sugar, whether intended for export or not. Nor does Able say that it and Tropical compete with each other to export sugar from Puerto Rico. We understand Able's argument to be based on an overall theory of predatory pricing, that CAPR artificially lowered its price in order to drive Able, its competitor in the distribution of sugar, out of business.

But the record before us does not establish and indeed the plaintiff does not argue that either of those situations apply. Ultimately, Able fails to prove that the "flow of commerce" test is satisfied. The only evidence that Able points to concerning the sale from CAPR to Tropical is a sales summary of the sale to Tropical which has the notation, "special price for exportation of sugar, plus taxes," and [**23] a statement made by Able's trial counsel to the district court that "among the sales that [CAPR] was able to execute during that year, one of their clients, Tropical Distributors, was sold sugar at a special price because he was going to export sugar."

[*65] For several reasons this evidence is insufficient to prove that the sale was "in commerce." HN6 The flow of commerce is thought to end when the goods "are stored in a [seller's] warehouse or storage facility for general inventory purposes," subject to an exception for when the goods are purchased and then stored in the seller's warehouse in response to a particular customer's needs. See Zoslaw v. MCA Distributing Corp., 693 F.2d 870, 878 (9th Cir. 1982). That exception does not apply here. There is no evidence that CAPR's sale to Tropical was anything other than final, with Tropical taking possession of the sugar. Indeed, there is no evidence whether Tropical actually ever exported the sugar. But what Tropical, an independent company, intended to do with the sugar, in these circumstances, is not germane to the "in commerce" inquiry.

While there is evidence of negotiation over price and that CAPR expected that Tropical [**24] would export the sugar, there is no evidence that CAPR exercised any control of the management, business, or distribution decisions of Tropical. HN7 In cases where the "flow of commerce" doctrine applied, the same entity has engaged in both the intrastate and interstate transaction. See, e.g., Standard Oil, 340 U.S. at 237 (intrastate sale was in the flow of commerce; both the intrastate and interstate transactions were conducted by the same entity); Foremost Dairies, 348 F.2d at 676-77 (same). And courts have held that to the extent that the purchasers are independent distributors in their pricing and marketing decisions, the "flow of commerce" is interrupted by the sale of the product. See Zoslaw, 693 F.2d at 880; cf., Acme Refrigeration of Baton Rouge, Inc. v. Whirlpool Corp., 785 F.2d 1240, 1243-44 (5th Cir. 1986) (a subsidiary's sales could not be imputed to its parent company if the parent company did not "control" the subsidiary).

HN8 In a situation where a wholly independent buyer purchases from the defendant seller, and there is no evidence of collusion or control between the seller and the independent [**25] buyer,<sup>10</sup> the flow of commerce has ended and the intrastate seller cannot be held to have been made "in commerce" as a result of the subsequent interstate sale made by the independent buyer.

III.

We hold that the district court did not have subject matter jurisdiction over this suit as CAPR's allegedly discriminatory sales were not "in commerce." We reverse the decision of the district court, set aside the award of damages against CAPR, and remand with instructions to dismiss the case for lack of jurisdiction. Costs are awarded to CAPR.

---

End of Document

<sup>10</sup> Areeda also warns against reliance on a party's intentions, as opposed to actions, except to cover the situations of "evasions calculated to keep illegal activities entirely intrastate while employing the channels of interstate commerce." IA Areeda & Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 267 b, at 324-327 (2d ed. 2000).

In re Polyester Staple Antitrust Litig.

United States District Court for the Western District of North Carolina, Charlotte Division

May 6, 2005, Decided; May 9, 2005, Filed

MDL DOCKET NO: 3:03CV1516 ALL CASES

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47179 *; 2005 WL 6457181

IN RE POLYESTER STAPLE ANTITRUST LITIGATION

Subsequent History: Motion granted by, in part, Motion denied by, in part, Sanctions allowed by, in part, Motion granted by In re Polyester Staple Antitrust Litig., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40565 \(W.D.N.C., Sept. 7, 2005\)

Prior History: In re Polyester Staple Antitrust Litig., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32281 \(W.D.N.C., Feb. 5, 2004\)

Core Terms

---

purchasers, discovery, documents, yarn, indirect, conspiracy, poly-cotton, antitrust, polyester, staple, downstream, damages, manufactured, prices, customers, open-end, cotton

Counsel: [*1] For in re: Polyester Staple Antitrust Litigation, In Re: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC.

For Carolina Mills, Incorporated, Plaintiff: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; George Franklin Sanderson, III, Ellis & Winters, LLP, Raleigh, NC.

For American Fiber and Finishing Inc., Wellington Leisure Products, Inc., Plaintiffs: G. Patrick Watson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Powell Goldstein LLP, Atlanta, GA.

For Avondale Mills, Inc., Plaintiff: Chris L. Yeilding, Will Hill Tankersley, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEYS, Balch & Bigham, LLP, Birmingham, AL; David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY.

For Carolina Mills Inc., Plaintiff: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Matthew W. Sawchak, LEAD ATTORNEY, Ellis & Winters, LLP, Raleigh, NC.

For CMI Industries, Inc., Hampton Capital Partners, LLC, Mount Vernon [*2] Mills Inc., Plaintiffs: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY.

For Dan River Inc., National Textiles, LLC, Plaintiffs: Jeffrey S. Cashdan, LEAD ATTORNEY, King & Spalding, LLP, Atlanta, GA.

For Russell Corporation, Plaintiff: Blake Warren Thomas, Jennifer Fisher Revelle, Mark William Merritt, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Robinson, Bradshaw & Hinson, P. A., Charlotte, NC; David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Jeffrey S. Cashdan, LEAD ATTORNEY, King & Spalding, LLP, Atlanta, GA.

For Parkdale Mills Inc., Parkdale America LLC, Plaintiffs: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Stephen P. Murphy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reed Smith LLP, Washington, DC.

For Magnolia Manufacturing Co. Inc., Plaintiff: Stephen P. Murphy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reed Smith LLP, Washington, DC.

For WestPoint Stevens Inc., Plaintiff: Joseph B. Mays, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Bradley, Arant, Rose & White, LLP, Birmingham, AL.

For Delta Clothing Inc., Plaintiff: James [*3] F. Wyatt, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, Wyatt & Blake, LLP, Charlotte, NC.

For Class Plaintiffs, Plaintiff: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Gregory Monroe Martin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Jones, Martin, Parris & Tessener, Raleigh, NC; Larry Stephen McDevitt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Van Winkle, Buck, Wall, Starnes and Davis, P. A., Asheville, NC; Megan E. Jones, Michael D. Hausfeld, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Cohen, Millstein, Hausfeld & Toll, PLLC, Washington, DC; Paul Frederick Bennett, LEAD ATTORNEY, Gold Bennett Cera & Sidener LLP, San Francisco, CA; Samuel D. Heins, LEAD ATTORNEY, Heins, Mills & Olson, P.L.C., Minneapolis, MN; Steven A. Asher, LEAD ATTORNEY, Weinstein Kitchenoff & Asher, LLC, Philadelphia, PA.

For Non-Class Plaintiffs, Plaintiff: Chris L. Yeilding, LEAD ATTORNEY, Balch & Bigham, LLP, Birmingham, AL; David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Everett J. Bowman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robinson, Bradshaw & Hinson, P. A., Charlotte, NC; G. Patrick Watson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Powell Goldstein LLP, Atlanta, GA; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Tushar Vipin Chikhliker, Nexsen, Pruet, Jacobs [*4] & Pollard, LLC, Columbia, SC.

For Doran Mills, Plaintiff: Larry Stephen McDevitt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Van Winkle, Buck, Wall, Starnes and Davis, P. A., Asheville, NC.

For SHAW INDUSTRIES GROUP, INC., Plaintiff: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; G. Patrick Watson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Powell Goldstein LLP, Atlanta, GA; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY.

For Springs Industries, Inc., Springs Global US, Inc., Fruit of the Loom, Plaintiffs: Blake Warren Thomas, Jennifer Fisher Revelle, Mark William Merritt, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Robinson, Bradshaw & Hinson, P. A., Charlotte, NC; David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY.

For Coats American, Inc., Burlington Industries, LLC, Galey & Lord Industries, LLC, Greenwood Mills, Inc., Henderson-Harriet Welfare Association, Inc., Inman Mills, Johnston Industries, Inc., Malloy & Company, Mayfair Mills, Inc., Pharr Yarns, LLC, Swift Textiles, LLC, Plaintiffs: David C. Eddy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nexsen Pruet Adams Kleemeier, LLC, Columbia, SC.

For Alpek S.A. De [*5] C.V., Defendant: Scott Martin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Weil Gotshal & Manges LLP, New York, NY.

For DuPont E. I. De Nemours & Co., DAK Americas LLC, DAK Fibers, LLC, Defendants: Kent A. Gardiner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Crowell & Moring, LLP, Washington, DC; R. Bruce Holcomb, LEAD ATTORNEY, Dickstein Shapiro Morin & Oshinsky, Washington, DC; Robert B. Cordle, LEAD ATTORNEY, Mayer Brown LLP, Charlotte, NC.

For John R. Hobson, Defendant: Caroline A. Judge, LEAD ATTORNEY, Zuckerman, Spaeder, LLP, Washington, DC.

For Hoechst Celanese Corporation, Defendant: Carl N. Patterson, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Smith Anderson, Raleigh, NC; Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Janice L Kopec, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP, Washington, DC; Michael D. Blechman, Robert B. Bernstein, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Hoechst Aktiengesellschaft, Celanese A.G., Defendants: Andrew Davin Stillufsen, Michael D. Blechman, Robert B. Bernstein, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; Carl N. Patterson, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Smith Anderson, Raleigh, NC; Constantine Z. Pamphilis, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman LLP, Houston, TX; Harold [*6] G. Levison, Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Janice L Kopec, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP, Washington, DC.

For CNA Holdings, Inc., Celanese Amer Corp, Defendants: Andrew Davin Stillufsen, Michael D. Blechman, Robert B. Bernstein, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; Carl N. Patterson, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Smith Anderson, Raleigh, NC; Constantine Z. Pamphilis, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman LLP, Houston, TX; David J. Abrams, Michael A. Hanin, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, New York, NY; Harold G. Levison, Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Janice L Kopec, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP, Washington, DC; Paul J. Zoeller, Todd H. Colvard, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, Houston, TX.

For Nan Ya Plastics Corporation, David Lin, Robert Bradley Dutton, Defendants: Alan M. Unger, LEAD ATTORNEY, Sidley Austin LLP, New York, NY.

For Troy F. Stanley, Sr., Defendant: Stephen T Smith, LEAD ATTORNEY, McMillan, Smith & Plyler, Raleigh, NC.

For Frank Trammell, Defendant: David William Long, LEAD ATTORNEY, [*7] Poyner & Spruill, Raleigh, NC.

For Wellman Inc., Defendant, Movant: Jon R Fetterolf, LEAD ATTORNEY, Williams & Connolly, LLP, Washington, DC.

For David Whitley, Defendant: Robert F. Muse, LEAD ATTORNEY, Stein, Mitchell & Mezines, Washington, DC.

For Arteva Specialities, S.a.R.L., Defendant: Catherine E. Palmer, Kenneth Conboy, Neel P. Parekh, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Latham & Watkins, LLP, New York, NY; Charles J. Butler, Michael G. Egge, Steven H. Schulman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Latham & Watkins LLP, Washington, DC; Daniel M. Wall, LEAD ATTORNEY, Latham & Watkins, LLP, San Francisco, CA; Edward B. Davis, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bell, Davis & Pitt PA, Charlotte, NC; Jim D. Cooley, LEAD ATTORNEY, Womble, Carlyle, Sandridge & Rice, Charlotte, NC; William K. Davis, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bell, Davis & Pitt, P.A., Winston-Salem, NC.

For Grover Smith, Defendant: Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Stephen W. Petersen, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bradley M. Risinger, Mark A. Finkelstein, Smith Moore LLP, Raleigh, NC; Lisa Frye Garrison, Smith Moore LLP, Greensboro, NC.

For INVISTA S.a r.l., LLC, Defendant: Amanda P. Reeves, Marguerite M. Sullivan, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Latham & Watkins LLP, Washington, [*8] DC.

For Hoechst AG, Defendant: Hector Torres, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kasowitz, Benson, Torres & Friedman, LLP, New York, NY; Janice L Kopec, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP, Washington, DC.

For David Whitley, Jim Casey, Movants: Jon R Fetterolf, LEAD ATTORNEY, Williams & Connolly, LLP, Washington, DC.

For Tom Nixon, Movant: Jeffrey A. Long, Jeffrey A. Long, P.A., Charlotte, NC.

For Enoch Walter Goldman, Material Witness: Patrick Lea Robson, Hunton & Williams LLP, Charlotte, NC.

For Kaye Scholer, LLP, Kaye Scholer LLP, Intervenor: Charles Davant, IV, Williams & Connolly LLP, Washington, DC.

Judges: Richard L. Voorhees, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Richard L. Voorhees

Opinion

---

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO COMPEL PARKDALE AND AVONDALE TO PRODUCE DOCUMENTS RELATED TO ALLEGED POLYESTER-COTTON YARN PRICE-FIXING CONSPIRACY

THIS MATTER comes before the Court on Motion To Compel Plaintiffs Parkdale America, LLC and Parkdale Mills, Inc. ("Parkdale") and Plaintiff Avondale Mills, Inc. ("Avondale") to produce discovery, filed by Defendants Nan Ya Plastics Corporation, America ("Nan Ya America"), Wellman, Inc. ("Wellman"), and Arteva Specialties S.a'.r.l. d/b/a/ KoSa, now named INVISTA [*9] S.a'.r.l.; Arteva Services, S.a'.r.l.; and Koch Industries, Inc. ("KoSa").<sup>1</sup> (Documents # 222, # 223) Plaintiffs Parkdale and Avondale have both responded to Defendants' motion, Defendants submitted reply briefs, and all of the parties have now submitted supplemental filings and, in some cases, related correspondence. (Documents ## 226-230; # 240, # 241, # 245) On January 6, 2005, the United States ("Government") also filed an amicus brief under seal. (Documents # 224, # 225)

On January 27th and 28th of 2005, Plaintiffs Parkdale and Avondale filed Motions To Strike the Declaration of Richard T. Rapp, which was filed as an attachment to KoSa's reply brief. (3:03CV1516 / Documents # 231, # 232, # 234 and # 238; 3:03CV296 / Document # 31) KoSa opposes Plaintiffs' motions.<sup>2</sup>

I. Relevant Background

These [*10] cases arise out of allegations by individual and class plaintiffs that beginning as early as 1995, and continuing at least through 2001, Defendants and their alleged co-conspirators agreed, combined and conspired with each other to fix, raise, maintain and / or stabilize the price of polyester staple and to allocate markets and / or customers for the sale of polyester staple in the United States.<sup>3</sup> (Consol. Am. Compl. at 2.) Plaintiffs collectively allege that as a result of Defendants' unlawful conduct and conspiracy, Plaintiffs paid artificially inflated prices for polyester staple fiber ("PSF"). Plaintiffs primarily assert that Defendants violated Sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 15 and 26, and Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1.

Some of the Plaintiffs in this litigation allegedly made direct purchases of PSF from the Defendants while other Plaintiffs made indirect purchases of PSF.<sup>4</sup> In some instances, Plaintiffs allege that they made both direct and indirect purchases. In fact, Avondale and Parkdale are considered both direct and [*11] indirect purchasers of PSF.<sup>5</sup> (Avondale's Second Am. Compl., P3) (Parkdale's Compl., P3, 8, 55, 63) There is yet another category of Plaintiffs in this case that claim to be indirect purchasers of PSF as a result of having purchased yarn containing PSF. Of this group, Plaintiff Springs Industries expressly alleges it purchased yarn containing PSF directly from Parkdale.<sup>6</sup> (Defendants' Exh. D / Springs Industries' Compl., P8) In addition to their prayers for relief as direct purchasers,

---

<sup>1</sup> The Nan Ya Defendants (Nan Ya Taiwan, Nan Ya America and Robert Bradley Dutton) recently settled claims against them with all Non-Class Plaintiffs, including Parkdale and Avondale. Although Nan Ya America has not notified the Court that it no longer seeks to compel production from Parkdale and / or Avondale, presumably this issue is moot as to these parties.

<sup>2</sup> Wellman does not rely on the Rapp Declaration.

<sup>3</sup> Polyester staple is an essential raw material for many kinds of textiles and is also used to make a wide range of products.

<sup>4</sup> An indirect purchase of PSF may occur if Plaintiff purchased PSF from a third-party (not a Defendant in this action) or if Plaintiff purchased a product containing PSF rather than the raw material.

<sup>5</sup> Avondale and Parkdale seek monetary damages as indirect purchasers under state law, N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-1.1. (Avondale's Second Am. Compl., PP3,80; Parkdale Compl., PP63,64)

<sup>6</sup> Plaintiff National Textiles allegedly made indirect purchases of PSF "in finished yarn products manufactured by certain defendants" and "purchased [*12] yarn that incorporated PSF manufactured by one or more defendants." (Defendants' Exh. E / National Textiles' Compl., PP3, 8,29) WestPoint Stevens' Complaint alleges it "purchased products containing PSF from third parties during the Conspiracy period." (Defendants' Exh. F / West Point Stevens' First Am. Compl., P3). Russell alleges it "purchased yarn that contained PSF manufactured and sold by defendants. . ." (Defendants' Exh. G / Russell's Compl., PP3, 8, 29). Dan River "purchased PSF in finished yarn products and fabric containing PSF manufactured by certain defendants . . ." (Unidentified Defendants' Exh. / Dan River's Compl., PP3,8,29).

many of these individual or non-class PSF Indirect Purchaser Plaintiffs (also direct purchasers of poly-cotton yarn) also seek redress, including monetary damages, pursuant to state law.<sup>7</sup>

In November 2004, Defendants first requested discovery from Plaintiffs Parkdale and Avondale related to an investigation into an alleged conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws in the spun yarn industry. Plaintiffs objected to Defendants' request. On February 11, 2004, Unifi, Inc., which along with Parkdale Mills, Inc., owns Parkdale America, LLC, issued a press release stating that "Parkdale participated in activities with competitors in the [*13] markets for open-end and air-jet cotton and polycotton yarns used in the manufacture of hosiery and other garments that may have resulted in violations of U.S. antitrust laws," and that Parkdale "voluntarily disclosed the activities to the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division . . . and that DOJ has launched an investigation of the activities. . ." (Defendants' Exhibit B / Press Release, Unifi, Inc., Equity Affiliate Informs Unifi of Pending Investigation (Feb. 11, 2004)). The record does not reflect whether the DOJ's leniency or amnesty program has come into play relative to any potential criminal prosecution of Parkdale.<sup>8</sup>

According to KoSa, Avondale has received a subpoena from the Department of Justice in connection with the poly-cotton yarn ("PCY") investigation and is an "obvious [*14] focus" given its status as one of the largest open-end spun yarn spinners in North America. (2/16/05 Letter from Edward B. Davis).

In April 2004, class action suits were commenced against Parkdale and Avondale, among others, alleging violations of the antitrust laws, namely, conspiring to fix, raise, maintain or stabilize prices for open-end and air-jet cotton and polycotton yarns.<sup>9</sup> (Defendants' Exhibit C) These civil actions are now consolidated in the Middle District of North Carolina before The Honorable James Beaty, Jr., pursuant to the order of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation.<sup>10</sup> (See MDL 1622 In Re Cotton Yarn Antitrust Litigation). The PCY conspiracy allegedly existed from approximately February 12, 2000 to April 2004. Thus, if proven, the PSF and PCY conspiracies overlapped from approximately February 12, 2000 to April 2001. Defendants assert that some of the larger manufacturer Plaintiffs in this case have claims against Parkdale and Avondale in the PCY litigation that overlap with their claims for damages in this PSF litigation. (Defendants' Exh. D)

In a previous Order, dated February 15, 2004, this Court ruled in favor of Plaintiffs in denying Defendants' request to obtain from Plaintiffs "downstream discovery" (or "downstream data"). Downstream discovery consists primarily of Plaintiffs' production costs and profit data for each end-use or product that was manufactured incorporating polyester staple. This Court noted that "Defendants do not purport to seek the information in order to oppose Plaintiffs' calculation of damages." (2/15/04 Order at 5, n.4) The Court also recognized that downstream data may be relevant as to damages claims made by Indirect Purchasers, but found Defendants' request unduly burdensome.<sup>11</sup> (Id. at 6.)

---

<sup>7</sup> The Indirect Purchaser Class does not seek monetary damages. (Delta Clothing's Am. Compl., 3:02CV503-V)

<sup>8</sup> At least one individual, a former vice president of sales for the now defunct North Carolina-based yarn spinner company Harriet & Henderson Yarns, Inc., has agreed to enter a guilty plea in the Eastern District of North Carolina. This individual admitted participation in the alleged conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws within the spun yarn industry. (See Press Release, DOJ, (Feb. 10, 2005)).

<sup>9</sup> Polyester staple can be either spun by itself into yarn or blended with cotton and spun into yarn.

<sup>10</sup> In the polyester [*15] cotton yarn ("PCY") civil litigation, the Direct Purchaser Class Plaintiffs define yarn as follows:

"Yarn" means open-end, air jet cotton and / or poly-cotton yarn, which is textured yarn utilized in connection with the manufacture of home furnishings, apparel and industrial fabrics, automotive, upholstery, hosiery, and sewing thread, and is produced through the yarn spinning process."

(Defendants' Exhibit C, P5 at 2.)

<sup>11</sup> The undersigned did not reach the issue regarding Indirect Purchasers' ability to recover [*16] monetary damages under North Carolina law. (Id. at 6, n.6)

II. FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)

Rule 26(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that, "[p]arties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the claim or defense of any party. . ." FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(1). "Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." Id. However, discovery may be limited by the Court if it finds that, "the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues." FED. R. CIV. P. 26(b)(2)(iii).

III. Analysis

A. Plaintiffs' Motions To Strike Affidavit Of Richard T. Rapp

Regarding Plaintiffs' motions to strike, the Court will deny Parkdale's and Avondale's motions. Rule 6(d) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires that "[w]hen a motion is supported by affidavit, the affidavit shall be served with the motion." FED R. CIV. P. 6(d)(emphasis [*17] added). However, Rule 6(d) does not preclude the filing of an affidavit in support of a reply. McGinnis v. Southeast Anesthesia Associates, P.A., 161 F.R.D. 41 (W.D.N.C.1995)(denying motion to strike where affidavit supported reply and striking affidavit would conflict with Rule 6(d)'s ultimate objective of resolving the motion on its merits). Notwithstanding KoSa's alleged violation of any procedural rules, namely, FED R. CIV. P. 6(d) and L.R. 7.1(B), Plaintiffs cannot demonstrate any prejudice sustained as a result of the declaration. Plaintiffs had an opportunity, via the instant motion to strike, to address their concerns. Moreover, to grant Plaintiffs' motion would be inconsistent with federal policy favoring disposition based upon the merits of the underlying issue.

B. Defendants' Motion To Compel Production Of Documents

Defendants' motion seeks production of materials relating to an investigation by the United States Department of Justice ("DOJ") into Parkdale's and Avondale's alleged involvement in a PCY price-fixing conspiracy.<sup>12</sup> Specifically, Defendants propounded the following discovery request to Parkdale and Avondale:

Request for Production No. 1: All documents relating [*18] to any inquiry or investigation by the United States Department of Justice, any other governmental agency, federal or state, or any grand jury, relating to the pricing, distribution, purchase, or sale of open-end and / or jet cotton and / or poly-cotton yarn, or any other product manufactured by you an input of which includes polyester staple, including, but not limited to, all documents made available by you to any of these agencies, all documents you produced in response to any subpoena, informal request or otherwise, and all documents relating to any communication between you and any of these agencies.

(Defendants' Exhibit A at 4.) Thus, the nature of Defendants' request is essentially the same as the earlier request to produce downstream discovery in that PCY is an "end-use" of PSF.<sup>13</sup> The Court now addresses each of Defendants' legal arguments.

---

<sup>12</sup> The United States opposes Defendants' motion to compel with respect to the documents disclosed in connection with its ongoing criminal investigation being conducted by the Antitrust Division of the United States Justice Department within the Eastern District of North Carolina. According to the Government, compelling production of documents [*19] as requested within Defendants' motion would "compromise the integrity and secrecy of the grand jury investigation." (Gvmt.'s Amicus Brief, at 1.)

<sup>13</sup> In an attempt to distinguish PCY from any other end-use, Defendants suggest that, for purposes of textile applications, polyester cotton yarn is an "alternative" for polyester staple. Apparently, some of the larger textile manufacturers are capable of

Defendants first contend that the information is relevant to rebut any inference that communication amongst competitors necessarily means that the parties are engaging in an illegal conspiracy. [*20] Defendants do not need to obtain documents exchanged between Parkdale and Avondale in order to establish this point as the law unequivocally requires more than "mere contacts and communications." Cooper v. Forsyth County Hosp. Auth., Inc., 789 F.2d 278, 281 \(4th Cir.1986\).

Next, to the extent Defendants characterize this request for production as necessary to their "defense" to Plaintiffs' Sherman Act claims, the Court rejects Defendants' argument. In a per se price fixing case under the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, once liability is proven, there is no affirmative defense. Hanover Shoe v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481, 489, 88 S. Ct. 2224, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1231 \(1968\) (direct injury or impact may be presumed in antitrust cases involving a conspiracy to fix prices or allocate customers); Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 724-25, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 \(1977\).

Defendants further contend that the information sought is relevant to impact and damages issues. To the extent Defendants' argument relates to direct purchasers, the Court need not address this aspect of Defendants' motion because the Court's February 5, 2004 ruling adequately dealt with this contention. Notably, Defendant KoSa's affiant qualifies one of his [*21] conclusions regarding the consequences of the poly-cotton yarn conspiracy on Direct Purchasers by first stating, "If the law permits it, the calculation of damages for these direct customers would have to account not only for overcharges on polyester staple but also for the potential benefits these same customers derived from the coordinated price increases in polyester-cotton yarn." (Rapp Affidavit, at 6.) The law does not permit a defendant to assert a "pass-on" defense as Rapp suggests. Hanover Shoe, 392 U.S. at 489, 494 (as a general rule, a direct purchaser is injured within the meaning of Section 4 of the Clayton Act by the full amount of the overcharge paid by it notwithstanding any passing-on of the illegal overcharge to its own customers or indirect purchasers); Illinois Brick Co., 431 U.S. at 745-46 (direct purchasers are injured and able to recover the full extent of the overcharge paid by them). The information sought has no relevance to the Direct Purchaser claims.

Defendants likewise contend that the documents they seek relate directly to the indirect purchaser claims brought by a number of Non-Class Plaintiffs. Indeed, this Court previously found that PSF end-uses (PSF [*22] products sold "downstream") only become relevant if indirect purchasers are allowed to seek monetary damages under state law. For purposes of resolving the instant motion, the Court presumes this to be the case.<sup>14</sup>

Having defined the potential relevance of the information sought as limited to Indirect Purchasers' damages claims, the Court now considers whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit.

---

purchasing polyester staple and spinning their own yarn while some textile manufacturers out-source all of their yarn-spinning. (Defendant's Brief, at 3, 6.) Defendants contend that Springs and others were able to avoid the alleged PSF price increases by shifting their purchases to PCY. (Suppl. Mem. at 2.) Even so, the ability to "shift" or reduce PSF purchases to another product would merely reduce the amount of damages that particular PSF purchaser was entitled to recover as the result of any alleged overcharge for actual purchases. (2/15/04 Order, at 5.) The Court does not find this argument persuasive.

<sup>14</sup> Defendants apparently concede that indirect purchasers are entitled to monetary damages under the laws of certain states. Whether indirect purchasers are entitled to monetary damages for antitrust violations in North Carolina, and the extent of damages that may be recoverable by indirect purchasers, are issues that have not been fully briefed by the parties. The current state of North Carolina law is unclear. Compare Hyde v. Abbott Laboratories, Inc., 123 N.C.App. 572, 473 S.E.2d 680 \(1996\); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-16; Adams v. Aventis, S.A., 2003 NCBC 7, 2003 WL 22015384 \(N.C. Super. 2003\); and Crouch v. Crompton Corp., 2004 NCBC 7, 2004 WL 2414027, \*12 \(N.C. Super. 2004\) ("There is no definitive decision from the North Carolina Supreme Court ruling upon the issue of indirect purchaser standing in North Carolina, nor is there a clear legislative history.")

In some of the states that are deemed Illinois Brick "repeater" states, indirect purchasers are allowed to recover the full extent [*23] of the illegal overcharge just as a direct purchaser would. Report of the Indirect Purchaser Task Force: Section of Antitrust Law American Bar Association, 63 ANTITRUST L.J. 993 (Spring 1995). If that were the case in each of the states relevant here, the Court's analysis would be the same for both indirect and direct purchasers. In Hyde, however, the North Carolina Court of Appeals contemplated that indirect purchaser plaintiffs would be tasked with paring out the amount of illegal overcharge that was passed on to indirect purchasers. Hyde, 123 N.C.App. at 584; Crouch, 2004 NCBC 7, 2004 WL 2414027.

Defendants' current request is more discrete in that Defendants seek information from only two of the Plaintiffs - Parkdale and Avondale. However, Defendants' request is also overly broad to the extent that it encompasses information regarding products that do not contain any PSF. As propounded, Defendants' request may strain Parkdale's and Avondale's resources. Defendants seek [*24] data regarding "any other product manufactured by you an input of which includes polyester staple." Discovery related to the passing on of any added costs from the alleged PCY conspiracy could very well be expensive and inefficient.

The Court does not have sufficient information at this time to evaluate whether the amount in controversy regarding the indirect purchaser claims at issue weighs in favor or against Defendants' request. The fact that the indirect purchaser claims are remote - twice removed from the alleged PSF conspiracy that is the subject of this litigation - leads the undersigned to believe the damages at issue may ultimately be relatively inconsequential.

In terms of the importance of the issues at stake, and the importance of the proposed discovery in resolving these issues, the Court recognizes that Defendants are entitled to challenge or rebut the amount of damages sought by indirect purchasers. As a practical matter, this presents an almost insurmountable obstacle in terms of determining what percentage of illegal pass-on is attributable to the respective alleged conspiracies. Crouch, 2004 NCBC 7, 2004 WL 2414027, \*18 ("The cost of obtaining information relevant to pass through [*25] of added costs from antitrust violations and investigating the pricing decisions made in the distribution chain is high.") For these reasons, the likely benefit of the proposed discovery is negligible at best.

Finally, it is problematic that Defendants seek to investigate issues that are not squarely before this Court but rather are the subject of proceedings before the Middle District of North Carolina. The Court is hesitant to authorize even circumscribed discovery beyond the PSF market. The Indirect Purchaser Plaintiffs have already produced some downstream discovery. (2/15/04 Order, at 6.) Defendants also assert that Avondale has agreed to supplement its production with respect to product substitutability. Nonetheless, Wellman argues that PCY sellers such as Parkdale and Avondale possess relevant information regarding the cause of any illegal pass-on, namely, involvement in an alleged poly-cotton yarn price-fixing conspiracy, that could not have been produced by PCY purchasers. This point is well taken. Nonetheless, the undersigned does not intend to conduct a "mini-trial" on the issues presented in the pending PCY litigation. For the reasons stated herein,

IT [*26] IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT Defendants' Motion To Compel is hereby GRANTED in part and DENIED in part:

- 1) Defendants' Motion To Compel is GRANTED to the extent Defendants seek documents relating to the pricing, distribution, purchase, or sale of poly-cotton yarn. In other words, Defendants will be allowed to discover information related to Avondale's and Parkdale's sales of PCY to existing Indirect Purchaser Plaintiffs in 3:03CV1516;
- 2) Defendants' Motion To Compel is hereby DENIED in all other respects, including Defendants request for Plaintiffs Parkdale and Avondale to produce documents related to open-end or air-jet cotton yarn, documents relating to communications between Parkdale and Avondale and "any other product manufactured by you an input of which includes polyester staple, including, but not limited to, all documents made available by you to any of these agencies, all documents you produced in response to any subpoena, information request or otherwise, and all documents relating to any communication between you and any of these agencies"; and
- 3) Plaintiffs' Motion To Strike is DENIED.

Signed: May 6, 2005

/s/ Richard L. Voorhees

Richard L. Voorhees

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

JES Props., Inc. v. USA Equestrian, Inc.

United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, Tampa Division

May 9, 2005, Decided ; May 9, 2005, Filed

Case No. 8:02-cv-1585-T-24MAP

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43122 *; 2005 WL 1126665

JES PROPERTIES, INC. d/b/a CYPRESS TRAILS FARM, a Florida Corporation, and MICHAEL W. GALLAGHER, Plaintiffs, -vs- USA EQUESTRIAN, INC. (formerly the American Horse Show Association), et al., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Costs and fees proceeding at, Motions ruled upon by JES Props., Inc. v. USA Equestrian, Inc., 432 F. Supp. 2d 1283, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32581 \(M.D. Fla., 2006\)

Affirmed by JES Props. v. USA Equestrian, Inc., 458 F.3d 1224, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 19429 \(11th Cir. Fla., Aug. 2, 2006\)

Prior History: JES Props., Inc. v. USA Equestrian, Inc., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20633 \(M.D. Fla., Oct. 10, 2003\)

Core Terms

---

Mileage, Promoter, relevant market, sport, competitions, horse show, equestrian, antitrust, monopolization, Defendants', amateur sports, Sherman Act, anti trust law, monopoly, anticompetitive, waivers, jumper, amended complaint, requests, hunter, Federation, conspiracy, horses, practices, athletes, summary judgment motion, amateur, rule of reason, summary judgment, governing body

Counsel: [*1] For JES Properties, Inc., a Florida corporation doing business as Cypress Trails Farm, Michael W. Gallagher, Plaintiff Anna-Katrina S. Christakis, Jason B. Hirsh, John L. Ropiequet, Michael R. Tuoff, Robert D. Butters, Arnstein & Lehr LLP, Chicago, IL; Robin S. Trupp, Arnstein & Lehr LLP, Tampa, FL.

For Dave Burton, also known as Dave Burton, Sr., also known as Dave E. Burton, also known as Dave E. Burton, Sr., Burton & Sons, Inc., Littlewood Fences, Inc., David Burton, also known as David Burton, Jr., also known as David E. Burton, also known as David E. Burton, Jr., Defendants: Charlotte D. Gage, Stanley Howard Eleff, Trenam Kemker, Tampa, FL US.

For Bob Bell, Classic Co., Ltd., Defendants: William Charles Hughes, Law Office of Brent G. Siegel, P.A., Gainesville, FL.

For Kernan Hodges, also known as George H. Hodges, Jr., Defendant:David Thomas Knight, Hill, Ward & Henderson, P.A., Tampa, FL.

For United States Equestrian Federation, Inc., Defendant: Christopher Lee Griffin, James Maxwell Landis, Jon P. Tasso, Foley & Lardner, Tampa, FL.

For Rose View Stables, Ltd., Thomas E. Struzzieri, Horse Shown in the Sun, Inc., Linda S. Aldrich, Fox Lea Farm, Inc. [*2] , Defendants: Julie S. Sneed, Richard George Salazar, Fowler, White, Boggs & Banker, P.A., Tampa, FL US.

Michael Nachwalter, Mediator, Pro se, Kenny, Nachwalter, Seymour, Arnold, Critchlow & Spector, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Keith D Bartz, Movant: Jon P. Tasso, Foley & Lardner, Tampa, FL.

For North Florida Hunter & Jumper Assoc., Inc., Defendant: Donald A. Mihokovich, Ruden, McClosky, Smith, Schuster & Russell, P.A., Tampa, FL.

For USA Equestrian Trust, formerly known as USA Equestrian, Inc., formerly known as American Horse Show Assoc., Defendant: Chris S. Coutroulis, Samuel J. Salario, Jr., Carlton Fields, P.A., Tampa, FL; George Hunter Gibbons, Michael P. Murphy, Richard Roger Garland, Dickinson and Gibbons, P.A., Sarasota, FL.

For Eugene R. Mische, Defendant: Edward J. Comey, Thomas M. Wood, Shumaker, Loop & Kendrick, LLP, Tampa, FL; Thomas T. Steele, Law Offices of Thomas T. Steele, P.A., Tampa, FL US; William J. Berman, Berman, Rosenbach, P.C., Morristown, NJ.

For Stadium Jumping Inc., Defendant: Edward J. Comey, Thomas M. Wood, Shumaker, Loop & Kendrick, LLP, Tampa, FL; Thomas T. Steel, Law Offices of Thomas T. Steele, P.A., Tampa, FL US; William J. [*3] Berman, Berman, Rosenbach, P.C., Morristown, NJ; Richard George Salazar, Fowler, White, Boggs & Bunker, P.A., Tampa, FL US.

Judges: SUSAN C. BUCKLEW, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: SUSAN C. BUCKLEW

Opinion

---

ORDER

This cause comes before the Court for consideration of the following motions: Defendant United States Equestrian Federation, Inc.'s ("USEF") Motion for Summary Judgment and Request for Oral Argument (Doc. No. 287); Defendants', David E. Burton, Sr., David E. Burton, Jr., Burton and Sons, Inc. and Littlewood Fences, Inc. (collectively, "the Burton Defendants"), Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. No. 290); Defendants', Thomas Struzzieri ("Struzzieri"), Horse Shows in the Sun, Inc. ("HITS") and Rose View Stables, Ltd. ("Rose View Stables") (collectively "the HITS Defendants"), Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. No. 292) and Defendants, Stadium Jumping, Inc. ("Stadium Jumping") and Eugene R. Mische ("Mische") (collectively, "the Stadium Jumping Defendants"), Motion for Entry of Final Summary Judgment (Doc. No. 294).<sup>1</sup> The Court shall refer to the Burton Defendants, the HITS Defendants and the Stadium Jumping Defendants collectively as the "Promoter Defendants." With leave [*4] of the Court, Plaintiffs filed a Combined Response to Defendants' Summary Judgment Motions (Doc. No. 317) (hereinafter "Response to Motions for Summary Judgment"). With leave of the Court, USEF filed a Reply Brief on the Limited Issue of Antitrust Immunity (Doc. No. 343) and Plaintiffs filed a Sur-Reply to USEF's Reply on the Limited Issue of Antitrust Immunity (Doc. No. 344).

I. Procedural History

On August 29, 2002, Plaintiffs filed a three-count Complaint which raised claims of unreasonable [*5] restraint of trade under section 1 of the Sherman Act (Count I), monopolization and attempted monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act (Count II), and claims of conduct, practices and activities which have the likelihood of substantially lessening competition under section 7 of the Clayton Act (Count III). Upon Defendants' motions this Court dismissed the Complaint, but granted Plaintiffs leave to amend (Doc. No. 39).

---

<sup>1</sup> The Court notes that the only other remaining Defendants, Linda S. Aldrich and Fox Lea Farm, Inc. did not file dispositive motions. Several Defendants, USA Equestrian Trust, Inc., f/k/a USA Equestrian, Inc. ("USAEE") (formerly The American Horse Shows Association, Inc. ("AHSAA")), Bob Bell, Classic Company Ltd., Kernan Hodges a/k/a Mrs. George H. Hodges, Jr. and North Florida Hunter & Jumper Association, Inc. apparently settled with the Plaintiffs and have been dismissed from the case (Doc. Nos. 195, 261, 267 and 350).

On April 18, 2003, Plaintiffs filed a nine-count Amended Complaint (Doc. No. 42) in which they alleged claims for violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, violation of Florida's Antitrust Act and violation of the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act. In the Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs also added an additional Defendant, North Florida Hunter & Jumper Association, Inc. ("NFHJA"). On October 10, 2003, this Court denied Defendants' Motions to Dismiss the First Amended Complaint (Doc. No. 59).<sup>2</sup>

[*6] On December 19, 2003, Plaintiffs sought leave to file a fourteen count Second Amended Complaint to add Eugene R. Mische, Stadium Jumping, Inc., Thomas E. Struzzieri, Horse Shows in the Sun, Inc., Linda S. Aldridge, Fox Lea Farm, Inc., and United States Equestrian Federation, Inc. ("USEF") as additional defendants (Doc. No. 77). As Defendants did not oppose this second amendment, the Court granted Plaintiffs leave to file a Second Amended Complaint (Doc. No. 81). In the Second Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs again alleged claims for violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, violation of Florida's Antitrust Act and violation of the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act.

Almost a year later, on December 16, 2004, Plaintiffs sought leave to file a Third Amended Complaint to add Roseview Stables Ltd. as an additional defendant (Doc. No. 250). Again Defendants did not oppose this third amendment, and the Court granted Plaintiffs leave to file a Third Amended Complaint (Doc. No. 257). In the Third Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs allege that the rules of USAE and USEF, more specifically, the "Mileage Rule,"<sup>3</sup> and Defendants' alleged refusal [*7] to waive application of that rule violate section 1 of the Sherman Act (Count I). Counts II - IV raise claims of monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracy to monopolize in violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act. Counts V-VIII raise claims of violations of the Florida Antitrust Act, FLA. STAT. §§ 542.18 and 542.19. Count IX alleges violations of the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act. USEF, the Burton Defendants, the HITS Defendants and the Stadium Jumping Defendants now move for summary judgment as to all counts of the Third Amended Complaint.

II. Factual Background

4

[*8] This antitrust case arises from an unusual factual situation involving the sanctioning of hunter and jumper horse show competitions in the state of Florida during the winter months. USEF, a New York not-for-profit corporation, is the current<sup>5</sup> national governing body ("NGB") for equestrian sport in the United States under the Ted Stevens Olympics and Amateur Sports Act ("Amateur Sports Act" or "ASA"), 36 U.S.C. §§ 220501 et seq. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 3 and Doc. No. 317, Exh. H, O'Connor Dep. p. 23). USEF has over 80,000 members in 27 breeds and disciplines. (Doc. No. 305). USEF is not a promoter, operator, or manager of horse shows. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 17). USEF did not exist prior to 2003 and has been the NGB for equestrian sport in the United States since June 2004. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 4). USEF is a separate legal entity from USAE with its own ownership and management. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 8). Due in part to a delay in the

<sup>2</sup> The Court notes that as to Plaintiff Gallagher, the Court granted without prejudice the Burton Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the First Amended Complaint since Plaintiff Gallagher did not allege compliance with "the Federation procedures and did not plead he sought a waiver of the Mileage Rule from the Burton Defendants" (Doc. No. 59).

<sup>3</sup> The Mileage Rule provides, in part, that in all States other than Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, horse shows offering "A" rated hunter and jumper events must be held at least 250 miles apart on the same date. The Mileage Rule may be waived by a conflicting horse show promoter.

<sup>4</sup> The Court will not restate the entire factual background of this case. Instead, the Court incorporates by reference the factual background as outlined in the Court's Order granting the Burton Defendants, the Federation, the Bell Defendants and Defendant Hodges' Motions to Dismiss (Doc. No. 39) and the Court's Order denying Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the First Amended Complaint (Doc. No. 59).

<sup>5</sup> Replacing former NGB, USA Equestrian, Inc. ("USAE"), formerly known as the American Horse Show Association ("AHSA"). In its previous Orders, the Court referred to USAE as the Federation for that period prior to December 1, 2003.

Internal Revenue Service's recognizing USEF's not-for-profit status, which is a requirement under the Amateur Sports Act for all NGBs, USEF entered into a Management and [*9] License Agreement ("Agreement") with USAE. Under this Agreement, USEF carried out USAE's obligations as the NGB from December 2003 through May 2004, including processing applications for the current equestrian competition year (2005) on behalf of USAE. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long. Decl., P 5).

USEF, and predecessor NGBs, promulgated a variety of rules, including rules that sanction hunter and jumper horse shows as "Recognized Competitions." <sup>6</sup> (Doc. No. 305, GR208, pp. GR11 - GR12). These rules are embodied in the 2005 USEF Rule Book. (Doc. No. 305). Each Promoter Defendant agrees to abide by the rules as a condition of membership. (Doc. No. 305, GR210, pp. GR12 - GR13). Recognized Competitions enjoy privileges not available to other competitions. (Doc. No. 305, GR209, p. GR12). [*10] Plaintiffs allege that Recognized Competitions provide unique benefits to competitors and those who put on horse shows which are only available by repeat participation at such USEF-sanctioned shows. Plaintiffs further allege that horse show promoters can benefit economically from holding Recognized Competitions. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., PP 15 and 16). The Mileage Rule which governs Recognized Competitions for hunter and jumper competitions rated "A" and above <sup>7</sup> ("A-Rated Shows") was implemented in 1975. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. I, Balch Dep. p. 100).

In its current form, the Mileage Rule, for hunter and jumper Recognized Competitions in Group 2 states (which includes Florida), provides a "250-mile radius for competitions with any of the same A rated sections, or unrated Jumper sections and classes with total prize money of $ 10,000 or more." (Doc. No. 305, GR214(2), [*11] p. GR16). In the 1980's the Mileage Rule applicable to the New England and Middle Atlantic states was reduced to a 125 miles radius. (Doc. No. 305, GR214(1), pp. GR15 - GR16; Doc. No. 317, Exh. L, Swann Decl., P 8 and Doc. No. 317, Exh. L, Long Dep. p. 99). Lesser mileage distances apply for "B" and "C" rated horse shows. (Doc. No. 305, GR214(2), pp. GR15 - GR16). USEF General Rule 214(7) <sup>8</sup>, which controlled the sanctioning of new A-Rated Shows during the course of the present litigation and is part of the Mileage Rule, stated in relevant part:

New competitions offering "A" rated hunter or jumper divisions or sections will not be recognized on dates conflicting with those of any other Recognized Competitions within the applicable distance specified by this rule which offers A rated hunter or jumper divisions or sections, regardless of class scheduling . . . The mileage restrictions . . . will not prevent two Hunter/Jumper competitions from being approved if the two competitions have different competition managements and the competition with priority gives written permission, to be renewed annually, and the mileage distance between the competitions is at least 10 miles.

[*12] (Doc. No. 305, GR214(7), pp. GR16 - GR17).

USEF initially adopted the rules of the Federation as its own. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 9). In January 2004, the USEF Board created a task force to study the Mileage Rule and related rules, and recommend appropriate changes, if any. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 10). In January 2005, USEF's Board passed several rule changes (the "January 2005 rule changes") <sup>9</sup>, including but not limited to: 1) giving USEF ultimate control over the granting or denying of waivers under the Mileage Rule, and 2) enacting a "license agreement" regime under which USEF has the right to refuse to renew applications of now-established competitions if such competitions fail to satisfy certain objective standards. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., P 11 and Doc. No. 344, Exh. A.). By way of example, although the Mileage Rule previously provided that a promoter of a horse show could, in its sole discretion, waive an objection to the holding of another similarly [*13] rated horse show within the applicable mileage restriction, new General Rule 213 provides, in relevant part: "The Federation shall reserve the right to have final approval on the granting or denying of waivers and will not delegate this responsibility to any other entities or parties." (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., Exh. C thereto and Doc. No. 344, Exh. A thereto). No

<sup>6</sup> The Court notes that in their Third Amended Complaint the Plaintiffs utilize the term "Recognized Horse Shows."

<sup>7</sup> "A" or "AA."

<sup>8</sup> Now amended.

<sup>9</sup> Effective May 1, 2005.

mileage restrictions apply to a horse show promoter who wishes to hold a horse show that is "unrated," i.e., not sanctioned by the USEF. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 4).

In their Third Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs define the relevant product market as "[h]unter and jumper equestrian competitions recognized by the Federation as hunter and jumper competitions 'A' rated and above." Third Am. Compl. P 151. They also define the relevant geographic market as the state of Florida between December 1 and March 31 of each year (the "Winter Months"). Third Am. Compl. PP 154 - 158. Therefore, the Relevant Market is defined [*14] as A-Rated Shows in the state of Florida during the Winter Months. Third Am. Compl. P 159.<sup>10</sup>

Plaintiffs are horse show promoters. Dr. Douglas Weiland ("Weiland"), the principal of Plaintiff JES Properties, Inc. ("JES"), began holding unrecognized horse shows at his Cypress Trails Farm facility in Odessa, Florida in 1998. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl. PP 3 and 4). Weiland registered JES with USAE in 2000 and began to conduct Recognized Competitions during the summer months since no other promoters had conflicting dates in those months. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., P 4). Weiland held six A-Rated Shows at Cypress Trails Farm in the summers of 2001 and [*15] 2002,<sup>11</sup> and held 25 unrated shows between 1998 and 2003. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., P 11). Weiland intended to run A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market if it was possible to do so. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., P 14). However JES was unable to obtain dates for A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market due to the application of the Mileage Rule by the NGB and JES' inability to obtain waivers from the Promoter Defendants who controlled the dates. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., PP 21 - 23). JES was actually unable to hold horse shows at the Cypress Trails Farm after 2003 due to zoning regulations. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., P 24). However, Weiland alleges he would have conducted shows at other properties had he been able to obtain entry into the Relevant Market (Doc. No. 317, Exh. K, Weiland Decl., P 25).

Plaintiff Gallagher ("Gallagher") conducted both A-Rated [*16] and unrated shows in the Tallahassee area. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. O, Gallagher Decl. PP 8 - 10). Gallagher alleges he has experience developing an equestrian facility in the Tallahassee area and has been approached about developing additional facilities and "residential communities surrounding them." (Doc. No. 317, Exh. O, Gallagher Decl. P 11). Gallagher also has attempted to promote A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market, but has been unable to obtain dates for A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market due to the application of the Mileage Rule by the NGB and Gallagher's inability to obtain waivers from the Promoter Defendants who controlled the dates. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. O, Gallagher Decl., PP 12 and 13). Gallagher alleges that he has the financial backing needed to promote and manage A-Rated Shows. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. O, Gallagher Decl., P 14).

The Burton Defendants conduct A-Rated Shows. (Doc. No. 291, Exh. A., Burton, Sr. Dep. Vol. I p.141; Exb. B., Burton, Jr. Dep. p. 113). None of the Burton Defendants were involved in the adoption of the Mileage Rule or related rules. (Doc. No. 291, Exh. A, Burton, Sr. Dep. Vol. II pp. 12 -13; Exh. B., Burton, Jr. Dep. p. 130). Cypress Trails Farm [*17]<sup>12</sup> unsuccessfully sought waivers of the Mileage Rule from each of the Burton Defendants. (Doc. No. 291). Gallagher unsuccessfully sought waivers of the Mileage Rule from each of the Burton Defendants. (Doc. No. 291). The decisions by each of the Burton Defendants not to grant waivers of the Mileage Rule were unilateral decisions. (Doc. No. 291, Exh. A, Burton, Sr. Dep. Vol. II pp. 52-68 and 77-79; Exh. B, Burton, Jr. Dep. pp.186 - 197).

Defendant Thomas E. Struzzieri ("Struzzieri") is the sole owner of Horse Shows in the Sun, Inc. ("HITS") and Rose View Stables, Ltd. ("Rose View Stables")(collectively "the HITS Defendants"). (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 2). From 1998 through late 2002, Struzzieri was a member of the board of directors of USAE. He was one of approximately 64 board members. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 11). In January 2005, Struzzieri became a

---

<sup>10</sup> For the limited purpose of ruling on Defendants' summary judgment motions this Court will accept that Plaintiffs' definition of the Relevant Market is correct. However, the Court notes that the Burton Defendants and HITS Defendants argue that the relevant product market should not be "A" rated hunter and jumper shows (Doc. Nos. 291 and 292).

<sup>11</sup> The Court notes that it is unclear from the record whether Weiland held six A-Rated Shows each summer or in total.

<sup>12</sup> JES d/b/a Cypress Trails Farm.

board member of USEF. (Doc. No. 289, Long Decl., P 13). From 1990 to the present, Struzzieri has been a [*18] member of the Competition Management Committee for USAE and USEF. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., PP 12 and 14).

Since 1981 the HITS Defendants have been holding and promoting horse shows throughout the United States, including shows in California, Arizona, Florida, New York, Virginia and Massachusetts. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 2). For each of the last three (3) years, the HITS Defendants have held seven (7) hunter/jumper shows in the state of Florida at a facility in Ocala, Florida. Of these seven (7) shows, five (5) were A-Rated Shows held on consecutive weeks in February and March. The other two (2) horse shows were "unrated" hunter/jumper shows held in January. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 5). Except for the five (5) week period during the months of February and March, the HITS Defendants do not hold any USEF sanctioned horse shows in the state of Florida.

In 2003, the HITS Defendants received a Mileage Rule waiver request from Weiland, on behalf of JES.<sup>13</sup> This was the first request for a waiver that the HITS Defendants had ever received from JES. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 7). JES failed to provide the HITS Defendants with specific details regarding [*19] the location of the contemplated show, and the waivers were not only for 2004 but for all years thereafter; therefore, the HITS Defendants did not provide JES with the waiver of the Mileage Rule. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 7). The HITS Defendants received a similar request from Gallagher and similarly did not provide Gallagher with the waiver. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 8). In 2004, the HITS Defendants again received waiver requests from Plaintiffs for show dates in February and March of 2005. The HITS Defendants again decided not to grant such requests based upon the fact that the Plaintiffs had filed this lawsuit against the HITS Defendants (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 17).

Defendant Stadium Jumping first received a Mileage Rule waiver request from JES in May 2003. [*20]<sup>14</sup> (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., P 2). On May 12, 2003, Defendant Stadium Jumping responded to JES by denying JES' waiver request. (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., P 3). Defendant Stadium Jumping elected not to respond to subsequent waiver requests received from JES. (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., PP 6, 9 and 12). Defendant Stadium Jumping received similar requests from Gallagher and similarly did not provide Gallagher with waivers or respond to his requests. (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., PP 8, 9 and 12). Defendant Stadium Jumping's decisions not to grant waivers of the Mileage Rule, or respond to Plaintiffs' requests, were unilateral decisions. (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., PP 4, 6, 9, and 12).

Defendant Eugene R. Mische ("Mische") personally, or in [*21] the name of Defendant Stadium Jumping, has been a member of USEF and its predecessor organizations for more than thirty (30) years. Mische states that other than a de minimis role based on his being a member of USEF, he had no actual role in the institution or development of the Mileage Rule. (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., P 13). Mische further claims that in the past, Defendant Stadium Jumping has granted Mileage Rule waivers to promoters, including Defendant Horse Shows in the Sun and Defendant Burtons & Sons, Inc. These waivers "were granted by Stadium Jumping without being conditioned on giving, or not giving, any future 'waivers' or permissions to those promoters or any other promoters who might make such requests in the future." (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., P 14).

The Promoter Defendants do not control or dictate USEF policies and rules. (Doc. No. 289, Exh.1, Long Decl., P 15 and Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., P 15). Rather, the power to make and change USEF rules is placed by USEF's bylaws with USEF's fifty-four member Board of Directors. (Doc. No. 305, pp. ix - x). Of the fifty-four Board of Directors members, only ten (two of whom are athlete seats mandated by the Amateur [*22] Sports Act), represent the hunter and/or jumper communities. (Doc. No. 305, pp. x - xi and Doc. No. 289, Long Decl., P 13). Only Defendant Struzzieri is currently a board member of USEF. (Doc. No. 289, Long. Decl., P 13). Furthermore, USEF

---

<sup>13</sup> The dates that were subject to JES' request were February 4-8, 2004, February 11 - 15, 2004, February 18 - 22, 2004, February 25 - 29, 2004, March 3-7, 2004 and March 10 - 14, 2004. (Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 7).

<sup>14</sup> The dates that were subject to JES' request were February 5-9, 2003, February 12 - 16, 2003, February 19 - 23, 2004, February 26 - March 3, 2003, March 5-9, 2003, March 13 - 16, 2003, March 19 - 23, 2003 and March 25 - 29, 2004 (Doc. No. 293, Mische Decl., Exh. A).

committees, such as the Competition Management committee, have no power to make or change USEF rules but can only make recommendations for rule changes to the Board of Directors. (Doc. No. 305, p. xxix; Doc. No. 289, Long Decl., P 14 and Doc. No. 286, Struzzieri Decl., P 14).

III. Standard of Review

Summary judgment is appropriate "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). The moving party bears the initial burden of showing the Court, by reference to materials on file, that there are no genuine issues of material fact that should be decided at trial. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 \(1986\). A moving party discharges its burden on a motion for summary judgment by "showing" or "pointing out" to the Court that there is an [*23] absence of evidence to support the non-moving party's case. Id. at 325. Rule 56 permits the moving party to discharge its burden with or without supporting affidavits and to move for summary judgment on the case as a whole or on any claim. See id. When a moving party has discharged its burden, the non-moving party must then "go beyond the pleadings," and by its own affidavits, or by "depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file," designate specific facts showing there is a genuine issue for trial. Id. at 324.

In determining whether the moving party has met its burden of establishing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the Court must draw inferences from the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-movant and resolve all reasonable doubts in that party's favor. See Samples on behalf of Samples v. City of Atlanta, 846 F.2d 1328, 1330 \(11th Cir. 1988\). The Eleventh Circuit has explained the reasonableness standard:

In deciding whether an inference is reasonable, the Court must "cull the universe of possible inferences from [*24] the facts established by weighing each against the abstract standard of reasonableness." [citation omitted]. The opposing party's inferences need not be more probable than those inferences in favor of the movant to create a factual dispute, so long as they reasonably may be drawn from the facts. When more than one inference reasonably can be drawn, it is for the trier of fact to determine the proper one.

WSB-TV v. Lee, 842 F.2d 1266, 1270 \(11th Cir. 1988\).

Thus, if a reasonable fact finder evaluating the evidence could draw more than one inference from the facts, and if that inference introduces a genuine issue of material fact, then the court should not grant the summary judgment motion. See Augusta Iron & Steel Works v. Employers Ins. of Wausau, 835 F.2d 855, 856 \(11th Cir. 1988\). A dispute about a material fact is "genuine" if the "evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the non-moving party." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 \(1986\). The inquiry is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so [*25] one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 251-52.

IV. Discussion

The question before this Court is whether there are grounds for relief under the antitrust laws based upon the alleged anticompetitive impact of the Promoter Defendants' adherence to the rules promulgated by the national governing body of equestrian sport in the United States. Plaintiffs have asserted claims against the Promoter Defendants and USEF based upon Plaintiffs' inability to obtain permission to hold or promote A-Rated Shows in Florida between December 1 and March 31. The crux of Plaintiffs' claims is that the Promoter Defendants illegally use USEF's rules to insulate themselves from economic competition in the horse show industry. Specifically, as a result of the Promoter Defendants' adherence to USEF's rules, Plaintiffs argue that "at least one incumbent promoter of an A-Rated Show exists for every winter weekend in Florida, preventing any other promoters from entering the market and engaging in head-to-head competition within the 250-mile radius" (Doc. No. 317). By way of example, Plaintiffs contend that "the 250 mile radius prevents A-Rated Shows from [*26] being held in the Tampa, Orlando or Jacksonville metro areas if a similar show is being held in the Palm Beach County area, unless the incumbent promoter grants a waiver" (Doc. No. 317). Plaintiffs refer to the Promoter Defendants' alleged illegal conduct as granting them "perfect and permanent serial monopolies for their protected dates" (Doc. No. 317).

1. Ted Stevens Olympics and Amateur Sports Act, 36 U.S.C. §§ 220501 et seq.

USEF argues that it is exempt from antitrust liability for the subject Mileage Rule under the Ted Stevens Olympics and Amateur Sports Act, 36 U.S.C. §§ 220501 et seq. (the "Amateur Sports Act" or "ASA"). The Promoter Defendants all contend that since USEF enjoys antitrust implied immunity in connection with the establishment and enforcement of the Mileage Rule, they should likewise be immune from antitrust liability for exercising their right not to waive the application of the rule. Plaintiffs respond that there is no support in the case law for such an expansive view of implied antitrust immunity. Plaintiffs further contend that while USEF may be the NGB for equestrian sport, the Mileage Rule [*27] is not necessary for any of the core functions of the NGB and serves no legitimate purpose.

The Amateur Sports Act was enacted "to correct the disorganization and serious factional disputes that seemed to plague amateur sports in the United States." San Francisco Arts & Athletics, Inc. v. United States Olympic Comm'n, 483 U.S. 522, 544, 107 S. Ct. 2971, 97 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1987)(citations omitted). Under the Amateur Sports Act, the United States Olympic Commission ("USOC") is authorized to recognize one NGB for each sport included in the program of the Olympic Games. As the recognized NGB for equestrian sport in the United States, USEF is mandated to regulate the sport. The Amateur Sports Act provides in relevant part:

- (a) Authority.--For the sport that it governs, a national governing body may --
  - (1) represent the United States in the appropriate international sport federation;
  - (2) establish national goals and encourage the attainment of those goals;
  - (3) serve as the coordinating body for amateur athletic activity in the United States; . . .
  - (6) recommend to the corporation <sup>15</sup> individuals and teams to represent the United States in the Olympic Games [*28] . . .

36 U.S.C. § 220523.

For the sport that it governs, a national governing body shall --

- (1) develop interest and participation throughout the United States and be responsible to the persons and amateur sports organizations it represents;
- (2) minimize, through coordination with other amateur sports organizations, conflicts in the scheduling of all practices and competitions . . .

36 U.S.C. § 220524.

To the extent that courts have considered antitrust challenges to rules defining professional sports activities, the rulemaking authorities have been given considerable discretion to achieve their sporting objectives, in the absence of any demonstrated market foreclosure. See Brookins v. Int'l Motor Contest Ass'n, 219 F.3d 849, 853 (8th Cir. 2000). While the Amateur Sports Act does not expressly exempt amateur sports activities from the antitrust laws, courts have found implied antitrust [*29] immunity. See Behagen v. Amateur Basketball Ass'n of the United States, 884 F.2d 524 (1989). USEF argues that because § 220524(2) of the Amateur Sports Act confers on USEF an obligation to minimize scheduling conflicts, USEF is entitled to antitrust immunity with respect to the Mileage Rule. This Court Agrees.

---

<sup>15</sup> The USOC.

In Behagen, a former amateur basketball player, Ronald Behagen ("Behagen") lost his amateur eligibility status <sup>16</sup> after playing professional basketball for a second time. The ABA/USA, the NGB for basketball, had enacted a player eligibility rule that provided that an athlete could reclaim amateur status only once after playing professional basketball. When Behagen's amateur status was not reinstated, he brought suit alleging in part that the player eligibility rule constituted an illegal group boycott under section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act ("Sherman Act"). See Behagen, 884 F.2d at 527. The Tenth Circuit reversed a jury verdict in favor of Behagen on the Sherman Act claim. In finding the player eligibility rule exempt from the coverage of the federal antitrust laws, the Court stated "[t]he defendants' actions in this case were [*30] clearly within the scope of activity directed by Congress, and were necessary to implement Congress' intent with regard to the governance of amateur athletics." Id. The Court further stated that "the monolithic control exerted by an NGB over its amateur sport is a direct result of the congressional intent expressed in the Amateur Sports Act." Id. at 528.

As the NGB for equestrian sport in the United States, USEF performs many functions including the promulgation of scheduling and competition rules such as are at issue in the present case. The Amateur Sports Act requires USEF, as the NGB for equestrian sport, to coordinate amateur equestrian activity in the United [*31] States and to minimize scheduling conflicts. See 36 U.S.C. §§ 220524(2) and 220523(a)(3). Plaintiffs concede that USEF promotes the equestrian sport, including the publication of rules and standards for participation, rider and animal safety and judging at competitive shows. Third Am. Compl. P 35. At the very heart of Plaintiffs' lawsuit is their desire to have A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market sanctioned by USEF and have the ability to utilize the rules of USEF.

Scheduling is central to the governing of any sport. USEF argues that "the Mileage Rule is a scheduling rule that minimizes conflicts between recognized competitions." (Doc. No. 288). USEF further contends that use of mileage as a calendar coordinating means, especially where horses are concerned, "is a very good and objective way of doing it." (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 5, Balch Dep., pp. 83 - 84). Plaintiffs do not dispute that the Mileage Rule minimizes scheduling conflicts between competitions, rather, Plaintiffs contend that the Mileage Rule has anticompetitive effects. However, USEF's Mileage Rule and its enforcement thereof, is exactly the type of action which the Amateur Sports Act directs, [*32] that is, "the monolithic control of an amateur sport by the NGB for that sport." Id. at 529.

In Eleven Line Inc v. North Texas State Soccer Ass'n, 213 F.3d 198 (5th Cir. 2000), one of the few cases examining antitrust liability under the Amateur Sports Act, the Court rejected the application of the implied immunity doctrine and distinguished the facts of the case from Behagen. However the Eleven Line court based its rejection in large part upon the fact that the United States Soccer Federation ("USSF"), the national governing body, had not issued the rule in question or explicitly approved of it. The Eleven Line court acknowledged that "[a]lthough the facts of this case do not support an implied exemption from the antitrust laws, an implied exemption would be appropriate in many other situations." Eleven Line, 213 F.3d at 204. In the case before this Court, USEF as the national governing body of equestrian sport, specifically approved of the Mileage Rule and was aware of its consequences, i.e., that it may preclude a promoter from obtaining a Recognized Competition on a desired date.

Plaintiffs urge this Court to [*33] consider the history of the Mileage Rule, and its waiver provision <sup>17</sup>, to determine if there might be a less exclusionary means to carry out the scheduling purpose of the Amateur Sports Act. This approach ignores the existing federal case law on implied immunity under the Amateur Sports Act which acknowledges that a national governing body may exert monolithic control, i.e., Behagen and Eleven Line. This Court finds that like the player eligibility rule exempted under Behagen, the Mileage Rule should be exempted and Plaintiffs' antitrust claims against USEF should be barred since USEF's Mileage Rule minimizes scheduling conflicts and implements Congress' intent with regard to the governance of amateur athletics. Likewise, Plaintiffs' claims against the Promoter Defendants are barred based upon their membership in USEF and/or conduct in compliance with, and pursuant to, the rules and regulations of USEF. In summary, Defendants are entitled to summary judgment on all of Plaintiffs' claims under the doctrine of implied immunity.

<sup>16</sup> In order for an American to play basketball in amateur competition outside of the United States, the player is required to qualify as an amateur by receiving a travel permit from the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States ("ABA/USA") and a license from the Federation Internationale de Basketball Amateur ("FIBA")

<sup>17</sup> With respect to Plaintiffs' argument that the Mileage Rule does not minimize scheduling conflicts since it permits a promoter to "waive" a mileage conflict, this Court notes that under the January 2005 rule changes, USEF has ultimate control over all waivers (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 1, Long Decl., Exh. C thereto). Furthermore, to the extent Plaintiffs argue that under the January 2005 rule changes, the only modification is that USEF must give prior approval to "the incumbent promoters' veto power," this bolsters the presumption that the Mileage Rule is necessary. Specifically, incumbent promoters may not "dispense" with the Mileage Rule simply because it suits their purposes.

[*34] 2. Standing

The HITS Defendants and Stadium Jumping Defendants contend<sup>18</sup> [*35] that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring the claims asserted in the Third Amended Complaint because they have not suffered the type of injury to business or property contemplated by the Sherman Act. Plaintiff JES<sup>19</sup> responds that it does have standing since it "attempted to enter the Relevant Market for many years" and that "each attempt was precluded by application of the Mileage Rule." Standing is a question of law for the Court to decide. See Todorov v. DCH Healthcare Authority, 921 F.2d 1438, 1448 (11th Cir. 1991). "Antitrust standing is best understood in a general sense as a search for the proper plaintiff to enforce the antitrust laws." Id. The Eleventh Circuit has identified a two-pronged approach to determine whether a plaintiff has antitrust standing. To be a proper party, a plaintiff must have suffered an antitrust injury and must be an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws. See id. at 1449; see also Levine v. Central Florida Medical Affiliates, Inc., 864 F. Supp. 1175, 1178 (M.D. Fla. 1994).

a. Antitrust Injury

Antitrust injury is defined as:

injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful. The injury should reflect anticompetitive effect either of the violation or of anticompetitive effects made possible by the violation. It should be, in short, the type of loss that the claimed violation would be likely to cause.

Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977). That is, an antitrust plaintiff must show that his own injury coincides with the public detriment tending to result from the alleged violation. See Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1450; see also Amey, Inc. v. Gulf Abstract & Title, Inc., 758 F.2d 1486, 1493 (11th Cir. 1985).

In the case before this Court, Gallagher seeks the profits that he claims he would have made promoting A-Rated Shows [*36] during the period within which he was precluded from conducting such shows by reason of the Mileage Rule and the Promoter Defendants' failure to waive the Mileage Rule. JES likewise seeks the profits it claims that it would have made in promoting A-Rated Shows during the period within which it was precluded from conducting such shows. Additionally, JES and Gallagher seek the profits they claim they would have made on housing developments they would have built had they not been precluded from holding A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market. Plaintiffs further allege that they are harmed by the Mileage Rule in that they cannot offer greater than $ 10,000 in prize money at the unrated shows that the Mileage Rule restricts them to in the Relevant Market.

In essence, Plaintiffs complain of injury largely to themselves not injury that inures to the public detriment. This is not antitrust injury. The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not the competitors. See Brunswick, 429 U.S. at 488. In their Response to the Motions for Summary Judgment, Plaintiffs allege the Mileage Rule has caused harm to competition because it has (1) reduced the number of [*37] A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market, (2) increased the costs of participation in the incumbent shows, and (3) blocked potential new entrants from holding competing shows. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. R, McAnneny Expert Report, filed under seal (S-2)). There are few specific facts in the record to support these allegations, especially the allegation that the Mileage Rule has increased the costs of participation in the incumbent shows. See Evers v. General Motors Corp., 770 F.2d 984, 986 (11th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the only examples of "potential new entrants" who have been blocked from holding competing shows are the Plaintiffs themselves. Lastly, while arguably the application of the Mileage Rule may have limited the number of A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market, it is undisputed that there were at least 26 A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market in 2004. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. R, McAnneny Expert Report, filed under seal (S-2)).

<sup>18</sup> The Burton Defendants join in this argument.

<sup>19</sup> Plaintiffs' Response to Motions for Summary Judgment incorrectly states that Defendants do not challenge Plaintiff Gallagher's standing to sue.

Furthermore, Plaintiffs allege damages equal to the profits they would have garnered had they been able to share in the Promoter Defendants' alleged monopoly profits. This is not antitrust injury. See Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1453. Lastly, [*38] as to Plaintiffs' contention that they are entitled to profits they claim they would have made on housing developments, these damages are simply too remote and speculative to serve as a basis for any antitrust injury. In summary, since Plaintiffs have not shown they suffered antitrust injury, they have no standing to assert their claims.

b. Efficient Enforcement of Antitrust Laws

To establish that it is an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws, a plaintiff must meet the target area test. "The target area test requires that an antitrust plaintiff both 'prove that he is within the sector of the economy endangered by a breakdown of competitive conditions in a particular industry' and that he is 'the target against which anticompetitive activity is directed.'" Florida Seed Co. v. Monsanto Co., 105 F.3d 1372, 1374 (11th Cir. 1997)(quoting National Indep. Theatre Exhibitors, Inc. v. Buena Vista Distribution Co., 748 F.2d 602, 608 (11th Cir. 1984)).

Since the Court has found that Plaintiffs suffered no antitrust injury, it need not and will not address whether Plaintiffs would be efficient enforcers of the antitrust laws under the second prong [*39] of the standing analysis.

3. Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 (Count I)

Section 1 of the Sherman Act provides, in pertinent part, that "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal." 15 U.S.C. § 1. Broadly speaking, irrespective of the type of activity challenged, certain elements must be established to prove a violation of section 1: (1) that an agreement exists between two or more entities and (2) that the agreement unreasonably restrains trade. See Torodov, 921 F.2d at 1455; see also Boczar v. Manatee Hospitals & Health Systems, Inc., 731 F. Supp 1042, 1046 (M.D. Fla. 1990); Weight-Rite Golf Corporation, et al. v. United States Golf Association, 766 F. Supp. 1104, 1108 (M.D. Fla. 1991); Tucci v. Smoothie King Franchises, Inc., 215 F. Supp. 2d 1295, 1301 (M.D. Fla. 2002). As discussed below, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to establish either of the elements necessary to prove a violation [*40] of section 1 of the Sherman Act.

a. Contract, Combination or Conspiracy

The threshold element of a section 1 claim is "concerted activity." Mere unilateral conduct is not violative of section 1. See Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 768, 104 S. Ct. 2731, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1984); see also Levine v. Central Fla. Medical Affiliates, 72 F.3d 1538, 1545. Section 1 of the Sherman Act does not prohibit independent business decisions but only prohibits concerted action and, thus, requires some agreement, express or implied, between two or more persons. See Moecker v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 144 F. Supp. 2d 1291, 1300 (M.D. Fla. 2001)(citing Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Serv. Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 761, 104 S. Ct. 1464, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775 (1984)). It is well settled in the Eleventh Circuit that evidence of parallel business behavior, or even conscious parallelism, does not without more<sup>20</sup>, constitute concerted activity. See City of Tuscaloosa v. Harcros Chemicals, Inc., 158 F.3d 548, 570 (11th Cir. 1998).

---

<sup>20</sup> At times referred to as "plus factors."

[*41] The Promoter Defendants claim that Plaintiffs cannot demonstrate that the Promoter Defendants acted collusively in refusing to grant Plaintiffs' requests for waiver of the Mileage Rule. The Court agrees that there is no record evidence that the Promoter Defendants' refusals to waive the Mileage Rule as to Plaintiffs' proposed A-Rated Shows were anything other than unilateral acts. "The threshold requirement of every conspiracy claim, under both section 1 and section 2, is an agreement to restrain trade. To prove that such an agreement exists between two or more persons, a plaintiff must demonstrate 'a unity of purpose or a common design and understanding, or a meeting of minds in an unlawful arrangement.'" Seagood Trading Com. v. Jerrico, Inc., 924 F.2d 1555, 1573 (11th Cir. 1991)(quoting American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 328 U.S. 781, 810, 66 S. Ct. 1125, 90 L. Ed. 1575 (1946)). This Court recognizes that it will only be the rare case in which a plaintiff can establish the existence of a conspiracy by showing an explicit agreement and that most conspiracies are inferred "from the behavior of the alleged conspirators." See id. However, antitrust law limits [*42] the range of permissible inferences from circumstantial or ambiguous evidence in a section 1 case. See City of Tuscaloosa, 158 F.3d at 570. To prove a conspiracy, the circumstantial evidence must reasonably tend to exclude the possibility that the alleged conspirators acted independently. See Seagood, 924 F.2d at 1574.

With respect to Plaintiffs' contention that the record is "replete" with evidence of written agreements between the HITS Defendants and Stadium Jumping Defendants in which these Promoter Defendants continually agree to grant each other waivers of the Mileage Rule, this Court cannot infer from these agreements any conspiracy or "meeting of the mind" to exclude Plaintiffs from promoting A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market. Plaintiffs further contend that the NGB "held up their end of the bargain," and participated in the purported conspiracy, by assisting these Promoter Defendants over the years in the implementation of their agreement and denying any conflicting date applications from other promoters pursuant to the Mileage Rule. (Doc. No. 317). However, Plaintiffs concede that the Stadium Jumping Defendants have from time to time [*43] granted Mileage Rule waivers to other longstanding horse show promoters in the Relevant Market. (Doc. No. 317, Exh. C). Plaintiffs further concede that "there is no direct evidence of collusion" among the HITS Defendants and Stadium Jumping Defendants in reaching their specific decisions to deny the Plaintiffs' waiver requests. (Doc. No. 317).

Here the evidence Plaintiffs rely upon for the proposition that this Court should infer a conspiracy only demonstrates that the HITS Defendants and the Stadium Jumping Defendants chose to do business with one another. Furthermore, the evidence establishes that over the years the Stadium Jumping Defendants apparently opted to do business with Kernan Hodges and at least one of the Burton Defendants. As to the Promoter Defendants, "[i]t is well established that a party 'may choose with whom he will do business and with whom he will not do business' and that this behavior referred to as 'exclusive dealing,' will not give rise to liability absent a showing of actual competitive injury." See Seagood, 924 F.2d at 1567 (citing Construction Aggregate Transp., Inc. v. Florida Rock Indus., Inc., 710 F.2d 752, 772-73 (1983)). [*44] Additionally, the conduct of the NGB amounts to little more than enforcing its own rules and minimizing scheduling conflicts as it is required to do.

Here Plaintiffs have presented no credible evidence by which this Court could find a conspiracy. Circumstantial evidence in this case is insufficient to implicate the Promoter Defendants in an agreement to exclude Plaintiffs from promotion of A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market. This is especially true since each Promoter Defendant, at most, admittedly only has control of a limited number of weekend dates in the alleged Relevant Market and has no control over the remaining dates. Furthermore, in denying the Plaintiffs' waiver requests, the Promoter Defendants complied with the rules of the NGB. Therefore, an agreement between the Defendants has not been established.

b. Unreasonable Restraint of Trade

Even if Plaintiffs were able to demonstrate concerted activity on the part of Defendants, not every agreement that restrains competition will violate the Sherman Act. The Supreme Court has determined that section 1 prohibits only those agreements that unreasonably restrain competition. See National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Board of Regents of University of Oklahoma, 468 U.S. 85, 98, 104 S. Ct. 2948, 82 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1984); [*45] see also Levine, 72 F.3d at 1545 (citing Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 58, 64, 31 S. Ct. 502, 55 L. Ed. 619 (1911)). To determine whether an agreement unreasonably restrains trade, courts have applied the rule of reason analysis and the per se analysis. See Boczar, 731 F. Supp. at 1046. That is, "[a] restraint may be violative of the Sherman Act because it is solely a naked restraint of trade so offensive to competition as to be unreasonable per se, or because it runs afoul of the more detailed rule of reason inquiry." Retina Associates, P.A. v. Southern Baptist Hospital of Florida et al., 105 F.3d 1376, 1381 (11th Cir. 1997)(citing F.T.C. v. Indiana Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 458, 106 S. Ct. 2009, 90 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1986)). Plaintiffs contend that the application of the Mileage Rule by the Promoter Defendants as members of the NGB, in failing to grant waiver requests to the Plaintiffs, requires this Court to undertake a per se analysis. This Court disagrees and finds the rule of reason analysis is applicable to Plaintiffs' claims.

i. Is the Mileage Rule Per Se Unreasonable?

Per se [*46] illegality is limited to four categories of trade restraints: (1) horizontal and vertical price fixing; (2) horizontal market divisions; (3) group boycotts or concerted refusals to deal; and (4) tying arrangements. See Moecker, 144 F. Supp. 2d at 1301 (citing Seagood Trading, 924 F.2d at 1567). Plaintiffs allege that through the use of the Federation's prize level restriction within the Mileage Rule, Defendants have fixed, depressed and standardized the amount of money that may be awarded at Recognized Horse Shows resulting in illegal price-fixing that is a per se violation of section 1. Third Am. Compl. P 203. Plaintiffs also allege that the agreement of the Promoter Defendants to enforce the Mileage Rule is a horizontal allocation of markets that is a per se violation of section 1. Third Am. Compl. P 204. Plaintiffs further allege that "the activity of the Defendants to cause the Federation to deny permission to Plaintiffs to compete in the Relevant Market constitutes an illegal boycott that is a per se violation" of section 1. Third Am. Compl. P 205.

However, in the Eleventh Circuit, "[t]he presumption in cases brought under section 1 of the [*47] Sherman Act is that the rule-of-reason standard applies." Seagood, 924 F.2d at 1567. Furthermore, there is substantial case law rejecting a per se approach in examining the action taken by sporting associations. See NCAA, 468 U.S. at 100-01; see also Cha-Car, Inc. v. Calder Race Course, Inc., 752 F.2d 609, 613 (11th Cir. 1985); Hatley v. American Quarter Horse Ass'n, 552 F.2d 646, 652-53 (5th Cir. 1977); Martin v. American Kennel Club, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 997, 1000 (N.D. Ill. 1988). Since under a per se analysis there is no inquiry into possible justifications for the challenged restraint, the per se doctrine should not be extended to restraints that are of ambiguous effect. See Cha-Car, 752 F.2d at 612-13.

"The decision to apply the per se rule turns on 'whether the practice facially appears to be one that would always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output.'" Northwest Wholesale Stationers, Inc. v. Pacific Stationery & Printing Co., 472 U.S. 284, 289-90, 105 S. Ct. 2613, 86 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1985)(quoting Broadcast Music, Inc. v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. 441 U.S. 1, 19-20, 99 S. Ct. 1551, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1979)). [*48] The Mileage Rule as promulgated by USEF, including its prize money requirement, and application thereof by the Promoter Defendants, is not a practice which facially appears to be one that would always or almost always tend to restrict competition.

Therefore, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to establish per se violations of the Sherman Act and a "rule of reason" analysis should be applied. Specifically, despite Plaintiffs' efforts to couch Defendants' conduct in terms of traditionally per se illegal activities, the field of sports is one "in which horizontal restraints on competition are essential if the product is to be available at all." See NCAA, 468 U.S. at 101. That is, the self-regulation which is present here by virtue of the operation of the NGB for equestrian sport exempts Defendants' conduct from per se analysis. See Cha-Car, 752 F.2d at 614 n.9.

ii. Is the Mileage Rule Unreasonable Under the Rule of Reason?

"Under Eleventh Circuit case law, alleged Section One agreements analyzed under the rule of reason require a plaintiff 'to prove (1) the anticompetitive effect of the defendant's conduct on the relevant market, [*49] and (2) that the defendant's conduct had no pro-competitive benefit or justification.'" Spanish Broadcasting System of Florida, Inc. v. Clear Channel Communications, Inc., 376 F.3d 1065, 1071 (11th Cir. 2004) (quoting Levine, 72 F.3d at 1551); see also Retina Associates, 105 F.3d at 1383 (requires proof that defendant's conduct had an anticompetitive effect in the relevant market, either by establishing actual anticompetitive effect or potential for genuine anticompetitive effect in defined geographic and product markets, and that no pro-competitive rationale would justify conduct).

The burden of proving an unjustified anticompetitive effect is on the Plaintiffs. See Seagood, 924 at 1570. However, since the Defendants do not specifically address whether the alleged violative conduct has restrained competition in the Relevant Market, for purposes of its rule of reason analysis, this Court will presume without finding that Plaintiffs have demonstrated an anticompetitive effect in the Relevant Market. The Court must then determine whether the Defendants' conduct had any pro-competitive benefit or justification. At the heart of [*50] this inquiry is the Mileage Rule itself.

Under the rule of reason analysis, this Court must evaluate the challenged rule in light of the factual context of the particular industry, the history of the restraint, and the reason for its imposition<sup>21</sup> in order to determine whether its anticompetitive effects outweigh its pro-competitive benefits. See National Society of Professional Engineers v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 98 S. Ct. 1355, 55 L. Ed. 2d 637 \(1978\); see also Cooney v. American Horse Shows Ass'n, 495 F. Supp. 424, 431 \(S.D.N.Y. 1980\). The record before this Court demonstrates the reasonableness of the Mileage Rule.

Plaintiffs suggest that the Mileage Rule has no purpose other than to effect some sort of elaborate scheme whereby they are precluded from acquiring their desired dates to promote A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market. Specifically, Plaintiffs contend "[t]he Mileage Rule [*51] has no purpose other than to insure that incumbent promoters of shows covered by the Mileage Rule do not face any competition within a 250 mile radius, unless they are willing in the exercise of their unfettered discretion to tolerate a new entrant by granting a waiver from the Mileage Rule's monopoly grant." Plaintiffs' assertion is not supported by the evidence before this Court.

The Mileage Rule has several pro-competitive functions relating to equestrian sport. As discussed above, the Mileage Rule is an effective way to minimize scheduling conflicts. USEF's Mission Statement states, in relevant part:

As the National Governing Body (NGB) of Equestrian Sport in the United States we will inspire, encourage interest in, and regulate equestrian competition by ensuring the safety and well-being of the horses . . . promote the pursuit of excellence in equestrian sport from junior and grass roots programs to Olympic Games . . . [t]o accomplish this mission, our members and staff, working together will:

- (3) Protect and support the welfare of horses by inspecting, monitoring and testing to deter use of forbidden substances and other cruel, unsafe and/or unsportsmanlike [*52] practices and by adopting and enforcing rules to prohibit such practices . . .
- (6) Provide the strongest possible U.S. representation internationally . . .
- (12) Serve as the coordinating body for equestrian activity in the United States . . .
- (13) Coordinate the calendar of competitions . . . and provide for varying levels of regional and national competition in a wide variety of disciplines to increase the breadth and depth of the sport throughout the country . . .

(Doc. No. 305, pp. i-ii). The Mileage Rule aids USEF in ensuring horses and United States athletes can compete at the highest levels both in the United States and internationally. Specifically, the Mileage Rule disperses hunter and jumper competitions geographically, thereby making it more likely that the best athletes and horses will compete against one another. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 2, O'Connor Decl., P 6, Doc. No. 289, Exh. 5, Balch Dep., pp. 111 - 112 and Doc. No. 289, Exh. 4, Long Dep., pp. 64 - 65). A-Rated Shows attract the best athletes and horses. However, not a large number of horses and athletes can compete at the highest levels. If there were numerous A-Rated Shows in close geographic [*53] proximity on the same days, as might occur without the Mileage Rule, it is less likely that the best horses and athletes would compete against each other as the top horses and athletes would instead be dispersed among those A-Rated Shows. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 2, O'Connor Decl., P 6).

Furthermore, the Mileage Rule promotes the health and welfare of the horses by removing incentives for horse owners to overuse their horses by chasing "points" and prize money on the same or proximate days at multiple competitions in the same geographic area. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 2, O'Connor Decl., P 7, Doc. No. 289, Exh. 5, Balch

---

<sup>21</sup> There is no evidence before this Court as to why the Mileage Rule was originally implemented.

Dep., pp. 112 - 113, 133 - 137 and Doc. No. 289, Exh. 3, O'Connor Dep., pp. 51 - 52). Lastly, the Mileage Rule aids USEF in fostering the development of equestrian sport across the United States, not just in former regional centers such as the Northeast. (Doc. No. 289, Exh. 5, Balch Dep., p. 111).

USEF, as the NGB for equestrian sport, utilizes the Mileage Rule to achieve several pro-competitive functions. There is no evidence in the record that in denying the Plaintiffs' waiver requests, the Promoter Defendants as members did any more than abide by USEF's rules in operating [*54] their respective horse shows. Furthermore, under the January 2005 rule changes, the Promoter Defendants will not have "unfettered discretion" to waive the Mileage Rule because USEF "shall determine whether it is in the best interest of the sport to either deny or grant the waiver and under what terms and conditions such waiver shall be given." (Doc. No. 344, Exh. A, GR213). Therefore, applying the rule of reason, the Court finds that under the facts of this case the Mileage Rule does not result in an unreasonable restraint of trade.

4. Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2 (Counts II - IV)

Section 2 of the Sherman Act is directed against "[e]very person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States." 15 U.S.C. § 2. Broadly speaking, there are three distinct violations actionable under section 2 of the Sherman Act: (1) monopolization; (2) attempt to monopolize; and (3) conspiracy to monopolize. In their Third Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs allege all three violations.

As an initial matter under [*55] the Court's section 2 analysis, USEF argues that it is entitled to summary judgment on Counts II - IV, as well as the related Florida state law claims (Counts VI, VII, VII, and IX (in part)), since it is not a competitor in the relevant market and because Plaintiffs' "shared monopoly" theory is unsupported by the facts and law. This Court agrees that USEF is not a competitor in the Relevant Market. According to Plaintiffs, the Relevant Market is A-Rated Shows in the state of Florida during the winter months. It is undisputed that USEF is the NGB for equestrian sport in the United States and not a horse show promoter, operator or manager in this alleged market (Doc. No. 289, Long Decl., P 17). Nor is there any credible evidence in the record that the Promoter Defendants control or influence USEF. Since USEF does not compete in the Relevant Market, USEF is entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiffs' section 2 claims based upon the argument that it does not compete in the Relevant Market. See Aquatherm Industries, Inc. v Florida Power & Light Company, 145 F.3d 1258, 1261 \(11th Cir. 1998\); see also Spanish Broadcasting System, 376 F.3d at 1075. The Court [*56] will address Plaintiffs' "shared monopoly" theory of liability in greater detail below.

Plaintiffs claim that Defendants have used USEF's protected status as a NGB to "create a series of monopolies" in the Relevant Product Market. The Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to present evidentiary support for the elements of their claims for monopolization offenses under section 2 of the Sherman Act.

i. Monopolization (Count II)

To establish a claim for monopolization, plaintiffs must demonstrate that Defendants: (1) possessed monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) willfully acquired or maintained that power, as distinguished from growth or development as consequence of superior product, business, acumen, or historic accident. See Morris Communications Corp. v. PGA Tour, Inc., 364 F.3d 1288, 1293-94 \(11th Cir. 2004\)(citing United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 86 S. Ct. 1698, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778 \(1966\)). "Monopoly power" is defined as "the power to control prices or exclude competition in the relevant market." United States v. E.I. duPont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 391, 76 S. Ct. 994, 100 L. Ed. 1264 \(1956\).

Under a "shared monopoly" theory, [*57] Plaintiffs have alleged Defendants possess market power. Specifically, with respect to their monopolization claim under section 2 of the Sherman Act, Plaintiffs allege that "[t]he Federation, together with the non-Federation Defendants and/or other unnamed coconspirators, possess monopoly power in the Relevant Market due to their control over available dates for Recognized Horse Shows under the Federation Rules." Third Am. Compl. P 220. The record evidence does not demonstrate that any individual Defendant had the power to control prices or exclude competition from the market. Rather, at most, the Promoter

Defendants possess what Plaintiffs have termed a "perfect and permanent serial" monopoly. This is not sufficient to establish a claim for monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act.

The Eleventh Circuit has not directly addressed whether claims based on a "shared monopoly" may constitute a violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act. In October 2003, in denying the then Defendants' <sup>22</sup> motions to dismiss Plaintiffs' amended complaint, this Court found that "the concept of a 'shared monopoly' cannot be excluded at this juncture" (Doc. No. 59). At the summary judgment stage, [*58] however, the Court declines to accept the concept of a shared monopoly as a basis for section 2 liability under Plaintiffs' claims for monopolization and attempted monopolization. Only section 2's conspiracy to monopolize claim targets concerted action. See Carpet Group, Int'l v. Oriental Rug Importers Ass'n, 256 F. Supp. 2d 249, 283- 85 (D. NJ 2003); see also ID Security Systems, Inc. v. Checkpoint Systems, Inc., 249 F. Supp. 2d 622, 649 (E.D. Pa. 2003).

Even if this Court were to accept the concept of a shared monopoly, Plaintiffs have failed to set forth facts sufficient to establish that USEF and the Promoter Defendants share monopoly power in the Relevant Market. Here we have a small Relevant Market, i.e., the state of Florida, in which numerous entities [*59] promote anywhere from 26 to 31 A-Rated Shows during the approximately seventeen (17) weeks that make up the winter months. There is no evidence before this Court that any of the individual Promoter Defendants expanded or combined their limited "perfect and permanent serial" monopolies to achieve market power in the Relevant Market.

ii. Attempted Monopolization (Count III)

To establish a claim for attempted monopolization, plaintiffs must demonstrate: "(1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456, 113 S. Ct. 884, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1993). "Anticompetitive conduct is 'the use of monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor.'" Covad Communications Co. v. BellSouth Corp., 299 F.3d 1272, 1283 (11th Cir. 2002), vacated on other grounds, 540 U.S. 1147, 124 S. Ct. 1143, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1040 (2004), quoting United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 107, 68 S. Ct. 941, 92 L. Ed. 1236 (1848)). "Proof of the intent element [*60] requires proof of 'a specific intent to destroy competition or build a monopoly.'" See Retina Associates, 105 F.3d at 1385 (quoting Times-Picayune Publishing Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 73 S. Ct. 872, 97 L. Ed. 1277 (1953)). Plaintiffs allege that Promoter Defendants together have prevented competition from new Recognized Competitions because entities who submit timely applications to hold Recognized Competitions, accompanied by the applicable fees, do not have the same access to dates for Recognized Competitions as existing promoters and managers. The Court declines to accept the concept of a shared monopoly as a basis for section 2 liability under Plaintiffs' claim for attempted monopolization. Furthermore, Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate that the Promoter Defendants engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct when they unilaterally refused to grant Plaintiffs' waiver requests. There is also insufficient evidence from which a jury could find that any of the Promoter Defendants acted with a "specific intent to monopolize" when they unilaterally opted to adhere to the USEF rules. Lastly, Plaintiffs do not point to any record evidence supporting [*61] an inference that the Promoter Defendants' unilateral conduct created a "dangerous probability" that they would succeed in achieving a monopoly.

iii. Conspiracy to Monopolize (Count IV)

To establish a claim for conspiracy to monopolize, plaintiffs must prove "(1) concerted action deliberately entered into with the specific intent of achieving a monopoly; and (2) the commission of at least one act in furtherance of the conspiracy." Moecker, 144 F. Supp. 2d. at 1310 (quoting Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1460 n.5). See also ABA Section of Antitrust Law, Antitrust Law Developments, p. 308 (5th ed. 2002); Thompson v. Metropolitan Multi-List, 934 F.2d 1566, 1582 (11th Cir. 1991). A claim for conspiracy to monopolize does not require a showing of monopoly power. See Levine, 72 F.3d at 1555.

---

<sup>22</sup> David E. Burton, Sr., David E. Burton, Jr., Burtons and Sons, Inc., Littlewood Fences, Inc., Kernan Hodges, USA Equestrian, Inc., Bob Bell, Classic Company, Ltd. and North Florida Hunter & Jumper Association, Inc.

Since the most Plaintiffs can establish is that an individual promoter may have a "serial monopoly" for its protected dates, which make up only a portion of the total number of dates available for A-Rated Shows in the Relevant Market, no jury could find that an individual promoter acted with a specific intent to monopolize the Relevant [*62] Market. See Feldman v. Jackson Mem'l Hosp., 571 F. Supp. 1000, 1010 - 11 (S.D. Fla. 1983). Furthermore, as discussed above in relation to section 1, the evidence before this Court does not demonstrate that the Promoter Defendants acted in knowing concert or "conspired" when they individually refused to grant the Plaintiffs' requested waivers of the Mileage Rule.

5. Florida Antitrust Act, FLA. STAT. §§ 542.18 and 542.19 (Counts V - VIII)

The Florida Antitrust Act provides that "[e]very contract, combination, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce in this state is unlawful." FLA. STAT. § 542.18 (2002). Furthermore, "[i]t is unlawful for any person to monopolize, attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of trade or commerce in this state." Flat. Stat. § 542.19 (2002). "Federal and Florida antitrust laws are analyzed under the same rules and case law." All Care Nursing Service, Inc. v. High Tech Staffing Services, Inc., 135 F.3d 740, 745 n.11 (11th Cir. 1998). "[T]he Florida legislature has, in effect, adopted as the law of Florida the body of antitrust law developed [*63] by the federal courts under the Sherman Act. St. Petersburg Yacht Charters, Inc. v. Morgan Yacht, Inc., 457 So. 2d 1028, 1032 (Fla. 2nd DCA 1984). Therefore, for the same reasons this Court has found no violation of the Federal antitrust laws, this Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to establish the elements of a violation of FLA. STAT. §§ 542.18 and 542.19.

6. Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act, FLA. STAT. §§ 501.201 et seq. (Count IX)

Count IX alleges violations of the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act ("FDUTPA"). FLA. STAT. § 501.201 et seq. FDUTPA provides that unfair methods of competition, unconscionable acts or practices, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce are unlawful. FLA. STAT. § 501.204(1). Sub-section 501.203(3) provides that a violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act constitutes a violation of FDUTPA. The law also provides that in construing this provision, great weight should be given to the interpretations of the Federal Trade Commission and the federal courts relating to § 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act. FLA. STAT. § 501.202. Unquestionably, [*64] antitrust claims fall within § 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act. See Indiana Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. at 454-55. Plaintiffs' FDUTPA claim is based on the same allegations as their antitrust claims.<sup>23</sup> Third Am. Compl. P 262. Therefore, for the same reasons this Court has found no violation of the Federal antitrust laws, this Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to establish the elements of a violation of FLA. STAT. § 501.201 et seq.

IV. Conclusion

The Court finds that under the facts of this case there are no grounds under which Plaintiffs are entitled to relief under the antitrust law. See First National Bank of Arizona v. Cities Service Co., 391 U.S. 253, 288, 88 S. Ct. 1575, 20 L. Ed. 2d 569 - 89, 391 U.S. 253, 88 S. Ct. 1575, 20 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1968). Accordingly, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that:

- (1) Defendant United States Equestrian Federation, Inc.'s ("USEF") Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. [*65] No. 287) is GRANTED. USEF's Request for Oral Argument is DENIED.
- (2) Defendants', David E. Burton, Sr., David E. Burton, Jr., Burtons and Sons, Inc. and Littlewood Fences, Inc. (collectively, "the Burton Defendants"), Motion for Summary Judgment is (Doc. No. 290) is GRANTED.
- (3) Defendants', Thomas Struzzieri ("Struzzieri"), Horse Shows in the Sun, Inc. ("HITS") and Rose View Stables, Ltd. ("Rose View Stables")(collectively "the HITS Defendants"), Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. No. 292) is GRANTED.

---

<sup>23</sup> Plaintiffs concede that their FDUTPA claims "survive" or "fall" with their antitrust claims.

(4) Defendants', Stadium Jumping, Inc. ("Stadium Jumping") and Eugene R. Mische ("Mische)(collectively, "the Stadium Jumping Defendants"), Motion for Entry of Final Summary Judgment (Doc. No. 294) is GRANTED.

Defendants', Stadium Jumping, Inc. ("Stadium Jumping") and Eugene R. Mische ("Mische)(collectively, "the Stadium Jumping Defendants"), Request for Oral Argument (Doc. No. 295) is DENIED.

(5) Since the Court has found Plaintiffs' claims are barred by the Defendants' implied immunity, all claims against Defendants Linda S. Aldrich and Fox Lea Farms, Inc. shall be dismissed.

(6) The Pretrial Conference in the above-captioned [*66] matter which was previously scheduled for Friday, May 13, 2005, at 8:30 a.m. is hereby cancelled.

(7) The Clerk is directed to enter judgment in favor of Defendants United States Equestrian Federation, Inc., David E. Burton, Sr., David E. Burton, Jr., Burton and Sons, Inc., Littlewood Fences, Inc., Thomas Struzzieri, Horse Shows in the Sun, Inc., Rose View Stables, Ltd., Stadium Jumping, Inc. and Eugene R. Mische and CLOSE this case.

DONE AND ORDERED at Tampa, Florida, this 9th day of May, 2005.

/s/

SUSAN C. BUCKLEW

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

S. Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim

United States District Court for the Central District of California, Southern Division

May 16, 2005, Decided; May 17, 2005, Filed

Case No. SA CV 99-416-GLT (ANx)

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63364 *

SOUTH COAST CAB CO., INC. et al., Plaintiffs, vs. CITY OF ANAHEIM et al., Defendants.

Prior History: S. Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7652 \(9th Cir. Cal., May 2, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

cause of action, state court, franchise, Antitrust, damages, first amended complaint, merits, issue preclusion, parties, state case, relitigating, litigated, claim preclusion, violations, injunctive relief, motion to dismiss, permit system, permits, counter-motion, ordinance, taxicab, partial summary judgment, substantive due process, permitting process, prevents, courts, first cause, allegations, entitlement, rights

Counsel: [*1] For John M Wolfe, Chapter 7 Trustee, Savvas Roditis, husband and wife, Irene Roditis, husband and wife, Plaintiffs: Maryann Cazzell, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cazzell and Associates, Santa Ana, CA USA.

For Hme Enterprises Inc, Real Party in Interest Plaintiff, Real Party in Interest Plaintiff: Jesse S Finlayson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Finlayson Toffer Roosevelt & Lilly LLP, Irvine, CA USA; Michael Raymond Williams, LEAD ATTORNEY, Finlayson Williams Toffer Roosevelt and Lilly LLP, Irvine, CA USA.

For The City of Anaheim, a Charter City, Richard Larochelle, individually and as a Code Enforcement officer on behalf of The City of Anaheim, John Poole, individually and as the Code Enforcement Manager on behalf of The City of Anaheim, Defendants: Moses W Johnson, IV, LEAD ATTORNEY, Anaheim City Attorneys Office, Anaheim, CA USA.

Judges: GARY L. TAYLOR, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: GARY L. TAYLOR

Opinion

---

ORDER ON (1) DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS, (2) PLAINTIFFS' COUNTER-MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART. Plaintiffs' counter-motion for partial summary judgment is GRANTED IN PART.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs South Coast Cab Co. and its owners, Savvas and Irene Roditis, brought this federal [*2] case and a state case challenging the City of Anaheim's procedure for permitting taxicab businesses in Anaheim and its later taxicab franchise system. The state case has now concluded. This Court recently reopened the federal case and granted leave to amend the Complaint. Plaintiffs filed a First Amended Complaint, which Defendants now move to dismiss on the grounds of claim preclusion and issue preclusion.<sup>1</sup>

The First Amended Complaint contains five causes of action: (1) under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, substantive due process violations resulting from (a) the permitting process, (b) the "need or necessity" standard for obtaining a permit, (c) the process of changing from a permit system to a franchise system, (d) the franchise system itself; (2) under § 1983, procedural due process violations resulting from the permitting process; (3) under § 1983, equal protection violations resulting from disparate treatment during the permitting process and the creation and implementation of the franchise system, due to the individual Plaintiffs' Greek origin and the sex of the President of South Coast Cab Co.; (4) violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act entitling Plaintiffs to damages and injunctive relief; (5) under the Sherman Antitrust [\*3] Act, violations of the "law of the case" and the spirit and intent of the Sherman Antitrust Act resulting from the City's intention to take away Plaintiffs' remaining 30 taxicab permits.

Defendants argue the state courts decided all of the issues raised in the First Amended Complaint. Plaintiffs filed a counter-motion for partial summary judgment, seeking a declaration they are entitled to damages as a result of the state court's finding the permit ordinance was unconstitutionally vague.

II. DISCUSSION

The Court has carefully reviewed the First Amended Complaint, the six versions of the complaint in the state case, and the seven opinions of the state trial and appellate courts, which the parties provided to the Court.<sup>2</sup> Claim preclusion and issue preclusion prevent many, but not all, of Plaintiffs' claims from being litigated in this case.

A. Legal Standards

Claim preclusion means "a valid final adjudication of a claim precludes a second action on that claim or any part of it." Baker v. Gen. Motors Corp., 522 U.S. 222, 233 n.5 \(1998\). It also applies to a claim that was not litigated but "should have been advanced in an earlier suit." United Parcel Serv. v. Cal. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 77 F.3d 1178, 1185 \(9th Cir. 1996\) (quoting Migra v. Warren City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 465 U.S. 75, 77 n.1, 104 S. Ct. 892, 79 L. Ed. 2d 56 \(1984\)).

This federal Court must give claim preclusive effect to a state court judgment "whenever the courts [\*4] of the State from which the judgment emerged would do so." Id. at 1184-85 (quoting Allen v. McCurry, 449 U.S. 90, 96, 101 S. Ct. 411, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308 \(1980\)). California courts apply claim preclusion when "(1) the decision in the prior proceeding is final and on the merits; (2) the present proceeding is on the same cause of action as the prior proceedings; and (3) the parties in the present proceeding or parties in privity with them were parties to the prior proceeding." Fed'n of Hillside & Canyon Ass'n v. City of Los Angeles, 126 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1202, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543 \(Ct. App. 2004\). Claim preclusion "bars the litigation of not only issues that were actually litigated but also issues that could have been litigated." Id.

"Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, prevents parties from relitigating an issue of fact or law if the same issue was determined in prior litigation." Resolution Trust Corp. v. Keating, 186 F.3d 1110, 1114 \(9th Cir. 1999\); see also United Parcel Serv., 77 F.3d at 1185 ("Issue preclusion, or collateral estoppel, 'refers to the effect of a judgment in foreclosing relitigation of a matter that has been litigated and decided.'") (quoting Migra, 465 U.S. at 77 n.1).

Federal courts apply issue preclusion to state court judgments "whenever the courts of the State from which the judgment emerged would do so." United Parcel Serv., 77 F.3d at 1184-85 (quoting Allen, 449 U.S. at 96). California courts apply issue preclusion when "(1) the issue decided in the prior case is identical with the one now presented;

<sup>1</sup> Defendants also move to dismiss under England v. Louisiana State Board of Medical Examiners, 375 U.S. 411, 84 S. Ct. 461, 11 L. Ed. 2d 440 \(1964\). The Court considered this contention in the April 11, 2005 Order and will not reconsider it here.

<sup>2</sup> The Court grants Defendants' requests for judicial notice of these and other documents. It is appropriate to refer to documents outside the pleadings on this motion to dismiss. To determine claim and issue preclusion, the Court must refer to the previous decisions of the state courts. Also, neither party objects to the Court referring to state court documents.

(2) there was a final judgment on the merits in [*5] the prior case; and (3) the party to be estopped was a party to the prior adjudication." Stoltz v. Bank of Am., 15 Cal. App. 4th 217, 222, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19 (Ct. App. 1993).

For purposes of both claim and issue preclusion, the parties agree they were also parties to the state case. The parties also agree the judgment in the state case is now final.

B. First Cause of Action

Plaintiffs' first cause of action seeks damages and injunctive relief under § 1983 for a substantive due process violation. The facts supporting the cause of action involve unfairness in the taxicab permitting process, the vague "need or necessity" standard for obtaining a permit, the process of changing from a permit system to a franchise system, and the franchise system itself.

The facts alleged regarding the permitting process, which are summarized in paragraph 78, lines 11-20 of the First Amended Complaint, all were alleged in the state complaints. Both the original complaint and the first amended complaint in the state case claimed a violation of substantive due process under the U.S. Constitution, which is the same cause of action raised here. The state court dismissed the due process cause of action. South Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, No. G026197, at *18 (Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 19, 2000) (affirming [*6] the dismissal of the due process cause of action). Plaintiffs agree the state court found no due process violation in the implementation of the permit system. (Pls.' Opp'n at 20:14-17.) The state decision is final and was on the merits. Claim preclusion bars relitigation of this claim.

As for the "need or necessity" standard for obtaining permits, summarized in paragraph 79 of the First Amended Complaint, this issue also was decided by the state court. Plaintiffs' second amended complaint in the state case raised the same facts as part of a writ of administrative mandamus cause of action.<sup>3</sup> The state court granted this cause of action because it found the permit ordinance unconstitutionally vague. South Coast Cab Co., No. G026197, at *18 (ordering the trial court to enter judgment in South Coast Cab's favor on the second amended complaint). This decision is final and on the merits. As discussed below on Plaintiffs' counter-motion for summary judgment, the decision has claim preclusive effect in this case. The Court will not relitigate the allegations in paragraph 79 of the First Amended Complaint or the constitutionality of the "need or necessity" standard for obtaining permits.

Turning [*7] to the allegations surrounding the franchise system, the causes of action and issues raised by Plaintiffs already have been decided by the state courts. All of the facts Plaintiffs allege, summarized in paragraph 78 of the First Amended Complaint, also were alleged in the third amended complaint or the verified second supplemental complaint in the state case. The state court rejected all of Plaintiffs' contentions. In April 2003, the appellate court rejected any constitutional cause of action Plaintiffs could allege with respect to the franchise system. South Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, No. G030551, 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 3844, at \*14-23 \(Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 17, 2003\). The court found no legal basis for striking down the franchise ordinance or exempting Plaintiffs from the ordinance. Id. at *2.

In December 2004, the state appellate court affirmed the dismissal of "all claims brought against the City of Anaheim by South Coast Cab Company." South Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, Nos. G031608 & G034127, 2004 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 11789, at \*2 \(Cal. Ct. App. Dec. 27, 2004\). This included affirming a November 2002 summary judgment decision by the trial court in the City's favor, which was directed to the "various constitutional claims" relating to the franchise alleged in the 2002 verified second supplement complaint. Id. at *12. After [*8] the November 2002 summary judgment and the December 2004 decision, the state courts had "ruled substantively on all causes of action which had either survived [the December 2000 opinion] or which had been asserted afterwards." South Coast Cab Co. v. City of Anaheim, No. G032823, 2004 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 2365, at \*14 \(Cal. Ct. App. Mar. 15, 2004\).

---

<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs also alleged the same facts in the first amended complaint as part of a substantive due process cause of action. Claim preclusion bars relitigation of a substantive due process cause of action based on these facts because, as discussed above, the state court rejected due process claims relating to the permit process.

Plaintiffs argue the state decisions regarding the franchise system were based on Plaintiffs' failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Because exhaustion of administrative remedies is not required under § 1983, Plaintiffs contend the state decisions do not preclude this Court from considering constitutional challenges to the franchise system.

The Court disagrees. First, the 2002 verified second supplemental complaint raised the same cause of action as Plaintiffs' substantive due process challenge in this case. Although not called a "substantive due process" cause of action, it alleged the franchise ordinance, the process of selecting franchisees, and the implementation of the franchise was "unconstitutional on its face or as implemented." The complaint alleged Plaintiffs would be deprived of their vested property rights. This alleges a substantive due process cause of action, and it appears the state courts construed [*9] is as such. The state courts rejected the cause of action. Claim preclusion prevents relitigation of the cause of action in this case.<sup>4</sup>

Also, a fair reading of the state court opinions shows they did not rely on failure to exhaust administrative remedies when rejecting Plaintiffs' constitutional challenge to the franchise system. Although the December 2004 state decision refers to exhaustion of administrative remedies, it also refers repeatedly to the April 2003 decision, which considered the constitutionality of the franchise system. The April 2003 decision found there was no causation between the franchise system and Plaintiffs' inability to operate a taxicab business in Anaheim because Plaintiffs did not apply for a franchise. Causation is required in a § 1983 claim: "Every person who . . . subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen . . . to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured . . ." 42 U.S.C. § 1983 \(2003\) (emphasis added). The state court found any deprivation of Plaintiffs' rights was not caused by Defendants. This precludes relitigation of the issue of causation in this case. Plaintiffs may not [*10] litigate their § 1983 challenge to the franchise system in this Court.

In sum, all of Plaintiffs' substantive due process allegations regarding the permit system and the franchise system have already been decided by the state courts. The first cause of action is DISMISSED with prejudice.

C. Second Cause of Action

Plaintiffs' second cause of action is for damages and injunctive relief under § 1983 for procedural due process violations. The facts supporting the cause of action relate to the permit procedure. Plaintiffs raised these facts in the first amended complaint in the state case, alleging a procedural due process violation under the U.S. Constitution. This is the same cause of action now alleged in this case. The state court rejected this claim on the merits: "The due process claims . . . were necessarily predicated on the impropriety of the permit denials as such . . . Therefore the demurrer was properly sustained without leave to amend as to those claims." South Coast Cab Co., No. G026197, at *8. Plaintiffs agree the state court found "under the permit system, there was no due process violation." (Pls.' Opp'n at 20:14.) The parties do not dispute this decision is final. Claim preclusion [*11] prevents Plaintiffs from relitigating the procedural due process cause of action in this Court. The second cause of action is DISMISSED with prejudice.

D. Third Cause of Action

Plaintiffs' third cause of action seeks damages and injunctive relief under § 1983 for equal protection violations. The supporting facts allege that, because Plaintiffs are of Greek origin and the president of South Coast Cab is a woman, Defendants discriminated against them during the permitting process and during the creation and implementation of the franchise system.

The record shows the state court thoroughly explored and decided the issue of disparate treatment. Plaintiffs raised the same issue in the state case through a cause of action under the California Unruh Civil Rights Act. The first cause of action in the first amended complaint alleged discriminatory treatment due to national origin and sex in connection with the permit process. The first cause of action in the third amended complaint alleged the right to "equal protection under the laws . . . of the United States of America" in connection with the permit process and the franchise system. These are the same issues of fact and law Plaintiffs now allege [*12] in this federal case.

---

<sup>4</sup> To the extent Plaintiffs believe the state courts erroneously relied on failure to exhaust administrative remedies in connection with the substantive due process cause of action, that would be the subject of an appeal within the state court system, not relitigation by this federal Court. This Court does not review state court decisions.

The state courts granted a demurrer without leave to amend as to the Unruh Civil Rights Act claims. South Coast Cab did not challenge the sustaining of the demurrs. South Coast Cab Co. v. LaRochelle, No. G030079, 2003 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 3841, at \*6 \(Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 17, 2003\).

In a separate opinion, the state court concluded Plaintiffs could not show disparate treatment in connection with the franchise system. See South Coast Cab Co., No. G030551, at *17, 14-23 ("[W]e have examined the record very critically to determine whether the franchise system was subtly structured in such a way as to deter South Coast Cab from applying for a franchise."); see also South Coast Cab Co., Nos. G031608 & G034127, at *11-15. The court concluded, "the record is remarkably free of anything that shows any animus toward South Coast Cab." South Coast Cab Co., No. G030551, at *16. Issue preclusion prevents Plaintiffs from relitigating their equal protection claims.

Plaintiffs' third cause of action is DISMISSED with prejudice.

E. Fourth Cause of Action

Plaintiffs' fourth cause of action seeks damages and an injunction under the Sherman Antitrust Act, apparently in connection with both the permit process and the franchise system. As discussed in this [*13] Court's April 11, 2005 Order, the Sherman Antitrust Act claim in the state court did not result in a final judgment on the merits because the state court did not have jurisdiction to hear the claim. Claim preclusion and issue preclusion do not apply.

Defendants move to dismiss the claim on the merits, arguing municipalities and their employees are immune from damages under the Sherman Antitrust Act. Plaintiffs state they did not construe Defendants' motion as a motion on the merits, and they did not respond on the merits. (Pls.' Opp'n at 2:4-12.) Their confusion is understandable because Defendants' motion presented no analysis of this issue, simply quoting lengthy portions of the state court decisions. (Defs.' Mot. at 22:6-25:22.) Nonetheless, Defendants state they are moving to dismiss on the merits. (Defs.' Reply at 1:13-17.) Because the parties argued the merits of the federal antitrust claim in the state case, because the state court made findings on the claim (albeit without jurisdiction to do so), because the merits of the damages claim appear to be clear from the face of federal antitrust laws themselves, and in the interest of advancing this prolonged litigation as quickly [*14] as possible, the Court considers the merits of the motion to dismiss the Sherman Antitrust Act claim.

As for damages under the Sherman Antitrust Act, the Clayton Act, another federal antitrust law, incorporates the Sherman Antitrust Act into its definition of "antitrust laws." 35 U.S.C. § 12\(a\) \(Supp. 2005\). In § 15, the Clayton Act states injured parties may recover damages under the "antitrust laws." Id. § 15(a) (1997). However, the Local Government Antitrust Act of 1984, states damages under § 15 of the Clayton Act may not be recovered "from any local government, or official or employee thereof acting in an official capacity." Id. § 35(a). Therefore, damages may not be recovered from local governments or officials under the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Plaintiffs attempt to avoid this rule by claiming "Defendants lost any anti-trust immunity by acting outside of any protected 'state action.'" (First Am. Compl. ¶ 90.) Issue preclusion prevents Plaintiffs from prevailing on this claim. The state court already considered whether the individual Defendants, Richard LaRochelle and John Poole, acted in their official capacities. The court concluded they did. South Coast Cab Co., No. G030079, at *8-11. This Court will not relitigate whether [*15] these Defendants acted in an official capacity.

Plaintiffs also claim they are entitled to damages under § 1983 for a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Defendants do not really discuss whether Plaintiffs may recover § 1983 damages if the City violated the Sherman Antitrust Act. Plaintiffs may proceed on this theory for now, and a further motion may be brought by either party.

Turning to the request for injunctive relief under the Sherman Antitrust Act, Defendants do not show why the claim should be dismissed on the merits. The state court recognized injunctive relief may be available against the City.

South Coast Cab Co., No. G030079, at *7 ("The federal statute does impliedly allow injunctive relief against cities."). This appears to be correct, given the Ninth Circuit's holding the Sherman Antitrust Act "applies to local governments as well as individuals and businesses." A-1 Ambulance Serv. v. County of Monterey, 90 F.3d 333, 335 \(9th Cir. 1996\). Defendants have not stated why they are immune from this general rule under the "state action immunity doctrine" or some other doctrine. See id.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the fourth cause of action is DENIED.<sup>5</sup>

F. Fifth Cause of Action

Plaintiffs' fifth cause of action also seeks injunctive relief under the Sherman Antitrust [*16] Act. Here, Plaintiffs allege Defendants' stated intent to take away South Coast Cab's remaining 30 taxicab permits by May 31, 2006 violates the "law of the case," the spirit and intent of the December 2000 state court opinion, and the spirit and intent of section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Because the fourth cause of action does not specify which facts form the basis for the cause of action, it is not apparent how the fifth cause of action is different from the fourth. Any violation of the "spirit and intent" of the Sherman Antitrust Act is adequately alleged in the fourth cause of action.

As to whether the franchise system violates the "law of the case" and the spirit and intent of the December 2000 state court opinion, issue preclusion prevents Plaintiffs from relitigating these issues. The state court considered and rejected these allegations:

One cannot extract from the [December 2000] opinion, as South Coast Cab has tended to do throughout these proceedings, an entitlement to permits sufficient to withstand an otherwise legitimate change from a permit system to a franchise system. The "spirit" of the opinion — a theme to which South Coast Cab often returns was that South Coast Cab should [*17] have been given the permits it applied for when it applied for them, not that those permits were forever immune to some revision of the city's taxicab permit laws.

South Coast Cab Co., No. G030551, at *13; see also id. at *11-14, 14 (rejecting the "law of the case" theory).

The fifth cause of action is DISMISSED with prejudice.

G. Plaintiffs' Counter-Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

Plaintiffs' counter-motion for partial summary judgment essentially seeks a declaration stating a holding of the state court has preclusive effect in this case. Specifically, Plaintiffs ask the Court to find the state court's finding the permit system was unconstitutionally vague precludes this Court from finding otherwise and entitles Plaintiffs to damages.<sup>6</sup>

The Court finds the state court's finding has preclusive effect in this case. The December 2000 decision of the appellate court is final and was on the merits of the questions of the constitutionality of the permit ordinance and Plaintiffs' entitlement to the permits they applied for in April 1999. Paragraph 79 of Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint raises these same issues. The state court holdings apply in this case. Plaintiffs also ask this Court to hold they are entitled [*18] to damages under § 1983 as a result of this finding. The merits of this position have not been adequately briefed.<sup>7</sup> The Court does not decide this question. The parties may bring another motion or litigate

---

<sup>5</sup> The Court does not rule on Defendants' contention the other taxicab franchisees are indispensable parties to an antitrust claim. The parties have not adequately briefed this issue.

<sup>6</sup> Defendants oppose the counter-motion procedurally, but not on the merits. Defendants have not shown they will be prejudiced if the Court considers the motion. The Court will consider the motion.

<sup>7</sup> For example, Plaintiffs assert their right to damages under § 1983 would stem from an equal protection violation. (Pls.' Opp'n at 3:23-4:9.) The state court did not find an equal protection violation, but found the permit ordinance was unconstitutionally vague.

whether Plaintiffs are entitled to damages and the amount of any damages. It appears Plaintiffs' first prayer for relief adequately claims entitlement to damages on this issue, and an amendment to the First Amended Complaint to add a new cause of action is likely not necessary. Still, the Court will consider a request for leave to amend the First Amended Complaint, if necessary.

C. Conclusion

The first, second, third, and fifth causes of action are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. Given the procedural complexity of this case, it is worth noting this result is consistent with the April 11, 2005 Order. There, the Court found Plaintiffs had not litigated two § 1983 claims in state court: the damages claim pursuant to the finding the permit ordinance was unconstitutionally vague, and the damages claim for a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. (Apr. 11, 2005 Order at 6:4-10.) Without referring to the then-unfiled First Amended Complaint, the Court presumed Plaintiffs did not want to litigate § 1983 challenges [*19] to the permit system or the franchise system. (Apr. 11, 2005 Order at 6:2-4.) Having now reviewed the First Amended Complaint, it is clear Plaintiffs do wish to litigate these claims. However, claim and issue preclusion bar them from doing so, a result the April 11, 2005 Order contemplated. (Apr. 11, 2005 Order at 6:24-27.)

III. DISPOSITION

Defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART. Plaintiffs' counter-motion for partial summary judgment is GRANTED IN PART.

DATED: May 16, 2005

/s/ Gary L. Taylor

GARY L. TAYLOR

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

---

End of Document

George Miller Brick Co., Inc. v. Stark Ceramics, Inc.

Supreme Court of New York, Monroe County

May 18, 2005, Decided

1995/01001

Reporter

9 Misc. 3d 151 *; 801 N.Y.S.2d 120 **; 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163 ***; 2005 NY Slip Op 25226 ****; 2005-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,890

[****1] George C. Miller Brick Co., Inc., Plaintiff, v. Stark Ceramics, Inc., Defendant.

Prior History: George Miller Brick Co., Inc. v. Stark Ceramics, Inc., 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2128 \(N.Y. Sup. Ct., May 20, 2002\)

Core Terms

---

distributor, termination, bid, Brick, vertical, damages, contends, conspiracy, allegations, territorial, bifurcated, concerted action, supplier, treble, cases, price fixing, antitrust, reargument, summary judgment, anti trust law, response to interrogatory, antitrust action, manufacturer, rule of reason, resale price, reconsolidation, preclusion, products, retailer, motions

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN1 [down arrow] Private Actions, Standing

The in pari delicto defense is not applicable to certain New York private antitrust actions. A private antitrust action may be barred on the grounds of the plaintiff's own culpability only where: (1) as a direct result of his own actions, the plaintiff bears at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations he seeks to redress, and (2) preclusion of suit would not significantly interfere with the effective enforcement of the antitrust laws and protection of the public.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN2 Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

New York's Donnelly Act, *N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340 et seq.*, is construed in light of federal precedent and given a different interpretation only where state policy, differences in statutory language, or legislative history justify such a result.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN3 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Vertical Restraints

Restraints imposed by agreement between competitors are denominated as horizontal restraints while those imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution are vertical restraints. Under the Sherman Act, a vertical restraint of trade is not illegal per se unless it includes some agreement on price or price levels. Without an agreement as to a specific minimum price or price level, a vertical restraint is unlawful only if it fails a rule of reason analysis.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN4 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Vertical Restraints

Neither the Sherman Act nor the Donnelly Act, *N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340 et seq.*, proscribes independent action. A one-sided practice is outside the scope of the Donnelly Act. Section 1 of the Sherman Act requires that there be a contract, combination or conspiracy, while the Donnelly Act requires a contract, agreement, arrangement or combination. *N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340\(1\)*.

Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Lease Agreements > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil & Petroleum Products > Gasoline Fuels > Gasoline Dealers & Distributors

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

9 Misc. 3d 151, *151 N.Y.S.2d 120, **120 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***1163 2005 NY Slip Op 25226,
■■■■■

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Leases & Licenses > Forfeiture Clauses

**HN5** Types of Contracts, Lease Agreements

It long has been held under the Sherman Act that there is an actionable wrong whenever a restraint of trade or monopolistic practice has an impact on the market; and it matters not that the complainant may be only one merchant. The fact that a retailer can refuse to deal does not give the supplier immunity if the arrangement is one of those schemes condemned by the antitrust laws. Alleged concerted action involving a plaintiff knuckling under to pressure by the defendant to raise his prices can satisfy the concerted action requirement.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

**HN6** Regulated Practices, Private Actions

Preservation of the private antitrust action as an ever-present threat to deter anyone contemplating business behavior in violation of the antitrust law may outweigh any inequities that might result should a culpable plaintiff recover a windfall gain. Indeed, the United States Supreme Court has emphasized the inappropriateness of invoking broad common law barriers to relief where a private suit serves important public purposes.

Civil Procedure > Judicial Officers > Judges > Discretionary Powers

Governments > Courts > Judges

**HN7** Judges, Discretionary Powers

The Supreme Court of New York has the inherent authority to control its own calendar provided that it does not exercise that discretion in a manner that conflicts with an existing legislative command. That control is authorized whether the trial justice is the original justice assigned to the case or the justice substituted for the original presiding justice.

Civil Procedure > ... > Methods of Discovery > Interrogatories > Format & Number of Interrogatories

Evidence > ... > Exemptions > Statements by Party Opponents > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery > Methods of Discovery > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Methods of Discovery > Interrogatories > General Overview

Evidence > Types of Evidence > Judicial Admissions > General Overview

**HN8** Interrogatories, Format & Number of Interrogatories

9 Misc. 3d 151, *151 N.Y.S.2d 120, **120 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***1163 2005 NY Slip Op 25226,
 ■■■■F

It is well settled that the response to an interrogatory is admissible as an admission of the respondent. However, because a response to an interrogatory is not a formal judicial admission, a response to an interrogatory is not binding and may be explained. It is for a trier of fact to determine the weight of the evidence in light of any explanation offered.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > Clayton Act

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > Standard Instructions

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > State Regulation

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Motions in Limine > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Basis of Recovery > Statutory Awards

HN9 [+] Costs & Attorney Fees, Clayton Act

The Donnelly Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340 et seq., like the Sherman Act upon which it is modeled, requires the trebling of the damage award. 15 U.S.C.S. § 15; N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340\(5\). The weight of federal authority prohibits any mention of the trebling requirement to the jury, because reference to treble damages and attorneys fees is irrelevant to the jury questions of liability and damages and may tend to confuse or prejudice a jury into reducing its eventual award, thus frustrating Congress's goal of deterring improper conduct by assessing treble damages and attorneys fees. Although the New York Supreme Court, Monroe County, can find no cases discussing this issue under the Donnelly Act, the court agrees with the rationale of the federal courts that have examined the issue.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Trials > Separate Trials

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN10 [+] Private Actions, Remedies

To be liable under the antitrust laws means that one has violated the antitrust laws and that violation has resulted in an injury to the business or property of the plaintiff, i.e., there was a fact of damage. Stated another way, to establish liability, a plaintiff must prove the existence of antitrust injury, which is to say, injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. A plaintiff must make some showing of actual injury attributable to something the antitrust laws were designed to prevent.

9 Misc. 3d 151, *151 N.Y.S.2d 120, **120 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***1163 2005 NY Slip Op 25226,
 ■■■■F

Indeed, a treble-damage plaintiff may not recover for losses due to factors other than the defendant's antitrust violations. Thus, when an antitrust case has been bifurcated for trial, the plaintiff must establish during the liability portion of the trial that the violation caused him injury. This is true even in cases involving alleged per se violations.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > Altering & Amending Judgments

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Law of the Case

HN11 [blue] Relief From Judgments, Altering & Amending Judgments

Where a previous determination of a court on a particular issue was advisory only, it is subject to revision upon changed circumstances. N.Y. C.P.L.R. 2221\(e\)\(2\).

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Motions in Limine > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Partial Summary Judgment

HN12 [blue] Pretrial Matters, Motions in Limine

Because a purported motion in limine, if granted, would not really limit the production of certain evidence, but rather, would effectively grant its proponents partial summary judgment on the critical substantive issue of what constitutes the opponents' causes of action, the proponents' motion, although labeled one in limine, actually is the functional equivalent of a motion for partial summary judgment dismissing the complaint.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > Timing of Motions & Responses

HN13 [blue] Motions for Summary Judgment, Timing of Motions & Responses

A summary judgment motion is precluded where it is filed more than 120 days after the note of issue is filed.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Termination > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN14 [blue] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Vertical Restraints

The Donnelly Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340 et seq., reaches competing distributors who conspire among themselves and with a supplier to terminate a fellow distributor for selling at a discount.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

HN15 [blue] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Vertical Restraints

In antitrust law, resale price maintenance cases typically describe those situations where a manufacturer specifies a minimum price list for its product line and prohibits its distributors from underselling one another by lower than that price.

Headnotes/Summary

---

Headnotes

Monopolies -- Donnelly Act -- Vertical Price-Fixing Scheme -- "Concerted Action"

1. Plaintiff, a terminated distributor of defendant's brick and tile products, was not precluded from recovering damages in a private antitrust action under the Donnelly Act (General Business Law § 340 et seq.) because of its own participation with defendant in an illegal bid-rigging and vertical price-fixing scheme in connection with the award of a construction contract. Plaintiff's allegation that it was economically coerced by defendant into submitting a noncompetitive bid for a public works project satisfied the "concerted action" requirement under the Donnelly Act, which applies to vertical restraint agreements, to state an actionable wrong without having to allege that other distributors were also involved in the conspiracy with defendant to restrain trade. Furthermore, in view of the allegations of vertical price-fixing, the "per se standard," rather than a rule of reason standard, was applicable to establish a Donnelly Act violation.

Damages -- Treble Damages -- Donnelly Act Violation

2. In a bifurcated private antitrust action under the Donnelly Act (General Business Law § 340 et seq.) in which plaintiff, a terminated distributor of defendant's brick and tile products, alleged that it was economically coerced by defendant into participating in an illegal bid-rigging and vertical price-fixing scheme in connection with the award of a construction contract, defendant was precluded from informing the jury that damages for a Donnelly Act violation would be trebled (see [General Business Law § 340 \[5\]](#)). Reference to treble damages would be irrelevant to the jury questions of liability and damages, and would only tend to confuse or prejudice the jury into reducing its eventual award.

Monopolies -- Donnelly Act -- Vertical Price-Fixing Scheme -- Admissibility of Evidence of Distributor's Termination by Supplier during Liability Phase of Trial

3. In a bifurcated private antitrust action under the Donnelly Act (General Business Law § 340 et seq.) in which plaintiff, a terminated distributor of defendant's brick and tile products, alleged that it was economically coerced by defendant into participating in an illegal bid-rigging and vertical price-fixing scheme in connection with the award of a construction contract, plaintiff was permitted to introduce evidence of its termination as a distributor of defendant's products during the liability portion of the trial. Since an "antitrust injury" was an element that had to be proven during the liability portion of the trial, evidence of plaintiff's termination was admissible during that phase of the trial to show such an antitrust injury.

Counsel: Charles W. Rogers, Rochester (Mark Hannabury of counsel), and Gates & Adams, Rochester (Anthony J. Adams of counsel), for plaintiff. Hiscock & Barclay, Rochester (Thomas B. Cronmiller of counsel), for defendant.

Judges: Kenneth R. Fisher, Justice Supreme Court.

Opinion by: Kenneth R. Fisher

Opinion

---

█ █ █

In 1995, plaintiff George C. Miller Brick Co., Inc., a distributor of brick and tile products, commenced this antitrust action under the Donnelly Act (General Business Law § 340 et seq.) against a supplier, defendant Stark Ceramics, Inc., seeking treble damages based on allegations of bid rigging and price fixing in April 1991 in connection with the award of a contract for [*153] structural glazed facing tile on a construction project at the Albion Correctional Facility. The matter has been bifurcated for trial, the court (Stander, J.) having previously ordered separate trials on the issues of liability and damages.

Before the court are two motions brought by Miller. The first motion seeks an order (1) prohibiting Stark from putting on evidence or argument for the purpose of "explaining away" the response to interrogatory [***2] No. 18 (c); (2) prohibiting Stark from advising the jury that damages for a Donnelly Act violation are trebled; and (3) allowing evidence during the liability portion of the trial of Miller's termination as a distributor of Stark's products. The second motion seeks an order reconsolidating the trial.

Background

Miller was Stark's exclusive distributor in the Rochester area. John H. Black Co. was Stark's exclusive distributor in the Buffalo area, which includes the Albion Correctional Facility. This action is based on allegations that, after Miller was awarded the prison contract, it was pressured by Stark to relinquish the contract and to withdraw its bid so that, upon a rebidding, Black would be awarded the contract. Miller, fearful of losing its distributorship, cooperated with Stark on the condition that Black fix its price at $ 109,000. Upon the rebidding, Miller then followed Stark's direction and submitted a bid six percent higher. After Black was awarded the contract, it demanded that Stark pay it $ 4,000, representing the difference between Miller's [**125] original bid and Black's subsequent bid. Stark made the payment to Black and then terminated Miller's distributorship, [***3] allegedly because it blamed Miller for having to make the payment to Black. Miller claims damages arising from the loss of the contract and the termination of its distributorship.

Previously, it was determined by the Fourth Department that the action, as pleaded, alleges a [****2] vertical price-fixing scheme that is a per se violation of the Donnelly Act (Miller Brick Co. v Stark Ceramics, 2 A.D.3d 1341, 1343, 770 N.Y.S.2d 235 [2003]; see Business Elecs. Corp. v Sharp Elecs. Corp., [485 U.S. 717, 735-736, 99 L. Ed. 2d 808, 108 S. Ct. 1515 \[1988\]](#)). The only remaining allegation of concerted action under the act involves a conspiracy between Miller, itself, and Stark,<sup>1</sup> distinguishing this case from Monsanto Co. v Spray Rite Serv. [[\*1541 Corp. \(465 U.S. 752, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775, 104 S. Ct. 1464 \[1984\], reh denied 466 U.S. 994, 104 S. Ct. 2378, 80 L. Ed. 2d 850 \[1984\]\)](#)]. Although the only remaining allegation of concerted action involves Miller and Stark, there is an actionable wrong under the Donnelly Act because Miller alleges it was coerced to participate in the illicit scheme (see Simpson v Union Oil Co. of Cal., [377 U.S. 13, 12 L. Ed. 2d 98, 84 S. Ct. 1051 \[1964\], reh denied 377 U.S. 949, 84 S. Ct. 1349, 12 L. Ed. 2d 313 \[1964\]](#); [***4] Isaksen v Vermont Castings, Inc., [825 F.2d 1158, 1162-1163 \[7th Cir 1987\]](#), cert denied 486 U.S. 1005, 100 L. Ed. 2d 193, 108 S. Ct. 1728 [1988]; Ring v Spina, [148 F.2d 647 \[2d Cir 1945\]](#); Rochez Bros., Inc. v North Am. Salt Co., Inc., [1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19421, \*7, 1994 WL 735932, \*3 \[US Dist Ct, WD Pa, Nov. 2, 1994\]](#)).<sup>2</sup> Moreover, HN1 the "in pari delicto" defense is not applicable to private antitrust actions such as this (see Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v International Parts Corp., [392 U.S. 134, 140, 20 L. Ed. 2d 982, 88 S. Ct. 1981 \[1968\]](#) overruled on other grounds by Copperweld Corp. v Independence Tube Corp., [467 U.S. 752, 765-766, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 \[1984\]](#); see also Bindit Corp. v Inflight Adv., [285 A.D.2d 309, 314, 731 N.Y.S.2d 43 \[2001\]](#)). A private antitrust action

<sup>1</sup> Although initially Black was named as a codefendant, in 1999 Black was granted summary judgment dismissing the action against it and thereafter the action was discontinued against Black.

<sup>2</sup> The Donnelly Act is "construed in light of Federal precedent and given a different interpretation only where State policy, differences in statutory language or the legislative history justify such a result" (Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v Abrams, [71 N.Y.2d 327, 335, 520 N.E.2d 535, 525 N.Y.S.2d 816 \[1988\]](#); see X.L.O. Concrete Corp. v Rivergate Corp., [83 N.Y.2d 513, 518, 634 N.E.2d 158, 611 N.Y.S.2d 786 \[1994\]](#)).

"may be barred on the grounds of the plaintiff's own culpability only where (1) as a direct result of his own actions, the plaintiff bears at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations he seeks to redress, and (2) preclusion of suit would not significantly interfere with the effective enforcement of the [antitrust laws] and protection of the . . . public" ([Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, Inc. v Berner, 472 U.S. 299, 310-311, 86 L. Ed. 2d 215, 105 S. Ct. 2622 \[1985\]](#)).

[***5] Each of these holdings is explained below.

HN2

Vertical Restraint of Trade and Defendant's Monsanto Argument

In view of the implication in defendant's motion papers and its express position at oral argument that it will be entitled to a directed verdict at the end of plaintiff's case, and particularly in view of the court's remarks during oral argument that acceptance of defendant's Monsanto argument might indeed entitle it to judgment as a matter of law, the court [***6] finds it necessary to elucidate the effect of the Appellate Division's decision that this is, [**126] indeed, a vertical restraint of trade case, and to dispel any misconception. The following is also necessary to provide the [*155] backdrop to the discretionary rulings below. HN3 Restraints imposed by agreement between competitors are denominated as horizontal restraints while those imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution are vertical restraints (see [Business Elecs. Corp. v Sharp Elecs. Corp., 485 U.S. 717, 730, 99 L. Ed. 2d 808, 108 S. Ct. 1515 \[1988\]](#)). It is beyond dispute that the alleged restraint in this case is vertical since it involves a restraint imposed by agreement between a supplier and a distributor.

Under the Sherman Act, a vertical restraint of trade is not illegal per se unless it includes [***3] some agreement on price or price levels (485 U.S. at 735-736). "Without an agreement as to a specific minimum price or price level, a vertical restraint is unlawful only if it fails a rule of reason analysis" ([Euromodas, Inc. v Zanella, Ltd., 368 F.3d 11, 21 \[1st Cir 2004\]](#)).

Commentary to the New York Pattern Jury Instructions suggests [***7] that the rule is otherwise under the Donnelly Act. The commentary clearly indicates that vertical price fixing is not a per se violation of the Donnelly Act but is subject to the rule of reason standard (2 NY PJI3d 532 [2005]). The cases cited in the comment, however, do not support that proposition. The issue in [Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v Abrams \(71 N.Y.2d 327, 520 N.E.2d 535, 525 N.Y.S.2d 816 \[1988\]\)](#) concerned the authority of the Attorney General under the Donnelly Act to investigate vertically imposed exclusive territorial dealerships (71 N.Y.2d at 331). The other case involved allegations of price discrimination, not price fixing ([State of New York v Mobil Oil Corp., 38 N.Y.2d 460, 463, 344 N.E.2d 357, 381 N.Y.S.2d 426 \[1976\]](#)).

In this case, there are allegations of vertical price fixing. When the matter was before the Fourth Department in December 2003, the issue was raised whether the per se standard or the rule of reason standard was applicable. The Fourth Department rejected defendant's contention that the rule of reason standard applied and held that "the per se standard is properly applied where, as here, price fixing is alleged" (2 A.D.3d 1341, 1343 [2003]). In support of that determination, the Court cited, [***8] among other things, the United States Supreme Court's decision Business Elecs.. Thus, it is the law of the case that this is a per se violation case arising under the Donnelly Act.

Concerted Action

HN4 Neither the Sherman Act nor the Donnelly Act proscribe independent action (see [Monsanto Co. v Spray Rite Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 761, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775, 104 S. Ct. 1464 \[1984\]](#), reh denied 466 U.S. 994 [1984] [Sherman Act]; [State of New York v Mobil Oil Corp., 38 N.Y.2d 460, 464, 344 N.E.2d 357, 381 N.Y.S.2d 426 \[1976\]](#) ["a one-sided practice . . . is outside the scope of the [*156] (Donnelly Act")]. Section 1 of the Sherman Act requires that there be a "contract, combination . . . or conspiracy" (15 USC § 1), while the Donnelly Act requires a "contract, agreement, arrangement or combination" ([General Business Law § 340 \[1\]](#)).

[1] In this case, summary judgment has been granted to Black dismissing the action against it. In its opposing papers here, defendant clearly implies that, under Monsanto and cases like it, plaintiff will not survive a motion for a directed verdict absent proof of an agreement between it and some other nonterminated distributor (such as Bock Brick Co. and Momack Building Materials) [***9] to fix prices. Defendant, [**127] however, misreads Monsanto in this regard.

In Monsanto, a terminated distributor brought an antitrust action against the manufacturer alleging that the manufacturer conspired with other distributors to fix prices. At trial, the plaintiff introduced evidence that it had been terminated by the defendant following complaints by other distributors regarding the plaintiff's price-cutting practices. On appeal from a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, the Seventh Circuit held that the evidence of the termination in response to the complaints was sufficient to raise an inference of concerted action, thus indicating "that an antitrust plaintiff can survive a motion for a directed verdict if it shows that a manufacturer terminated a price-cutting distributor in response to or following complaints by other distributors" (465 U.S. at 759). The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that such evidence alone is not sufficient to establish concerted action and that there must be additional "evidence that tends to exclude the possibility that the manufacturer and nonterminated distributors were acting independently" (465 U.S. at 764).

The present case is [***10] different. There is no longer any allegation, as there was in [***4] Monsanto, that defendant conspired with other distributors to fix prices. Plaintiff here, unlike the plaintiff in Monsanto, is alleging an illegal conspiracy between it and defendant to fix prices. Thus, while in Monsanto evidence of a conspiracy between the defendant and other distributors was critical to show concerted action, here it is not.

The fact that the only parties to the alleged illegal activity in this case are the plaintiff and the defendant does not preclude an action under the Sherman Act. HN5↑ It long has been held under the Sherman Act that "[t]here is actionable wrong whenever the restraint of trade or monopolistic practice has an impact on [*157] the market; and it matters not that the complainant may be only one merchant" ([Simpson v United Oil Co. of Cal., 377 U.S. 13, 16, 12 L. Ed. 2d 98, 84 S. Ct. 1051 \[1964\]](#)). In Simpson, a retail gasoline dealer was required, by virtue of its lease and consignment agreement with its supplier, to sell gasoline at the price set by the supplier. When the retailer sold gas below the fixed price, the supplier refused to renew the retailer's lease [***11] and terminated the consignment agreement. The retailer commenced an action under the Sherman Act against the supplier alleging that it had been economically coerced into the price-fixing scheme. The Supreme Court held that there was an actionable wrong under the Sherman Act and "[t]he fact that a retailer can refuse to deal does not give the supplier immunity if the arrangement is one of those schemes condemned by the antitrust laws" (377 U.S. at 16; see [Ring v Spina, 148 F.2d 647 \[2d Cir 1945\]](#) [one constrained to enter into an illegal agreement under the Sherman Act by virtue of economic necessity is not precluded from recovering damages on ground that he himself was a participant in the unlawful combination]).

More recently, Isaksen v Vermont Castings, Inc.([825 F.2d 1158 \[7th Cir 1987, Posner, J.\]](#), cert denied 486 U.S. 1005, 100 L. Ed. 2d 193, 108 S. Ct. 1728 [1988]) held that it is of no moment under the Sherman Act that the only alleged concerted action involved the plaintiff and the defendant, since it was further alleged that the plaintiff was an involuntary participant (825 F.2d at 1163). The plaintiff in that case, like [***12] here, was unable to allege that other distributors were involved in a conspiracy with the defendant. The Seventh Circuit, however, held that alleged concerted action involving the plaintiff "knuckling under to pressure [**128] by [the defendant] to raise his prices" could satisfy the concerted action requirement of the Sherman Act (825 F.2d at 1162).

In another case, remarkably similar on its facts to the case at bar, a District Court held that the alleged "conspiracy between [the] plaintiff and . . . defendant may satisfy [the Sherman Act's] concerted action requirement" ([Rochez Bros., Inc. v North Am. Salt Co., Inc., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19421, \*7, 1994 WL 735932, \*3 \[US Dist Ct, WD Pa, Nov. 2, 1994\]](#)). The plaintiff in that case, as here, alleged that it was coerced into submitting a noncompetitive bid for a public works project by implicit threats from its supplier. Moreover, like this case, the plaintiff alleged that, despite its compliance with defendant's order to bid noncompetitively, the defendant thereafter terminated its relationship with plaintiff.

[*158] Since Simpson, the Supreme Court has rejected the application of the "in pari delicto" (of equal fault) defense in private antitrust actions [***13] (Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134, 140, 20 L. Ed. 2d 982, 88 S. Ct. 1981 [1968], overruled on other grounds by Copperweld Corp. v Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 765-766, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 [1984]). The Court explained that HN6[<sup>1</sup>] preservation of the private antitrust action as "an ever-present threat to deter anyone contemplating business behavior in violation of the antitrust law" outweighed any inequities that might result should a culpable plaintiff recover a windfall gain (392 U.S. at 139). Indeed, the Court emphasized "'the inappropriateness of invoking broad common-law barriers to relief where a private suit serves important public [****5] purposes'" (Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, Inc. v Berner, 472 U.S. 299, 307, 86 L. Ed. 2d 215, 105 S. Ct. 2622 [1985], quoting 392 U.S. at 138). The Court, however, refused to decide whether "truly complete involvement and participation in a monopolistic scheme could ever be a basis, wholly apart from the idea of in pari delicto," to bar a plaintiff's cause of action (392 U.S. at 140). The Court appears to have answered that question in Bateman.

Bateman [***14] arose in the context of a private action brought under the federal securities law. The Court clearly indicated, though, that the rule it announced in that case had broader application, including application to private antitrust actions. The Court held that:

"[A] private action for damages in these circumstances may be barred on the grounds of the plaintiff's own culpability only where (1) as a direct result of his own actions, the plaintiff bears at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations he seeks to redress, and (2) preclusion of suit would not significantly interfere with the effective enforcement of the [regulatory laws] and protection of the . . . public" (472 U.S. at 310-311).

Although the Second Department has held under Perma Life that a contracting defendant has standing to claim that its agreement violates the Donnelly Act (see Bindit Corp. v Inflight Adv., 285 A.D.2d 309, 314, 731 N.Y.S.2d 43 [2001]), there are no reported cases specifically rejecting the in pari delicto defense, or adopting the standard set forth in Bateman, as a matter of state law. There appears to be no reason, however, why state antitrust cases should be treated [***15] differently than federal antitrust cases in this regard (see Anheuser-Busch, 71 N.Y.2d at 335 [the Donnelly Act is "construed in light of Federal precedent and given a different [*159] interpretation only where State policy, differences in statutory language or legislative history justify such a result"]).<sup>3</sup>

[**129] With this background in mind, the court turns to the procedural history of the case, and plaintiff's motions.

Relevant Procedural History

In 1997, Miller brought a motion seeking, among other things, an order deeming the subject matter of a notice to admit dated May 2, 1997 to be established as true. The subject matter of the notice to admit was Stark's response to interrogatory No. 18 (c). In that interrogatory, Miller asked Stark to "[d]escribe the procedures which Miller . . . was supposed to follow with respect to the bidding on prison expansion projects both within and without its territory . . ." Stark responded:

"On the prison expansion project, [***16] Stark distributors were permitted to bid if requested by the State, provided that such distributors included in their bids a factor for specification protection. A distributor who was granted an exclusive territory for a particular project would offer the product at the lowest bid price."

The court (Lunn, J.) denied the motion as it pertained to the notice to admit, indicating that because the responses to the interrogatories were verified and sworn as true, "[they] have already been admitted as true and may not be explained away at trial."

In November 1999, the court (Stander, J.) granted summary judgment to Stark and dismissed the second amended complaint against it. Upon reargument in May 2000, the court adhered to its earlier determination and again dismissed the second amended complaint against Stark. On appeal, however, the Fourth Department held that there are triable issues of fact whether there was a violation of the Donnelly Act by Stark and thus that it was error to grant [****6] Stark summary judgment (281 A.D.2d 960, 961, 722 N.Y.S.2d 679 [2001]).

---

<sup>3</sup> See below, on motion for reargument.

In May 2002, as relevant here, the court (Stander, J.) bifurcated the trial at the request of Stark<sup>4</sup> and precluded Miller, during [***17] the liability phase of the trial, from presenting evidence [*160] of its termination as a distributor of Stark's products. Miller appealed but failed to brief the issue whether the court properly bifurcated the trial. The Fourth Department affirmed, holding that the part of the order dealing with the admissibility of evidence was not appealable and that Miller abandoned the bifurcation issue by not briefing it (Miller Brick, 2 A.D.3d at 1343).

Present Motions

More than a year later, in September 2004, Miller brought the first [***18] of the two motions now before the court. Miller contends that, by virtue of Justice Lunn's decision in 1997, it "is entitled to a motion in limine prohibiting [Stark] from introducing any evidence, or argument, the purpose of which is to explain away its response to interrogatory No. 18 (c)." Miller further contends, citing HBE Leasing Corp. v Frank (22 F.3d 41, 46 [2d Cir 1994]), that it is improper to inform a jury that damages for a Donnelly Act violation are trebled and thus "[Stark], or its attorneys . . . [should be precluded] from making any such reference during the course of the trial." Finally, Miller contends that, notwithstanding the previous order of the court (Stander, J.), it should be permitted to introduce evidence of its termination as [*130] a distributor during the liability portion of the trial. In support of that contention, Miller cites its belief that the prior order bifurcated only the amount of damages from the fact of damage, and argues that the fact of damage is a necessary element of liability. Miller further argues that Stark's pretextual reasons for the termination are circumstantial evidence of an alleged agreement between Stark and its [***19] other distributors to restrain trade.

Stark opposes the motion and cross-moves for costs. In its opposing papers dated January 3, 2005, Stark contends that the motion should be denied in its entirety because it is untimely in light of a scheduling order by Stander in May 2001. Stark also contends that the motion, insofar as it seeks reargument of that part of the May 2002 order limiting evidence during the liability portion of the trial, is untimely (see CPLR 2221 (d)). In the alternative, Stark opposes reargument because Miller's "understanding of bifurcation orders does not serve a cognizable basis for reargument" and because the claimed relevance of the evidence of the termination is spurious inasmuch as there are no [*161] other alleged coconspirators. Stark additionally contends that, while it may not deny its response to interrogatory No. 18 (c), it may "offer proof to put the admission in context with other proof" and to explain its meaning. Finally, Stark asks this court to ignore federal law on the treble damages issue and to reexamine that issue in light of state law, as a court has done in another context in New Jersey (see Wanetick v Gateway Mitsubishi, 163 F.3d 71 N.J. 484, 494-495, 750 A.2d 79 [2000] [***20] [there is "no compelling policy reason to justify shielding jurors from the consequences of their own actions in the jury box"]).

In the second of the two motions, dated January 13, 2005, Miller seeks an order "reconsolidating the trial of this action." Miller contends that it has become apparent since the prior order of the court that "bifurcation is unworkable . . . [because] the issues as to the existence of an agreement, the causation between any agreement and damages, and the amount of such damages, are inextricably intertwined in this case." Miller further contends that reconsolidation serves the interest of judicial economy because many of the witnesses in the two trials will be the same.

After receipt by the court of the second motion, Stark submitted supplemental papers dated January 15, 2005 more fully explaining its opposition to the first motion and indicating that, "in the event [Miller] does seek to reargue the motion with respect to bifurcation, it is respectfully requested that [Stark] be permitted an opportunity to fully respond to plaintiff's allegations and argument." In its supplemental papers, Stark contends that proof of the termination is irrelevant [***21] and immaterial to the conspiracy alleged to have occurred months before April 1991

---

<sup>4</sup> Stark contended that "the issues of damages and liability are completely unrelated. The existence of a price-fixing conspiracy has no bearing on the measure of damages purportedly sustained by [Miller] after its termination as a . . . distributor." According to Stark, bifurcation would "further judicial economy, promote juror understanding of the issues, and require shorter and less encompassing closing arguments and jury charges." Miller did not oppose bifurcation.

and that, in any event, such proof is inadmissible as a matter of law under Monsanto in the absence of proof that a nonterminated distributor participated in the alleged conspiracy. Finally, although conditionally requesting additional time to address the reconsolidation issue, Stark contends that bifurcation was proper because the issues of fact identified by the Fourth Department in its decision on summary judgment are separate and distinct from the issue of damages.

Discussion

Initially, the court rejects Stark's contention that the prior scheduling order has any preclusive effect. HN7[] This court has the inherent authority to control its own calendar provided that it does not exercise that discretion in a manner that conflicts with [*162] an existing legislative command [**131] (see Matter of Attorney Gen. of State of N.Y. v Firetow, 94 N.Y.2d 477, 490-491, 727 N.E.2d 1220, 706 N.Y.S.2d 666 [2000]; People v Mezon, 80 N.Y.2d 155, 158-159, 603 N.E.2d 943, 589 N.Y.S.2d 838 [1992]). That control is authorized whether the trial justice is the original justice assigned to the case or, as here, the justice substituted for the original presiding justice [***22] (see Matter of Public Adm'r of County of N.Y. v Cohen, 221 A.D.2d 297, 298, 634 N.Y.S.2d 106 [1995]; see also Wahrhaftig v Space Design Group, 33 A.D.2d 953, 306 N.Y.S.2d 863 [1970]).

Turning to the substance of the motions, the court grants that part of the first motion seeking an order prohibiting Stark from "explaining away" its verified response to interrogatory No. 18 (c) but only insofar as prohibiting Stark from denying the substance of that response. HN8[] It is well settled that the response to an interrogatory is admissible as an admission of the respondent (see United Bank v Cambridge Sporting Goods Corp., 41 N.Y.2d 254, 264, 360 N.E.2d 943, 392 N.Y.S.2d 265 [1976], rearg denied 41 N.Y.2d 901 [1977]; Smith v Kuhn, 221 A.D.2d 620, 621, 634 N.Y.S.2d 167 [1995]; Bigelow v Acands, 196 A.D.2d 436, 439, 601 N.Y.S.2d 478 [1993]). By virtue of the verification, as the court (Lunn, J.) previously indicated, Stark cannot deny the substance of its response to interrogatory No. 18 (c). However, because a response to an interrogatory is not a formal judicial admission, Stark's response to interrogatory No. 18 (c) is not binding and may be explained (see Connors, Practice Commentaries, McKinney's Cons Laws of NY, Book 7B, CPLR C3131:1, at 615 [2005 ed]; [***23] see also Ando v Woodberry, 8 N.Y.2d 165, 171, 168 N.E.2d 520, 203 N.Y.S.2d 74 [1960]; Ferris v Sterling, 214 N.Y. 249, 108 N.E. 406 [1915]; Chamberlain v Iba, 181 N.Y. 486, 492, 74 N.E. 481 [1905]; Kirby v Monroe No. 1 Bd. of Coop. Educ. Servs., 2 A.D.3d 1387, 1388, 769 N.Y.S.2d 670 [2003]; Prince, Richardson on Evidence § 8-211, at 520 [Farrell [****8] 11th ed]). It will be for the trier of fact to determine the weight of the evidence in light of any explanation offered by Stark (see Ando, 8 N.Y.2d at 171; Prince § 8-212, at 520-521).

[2] Additionally, the court agrees with Miller that it is improper to inform a jury that damages for a Donnelly Act violation are trebled. HN9[] The Donnelly Act, like the Sherman Act upon which it is modeled, requires the trebling of the damage award (see 15 USC § 15; General Business Law § 340 [5]). The weight of federal authority prohibits any mention of the trebling requirement to the jury (see HBE Leasing, 22 F.3d at 46) because "[r]eference to treble damages and attorneys['] fees is irrelevant to the jury questions of liability and damages and may tend to confuse or prejudice a jury into reducing [***24] its eventual award, thus frustrating Congress's goal of deterring improper [*163] conduct by assessing treble damages and attorneys['] fees." (Id. at 45) Under the pattern jury instructions given in antitrust cases under the Sherman Act (3A Fed Jury Prac & Instructions § 150.93 [5th ed]), and antitrust cases under the Donnelly Act (PJI3d P3:58 [2004]), no mention is made of the trebling requirement. Although the court can find no cases discussing this issue under the Donnelly Act, the court agrees with the rationale of the federal courts that have examined the issue (Anheuser-Busch, 71 N.Y.2d at 335; see X.L.O. Concrete, 83 N.Y.2d at 518). Wanetick, which is cited by Stark, arises under a New Jersey consumer fraud law and is not persuasive. The court therefore grants that part of the first motion seeking an order prohibiting Stark from advising the jury that damages for a Donnelly Act violation are trebled.

[**132] Next, the court examines the issue of reconsolidation. Given that the previous order of the court (Stander, J.) bifurcating the trial was entered without objection (see Response of Carolina, Inc. v Leasco Response, Inc., 537 F.2d 1307, 1324 [5th Cir 1976]), [***25] and further, that no appeal from that order was perfected, and given the implications of effectively overruling the action of the prior justice (see Velasquez v C.F.T., Inc., 267 A.D.2d 229, 699 N.Y.S.2d 470 [1999]; Dawson v Pavarini Constr. Co., 228 A.D.2d 468, 644 N.Y.S.2d 288 [1996]; Padela v

9 Misc. 3d 151, *163L<sup>801</sup> N.Y.S.2d 120, **132L<sup>2005</sup> N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***25L<sup>2005</sup> NY Slip Op 25226, ****8

Rosen & Weidberg, 200 A.D.2d 722, 607 N.Y.S.2d 89 [1994]; Carel Almo Serv. v Weisskopf, 42 A.D.2d 953, 348 N.Y.S.2d 557 [1973]), the court denies Miller's motion for reconsolidation. Nevertheless, the court recognizes that HN10 "[t]o be 'liable' under the antitrust laws . . . means that one has violated the antitrust laws and that violation has resulted in an injury to the business or property of the plaintiff, i.e., there was fact of damage" (Response, 537 F.2d at 1320; see [Danny Kresky Enters. Corp. v Magid, 716 F.2d 206, 209-210 \[3d Cir 1983\]](#)). Stated another way, to establish liability, "a plaintiff must prove the existence of 'antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful'" ([Atlantic Richfield Co. v USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 334, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 \[1990\]](#) [***26] quoting [Brunswick Corp. v Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 \[1977\]](#); see [J. Truett Payne Co., Inc. v Chrysler Motors Corp., 451 U.S. 557, 562, 68 L. Ed. 2d 442, 101 S. Ct. 1923 \[1981\]](#) ["a plaintiff must make some showing of actual injury attributable to something the antitrust laws were designed to prevent"]). Indeed, it is well established that a "treble-damage plaintiff may not recover for losses due to factors other than the defendant's [antitrust] violations" ([Amerinet, Inc. v Xerox Corp., 972 F.2d 1483, 1494 \[8th Cir 1992\]](#), cert denied 506 U.S. 1080, 122 L. Ed. 2d 356, 113 S. Ct. 1048 [1993]). Thus, when an antitrust case has been bifurcated for trial, as this one has been, the plaintiff must establish during the liability portion of the trial that "the violation caused him injury" (Response, 537 F.2d at 1321). This is true even in cases involving alleged per se violations, as here (Atlantic, 495 U.S. at 341-345). The court therefore agrees with Miller's contention that the "fact of damage," i.e., whether Miller sustained an antitrust injury, is an issue that must be litigated [***27] during the liability portion of [****9] the trial.<sup>5</sup>

The previous order of the court (Stander, J.) merely indicated that the trial would be bifurcated "on the issues of liability and damages." It did not address the issue, now before the court, regarding Miller's burden of proof during the first phase of the trial. Thus, the previous order of the court is not the law of the case on that issue.

[3] In view of the foregoing, the court reconsiders the issue of the admissibility of evidence of the termination during the liability portion of the trial. HN11 The previous determination of the court (Stander, J.) on that issue was advisory only (see Miller Brick, 2 A.D.3d at 1343) and thus subject [***28] to revision upon changed circumstances (see CPLR 2221 \(e\) \(2\)). Because the court now concludes that an antitrust injury is an element [**133] that must be proven during the liability portion of the trial, it is self-evident that evidence of the termination is admissible during the first phase of this trial, if for no other reason than, to show an antitrust injury.<sup>6</sup> The court rejects Stark's contention that the time period set forth in CPLR 2221 \(d\) \(3\) is applicable here to Miller's motion. The court further rejects Stark's contention that evidence of the termination is inadmissible as a matter of law under Monsanto. (See discussion above.) The court therefore grants that part of the first motion seeking an order allowing evidence during the liability portion of the trial of Miller's termination as a distributor of Stark's products.

[***29] Finally, the court denies Stark's cross motion for costs.

\*165 On Motion for Reargument

Defendant Stark Ceramics moves for reargument of a prior motion, and upon reargument, for an order in limine precluding plaintiff, George C. Miller Brick Company, from adducing proof of a resale price maintenance agreement between it and Stark because such would not establish a violation of the Donnelly Act. Stark also moves for reargument of the prior motion in limine to prevent plaintiff from adducing proof of "antitrust injury" in the liability phase of the trial, consisting of evidence that Stark terminated Miller Brick's distributorship in retaliation for having to pay another distributor, Black Brick, $ 4,000, representing the difference between Miller Brick's original bid and Black Brick's subsequent bid for the Albion Correctional Facility project. Stark further moves in limine to preclude plaintiff from offering any evidence at trial of the participation of another distributor, and the eventual bid winner on the Albion prison project, Black Brick, in the allegedly [****10] illegal bid-rigging scheme, and to preclude plaintiff from offering similar evidence of alleged [***30] participation by Momack Building Materials in the alleged conspiracy. Finally, Stark moves to preclude plaintiff from offering hearsay statements of Stark, Black Brick, Momack, or other distributors regarding the existence purpose or scope of alleged conspiracy. The background was provided in the court's prior decision, familiarity with which is assumed.

---

<sup>5</sup> Assuming that the trier of fact returns a verdict in favor of Miller during the liability portion of the trial, it will then be Miller's burden of proof during the damage portion of the trial to show "the amount of damages" (see [Rossi v Standard Roofing, Inc., 156 F.3d 452, 484 \[3d Cir 1998\]](#)).

<sup>6</sup> Even under the previous order of the court, it was recognized that evidence of the termination was relevant on the issue of damages.

The cornerstone of Stark's current motion is its argument, raised for the first time in this litigation, that, unlike the Sherman Act (Dr. Miles Med. Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co., 220 U.S. 373, 55 L. Ed. 502, 31 S. Ct. 376 [1911]), the Donnelly Act does not proscribe a vertical agreement establishing the minimum price at which a distributor may resell products purchased from its supplier. (Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Assn., 175 N.Y. 1, 67 N.E. 136 [1903]; Walsh v. Dwight, 40 A.D. 513, 58 N.Y.S. 91 [2d Dept 1899]; see also, Dawn to Dusk v. Brunckhorst Co., 23 A.D.2d 780, 781, 258 N.Y.S.2d 746 [2d Dept 1965] ["Nor is it violative of the statute because it fixes the . . . price to his customers and prohibits the distribution of the goods to any dealers who would [***31] resell the goods to plaintiff"]; Port Chester Wine & Liq. Shop v. Miller Brothers Fruiterers, 253 A.D. 188, 194, 1 N.Y.S.2d 802 [2d Dept 1938] [the Donnelly Act "did not purport to concern itself with vertical price-fixing arrangements based on property rights in good will evidence by a trade name, brand or mark on a commodity in intrastate commerce"]; [**134] Marsich v. Eastman Kodak Co., 244 A.D. 295, 279 N.Y.S. 140 [2d Dept 1935], affd without op 269 N.Y. 621, 200 N.E. 27 [1936]; Locker v. American Tobacco [*166] Co., 121 A.D. 443, 106 N.Y.S. 115 [2d Dept 1907], affd 195 N.Y. 565, 88 N.E. 289 [1909] ["producer may lawfully sell or refuse to sell to any person; may establish the sales price and terms of sale of its products, and what it may lawfully do itself it may lawfully delegate to another, and the exercise of such delegated power by the other is as lawful as if exercised by the producer itself"].)

Stark contends that this so-called New York rule is the more enlightened rule, the federal rule under the Sherman Act under the Dr. Miles Med. Co. case having been largely discredited by the courts Isaksen v. Vermont Castings, Inc., 825 F.2d 1158, 1161-1162 [7th Cir 1987, Posner, J.], [***32] cert denied 486 U.S. 1005, 100 L. Ed. 2d 193 [1988], and commentators (Robert Bork, The Antitrust Paradox, at 33, 289 [1978]). Thus, Stark contends that the court's previous reliance on Anheuser Busch, Inc. v. Abrams (71 N.Y.2d 327, 520 N.E.2d 535, 525 N.Y.S.2d 816 [1988]), for the proposition that the Donnelly Act "should generally be construed in light of Federal precedent and given a different interpretation only where State policy, differences in the statutory language or the legislative history justifies such a result" (id., 71 N.Y.2d at 335, is misplaced to the extent it was employed to uphold the viability of plaintiff's allegations of [****11] concerted action in this case. Stark contends that Dr. Miles is in direct conflict with over a century's jurisprudence in New York which has, according to Stark, held:

"(i) that retail price maintenance agreements pose no threat whatsoever to the competitive process that the Donnelly Act and prior state anti-trust laws were enacted to protect; and (ii) accordingly, that such laws are not intended to and do not regulate such resale price maintenance agreements in any way." (Stark's mem [***33] of law at 8.)

Because Stark seeks an order declaring that

"the allegations of George C. Miller Brick Company, Inc. ('Miller Brick') of resale price maintenance do not establish a violation of the Donnelly Act [,] and [further] precluding Miller Brick from offering proof of 'antitrust injury' in the liability phase, including evidence of Stark Ceramics' termination of the distribution agreement with Miller Brick," plaintiff describes the motion as, in essence, one for summary judgment, which is both procedurally improper in form and untimely under the CPLR. In this, plaintiff is correct. In [Scalp & Blade v. Advest, Inc. \(309 A.D.2d 219, 765 N.Y.S.2d 92 \[4th Dept 2003\]\)](#), the Court held that a motion of this type "has a concretely restrictive [*167] effect on the efforts of plaintiffs to prove their case against defendants and recover certain damages from them." Id. at 224.) HN12

9 Misc. 3d 151, *166 A.2d 801 N.Y.S.2d 120, **134 A.2d 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***33 A.2d 2005 NY Slip Op 25226, ****11

"the order does not merely limit the production of certain evidence . . . , but rather effectively grants defendants partial summary judgment on the critical substantive issue of what constitutes . . . plaintiffs' causes of action[.] . . . defendants' motion, although labeled [***34] one in limine, actually 'was the functional equivalent of a motion for partial summary judgment dismissing the complaint' " id., quoting [Rondout Elec. v. Dover Union Free School Dist., 304 A.D.2d 808, 810-811, 758 N.Y.S.2d 394 \[2d Dept 2003\]](#).

The court agrees with plaintiff that, if the requested order was issued, it would require outright dismissal of the complaint, and therefore defendant's motion is, in reality, in the nature of one for summary judgment. HN13 Such a motion is precluded at this stage of the proceedings [***135] because it was filed more than 120 days after the note of issue was filed. [Brill v. City of New York, 2 N.Y.3d 648, 814 N.E.2d 431, 781 N.Y.S.2d 261 \[2004\]; Clermont v. Hillsdale Indus., 6 A.D.3d 376, 378, 773 N.Y.S.2d 901 \[2d Dept 2004\].](#)

Additionally, Stark's current position with respect to the legality of the arrangements at issue in this case, conceived and proffered to the court for the first time on the eve of trial in this nearly 10-year-old case, is barred by two prior Appellate Division decisions which have established the law of the case. In 2001, the Appellate Division reinstated the complaint against Stark on the ground that [***35] "the distribution agreement, a letter from defendant's representative to the distributors, and the deposition testimony of the parties raise issues of fact concerning how and [***12] when the distributors could bid on projects outside their territories and whether distributors were intended to bid, if at all, on the State project." (Miller Brick Co. v. Stark Ceramics, 281 A.D.2d 960, 961, 722 N.Y.S.2d 679 [4th Dept 2001].) Thereafter, in 2003, the Appellate Division reversed my predecessor's decision to apply the rule of reason standard, finding that the complaint, as "limited [in] its theory of liability to a violation of the Donnelly Act based on bid rigging and price fixing," involves the application of "the per se standard" because "price fixing is alleged." (2 A.D.3d at 1341 [4th Dept. 2003].) On both appeals, defendant urged the Appellate Division to uphold the rulings of the court below on the ground that the distribution agreements involved in the case in no way violated the antitrust laws of the State of New York. (See 281 A.D.2d 960 [2001] [defendants/respondents' [*168] brief (at 9) maintaining that the core of the illegal [***36] agreement alleged by plaintiffs instead "was entirely in accord with the terms of the Distribution Agreement and Bulletins"--thus, the only acts taken by Stark Ceramics in relation to the New York State Prison Expansion Program were to enforce the terms of its distributorship agreement, resolve conflicts between distributors, and to ultimately terminate Miller Brick pursuant to the terms set forth in the Distribution Agreement".] ) Moreover, in Miller Brick (2 A.D.3d 1341 [2003] [brief on behalf of Stark Ceramics, Inc., at 14]), Stark presented the exact same argument that it presented originally on the motion now sought to be reargued: "However, in order for a manufacturer's termination of a distributor to fall within the category of per se illegal restraints (sic), the termination must have been pursuant to a minimum price fixing agreement with at least one other non-terminated distributor." This is, indeed, the same Monsanto argument rejected by the undersigned in its decision and order earlier this year, and was therefore fully rejected also by the Appellate Division in 2003. Implicit in these determinations was a corollary decision that the cases now cited by defendant [***37] do not preclude relief on the remaining cause of action to be tried in this case. Accordingly, the determinations by the Appellate Division on each of the indicated appeals is law of the case, thereby requiring denial of Stark's current motion.

On the merits, however, the Anheuser-Busch case is precisely on point, in that it rejected the very argument defendant now makes for the first time in this litigation that vertical restraint agreements are legal in this state. In that case, the targets of a grand jury investigation moved to quash a subpoena issued by the Attorney General pursuant to an investigation into marketing practices in the beer industry alleged to violate the Donnelly Act. As defendant now maintains on this [**136] motion to reargue, the targets of the subpoenas maintained that the [****13] vertical territorial and other arrangements at issue in that case were per se legal and that such legality was "established by 'seven decades of unanimous precedent' and that the Legislature has acquiesced in such an interpretation of the Donnelly Act by failing to amend the statute to overrule those decisions." (71 N.Y.2d at 333.) The cases relied on by [***38] the grand jury targets referred to above (71 N.Y.2d at 330 [Points of Counsel]), and Judge Bellacosa as the lone dissenter (71 N.Y.2d at 336-339), are the cases Stark now relies upon in its motion for reargument and reconsideration. The majority opinion

9 Misc. 3d 151, *168L<sup>1</sup> 801 N.Y.S.2d 120, **135L<sup>2</sup> 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1163, ***37L<sup>3</sup> 2005 NY Slip Op 25226, ****12

[*169] "conclude[d], however, that the cases cited by petitioners do not conclusively establish, either singly or in combination, a rule of per se legality for vertical territorial arrangements[,] [n]or does the statutory language foreclose the Attorney-General's position that such arrangements, if shown to result in an unreasonable restraint of trade under the circumstances, are prohibited." (71 N.Y.2d at 333)

This case involves much more than a simple vertical territorial arrangement, although plaintiff clearly alleges that such a vertical territorial arrangement existed. In addition, plaintiff alleges that the territorial arrangement included a key element of price fixing and that such price fixing was enforced by enforced bid rigging and, in addition, termination of a distributor who not only bid outside its territory but undercut the distributor assigned to that territory. Plaintiff [***39] claims to be the victim of the scheme after having been forced by Stark to agree to it. As the Court of Appeals has held, the Donnelly Act reaches such conduct even if the conspiracy is wholly vertical, i.e., supplier/manufacturer and distributor. ([Creative Trading Co. v. Larkin-Pluznick-Larkin, Inc., 148 A.D.2d 352, 354-357, 356, 539 N.Y.S.2d 1 \[1st Dept 1989\]](#) Sullivan, J., dissenting], revd on dissenting op below [75 N.Y.2d 830, 551 N.E.2d 1236, 552 N.Y.S.2d 558 \[1990\]HN14](#)<sup>1</sup> the [Donnelly Act reaches "competing distributors who conspire among themselves and with a supplier to terminate a fellow distributor for selling at a discount" (emphasis supplied)], citing [United States v. General Motors Corp., 384 U.S. 127, 86 S. Ct. 1321, 16 L. Ed. 2d 415 \[1966\]](#); see also, [Bedell Wholesale Co. v. Philip Morris, 272 A.D.2d 854, 708 N.Y.S.2d 226 \[4th Dept 2000\]](#) noted in 103 NY Jur. 2d, Trade Regulation § 19, 2003 Cum Supp, at 70, which cited [Creative Trading Co. v. Larkin-Pluznick-Larkin, Inc. \(supra\), and involved a vertical restraint with no horizontal components]). Even the leading New York treatise on the subject acknowledges that the [***40] Donnelly Act would apply in these circumstances, although the author speculates that the Court of Appeals might prefer a rule of reason standard to the per se standard in light of the cases cited by Stark. (Robert L. Haig, Commercial Litigation in the New York State Courts § 79:20, at 1267-1268 [4-A West's NY Prac Series 2005].) In this case, the 2003 Appellate Division decision forecloses any argument on that score.

[****14] And even that does not describe the end of plaintiff's allegations in this case. Ultimately, this is not solely a "resale price maintenance" case of the kind upheld by the cited New York decisions under the Donnelly Act. As pointed out in plaintiff's [*170] memorandum of law, HN15<sup>1</sup> resale price maintenance cases "typically describe those situations where a manufacturer specifies a minimum price list for its product line and prohibits its distributors from underselling one another by lower than that price." Id. at 6-7 n 3.) According to plaintiff, "Stark [**137] did not have a 'resale price maintenance' policy in the traditional sense[;][i]nstead, Stark had a bid rigging policy that fixed the price for prison expansion project sales at a certain level," and a termination policy when one [***41] distributor, i.e., plaintiff, attempted to undersell (i.e., underbid) on a project. Accordingly, if plaintiff proves its case, defendant will be found guilty of bid rigging under the Donnelly Act. (Cf., [People v. Schwartz, 160 A.D.2d 964, 554 N.Y.S.2d 686 \[2d Dept 1990\]](#).)

Finally, Stark's contention that the doctrine of collateral estoppel precludes it from proving that Black Brick and Momack participated in the alleged illegal scheme is without merit. First, the dismissal of Black Brick from the complaint does not create a preclusion except insofar as Black Brick's potential liability to plaintiff is concerned. Plaintiff's purpose in proving the circumstances surrounding Black Brick's ultimate award of the bid in question, and the participation of Momack, is not for the purpose of establishing their liability. Rather, such evidence is adduced for the purpose of showing that Stark was part of the conspiracy with plaintiff, one of its many New York distributors. Such evidence, under the theory pursued by plaintiff, described in the Appellate Division decisions and this court's February decision and order in this case, will not require any special interrogatories to the jury as to [***42] their participation. The only question the jury will be asked to answer is whether Stark participated with the plaintiff in the alleged scheme, and they may surely consider on relevancy grounds Stark's contemporaneous arrangements with other similarly situated distributors in upstate New York in making that determination. Thus, as plaintiff contends, the issue is not one of issue preclusion under the collateral estoppel doctrine, but whether, as law of the case, Black Brick's dismissal from the complaint, which went unappealed, can preclude plaintiff's effort to show that defendant was part of a conspiracy with it by reference to evidence that other distributors similarly situated, except as to territory, had a similar arrangement. Nothing in the law of the case doctrine [*171] directs a court to preclude the [****15] proffered evidence, and, accordingly, the motion is denied.<sup>7</sup>

[***43] The balance of defendant's motion seeking preclusion of hearsay evidence is denied inasmuch as there is no specification of what is sought to be excluded.

Conclusion

Defendant's motion is denied in its entirety.

---

End of Document

---

<sup>7</sup> Stark's current position is ironic, given that it argued on the original motion that the charged conspiracy between it and plaintiff could not be shown under Monsanto absent proof that defendant also agreed on similar terms with its other nonterminated distributors. That motion proceeded, and was decided, on the assumption that plaintiff had no other proof of the agreement between it and Stark. This motion was brought in response to plaintiff's assurances after the court's decision that, indeed, it had such other proof.

The court also rejects Stark's argument that it had insufficient discovery of such proof. Plaintiff provided interrogatory answers identifying the "other distributors" as having been involved in the conspiracy and, in any event, it is no secret who Stark's upstate distributors were and their respective territories.

TXU Generation Co., L.P. v. PUC of Tex.

Court of Appeals of Texas, Third District, Austin

May 19, 2005, Filed

NO. 03-04-00148-CV

Reporter

165 S.W.3d 821 *; 2005 Tex. App. LEXIS 3771 **

TXU Generation Company, L.P.; TXU Portfolio Management Company, L.P.; Oncor Electric Delivery Company; Coalition of Wholesale Electric Market Participants; Occidental Chemical Corporation; Occidental Permian, Ltd.; Occidental Power Marketing, L.P.; Occidental Power Services, Inc.; Oxy Vinyls, L.P.; Ingleside Cogeneration, L.P.; and Coral Power, L.L.C., Appellants v. Public Utility Commission of Texas, Appellee

Subsequent History: Petition for review denied by TXU Generation Co. LP v. PUC of Tex., 2006 Tex. LEXIS 1091 \(Tex., Oct. 27, 2006\)

Prior History: [\[\*\*1\]](#) DIRECT APPEAL FROM THE PUBLIC UTILITY COMMISSION OF TEXAS.

Disposition: Affirmed.

Core Terms

---

electricity, market power, reliability, WMO Rule, priced, wholesale market, market participant, withholding, wholesale, prohibited activity, transmission, ancillary services, intent element, generation, provisions, regulation, consumer, notice, statutory authority, vagueness, practices, unconstitutionally vague, electric power, manipulation, contends, preamble, markets, marginal cost, customer, overrule

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Administrative Law > Governmental Information > Recordkeeping & Reporting

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Market Participant Doctrine

HN1 [down arrow] Governmental Information, Recordkeeping & Reporting

The Wholesale Market Oversight Rule (WMO Rule), 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, addresses the oversight of the Public Utility Commission of Texas of the wholesale market by enumerating the duties of market participants and defining prohibited activities. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(f\), \(g\). The rule provides a defense to a market participant who engages in a prohibited activity if the participant demonstrates that the otherwise prohibited activity served a legitimate business purpose and that its adverse effects were not foreseeable. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(h\). The rule defines the role of the Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) in enforcing operating standards for market participants and establishes a process for market participants to clarify ERCOT protocols to ensure compliance. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(i\), \(l\). Finally, the rule establishes record-keeping requirements for market participants and ERCOT, and details the Commission's investigation process. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(k\), \(l\).

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Constitutional Controls > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > Judicial Review > General Overview

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Administrative Law > ... > Constitutional Controls > Authority to Adjudicate > Validity of Legislation

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > ... > Public Utility Commissions > Hearings & Orders > Judicial Review

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Governments > Agriculture & Food > General Overview

HN2 Separation of Powers, Constitutional Controls

In a direct appeal of a Public Utility Commission of Texas rule pursuant to § 39.001\(e\) of the Public Utilities Regulation Act, the court of appeals is limited to reviewing the rule's validity. Tex. Util. Code. Ann. § 39.001\(f\) (Supp. 2004-2005). A validity challenge tests a rule on procedural and constitutional grounds. A validity challenge may also question the agency's statutory authority to promulgate the rule. An agency rule is presumed valid, and the challenging party bears the burden to demonstrate its invalidity.

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Actual Authority > Implied Authority > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Authority to Act > Actual Authority > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

HN3 Actual Authority, Implied Authority

The Public Utility Commission of Texas is a creature of the legislature and has no inherent authority. It may exercise only those specific powers that the law confers upon it in clear and express language. As a general rule, the legislature impliedly intends that the agency should have whatever power is reasonably necessary to fulfill a function or perform a duty that the legislature has expressly placed in the agency. Absent specific or implied statutory authority, an agency rule is void because it is made without legal authority.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

HN4 Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

The Public Utility Commission of Texas may not exercise what is effectively a new power or a power contradictory to the statute based merely on a claim that the power is expedient for administrative purposes. Although a rule must comport with the Commission's authorizing statute, the legislature does not need to include every specific detail or anticipate all unforeseen circumstances. To establish a rule's facial invalidity, the challengers must show that the rule: (1) contravenes specific statutory language; (2) runs counter to the general objectives of the statute; or (3) imposes additional burdens, conditions, or restrictions in excess of or inconsistent with the relevant statutory provisions. In construing the Commission's authority, the reviewing court looks to the statute as a whole, not any specific provision in isolation.

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > Deference to Agency Statutory Interpretation

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > General Overview

HN5 Standards of Review, Deference to Agency Statutory Interpretation

A reviewing court gives serious consideration of the agency's interpretation of a statute, as long as that interpretation does not contradict the plain language of the statute. The legislature intends to give an agency, created to centralize expertise in a certain regulatory area, a large degree of latitude in the methods it uses to accomplish its regulatory function. However, the court need not give as much deference to an agency's interpretation of its statute if that interpretation deals with a non-technical question of law or a matter outside of the agency's expertise.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN6 Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004\(e\).

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > Pricing Conduct

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

HN7 Utility Companies, Buying & Selling of Power

The Public Utility Commission of Texas has the authority to address the abuse of market power. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157 commands the Commission to monitor the market power of those involved in generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electricity and to remedy abusive behavior by seeking an injunction or civil penalties, imposing administrative penalties, or suspending, revoking, or amending a participant's certificate or registration. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157\(a\) (Supp. 2004-2005). Market power abuses include predatory pricing, withholding of production, precluding entry, and collusion. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157\(a\) (Supp. 2004-2005).

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Deregulation & Restructuring

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > Wholesale Rates

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Ownership & Restructuring

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

HN8 Electric Power Industry, State Regulation

The Public Utility Commission of Texas is charged with protecting the consumer. For example, the Commission must ensure that, by the time set for the establishment of competition in the retail electricity market, protections are in place which entitle customers to safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\) (Supp. 2004-2005). A retail electricity customer is entitled to protection from unfair, misleading, or deceptive practices. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101\(b\)\(6\). The Commission is also directed to modify its rules regarding customer protections to ensure that at least the same level of customer protection against potential abuses and the same quality of service that exists [prior to competition], is maintained in a restructured electricity market. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101\(f\). Although the focus in § 39.101 is on the retail market, both wholesale and retail rates are now set by the market, and consequently, behavior in the wholesale market which affects price and reliability will directly impact the retail market as well.

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > Access to Electricity

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Deregulation & Restructuring

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

HN9 Electricity Distribution & Transmission, Access to Electricity

See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.151\(a\).

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

**HN10** [L] Regulators, Public Utility Commissions

The plain language of Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.151 anticipates that the Public Utility Commission of Texas will have rules relating to reliability and accounting because the independent operator's procedures are to be made consistent with the Commission's rules.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Bilateral Contracts

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Contracts for Service

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

**HN11** [L] Types of Contracts, Bilateral Contracts

The Public Utilities Regulation Act gives the Public Utility Commission of Texas broad authority to monitor and remedy market power abuses. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157\(a\). Indeed, some of the specific examples of market power abuses listed in the statute are clearly possible in the wholesale bilateral contracts market. Furthermore, the structure of the Texas electricity system requires the Commission to act in the wholesale market in order to fulfill its statutory obligations to protect the consumer. Price fluctuation in the wholesale market will be reflected in the retail market. Thus, abusive practices in the wholesale market will have a direct effect on price and reliability in the retail market. The statute gives both the Commission and the Electric Reliability Council of Texas authority to address the behavior of market participants in the wholesale market, and such authority extends to the bilateral contracts market.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

**HN12** [L] Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\).

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

**HN13** [L] Public Utility Commissions, Authorities & Powers

The legislature specifically directed the Public Utility Commission of Texas to oversee the wholesale market to ensure reasonably priced electric power for ancillary services. Tex. Util. Code Ann. 35.004\(e\). In the existing competitive wholesale market, scarcity of electric power will be reflected in higher prices throughout the market, including prices for ancillary services. Thus, the Commission's statutory authority to ensure that ancillary services are available at reasonable prices necessarily implies the power to regulate conduct that materially and adversely affects reliability.

Administrative Law > Judicial Review > Standards of Review > Deference to Agency Statutory Interpretation

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Standards of Review, Deference to Agency Statutory Interpretation

Although many of the prohibited activities enumerated in the rule clearly contain an element of intent, the court will not imply an element of intent to the general definition of prohibited activities in 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\) of the Wholesale Market Oversight (WMO) Rule. The WMO Rule reflects the decision of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, based on its expertise, that both intentional and unintentional actions in the wholesale market that adversely affect reliability must be prohibited in order to prevent market power abuse, ensure retail customers safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity, and ensure reasonably priced electric power for ancillary services.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

HN15 [blue icon] Energy & Utilities, State Regulation

Charged with preventing market power abuse, Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157, ensuring safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity for consumers, Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\), and ensuring reasonably priced electricity for ancillary services, Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004\(e\), the Public Utility Commission of Texas established the Wholesale Market Oversight (WMO) Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, which allows the market to set the price of electricity in accordance with the normal forces of supply and demand. Market participants are merely prevented from manipulating the market or acting in such a way as to disrupt the reliability of electricity service or artificially inflating price. Because the WMO Rule allows normal market forces to set the price of power, it does not favor regulation over competition. In fact, the limitations placed on market participants by the Commission exist for the purpose of fostering competition in a market that is uniquely vulnerable to disruption and manipulation.

Administrative Law > ... > Formal Adjudicatory Procedure > Hearings > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

HN16 [blue icon] Formal Adjudicatory Procedure, Hearings

16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(l\)\(4\) governs the procedure of the Public Utility Commission of Texas for requesting the initiation of an enforcement proceeding after an informal fact-finding review, not the standards to be applied at such a hearing.

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN17 [L] Electric Power Industry, State Regulation

16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(m\) applies only to those remedies specifically authorized in the Public Utilities Regulation Act. Tex. Util. Code Ann. §§ 15.023, .028, .030 (1998).

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN18 [L] Regulators, Public Utility Commissions

Although Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001 clearly anticipates competition in both the wholesale and retail markets, the Public Utility Commission of Texas is also required to ensure that electricity is safe, reliable, and reasonably priced for consumers. Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\). The Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, adequately reflects the legislature's desire to balance market interests and consumer protections.

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > Electricity Generation

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Market Participant Doctrine

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN19 [L] Electricity Distribution & Transmission, Electricity Generation

The Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, specifies that a market participant's withholding of production constitutes an abuse of market power when that participant has "market power."

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > General Overview

HN20 [L] Electric Power Industry, State Regulation

It is appropriate for the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, to take into account the unique nature of the electricity industry in defining market power, and the rule is not inconsistent with the Public Utilities Regulation Act.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN21 [blue icon] Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\).

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN22 [blue icon] Electric Power Industry, State Regulation

See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\)\(7\).

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Overbreadth

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Governments > Legislation > Vagueness

HN23 [blue icon] Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

In a facial challenge, the court will consider any limiting construction of the rule. Courts apply several standards of review to vagueness challenges, depending on the subject of the statute or rule at issue.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Governments > Legislation > Vagueness

HN24 [blue icon] Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

A reviewing court will find a rule unconstitutionally vague only if it (1) does not give fair notice of what conduct may be punished, and (2) invites arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement by its lack of guidance for those charged with its enforcement.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN25 [blue icon] Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

In determining whether a rule gives fair notice, the reviewing court examines whether the rule conveys sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices.

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN26 [blue icon] Energy & Utilities Law, Antitrust Issues

The Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, specifically states that activities that would otherwise be prohibited, including practices that materially and adversely affect reliability, are not violations when (1) they serve a legitimate business purpose consistent with prices set by competitive market forces, and (2) the adverse effect on reliability, price, or accounting was not known or foreseeable with the exercise of due diligence. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(h\). This provision gives clear notice that unforeseen accidents will not give rise to liability under the rule. The fact that § 25.503\(h\) is an affirmative defense does not lessen the notice to market participants of what conduct is prohibited. Certainly, participants in the wholesale electricity market can determine whether their actions are taken in the service of a legitimate business purpose that is not anticompetitive. Furthermore, the rule does not require clairvoyance as to whether an action will impact price, reliability, or accounting--only diligence.

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Market Participant Doctrine

HN27 [blue icon] Electric Power Industry, State Regulation

The fluid concept of market power in the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, does not render enforcement of the market power abuse provision so uncertain as to deprive market participants of constitutionally required fair notice. Notice is determined by reading the rule in its entirety. Section 25.503\(h\) of the rule exempts otherwise prohibited conduct when a market participant has acted in accordance with the protocols of the Electric Reliability Council of Texas or has (1) pursued a legitimate business purpose and (2) exercised due diligence to avoid an adverse affect on prices, reliability and accounting. Thus, the examples brought forward where a market participant would be found to have engaged in prohibited conduct because it was not aware that it possessed market power are misplaced. The rule simply requires market participants to be diligent in avoiding adverse affects on the market. If a diligent inquiry would not reveal the adverse affect of legitimate activity on the market, the activity is excluded from the rule's definition of market power abuse.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Vagueness

HN28 [blue icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

The absence of a definition of market power does not render the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, unconstitutionally vague.

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Governments > Legislation > Vagueness

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Market Participant Doctrine

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

**HN29** [+] Public Utility Commissions, Authorities & Powers

The Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, defines "efficient operation of the market" as characterized by the fullest use of competitive auctions to procure ancillary services, minimal cost socialization, and the most economical utilization of resources, subject to operational and other constraints. 16 Tex. Admin. Code Ann. § 25.503\(c\)\(2\). This definition certainly provides guidance of what the Public Utility Commission of Texas is seeking. More importantly, the rule does not impose a duty to scour the protocols for inefficiency. There is a duty to report only if a market participant subjectively believes that a procedure produces an outcome inconsistent with the efficient and reliable operation of the market. The provision is not unconstitutionally vague.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

**HN30** [+] Procedural Due Process, Scope of Protection

Each of the challenged provisions of the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, when read in the context of the entire rule, provides reasonable notice of what conduct may be punished and does not invite arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement.

Constitutional Law > Bill of Rights > Fundamental Rights > Eminent Domain & Takings

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

**HN31** [+] Fundamental Rights, Eminent Domain & Takings

Because the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503, does not require market participants to sell power at marginal cost, the rule is not an unconstitutional taking in all of its applications.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > State Proceedings

**HN32** [+] Agency Rulemaking, State Proceedings

Proper notice is given when a proposed rule is changed to incorporate comments and no new subjects of regulation or persons besides those previously given notice are affected. The federal standard for adequate notice under the federal Administrative Procedure Act states that the modified final rule must be a "logical outgrowth" of the proposed rule. Stated differently, if the final rule does not materially alter the issues addressed in the proposed rule, then notice will be deemed sufficient. The two standards are consistent: The relevant inquiry under both standards is whether the agency's notice fairly apprises affected parties of the pertinent issues to allow them to comment and participate in the rulemaking process in a meaningful and informed manner.

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Market Participant Doctrine

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > State Proceedings

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN33 [blue icon] Public Utility Commissions, Authorities & Powers

The proposed rule of the Public Utility Commission of Texas provided adequate notice of its more fluid concept of market power in the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503. The proposed rule contains a section prohibiting "economic withholding" and defines the term as an offer of energy or capacity by a market participant in an amount sufficiently large that the market cannot clear without the offer. By defining economic withholding in terms of whether the market can clear without the offer, the Commission indicated that its prohibition on economic withholding would apply regardless of traditional notions of market power. The Commission satisfied the notice requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > State Proceedings

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN34 [blue icon] Agency Rulemaking, State Proceedings

The Public Utility Commission of Texas complied with the Administrative Procedure Act by including a concise statement of its statutory authority to promulgate the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule, 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503.

Judges: Before Chief Justice Law, Justices B. A. Smith and Pemberton: Opinion by Justice B. A. Smith; Dissenting Opinion by Justice Pemberton.

Opinion by: Bea Ann Smith

Opinion

---

[*827] In this direct appeal, we consider a challenge to the validity of the Public Utility Commission's rule, 29 Tex. Reg. 1899 (2004) (to be codified at 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503 (Pub. Util. Comm'n)),<sup>1</sup> [**2] governing its oversight of the competitive wholesale electricity market. Appellants and intervenor (collectively, "market participants")<sup>2</sup> contend that the WMO Rule (1) exceeds the Commission's statutory authority, (2) is unconstitutionally vague, (3) represents an unconstitutional taking, and (4) was passed in violation of provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (APA). We affirm the Commission's order adopting the rule.

---

<sup>1</sup> Although the commission's rule has not yet been codified, we will use its administrative code citation for the sake of clarity and convenience. We will refer to the rule as the Wholesale Market Oversight Rule (WMO Rule).

BACKGROUND

An understanding of the structure of the electricity market in Texas is important to a proper determination of the validity of the challenged rule. The electricity market is unlike an ordinary market for goods or services because of the unique attributes of electricity. Electricity cannot be easily stored once it is generated and it relies on a complex infrastructure to deliver electric power from generators to the consumer. Because of constraints in the transmission system, electric power generated in some areas of the market may not be available for use in other locations. As we will discuss throughout this opinion, [**3] these attributes create problems that do not arise in other competitive markets.

There are three principal components to the electricity industry: "generation of power; transmission of that power on high-voltage lines over long distances; and distribution of power over shorter distances to the ultimate consumer." City Pub. Serv. Bd. of San Antonio v. Public Util. Comm'n, 9 S.W.3d 868, 870 (Tex. App.--Austin 2000), aff'd, 53 S.W.3d 310, 312, 44 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1014 (Tex. 2001). The entire industry has historically been considered a natural monopoly. Reliant Energy, Inc. v. Public Util. Comm'n, 101 S.W.3d 129, 133 (Tex. App.--Austin 2003), rev'd and remanded Centerpoint Energy, Inc. v. Public Util. Comm'n, 143 S.W.3d 81, 47 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1156 (Tex. 2004). More recently, in recognition that the power generation and power distribution components of the electricity industry are not monopolies warranting strict regulation, the legislature has opened the wholesale electricity markets and retail electricity market to competition and market forces. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001(a) (West Supp. 2004-05) (production and sale of electricity [**4] not monopoly warranting regulation of rates, operation and services). The transmission component of the industry remains closely regulated by the Commission. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004 (West. Supp. 2004-05). This aspect of the industry is administered by the independent organization Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT).<sup>3</sup>

[*828] The WMO Rule at issue applies primarily to participants in the wholesale electricity market. Both electric power and capacity are available in the wholesale market through (1) bilateral agreements and (2) the balancing energy services (BES) or ancillary services market.<sup>4</sup> See *Tex. Com. Energy v. TXU Energy, Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13908, at *11 (S.D. Tex. June 24, 2004)*. The unique nature of electricity presents challenges to the industry. The transmission of electric power relies on a complex transmission [**5] grid which itself needs to be balanced by either adding power or removing power from the grid. The transmission grid is kept in balance with power and capacity purchased through the BES market. Although the majority of electric power is bought and sold through bilateral contracts, retailers may purchase short term power through the BES market as well. See *2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13908, at *7*.

In restructuring electricity markets in favor of competition, the legislature was aware that the unique nature of electricity and the industry was not wholly consistent with a fully deregulated market and the application of established antitrust principles. In recognition of this fact, the legislature decided to retain a regulatory scheme with regard to transmission services. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004. It allowed utilities to recover [**6] the costs of prudently incurred expenditures that were rendered unrecoverable as a result of the deregulated market. See id. §§ 39.251-265 (West Supp. 2004-05); Reliant Energy, 101 S.W.3d at 132. Specific consumer protection provisions were added to ensure that deregulation, in fact, achieves a benefit to the consumer. See id. § 39.101 (West Supp. 2004-05).

<sup>2</sup> Appellants include TXU Generation Company, L.P., TXU Portfolio Management Company, L.P., TXU Electric Delivery Company (collectively, TXU); Coalition of Wholesale Electric Market Participants (Coalition); Occidental Chemical Corporation, Occidental Permian, Ltd., Occidental Power Marketing, L.P., Occidental Power Services, Inc., Oxy Vinyls, L.P., Ingleside Cogeneration, L.P. (collectively, Occidental); Coral Power, L.L.C.; and Texas Genco, L.P. is the intervenor.

<sup>3</sup> ERCOT is also a term used to refer to the transmission system which provides power to roughly 85 percent of the State.

<sup>4</sup> The BES is a market for same day purchases of power made in fifteen-minute intervals. The ancillary services market is a market for same day or day-ahead purchases of capacity.

Furthermore, the legislature directed the Commission to monitor and address market power abuses associated with the generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electricity. See id. § 39.157 (West Supp. 2004-05). A review of the record reflects that the legislature's concerns about anticompetitive practices and manipulation in the wholesale market were well founded.

One instance of market manipulation involved power generators overscheduling the amount of power they anticipated adding to the transmission grid. This overscheduling created congestion in the grid which those same generators were then paid to relieve. The Commission became aware of this practice and eventually required participants to refund $ 30,000,000 obtained as a result of these improper practices. See *Tex. Com. Energy, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13908, at *13*. [**7] The Commission has identified the practice of "hockey stick bidding" as another example of anticompetitive manipulation of the wholesale market. This bidding process involved a pricing strategy that created short term artificial price spikes in the BES market. See *2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13908, at *14-15* (describing February 2003 price spike in BES market). A Commission report states that this bidding practice added at least $ 17 million in additional cost to power used over the course of two days in February 2003.

The Commission has also given considerable attention to the conduct of market participants in the California electricity market where abusive practices resulted in power shortages and soaring prices. See *Enron Corp. v. California ex rel. Lockyer (In re Enron Corp.), 314 B.R. 524, *8-11 (D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 2004)* (describing manipulation of California wholesale electricity market). [*829] Against the backdrop of these abusive practices, the Commission established the WMO Rule to articulate standards that the Commission will apply in monitoring the activities of those participating in the wholesale electricity markets. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code. § 25.503(a) [**8] .

HN1[] The WMO Rule addresses the Commission's oversight of the wholesale market by enumerating the duties of market participants and defining prohibited activities. See id. § 25.503(f),(g). The rule provides a defense to a market participant who engages in a prohibited activity if the participant demonstrates that the otherwise prohibited activity served a legitimate business purpose and that its adverse effects were not foreseeable. See id. at § 25.503(h). The rule defines the role of ERCOT in enforcing operating standards for market participants and establishes a process for market participants to clarify ERCOT protocols to ensure compliance. See id. at § 25.503(i),(j). Finally, the rule establishes record-keeping requirements for market participants and ERCOT, and details the Commission's investigation process. See id. at § 25.503(k),(l). The challenges raised in this direct appeal apply almost exclusively to those portions of the rule that define the duties of market participants and those activities which are prohibited.

DIRECT APPEAL

HN2[] In a direct appeal of a Commission rule pursuant to section 39.001(e) of the Public Utilities Regulation Act (PURA), we [**9] are limited to reviewing the rule's validity. See Tex. Util. Code. Ann. § 39.001(f) (West Supp. 2004-05); Office of Pub. Util. Counsel v. Public Util. Comm'n, 104 S.W.3d 225, 232-33 (Tex. App.--Austin 2003, no pet.), City Public Service Board of San Antonio v. Public Utility Commission of Texas, 96 S.W.3d 355, 359 (Tex. App.--Austin 2002, no pet.). A validity challenge tests a rule on procedural and constitutional grounds. City of Alvin v. Public Utility Commission of Texas, 143 S.W.3d 872, 878 (Tex. App.--Austin 2004, no pet.). A validity challenge may also question the agency's statutory authority to promulgate the rule. Id. An agency rule is presumed valid, and the challenging party bears the burden to demonstrate its invalidity. Office of Pub. Util. Counsel, 104 S.W.3d at 232. In this case, the market participants raise issues concerning the statutory authority of the Commission to promulgate the WMO Rule, the constitutionality of the rule, and the procedures through which the rule was enacted.

STATUTORY AUTHORITY

All of the market participants contend that, by enacting the WMO Rule, the Commission [**10] has assumed powers that are not authorized by the legislature. HN3[<sup>1</sup>] The Commission is a creature of the legislature and has no inherent authority. Public Util. Comm'n v. GTE-Southwest, Inc., 901 S.W.2d 401, 406, 38 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 485 \(Tex. 1995\). It "may exercise only those specific powers that the law confers upon it in clear and express language. As a general rule, the legislature impliedly intends that the agency should have whatever power is reasonably necessary to fulfill a function or perform a duty that the legislature has expressly placed in the agency." Id. at 407. Absent specific or implied statutory authority, an agency rule is void because it is made without legal authority. Office of Pub. Util. Counsel, 104 S.W.3d at 232.

HN4[<sup>1</sup>] The Commission may not exercise what is effectively a new power or a power contradictory to the statute based merely on a claim that the power is expedient for administrative purposes. GTE-Southwest, Inc., 901 S.W.2d at 406. Although a rule must comport with the Commission's authorizing statute, the legislature does not need to include every specific detail or anticipate all unforeseen circumstances. Railroad Comm'n v. Lone Star Gas Co., 844 S.W.2d 679, 687, 36 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 436 \(Tex. 1992\). [**11] [*830] To establish the WMO Rule's facial invalidity, the market participants must show that the rule: (1) contravenes specific statutory language; (2) runs counter to the general objectives of the statute; or (3) imposes additional burdens, conditions, or restrictions in excess of or inconsistent with the relevant statutory provisions. See City of Corpus Christi v. Public Util. Comm'n, 51 S.W.3d 231, 236, 44 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 823, 44 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1101 \(Tex. 2001\); Office of Pub. Util. Counsel, 104 S.W.3d at 232. In construing the Commission's authority, we look to the statute as a whole, not any specific provision in isolation. Reliant Energy, Inc. v. Public Util. Comm'n, 62 S.W.3d 833, 839 \(Tex. App.--Austin 2001, no pet.\).

HN5[<sup>1</sup>] We give serious consideration of the Commission's interpretation of PURA, as long as that interpretation does not contradict the plain language of the statute. Continental Casualty Company v. Downs, 81 S.W.3d 803, 807, 45 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 755 \(Tex. 2002\). The legislature intends to give an agency, created to centralize expertise in a certain regulatory area, a large degree of latitude in the methods it uses to accomplish its regulatory function. State v. Public Util. Comm'n, 883 S.W.2d 190, 197, 37 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1102 \(Tex. 1994\). [**12] However, we need not give as much deference to an agency's interpretation of its statute if that interpretation deals with a non-technical question of law or a matter outside of the agency's expertise. Rylander v. Fisher Controls Int'l., Inc., 45 S.W.3d 291, 302 \(Tex. App.--Austin 2001, no pet.\).

Statutory Powers of the Commission

Before addressing the contentions of the market participants, it is useful to review the relevant statutory powers granted to the Commission by the legislature. Section 39.001\(a\) of PURA explains that the statute's purpose is to "protect the public interest during the transition to and in the establishment of a fully competitive electric power industry." Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(a\). Section 39.001\(d\) states that this objective is to be carried out through competitive rather than regulatory means to the greatest extent feasible, and that the Commission's rules should be "practical and limited so as to impose the least impact on competition." Id. § 39.001\(d\). Several provisions of the statute deal directly with the Commission's authority to oversee the behavior of participants in the wholesale [**13] electricity market.

The statute clearly gives the Commission broad authority to create rules governing the conduct of market participants in the BES and ancillary services market. Section 35.004\(e\) states:

HN6[<sup>1</sup>] The commission shall ensure that ancillary services necessary to facilitate the transmission of electric energy are available at reasonable prices with terms and conditions that are not unreasonably preferential, prejudicial, predatory, or anticompetitive.

Id. § 35.004\(e\).<sup>5</sup> In addition HN7 the Commission has the authority to address the abuse [*831] of market power. Section 39.157 commands the Commission to monitor the market power of those involved in generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electricity and to remedy abusive behavior by seeking an injunction or civil penalties, imposing administrative penalties, or suspending, revoking, or amending a participant's certificate or registration. Id. § 39.157\(a\) (West Supp. 2004-05). Market power abuses include predatory pricing, withholding of production, precluding entry, and collusion. Id.

[**14] HN8 The Commission is also charged with protecting the consumer. For example, the Commission must ensure that, by the time set for the establishment of competition in the retail electricity market, protections are in place which entitle customers to "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity." Id. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\) (West Supp. 2004-05). A retail electricity customer is entitled to protection from unfair, misleading, or deceptive practices. Id. § 39.101\(b\)\(6\). The Commission is also directed to modify its rules regarding customer protections to ensure that "at least the same level of customer protection against potential abuses and the same quality of service that exists [prior to competition], is maintained in a restructured electricity market." Id. § 39.101\(f\). Although the focus in section 39.101 is on the retail market, both wholesale and retail rates are now set by the market, and consequently, behavior in the wholesale market which affects price and reliability will directly impact the retail market as well.

Commission's Authority Over the Wholesale Market

We initially address Coalition and Coral Power's contention that the WMO Rule is invalid because [**15] it unlawfully usurps authority granted to ERCOT by the legislature. See City Pub. Serv. Bd., 53 S.W.3d at 316 (as creature of legislature, Commission has no authority beyond those powers conferred by legislature). PURA section 39.151 calls for the establishment of an independent organization charged with ensuring:

- HN9 (1) access to transmission and distribution systems;
- (2) reliability and adequacy of the regional electric network delegates;
- (3) timely distribution of information concerning customer choice; and
- (4) accurate accounting of production and delivery in the wholesale market.

Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.151\(a\). ERCOT is the established independent organization for most of the State of Texas. See Hammack v. Public Util. Comm'n, 131 S.W.3d 713, 719 \(Tex. App.--Austin 2004, pet. denied\). Coalition and Coral Power insist that legislature granted this authority to ERCOT and limited the Commission's role in these matters to "oversight and review." See id. § 39.151\(d\). They contend that the WMO Rule's detailed provisions governing the conduct of market participants oversteps the role of oversight [*16] and review and assumes powers delegated to ERCOT.

<sup>5</sup> Coalition contends that the final sentence in section 35.004\(e\) negates the Commission's authority over the ancillary services market once customer service is introduced. The final sentence of section 35.004\(e\) states:

On the introduction of customer choice in the ERCOT power region, acquisition of generation-related ancillary services on a nondiscriminatory basis by the independent organization in ERCOT on behalf of entities selling electricity at retail shall be deemed to meet the requirements of this subsection.

Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004\(e\) (West 2004-05) (emphasis added). Reading the statute as a whole, however, it is clear that the legislature intended that only acquisitions of ancillary services by the independent organization would be deemed to meet the requirements of the section. This is because the independent organization is not affiliated with any market participant and is already subject to Commission oversight. See id. § 39.151.

Coalition and Coral Power's contention is based on an incomplete reading of the statute. The provision granting the commission "oversight and review" authority states:

An independent organization certified by the commission for a power region shall establish and enforce procedures consistent with this title and the commission's rules relating to the reliability of the regional electric network and accounting for the production and delivery of electricity among generators and all other market participants. The procedures shall be subject to commission oversight and review.

Id. (emphasis added). Here, HN10[<sup>1</sup>] the plain language of the statute anticipates that the [*832] Commission will have rules relating to reliability and accounting because the independent operator's procedures are to be made consistent with the Commission's rules. Although Coalition and Coral power may question the wisdom of establishing overlapping procedures of the independent organization and Commission rules relating to reliability and accounting, this is a matter to be addressed to the legislature.

Coalition further contends that the Commission lacks [**17] the statutory authority to prohibit market power abuses in the wholesale bilateral contracts market. However, HN11[<sup>1</sup>] the statute gives the Commission broad authority to monitor and remedy market power abuses. See id. § 39.157\(a\). Indeed, some of the specific examples of market power abuses listed in the statute are clearly possible in the wholesale bilateral contracts market. Furthermore, the structure of the Texas electricity system requires the Commission to act in the wholesale market in order to fulfill its statutory obligations to protect the consumer. In our system, price fluctuation in the wholesale market will be reflected in the retail market. Thus, abusive practices in the wholesale market will have a direct effect on price and reliability in the retail market. Because we find that the statute gives both the Commission and ERCOT authority to address the behavior of market participants in the wholesale market, and that such authority extends to the bilateral contracts market, we overrule Coalition and Coral Power's challenge to the validity of the rule on these grounds.

Intent as an Element

Next, Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco challenge the WMO Rule on the [**18] grounds that it lacks an intent element in defining prohibited conduct. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\). They argue that the Commission lacks the statutory authority to prohibit conduct that is not intentional and that the prohibition's inclusion of unintentional conduct runs counter to the general objective of the statute to impose only "practical and limited" rules favoring competition rather than regulation. However, Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco's argument relies on the incorrect assumption that the only statutory basis for the WMO Rule's prohibited activities is the prevention of market power abuse pursuant to PURA section 39.157. Because we hold that the Commission is empowered to regulate conduct in the wholesale market for the purposes of protecting consumers and ensuring reasonably priced power for ancillary services, we will overrule Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco's contention.

Texas Genco directs this Court to antitrust principles in the context of interpreting the term "market power abuses." It contends that the element of intent is inherent in the term "market power abuse" and therefore any prohibited activities included in [**19] the rule must also contain an element of intent. In fact, the United States Supreme Court has read an intent element into the Sherman Antitrust Act. See Verizon Communications Inc v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 540 U.S. 398, 124 S. Ct. 872, 878-79, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 \(2004\); United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 \(1966\). The Sherman Act prohibits monopolization and does not expressly contain an element of intent. 15 U.S.C.A. § 2 \(West 1997\) ("Every person who shall monopolize . . . shall be deemed guilty."). The court explained that an offense under the act requires, "in addition to the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market, 'the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.'" Verizon, 124 S. Ct. at 878 (citing Grinnell Corp., 384 U. S. at 570-571). The court further [*833] justified reading willfulness into the statute:

The mere possession of monopoly power, and the concomitant charging of monopoly prices, is not only [**20] not unlawful; it is an important element of the free-market system. The opportunity to charge monopoly prices--at least for a short period--is what attracts "business acumen" in the first place; it induces risk taking that produces innovation and economic growth. To safeguard the incentive to innovate, the possession of monopoly power will not be found unlawful unless it is accompanied by an element of anticompetitive conduct.

Id. at 878-79. Similarly, the Supreme Court has interpreted language in the Securities and Exchange Act which prohibits the use of any "manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance" in the sale or purchase of securities to include an element of willfulness. Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 199, 47 L. Ed. 2d 668, 96 S. Ct. 1375 (1975) (terms "manipulative, device, and contrivance" indicate willful conduct).

Although antitrust law does not control our interpretation of PURA,<sup>6</sup> the reasoning of the Supreme Court in interpreting the Sherman Antitrust Act and the Securities and Exchange Act is persuasive when interpreting the Commission's authority to monitor and remedy "market power abuse." See Tex. Util. Code Ann. 39.157(a) [**21]. Abuse is defined as "a corrupt practice" or "deceitful act." Webster's New International Dictionary 8 (3rd ed. 1986). The term "market power abuse" suggests that the legislature intended to prohibit only intentional or willful conduct. See Ernst & Ernst, 425 U.S. at 197.

Section (g) of the WMO Rule prohibits HN12 [**22] "any act or practice that materially and adversely affects the reliability of the regional electric network" or the proper accounting for the production and delivery of electricity." While this general prohibition lacks any element of intent, the rule then lists a number of specific practices that all appear to include an element of intent. The dissent insists that an element of intent be implied in the WMO Rule. If the authority for this rule was derived only from section 39.157\(a\) governing "market power abuse," we would agree that an element of intent is implied. However, we look to the statute as a whole, not any specific provision in isolation, to determine the Commission's statutory authority. See Reliant Energy, 62 S.W.3d at 839.

The dissent, Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco all contend that the absence of an intent element in the WMO Rule exceeds the Commission's statutory authority. The dissent states that both chapter 39 of PURA and the Texas Free Enterprise and Antitrust Act seek to balance the policy goals of promoting competition and protecting the integrity of market mechanisms. It then concludes that the majority ignores these antitrust principles. The dissent overlooks a vital objective of PURA--to protect the consumer in the new competitive marketplace. [**23] See Tex. Util. Code Ann. §§ 39.001(a) (West 2004-05) ("this chapter is enacted to protect the public interest during the transition to and the establishment of a fully competitive electric power industry"), 39.101\(a\)\(1\) (consumers [*834] entitled to safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity) (West 2004-05). As we will discuss below, the Commission also has statutory obligations to protect consumers in a deregulated market and to ensure reasonably priced ancillary services for the transmission of electricity. The WMO Rule's prohibition of some unintentional conduct is authorized by these additional statutory powers. See id.; Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 35.004(e) (West 2004-05).

Reviewing the Commission's order, it is clear that the Commission relied on the consumer protection provisions of PURA as a basis for its authority in drafting the WMO Rule, as well as the market power abuse provision in section 39.157. See 29 Tex. Reg. 1905 (purpose of the WMO Rule is to protect consumer). Section 39.101\(a\) of PURA commands the Commission to establish protections which ensure that customers receive "safe, reliable, and reasonably [**24] priced electricity." Although section 39.101 was established to protect retail customers, the legislature has decided that both the retail and wholesale electricity markets should be governed by market forces. Thus, issues relating to reliability or price in the wholesale market will necessarily be reflected in the retail market.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Texas Genco cites language in PURA section 39.158\(b\) that the statute is intended to complement other existing state and federal antitrust law. It contends that this provision indicates the legislature's intent that the statute be construed using "established antitrust principles." Texas Genco's contention is based on a reading of one sentence in section 39.158\(b\) in isolation. Section 39.158\(b\) has nothing to do with construing other provisions within the statute; it merely states that the remedies in the statute were intended to add to, not replace, existing antitrust provisions.

<sup>7</sup> Texas Genco acknowledges in its reply brief that increased prices in the Texas wholesale market will be reflected in the retail market by distinguishing the Texas industry from California where "utilities could not increase rates to reflect increases in

In the market system established by the legislature, the Commission would be unable to ensure retail customers "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity" if its authority did not extend to the wholesale market. See GTE-Southwest, Inc., 901 S.W.2d at 407 (legislature impliedly intends agency has all power reasonably necessary to carry out statutory function).

[**25] In addition, HN13↑ the legislature specifically directed the Commission to oversee the wholesale market to ensure reasonably priced electric power for ancillary services. Tex. Util. Code Ann. 35.004\(e\). In the existing competitive wholesale market, scarcity of electric power will be reflected in higher prices throughout the market, including prices for ancillary services. Thus, the Commission's statutory authority to ensure that ancillary services are available at reasonable prices necessarily implies the power to regulate conduct that materially and adversely affects reliability. See GTE-Southwest, Inc., 901 S.W.2d at 407.

HN14↑ Although many of the prohibited activities enumerated in the rule clearly contain an element of intent, we will not imply an element of intent to the general definition of prohibited activities in section 25.503\(g\) of the WMO Rule. The WMO Rule reflects the Commission's decision, based on its expertise, that both intentional and unintentional actions in the wholesale market that adversely affect reliability must be prohibited in order to prevent market power abuse, ensure retail customers "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced" [\[\*\*26\]](#) electricity," and ensure reasonably priced electric power for ancillary services. See Public Util. Comm'n, 883 S.W.2d at 197 (deference given to agency interpretation of statute that relies upon agency expertise). We overrule Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco's contention that the WMO Rule's definition of prohibited activity must contain an element of intent.

Rule Not Inconsistent With Statute

We also disagree with Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco's contention that the prohibition of unintentional activities runs counter to the general objectives of [\[\*835\]](#) the statute. They argue that the WMO Rule (1) favors regulation over competition, and (2) is not practical and limited in its impact on competition. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(d\). HN15↑ Charged with preventing market power abuse, see id. § 39.157, ensuring safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity for consumers, see id. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\), and ensuring reasonably priced electricity for ancillary services, see id. § 35.004\(e\), the Commission established the WMO Rule which allows the market to set the price of electricity in accordance with the normal forces of [\[\*\*27\]](#) supply and demand. Market participants are merely prevented from manipulating the market or acting in such a way as to disrupt the reliability of electricity service or artificially inflating price. Because the WMO Rule allows normal market forces to set the price of power, it does not favor regulation over competition. In fact, the limitations placed on market participants by the Commission exist for the purpose of fostering competition in a market that is uniquely vulnerable to disruption and manipulation.

The WMO Rule is also practical and limited. The rule is broad enough to encompass all activities that may materially affect reliability, but it is limited in its application. The affirmative defense provision allows market participants to demonstrate that activities which may have materially affected the reliability of electric service were in service of a legitimate business purpose and the resulting effect on the market was not foreseeable. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(h\).

Occidental argues that the WMO Rule's informal investigation process in which a market participant may justify an otherwise prohibited activity is not "practical and [\[\*\*28\]](#) limited." See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(d\). It explains that informal investigations are not limited in duration and subjects market participants to "significant financial risk and uncertainty." However, we hesitate to second guess the Commission's determination that the WMO Rule is a practical and limited means to achieve the Commission's legitimate goals. The WMO Rule balances the sometimes competing statutory obligations of establishing a competitive market for electricity and ensuring safe, reliable, and reasonably priced power for consumers and ancillary services by allowing market forces to set the price of electricity, but prohibiting market manipulation and activities that will materially affect reliability. The Commission was undoubtably aware that even an informal investigation of those who might innocently engage in prohibited activities would impose a burden on the market participant. But the Commission's balancing of its statutory obligations through the WMO Rule relies upon the Commission's considerable understanding of the operation of the electricity market and this is precisely the sort of agency interpretation that courts should [\[\*\*29\]](#) give deference to. See Public Util. Comm'n, 883 S.W.2d at 197. We overrule Occidental, TXU, and Texas Genco's contention that the rule is inconsistent with the general objectives of the statute.

Burden of Proof

Because we hold that no intent element is mandated by statute, we also reject the market participants' contentions and the comments by the dissent that the WMO Rule impermissibly shifts the burden of proof on intent to market participants through the affirmative defense provision in section 25.503\(h\). More specifically, Occidental and Coalition insist that the WMO Rule is invalid because it generally shifts the burden of proof from the Commission to market participants. Coalition contends that section 25.503\(l\)\(4\) of the WMO Rule requires only a minimal showing of a violation before it shifts the burden to a market participant [\[\*836\]](#) to prove its innocence. However, HN16↑ this provision governs the Commission's procedure for requesting the initiation of an enforcement proceeding after an informal fact-finding review, not the standards to be applied at such a hearing. The rule requires the Commission to include specific information regarding its investigation [\[\*\*30\]](#) "as part of its prima facie case." Id. § 25.503\(l\)\(4\)\(A\)-\(D\). We note that the rule does not equate the required information with a prima facie showing of a violation in an enforcement proceeding. Rather, it enumerates specific showings to be made by the Commission in order initiate an enforcement proceeding. Our reading of the language of the WMO Rule is confirmed by the Commission's admission in its post-submission letter brief comparing the required showing of prohibited conduct to a showing of probable cause and explaining that "subsection (l) does not describe the evidence required for the Commission to find at the conclusion of [an enforcement action] that a market participant has violated the Rule." As referenced by the WMO Rule, an enforcement action is governed by the procedures laid out in section 22.246 of the administrative code. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 22.246 (administrative penalties).<sup>8</sup> Because section 25.503\(l\)\(4\) does not establish a burden of proof for enforcement proceedings, we reject Occidental and Coalition's challenge to the validity of the WMO Rule on these grounds.

[**31] Scope of the Remedy

Coalition also contends that section 25.503\(m\) impermissibly expands the Commission's authority by authorizing the imposition of "any legal remedy" for a violation of the rule by a market entity. However, the preamble of the rule states that subsection (m) was not intended to expand or limit the types of remedies available to the Commission. Furthermore, the Commission concedes in its brief that it only has authority to impose those remedies available under PURA. We agree that HN17↑ subsection \(m\) of rule 25.503 applies only to those remedies specifically authorized in PURA. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. §§ 15.023, .028, .030 (West 1998).

No Impermissible Regulation of Price

Coalition and Coral Power next contend that the Commission's rule impermissibly regulates the price of electricity by requiring market participants to charge marginal cost prices. This contention relies on language in the preamble to the rule that states, "pricing in excess of marginal cost by a seller who is immune from the chastening hand of competition is an abuse of market power," and on additional language that the Commission has a duty to [\[\*\*32\]](#) protect the public from prices that are "substantially above the marginal cost of a marginally efficient unit when not tempered by competition." 29 Tex. Reg. 1916. We do not read these statements in the preamble to set the price of power at "marginal cost." In fact, the Commission deleted a provision in its proposed rule which did exactly that. Read in context, the preamble merely makes the wholly unremarkable observation that prices that are substantially above the marginal cost of power from the most expensive generating unit, under circumstances where there is no possibility of a competing offer, are harmful to the public. In light of the administrative record and the explicit statements by the Commission that the [*837] WMO Rule does not require marginal-cost pricing, we find no merit in the theory that a market participant will be coerced into setting prices at an unprofitable rate out of an unsubstantiated fear that the Commission will initiate an investigation.

<sup>8</sup> Although the burden of proof is not discussed in section 22.246 of the administrative code, the Commission states in its post-submission letter brief that "in all cases the burden is on the Commission staff to demonstrate the elements of a prima facie case to the satisfaction of an administrative law judge, if applicable, and ultimately to the Commissioners as decisionmakers."

In a related point, Coalition and Coral Power defend the market's susceptibility to "temporary price spikes." They contend that the WMO Rule interferes with "the normal forces of competition," and thus imposes regulatory rather [**33] than competitive means to control market behavior. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(d\). Presumably, Coalition and Coral Power adopt the reasoning of the Supreme Court in Verizon, that the opportunity to impose monopoly prices provides incentive to market participants to innovate and develop the industry. See Verizon, 124 S. Ct. at 878-79. HN18<sup>18</sup> Although the statute clearly anticipates competition in both the wholesale and retail markets, the Commission is also required to ensure that electricity is safe, reliable, and reasonably priced for consumers. See id. § 39.101\(a\)\(1\). We conclude that the Commission's rule adequately reflects the legislature's desire to balance market interests and consumer protections. We overrule Coalition and Coral Power's issues regarding the regulation of price.

Market Power

Coral Power contends that the Commission's concept of market power is inconsistent with the statute and case law defining market power. HN19<sup>19</sup> The WMO Rule specifies that a market participant's withholding of production constitutes an abuse of market power when that participant has "market power." The Commission explains in [**34] the preamble to the rule that its concept of market power is necessarily fluid:

In electricity markets, it is difficult to find markets that continuously operate under a competitive environment, and it is not unusual to find local market power in geographical pockets, even when the generation share of each resource owner is low, because transmission constraints or other reliability constraints often give some resource owners temporary or localized market power. Market power is a dynamic phenomenon in electricity markets, and the commission must have the ability to address abuses that occur during the times when the market is not competitive, even as those times become less frequent.

29 Tex. Reg. 1916. Coral Power points to a provision of the statute which limits a generator's share of installed capacity to twenty percent of the total. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.154\(a\). Coral Power also directs us to federal antitrust case law which states that claims of illegal monopolization under the Sherman Act should usually be rejected when the alleged monopoly possesses less than thirty percent market share. See M & M Med. Supply & Serv. v. Pleasant Valley Hosp., 981 F.2d 160, 168 \(4th Cir. 1992\) [**35] (en banc) (citing 3 Philip Areeda & Donald F. Turner, Antitrust Law P 835, at 350). Based on the statutory limit of generation capacity to twenty percent and federal antitrust law, Coral Power argues that the Commission may not adopt its own concept of market power which subjects to scrutiny those generators who possess less than twenty percent capacity.

We find no indication that the legislature intended to adopt twenty percent as a cutoff definition of market power. Had the legislature believed that a generation capacity of more than twenty percent is required to possess market power, then the limitations on generation capacity would render PURA section 39.157's prohibition on market power abuse irrelevant. See [Meritor Auto., Inc. v. Ruan Leasing, 1\*838\] 44 S.W.3d 86, 90, 44 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 549 \(Tex. 2001\)](#) (we presume entire statute intended to be effective and "when possible, each sentence, phrase, clause and word is given effect, so that the statute makes sense as a cohesive whole"). We also do not find the reasoning of the Fourth Circuit in M & M Medical Supply to be applicable to the Texas electricity industry. See 981 F.2d at 168. The electricity industry is inherently [**36] different from commerce in other goods and services. The sale of electricity is bound to a transmission grid which may often obtain power or capacity only from certain generators in certain locations. It would make little sense to determine market power as a percentage of total capacity statewide in instances when only a portion of the capacity is actually available. Furthermore, the Commission has substantial expertise in the application of market forces to the electricity market. We grant deference to the Commission's interpretation of PURA when that interpretation is based on the Commission's specialized expertise. See Public Util. Comm'n, 883 S.W.2d at 197. We hold that HN20↑ it is appropriate for the Commission's rule to take into account the unique nature of the electricity industry in defining market power and that the rule is not inconsistent with the statute. We overrule Coral Power's challenge to the WMO Rule's use of the term market power.

CONSTITUTIONAL CHALLENGES

Vagueness

All market participants allege that the WMO Rule is unconstitutionally vague. Their primary concerns focus on the general definition of a prohibited activity in section 25.503\(g\) [\[\*37\]](#) and the prohibition of market power abuse in subsection \(g\)\(7\). The general provision prohibits HN21↑ "any act or practice that materially and adversely affects the reliability of the regional electric network or the proper accounting for the production and delivery of electricity." 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\). The prohibition on market power abuse includes HN22↑ "withholding of production, whether economic withholding or physical withholding, by a market participant who has market power." Id. § 25.503\(g\)\(7\). The WMO Rule does not define the term market power.

Because this is a direct appeal, we may consider only a facial challenge to the rule: that the rule is impermissibly vague in all of its applications. See Village of Hoffman Estates v. Flipside, Hoffman Estates, Inc., 455 U.S. 489, 494-95, 71 L. Ed. 2d 362, 102 S. Ct. 1186 \(1982\); City Pub. Servs. Bd. of San Antonio, 96 S.W.3d at 359. HN23↑ In a facial challenge, we will consider any limiting construction of the rule provided by the Commission. See Village of Hoffman, 455 U.S. at 494. Courts apply several standards of review to vagueness challenges, depending [\[\*38\]](#) on the subject of the statute or rule at issue. We first note that the market participants do not allege that the WMO Rule impinges upon any constitutionally protected conduct, and therefore, we do not apply the higher scrutiny of an "overbreadth" challenge. See Village of Hoffman Estates, 455 U.S. at 494. Instead we will apply the standards for determining whether the rule is unduly vague.

HN24↑ We will find a rule unconstitutionally vague only if it (1) does not give fair notice of what conduct may be punished, and (2) invites arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement by its lack of guidance for those charged with its enforcement.<sup>9</sup> [\[\*839\] Rooms with a View, Inc. v. Private Nat. Mortgage Ass'n, Inc., 7 S.W.3d 840, 845 \(Tex. App.-Austin 1999, pet. denied\)](#); see Village of Hoffman Estates, 455 U.S. at 498; Commission for Lawyer Discipline v. Benton, 980 S.W.2d 425, 437, 41 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1250 \(Tex. 1998\). The United States Supreme Court has explained:

Although the doctrine focuses both on actual notice to citizens and arbitrary enforcement, we have recognized recently that the more important aspect of vagueness doctrine 'is not actual notice, [\[\*39\]](#) but the other principal element of the doctrine--the requirement that a legislature establish minimal guidelines to govern law enforcement.'

---

<sup>9</sup> We decline the Commission's invitation to apply the less stringent standard for vagueness applicable to economic regulation. Where, as here, a rule or statute carries "potentially significant civil and administrative penalties, including fines and license revocation," quasi-criminal treatment is appropriate and thus the more strict standard of review applies." Ford Motor Co. v. Texas Dep't of Transp., 264 F.3d 493, 508 \(5th Cir. 2001\) (citing Women's Med. Ctr. of N. W. Houston v. Bell, 248 F.3d 411, 422 \(5th Cir. 2001\)).

Kolender v. Lawson, 461 U.S. 352, 357-58, 75 L. Ed. 2d 903, 103 S. Ct. 1855 (1983) (citing Smith v. Goguen, 415 U.S. 566, 574, 39 L. Ed. 2d 605, 94 S. Ct. 1242 (1974)). Moreover, Justice Tom C. Clark noted that courts must take a realistic approach to ruling on vagueness:

Few words possess the precision of mathematical symbols, most statutes must deal with untold and unforeseen variations in factual situations, and the practical necessities of discharging the business of government inevitably limit the specificity with which legislators can spell out prohibitions. Consequently, no more than a reasonable degree of certainty can be demanded. Nor is it unfair to require that one who deliberately goes perilously close to an area of proscribed conduct shall take the risk that he may cross the line.

Boyce Motor Lines, Inc. v. United States, 342 U.S. 337, 340, 96 L. Ed. 367, 72 S. Ct. 329 (1952); see Rooms with a View, 7 S.W.3d at 845 (statute not automatically void for vagueness simply because it is difficult [**40] to determine whether certain "marginal" acts fall within its language).

The market participants contend that subsection (g) of the WMO Rule is unconstitutionally vague because it does not give fair notice of what conduct may be punished under the law. See Rooms with a View, 7 S.W.3d at 845. HN25[<sup>1</sup>] In determining whether a rule gives fair notice, we examine whether the rule conveys sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured [**41] by common understanding and practices. See Pennington v. Singleton, 606 S.W.2d 682, 689, 23 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 587 (Tex. 1980). Because our concern is for those to whom the WMO Rule is directed, we scrutinize the rule by asking whether the ordinary participant in the wholesale electric power market could understand and comply with it. See Commission for Lawyer Discipline, 980 S.W.2d at 437 (disciplinary rules scrutinized under "ordinary lawyer" standard).

Prohibited activities

Coalition, Texas Genco, TXU, and Occidental object to the general definition of a prohibited activity contained in the WMO Rule. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503(g). TXU presents examples of mechanical failures and computer glitches which may adversely affect reliability or accounting. It contends that the rule gives insufficient notice because a market participant could be found to have engaged in a prohibited activity as a result of accidents or ordinary mechanical breakdowns. It argues that an open-ended, broadly worded prohibition is confusing, creates unknown risks to market participants and does not provide the specificity needed to allow market [**42] participants to take measures to avoid violations. The dissent acknowledges [*840] these contentions stating "the market participants go as far as to urge that [WMO Rule] is unconstitutionally vague, and they are not far off the mark. . . ." However, we do not read this subsection of the rule in isolation. See Reliant Energy, 62 S.W.3d at 839. HN26[<sup>1</sup>] The WMO Rule specifically states that activities that would otherwise be prohibited, including practices that materially and adversely affect reliability, are not violations when (1) they serve a legitimate business purpose consistent with prices set by competitive market forces, and (2) the adverse effect on reliability, price, or accounting was not known or foreseeable with the exercise of due diligence. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503(h). This provision gives clear notice that the unforeseen accidents described by TXU will not give rise to liability under the rule.<sup>10</sup> The fact that subsection (h) is an affirmative defense does not lessen the notice to market participants of what conduct is prohibited.<sup>11</sup> Certainly, participants in the wholesale electricity market can determine whether their actions [**43] are taken in the service of a legitimate business purpose that is not anticompetitive. Furthermore, the rule does not require clairvoyance as to whether an action will impact price, reliability, or accounting--only diligence.

---

<sup>10</sup> The Commission also points out in its post-submission letter brief that the ERCOT protocols address issues such as scheduled maintenance and the shutdown of plants. When an action is authorized by ERCOT under its protocols, it is not a prohibited activity. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503(g) (prohibited activity excludes acts or practices expressly allowed by ERCOT protocols or by official interpretations of protocols).

<sup>11</sup> TXU complains of the stigmatizing effect of informal commission investigations in which it is compelled to provide information demonstrating that certain actions served legitimate business purposes. However, we cannot conclude that an informal investigation, even when it is disclosed to the public, amounts to the sort of "punishment" which raises vagueness concerns.

[**44] Courts have upheld similarly general prohibitions when challenged for vagueness. For example, the Sherman Antitrust Act's prohibition on anticompetitive behavior merely states that "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States . . . shall be deemed guilty of a felony." 15 U.S.C.A. § 2. This provision has consistently been found to provide fair notice. See Nash v. United States, 229 U.S. 373, 57 L. Ed. 1232, 33 S. Ct. 780, 781-82 \(1913\); <sup>12</sup> Atlas Building Prods. Co. v. Diamond Block and Gravel Co., 269 F.2d 950, 955 \(10th Cir. 1959\) (restraint of trade and monopolization provision of Sherman Act have long been sustained against claim of unconstitutional vagueness).

[**45] In Pennington, the state supreme court held that the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices--Consumer Protection Act (DTPA) provided adequate notice to survive a vagueness challenge. Pennington, 606 S.W.2d at 689-90. Although the supreme court allowed "greater leeway" noting that [*841] the DTPA is a regulatory statute governing business activity, the similarities between the DTPA and the WMO Rule make the reasoning persuasive. The DTPA contains a general prohibition that "false, misleading, or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce are hereby declared unlawful." Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.46\(a\) (West Supp. 2004-05). It then provides a non-exhaustive list of false, misleading, or deceptive acts. Id. § 17.46\(b\). The supreme court explained that the general nature of the statute was necessary:

The boundaries of illegality under the DTPA must remain flexible because it is impossible to list all methods by which a consumer may be misled or deceived.

Pennington, 606 S.W.2d at 689.<sup>13</sup> We note that the supreme court also declined to require an intent element in order for the statute [**46] to pass constitutional muster. Id. at 689-90.

The dissent counters that the United States Supreme Court has imposed an element of willfulness on the Sherman Act in order to cure vagueness. See United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 \(1966\); Verizon Communications, Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 540 U.S. 398, 124 S. Ct. 872, 878-79, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 \(2004\). However, this element of intent was imposed as a matter of statutory interpretation, [**47] not out of vagueness concerns. See Verizon Communications, 123 S. Ct. at 878-79; see also Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 199, 47 L. Ed. 2d 668, 96 S. Ct. 1375 \(1975\) (construing language of Securities and Exchange Act to include element of intent).

The dissent also incorrectly construes language from the Texas Supreme Court's opinion in Caller-Times Pub. Co. v. Triad Comm., Inc., 826 S.W.2d 576, 581, 35 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 509 \(Tex. 1992\). There, the supreme court noted while interpreting the Texas Antitrust Act that a vague standard has a "chilling effect" on business. Id. Again, this statement was made as a matter of statutory interpretation, not in the context of a vagueness challenge. Moreover, the United States Supreme Court has found a constitutional violation from the "chilling effect" of a law only where the law's vagueness would limit rights that are afforded heightened constitutional protection, such as free speech.

<sup>12</sup> In Nash, Justice Holmes explained that the constitution's guarantee of fair notice does not equate to perfect notice:

The law is full of instances where a man's fate depends on his estimating rightly, that is, as the jury subsequently estimates it, some matter of degree. If his judgment is wrong, not only may he incur a fine or a short imprisonment, as here; he may incur the penalty of death. . . . The criterion in such cases is to examine whether common social duty would, under the circumstances, have suggested a more circumspect conduct.

Nash v. United States, 229 U.S. 373, 33 S. Ct. 780, 781-82, 57 L. Ed. 1232 \(1913\).

<sup>13</sup> In construing the DTPA, the supreme court noted the need for section 17.46\(a\)'s "catch-all" provision:

A broad interpretation is warranted, however, due to human inventiveness in engaging in deceptive or misleading conduct. The legislature did not intend its express purpose of protecting consumers from false trade practices to be circumvented by those who would seek out loopholes in the Act's provisions.

Pennington v. Singleton, 606 S.W.2d 682, 688, 23 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 587 \(Tex. 1980\).

See *Dombrowski v. Pfister, 380 U.S. 479, 486-87, 14 L. Ed. 2d 22, 85 S. Ct. 1116 \(1965\)*. And even in the area of free speech, the United States Supreme Court has never considered the chilling effect of a law to be a sufficient basis, in and of [\[\*\*48\]](#) itself, for prohibiting state action. *Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 51, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669, 91 S. Ct. 746 \(1971\)*. Thus, we find no support in the decisions of the federal or state supreme courts for the proposition that the WMO Rule is unconstitutionally vague.<sup>14</sup>

[*842] We hold that the WMO Rule's general definition of prohibited activities provides the fair notice required by the constitution. Reading the statute as a whole, we conclude [\[\*\*49\]](#) that the broad language in the definition is tempered by the availability of a defense when a market participant has acted in accordance with ERCOT protocols, or has (1) pursued a legitimate business purpose and (2) exercised due diligence to avoid an adverse affect on prices, reliability and accounting. See *16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(h\)*. We overrule Coalition, Texas Genco, TXU, and Occidental's vagueness challenge to the WMO Rule's prohibited activities.

Market power

All market participants contend that the Commission's failure to define market power in the WMO Rule renders it unconstitutionally vague. They point to the prohibition of market power abuse, which includes, "withholding of production, whether economic withholding or physical withholding, by a market participant who has market power." *16 Tex. Admin. Code 25.503\(g\)\(7\)*. Market participants contend that, without a clear definition of market power, they cannot know if or when they possess market power and, therefore, are uncertain when the rule may apply to their decisions on when to operate generation resources and what price to set. Coral [\[\*\*50\]](#) Power gives the example of its generation resources which may provide power to ERCOT or to the Southwest Power Pool (SPP). These resources consist of less than ten percent of the total ERCOT capacity. Coral Power continually decides whether to sell power to ERCOT or SPP based on the expected market price. It argues that, without a definition of market power, it cannot know whether the decision to sell power to SPP rather than ERCOT will be considered withholding and, therefore, a violation under section 25.503\(g\)\(7\). TXU asserts that the failure to define market power leaves enforcement of the market power abuse rule completely in the Commission's discretion, creating the possibility of arbitrary enforcement. See *Coffee City v. Thompson, 535 S.W.2d 758, 763 \(Tex. Civ. App.--Tyler 1976, writ ref'd n.r.e.\)*.

Although the Commission agrees that a definition of market power is needed, it provides some guidance in the preamble to the WMO Rule. The Commission explains that the traditional concepts of market power do not fit the Texas electricity market. 29 Tex. Reg. 1916. It characterizes market power in the wholesale electricity market as a "dynamic phenomenon" and notes [\[\*\*51\]](#) that constraints in transmission and reliability often give resource owners "temporary or localized market power." Id. The Commission points to similar language in an order by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) in the rulemaking record stating that market participants who normally do not possess market power may exercise market power in instances of extreme supply or demand conditions.

The lack of a well defined concept of market power does produce some uncertainty in the enforcement of the rule. However, HN27<sup>15</sup> this more fluid concept of market power does not render enforcement of the market power abuse provision so uncertain as to deprive market participants of constitutionally required fair notice. See *Boyce Motor Lines, 342 U.S. at 340* ("no more than a reasonable degree of certainty can be demanded"). Notice is determined by reading the rule in its entirety. As we discussed above, section 25.503\(h\) of the rule exempts otherwise prohibited conduct when a market participant has acted in accordance with ERCOT protocols or has (1) pursued a legitimate business purpose and (2) exercised due diligence to avoid an adverse affect on prices, reliability and accounting. [\[\*\*52\]](#) [\[\*843\]](#) Thus, the examples brought forward where a market participant would be found to have engaged in prohibited conduct because it was not aware that it possessed market power are misplaced. The rule simply requires market participants to be diligent in avoiding adverse affects on the market. If a diligent inquiry would not reveal the adverse affect of legitimate activity on the market, the activity is excluded from the rule's definition of market power abuse.<sup>15</sup> See id.

---

<sup>14</sup> We also reject the dissent's argument that vagueness in the WMO Rule would "chill competition in a manner inconsistent with the legislature's intent." As we have discussed above, the affirmative defense included in the WMO Rule alleviates much of the complained of uncertainty by giving a market participant guidance that, if it is diligent as to the effects of its actions on the market, the market participant will not be subject to liability under the rule. Nor do we conclude that any remaining uncertainty in the WMO Rule would result in some sort of de facto regulation.

[**53] The Commission's fluid concept of market power also does not create the possibility of arbitrary enforcement. TXU compares the failure to define market power in the WMO Rule with the ordinance in Coffee City, where the issuance of building permits was left to the "arbitrary discretion . . . of the city secretary without any rule or standard to follow." Coffee City, 535 S.W.2d at 763. By contrast, the WMO Rule provides detailed guidance on how violations of the rule are to be investigated, see 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503(l)(1-3), prosecuted, see id. § 25.503(l)(4), and enforced. See id. § 22.246 (entitlement to a hearing before administrative law judge). Reading the WMO Rule in its entirety, and in context of other administrative code provisions dealing with enforcement, we conclude that HN28↑] the absence of a definition of market power does not render the rule unconstitutionally vague. We overrule all market participants' issues concerning the vagueness of the WMO Rule's use of the term market power.

Miscellaneous provisions

A variety of other provisions in the WMO Rule have been challenged as unconstitutionally [**54] vague. The arguments supporting these contentions stem primarily from reading terms in the rule in isolation rather than in the context of the entire rule. See Reliant Energy, 62 S.W.3d at 839. We will address each specific contention to determine whether the rule provides the reasonable degree of certainty required by the constitution.

TXU contends that the rule is unconstitutionally vague because it fails to define what sort of conduct constitutes the "economic withholding" that is prohibited in section 25.503(g)(7). TXU recognizes the Commission's discussion of economic withholding in the preamble to the rule but claims that the Commission requires market participants to price power at "marginal cost," an equally undefined term. See 29 Tex. Reg. 1916. We have already held in this opinion that the rule does not "set prices" at marginal cost. The preamble gives an example of economic withholding in which a market participant would bid all or a large portion of its production "at a very high price, regardless of marginal costs." Id. The Commission explains that a market participant who has market power can be assured that its artificially high bid will be [**55] selected often enough to compensate for those instances when the bids are not accepted because the market contains a sufficient supply at a reasonable price. Id. The prohibition on economic withholding was established to prevent the creation of artificial scarcity of reasonably priced power in the market. Considering the Commission's comments in the preamble, see Village of Hoffman, 455 U.S. at 494, and the fact that the [*844] rule does not set the price of power at marginal cost, we hold that the rule provides reasonable notice of the meaning of economic withholding to avoid vagueness.

Coalition challenges section 25.503(f)(12)'s requirement that a market participant "who identifies a provision in the ERCOT procedures that produces an outcome inconsistent with the efficient and reliable operation of the ERCOT-administered markets" call the provision to the attention of the appropriate ERCOT subcommittee. Coalition complains that a market participant may violate the rule simply because it does not share the Commission's evaluation of the intent or effect of a protocol. HN29↑] The rule defines "efficient operation of the market" as characterized by "the fullest use of competitive [**56] auctions to procure ancillary services, minimal cost socialization, and the most economical utilization of resources, subject to operational and other constraints." 16 Tex. Admin. Code Ann. § 25.503(c)(2). This definition certainly provides guidance of what the Commission is seeking. More importantly, the rule does not impose a duty to scour the protocols for inefficiency. There is a duty to report only if a market participant subjectively believes that a procedure produces an outcome inconsistent with the efficient and reliable operation of the market. The provision is not unconstitutionally vague.

<sup>15</sup> Occidental contends that the prohibition on creating "artificial congestion" is unconstitutionally vague because "a market participant cannot create artificial congestion without knowing how others operate their units . . . and that market participants do not always have sufficient knowledge to anticipate the effects the their actions may produce." If, in fact, the market participant lacked access to information which would reveal the possibility of creating congestion, section 25.503(h) would exempt the conduct from prosecution as a prohibited activity. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503(h).

Coalition complains that section 25.503\(i\) requires market participants to follow official interpretations of ERCOT protocols by ERCOT employees when the Commission may later determine that the official interpretation violates the rule. It contends that provision violates due process by requiring market participants to comply with vague and inconsistent legal requirements. Again we find that the affirmative defense for actions taken with a legitimate business purpose--coupled with the exercise of due diligence as to the effect on reliability, price, and accounting--gives [\[\*57\]](#) sufficient notice of what conduct may subject market participants to liability. See id. § 25.503\(h\). Although subsection \(i\)\(6\) does state that reliance on informal communication with ERCOT staff may not be relied on as an affirmative defense, reliance on an official interpretation by ERCOT would represent diligence under the rule.

Coalition also challenges the WMO Rule's guidance to the Commission in monitoring the activities of market participants as unconstitutionally vague. It points to provisions stating that the Commission will consider, in monitoring the market, whether an activity (1) materially reduced competitiveness of the market, including whether the activity unfairly impacted other market participants in a way that restricts competition, or (2) interfered with the efficient operation of the market. See id. § 25.503\(d\)\(2\), \(4\). Despite the reference to enforcement in the title, section 25.503\(d\) merely details subjects that the Commission should consider in monitoring the market. Because nothing in section 25.503\(d\) will subject a market participant to punishment, we overrule Coalition's vagueness challenge.

The Commission's rule does not enumerate all [\[\*58\]](#) of the practices that are prohibited, but the constitution does not require such precision. We hold that HN30<sup>15</sup> each of the challenged provisions of the Commission's rule, when read in the context of the entire rule, provides reasonable notice of what conduct may be punished and does not invite arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. See Village of Hoffman Estates, 455 U.S. at 498; Commission for Lawyer Discipline, 980 S.W.2d at 437; Rooms with a View, 7 S.W.3d at 845. We overrule all of the additional vagueness challenges.

[*845] Unconstitutional Taking

Coalition and TXU contend that the WMO Rule results in an unconstitutional taking without just compensation. Because this is a direct appeal Coalition and TXU may only challenge the facial validity of the rule: that the rule constitutes an unconstitutional taking in all of its applications. See Village of Hoffman Estates, 455 U.S. at 494-95; City Pub. Serv. Bd., 96 S.W.3d at 359. Both appellants cite language in the rule's preamble which they interpret as requiring a market participant to offer all of its capacity at "marginal cost" under certain circumstances. [\[\*59\]](#) See 29 Tex. Reg. 1916-17. They contend that marginal cost does not encompass the full cost of producing power and therefore the rule results in an unconstitutional taking.

As we explained in our discussion of whether the WMO Rule regulates price and our discussion of economic withholding, the rule does not require market participants to sell power at marginal cost. The preamble merely states that offering power at a price substantially above the marginal cost of a producer's least efficient unit, when competing offers are unavailable, is an abuse of market power. HN31<sup>16</sup> Because we hold that the WMO Rule does not require market participants to sell power at marginal cost, the rule is not an unconstitutional taking in all of its applications.<sup>16</sup> We overrule Coalition and TXU's facial challenge to the rule as an unconstitutional taking.

[**60] COMPLIANCE WITH THE APA

Coral Power raises two issues contending the Commission failed to comply with the APA. Coral Power contends that the Commission (1) failed to provide adequate notice as required by sections 2001.024 and .029, and (2) failed to substantially comply with APA section 2001.033's requirement of a concise restatement of the statutory authority of the rule.

---

<sup>16</sup> Counsel for TXU acknowledged at oral argument that a facial challenge would be inappropriate if the rule does not require a market participants to price power at marginal cost.

Notice and Comment

Coral Power claims that the Commission failed to provide adequate notice that the WMO Rule would define market power to include "local" or "momentary" market power. See 29 Tex. Reg. 1916. It contends that nothing in the Commission's proposed rule indicated that market power would be interpreted outside of traditional notions of that term, and therefore, Coral Power was deprived of the opportunity for meaningful comment. See Unified Loans, Inc. v. Pettijohn, 955 S.W.2d 649, 651 (Tex. App.--Austin 1997, no pet.) ("Adequate notice is essential for fairness as well as a meaningful opportunity to comment on a proposed rule.").

The supreme court recently discussed the notice requirements of the APA in Texas Workers' Compensation Commission v. Patient Advocates of Texas, 136 S.W.3d 643, 649-50, 47 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 607 (Tex. 2004). [**61]

The supreme court cited a case from this court in which we held that HN32 proper notice is given when a proposed rule is changed to incorporate comments and "and no new subjects of regulation or persons besides those previously given notice are affected." Id. (citing State Bd. of Ins. v. Deffebach, 631 S.W.2d 794, 801 (Tex. App.--Austin 1982, writ ref'd n.r.e.)). The supreme court also discussed the federal standard for adequate notice under the federal APA stating that the modified final rule must be a "logical outgrowth" of the proposed rule. Id. "Stated differently, if the final rule does not materially alter the issues addressed in the proposed rule, then notice will be deemed sufficient." Id. The supreme court concluded that the two standards are consistent:

[*846] The relevant inquiry under both standards is whether the agency's notice fairly apprises affected parties of the pertinent issues to allow them to comment and participate in the rulemaking process in a meaningful and informed manner.

Id.

We hold that HN33 the Commission's proposed rule provided adequate notice of its more fluid concept of market power. The proposed rule contains a section [**62] prohibiting "economic withholding" and defines the term as "an offer of energy or capacity by a market participant in an amount sufficiently large that the market cannot clear without the offer." By defining economic withholding in terms of whether the market can clear without the offer, the Commission indicated that its prohibition on economic withholding would apply regardless of traditional notions of market power. Moreover, Coral Power's own comments in the rulemaking record regarding artificial shortages and withholding of power reflect that it had notice that the rule's provisions might affect it. Because the proposed rule apprised Coral Power that it would be affected, and Coral Power actually participated with meaningful comment, we hold that the Commission satisfied the notice requirements of the APA. See id. We overrule Coral Power's first issue concerning compliance with the APA.

Concise Statement of Statutory Provisions

Coral Power also contends that the Commission failed to provide a concise restatement of its statutory authority to enact the WMO Rule. See Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 2001.033(a)(2) (West 2000). Specifically, it [**63] contends that the only stated purpose for the rule is to ensure reliability of electric power and that the rule oversteps the Commission's statutory powers to do so. Coral Power cites a statement in the third paragraph of the preamble that the new rule is needed to ensure reliability of the markets and power during the transition to a fully competitive market. 29 Tex. Reg. 1899. Based on this one sentence, Coral Power concludes that the Commission's stated authority is limited to its powers to ensure reliability during the transition to competition.

However, the paragraph following the one cited by Coral Power states that the WMO Rule was "proposed as part of the Commission's efforts to adopt competition rules to protect the public interest during the transition to and in the establishment of a fully competitive electric power industry under Chapter 39 of [PURA]." 29 Tex. Reg. 1899. The preamble lists those functions delegated to the commission by the statute:

Among those functions were the adoption and enforcement of rules to ensure customer protections and customer entitlements; the establishment of rules governing ERCOT and oversight of ERCOT activities; the assessment [**64] of market power; and the mitigation of market power abuses.

29 Tex. Reg. 1900. The Commission then concludes that "in order to protect the public interest and to assure that prices are determined by the normal forces of competition, the commission finds that it must adopt this rule governing the enforcement of wholesale electricity markets and ERCOT administered markets." Id. Reading the preamble as a whole, we find that the Commission clearly stated that the purpose of the rule extends beyond reliability and includes protecting retail customers by addressing anticompetitive manipulation of the wholesale market.

Furthermore, the statutorily delegated functions listed by the Commission support its authority to enact the rule. Although the Commission does not enumerate the specific provisions in Chapter 39 of PURA [*847] that correspond with the delegated functions of ensuring reliability, protecting customers and addressing manipulation of the wholesale market, our review of the statute confirms that the Commission possesses these powers. The authority to ensure reliability is granted by the consumer protections in PURA sections 39.101\(a\)\(1\) (customer entitled to safe, reliable, [**65] and reasonably priced electricity) and 35.004\(e\) (relating to ancillary services market), and section 39.151\(d\) (independent organization's procedures shall be consistent with Commission rules regarding reliability). The authority to protect consumers stems from PURA section 39.101\(a\)\(1\), \(b\)\(6\) (customer entitled to be protected from unfair, misleading, deceptive practices), and (f) (commission shall modify rules to assure at least same quality of service that existed before transition to competition). Finally, the Commission's authority to address manipulation of the wholesale market is found in PURA section 39.157\(a\) (Commission shall monitor market power and address market power abuse), and through the statute's reliability and consumer protection provisions. Coral Power presents a chart in its brief that outlines why various statutory provisions do not grant the Commission authority to enact the rule. All Coral Power's arguments concerning the scope of the Commission's authority under the statute have been thoroughly discussed and rejected earlier in this opinion. We hold that HN34[] the Commission complied with the APA by including a concise statement of its statutory authority to promulgate [**66] the rule.

Coral Power also contends that the Commission did not substantially comply with the APA because the Commission's reasoned justification does not demonstrate in a relatively clear and logical fashion that the rule is a reasonable means to a legitimate objective. See Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 2001.035 (West 2000). Coral Power argues that the rule "far exceeds" the Commission's statutory reliability oversight and enforcement responsibilities. However, Coral Power's argument is premised on the incorrect assumptions that the Commission's only objective in the rule is to ensure reliability and that other statutory provisions do not grant the Commission the authority to enact the rule. We have already held that the purpose of the rule also encompasses protecting consumers and preventing manipulation of the wholesale market. These are legitimate objectives authorized by the statute and Coral Power has not shown how the rule is not a reasonable means of protecting consumers and preventing manipulation of the market. Because the purpose of the WMO Rule extends beyond the objective of ensuring reliability, we overrule Coral Power's final substantial compliance [**67] challenge.

CONCLUSION

In summary, the appellants and the dissent ignore what the legislature fully recognized when it restructured the state's electricity market: In this transition period, a purely competitive market would not serve the needs of either the utilities or the retail customers. For example, utilities must be allowed to recover their investment costs that might be stranded and not recouped in a market-driven rate structure; transmission and distribution must continue to be regulated to a degree; and the transition to a competitive market must also safeguard retail customers by ensuring "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity." Chapter 39 of PURA gives the Commission the authority to address market power abuses, to provide reasonably priced ancillary services, to protect utilities from some losses resulting from deregulation, and to protect the legislatively sanctioned "customer safeguards." [*848]<sup>17</sup> The Commission's enactment of the WMO Rule, giving it oversight of the wholesale market, furthers these combined statutory mandates and thus does not exceed the Commission's authority. Rather than chill competition, this rule reasonably promotes a form of competition [**68] most likely to accomplish the goals the legislature envisioned in restructuring the state's electric market.

We hold that (1) the Commission possessed the statutory authority to enact the WMO Rule, (2) the rule as adopted was consistent with the general objectives of the statute, (3) the rule is not unconstitutionally vague, (4) the rule does not constitute an unconstitutional taking, and (5) the Commission substantially complied with the requirements of the APA. Accordingly, we sustain the validity of the WMO Rule as enacted by the Commission.

Bea Ann Smith, Justice

Dissent by: Bob Pemberton

Dissent

---

DISSENTING OPINION

Because I believe that the Public Utility Commission's rule, [**69] 29 Tex. Reg. 1899 (2004) (to be codified at 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503 (Pub. Util. Comm'n)) (Wholesale Market Oversight Rule (WMO Rule)), exceeds the Commission's statutory authority, I respectfully dissent.

The defects in rule 25.503 begin with the absence of an intent requirement--participants in the deregulated wholesale electricity market are at peril of presumed liability based solely on the effects of their competitive conduct, even if inadvertent. 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\). The core concepts found in rule 25.503 are derived from section 39.157 of PURA. See 29 Tex. Reg. 1905. Section 39.157 requires the Commission to "monitor market power" and maintain oversight over "market power abuses," defined as "practices by persons possessing market power that are unreasonably discriminatory or tend to unreasonably restrict, impair, or reduce the level of competition, including practices that tie unregulated products or services to regulated products or services or unreasonably discriminate in the provision of regulated services," and "include predatory pricing, withholding of production, precluding entry, and [**70] collusion." Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157\(a\) (West Supp. 2004-05). These are familiar antitrust concepts. See, e.g., Verizon Communications, Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 540 U.S. 398, 124 S. Ct. 872, 878-79, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 \(2004\); see also Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.157\(a\) (clarifying that subsection did not affect enforcement of state or federal antitrust laws). The code construction act thus compels us to look to antitrust law when construing section 39.157. Tex. Govt. Code Ann. § 311.011\(b\) (West 2005) ("words and phrases that have acquired a technical or particular meaning, whether by legislative definition or otherwise, shall be construed accordingly.").<sup>1</sup>

As the majority concedes, section 39.157 implies an intent requirement for proving "market [**71] power abuse" under that provision because it employs antitrust concepts that carry with them the implication of an intent element. Slip op. at 14 ("If the authority for this rule was derived only from section 39.157\(a\) governing 'market power' [*849] abuse,' we would agree that an element of intent is implied."). In adopting a rule that implements the requirements of section 39.157 yet omits the intent requirement implicit in its terms, the Commission exceeds its statutory authority. See State of Texas v. Public Utility Commission of Texas, 131 S.W.3d 314, 321 \(Tex. App.--Austin 2004, pet. denied\) (court to consider whether rule: (1) contravenes specific statutory language; (2) runs counter to general objectives of statute; or (3) imposes additional burdens, conditions, or restrictions in excess of or inconsistent with relevant statutory provisions).

---

<sup>17</sup> "On or before June 30, 2001, the commission shall modify its current rules regarding customer protections to ensure that at least the same level of customer protection against potential abuses and the same quality of service that exists on December 31, 1999, is maintained in a restructured electric industry." Sec. 39.101\(f\).

<sup>1</sup> I thus disagree with the majority's dismissal of state and federal antitrust authorities as merely "persuasive." Slip op. at 14 & n.6.

By departing from the requirements of section 39.157, rule 25.503 distorts the legislature's careful balancing of the dual policy goals reflected in the statute, encouraging the innovation and risk-taking of competition while protecting the integrity of market mechanisms. See Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 124 S. Ct. at 878-79. [**72] Indeed, both chapter 39 of PURA as a whole and the Texas Free Enterprise and Antitrust Act seek to balance such interests. Compare Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(a\) (West Supp. 2004-05), with Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 15.04 (West 2002); see also Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 311.023\(4\) (West 2005) (courts may consider "common law or former statutory provisions, including laws on the same or similar subjects"). The term "market power abuse" in section 39.157, like similar standards employed in the antitrust context, carries with it an unmistakable legislative intent to proscribe a type of conduct only where intent can be proven. See Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 199, 47 L. Ed. 2d 668, 96 S. Ct. 1375 \(1975\); see also United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 \(1966\). Absent an intent requirement, "market power abuse" is rather unclear.<sup>2</sup> The market participants go as far as to urge that the term is unconstitutionally vague, and they are not far off the mark, though we need not reach that issue. The majority, in fact, concedes that "the [**73] lack of a well defined concept of market power does produce some uncertainty in the enforcement of the rule," slip. op. at 32, but dismisses its significance.

In the antitrust context, the Texas Supreme Court has [**74] cautioned that "a vague standard [of predatory pricing] has a chilling effect on business. Business must be able to determine prospectively what price it may legally charge." Caller-Times Pub. Co. v. Triad Comm., Inc., 826 S.W.2d 576, 581, 35 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 509 \(Tex. 1992\). Accordingly, the court rejected a subjective intent standard because "a seller cannot predict where it may legally set a price" and "this standard creates a lack of predictability in the law which punishes those who would engage in vigorous competition." Id. Rule 25.503's "market power abuse" standard suffers similar defects: a market participant cannot predict what competitive conduct on its part could give rise to effects that the Commission deems "abuse" or "withholding." In addition, the enumerated list of prohibited activities is not even exclusive. See 16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503\(g\) (term "prohibited [*850] activity" includes, but is not limited to, enumerated "acts and practices"). Without the balancing factor of an intent requirement, these features of rule 25.503 chill competition in a manner inconsistent with the legislature's intent.<sup>3</sup>

[**75] Further compounding the problem is the burden of proof: market participants are presumed to have violated rule 25.503 if the effect of their competitive activities, even inadvertently, is whatever may constitute "market power abuse." See id. Subsection (h) excludes from "prohibited activity" conduct by market participants that "served a legitimate business purpose consistent with prices set by competitive market forces; and that it did not know, and could not reasonably anticipate, that its actions would inflate prices, adversely affect . . . reliability [or] proper accounting." However, this affirmative "defense" applies only "if the market entity establishes" it. Id. § 25.503\(h\).

---

<sup>2</sup>The WMO Rule does not define "market power abuse" other than to explain that the term includes "withholding of production, whether economic withholding or physical withholding, by a market participant who has market power, constitutes an abuse of market power." See 16 Tex. Admin. Code Ann. § 25.503\(g\)\(7\). Given the nature of the wholesale electricity market, it is unclear whether or how market participants could ascertain whether they possess "market power" at a given moment amid the myriad, fluid circumstances on the grid, much less conform their conduct to avoid the prohibited effects. Nor is it clear whether or how market participants could ascertain how to avoid committing such other violations as creating "artificial congestion." See id. § 25.503\(g\)\(1\).

<sup>3</sup>In response to my discussion of Caller-Times and federal antitrust cases, the majority inaccurately portrays my arguments and attempts to pigeonhole them as relating to constitutional vagueness issues rather than statutory construction. Slip op. at 29-30. As is apparent above, my arguments concern the proper construction of section 39.157, and respecting the legislature's balancing of interests reflected therein. Having determined that rule 25.93 exceeds the Commission's statutory power, I would not reach the constitutional issues.

The significance of the placement of the burden of proof cannot be underestimated, especially in an administrative proceeding subject only to substantial-evidence review. See *Richardson v. City of Pasadena*, 513 S.W.2d 1, 3, 17 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 401 \(Tex. 1974\).<sup>4</sup>

[**76] The legislature's philosophical foundation underlying chapter 39 was that "the production and sale of electricity is not a monopoly warranting regulation of rates, operations, and services and that the public interest in competitive electric markets requires that, except for transmission and distribution services and for the recovery of stranded costs, electric services and their prices should be determined by customer choices and the normal forces of competition." *Tex. Util. Code Ann § 39.001\(a\)*. To this end, the legislature mandated that regulatory authorities "shall authorize or order competitive rather than regulatory methods to achieve the goals of the chapter to the greatest extent feasible and shall adopt rules and orders that are practical and limited so as to impose the least impact on competition." Id. § 39.001(d). In my view, the Commission, in *rule 25.503*, has strayed from these principles, as well as from the language and intent of *section 39.157* in particular. See *Railroad Comm'n v. Lone Star Gas Co.*, 844 S.W.2d 679, 685, 36 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 436 \(Tex. 1992\) (quoting *Gerst v. Oak Cliff Savings & Loan Ass'n*, 432 S.W.2d 702, 706, 11 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 490 \(Tex. 1968\)) [**77] ("The determining factor . . . whether . . . a particular administrative agency has exceeded its rule-making powers is that the rule's provisions must be in harmony with the general objectives of the Act involved.").")

Having conceded that the *section 39.157*'s "market power abuse" concept contains an implied intent element, the [*851] majority posits two alternative statutory bases to support a rule that implements *section 39.157*'s conduct standards yet omits its implied intent element. First, the majority looks to *PURA section 39.101*, which requires the Commission to "ensure that retail consumer protections are established that entitle a consumer . . . to safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity." *Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.101*. Second, the majority relies on *section 35.004\(e\)*, which requires the Commission to "ensure that ancillary services necessary to facilitate the transmission of electric energy are available at reasonable prices." Id. § 35.004(e).

Based on their plain language, both provisions are limited in scope. *Section 35.004\(e\)* speaks only to ancillary services, which the parties represent is a small component of the wholesale electricity [**78] market. *Section 39.101* does not speak to the wholesale market at all but only to the retail electricity market. Within these limited provisions, the majority nonetheless finds broad-ranging regulatory power. Slip op. at 15-17.

Regarding *section 39.101*, the majority acknowledges that the provision is addressed solely to the retail market but extrapolates that because "both the retail and wholesale electric markets should be governed by market forces" and "issues relating to reliability or price in the wholesale market will necessarily be reflected in the retail market," the Commission's power to ensure retail customers "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity" for retail consumers would necessarily permit it to act in the wholesale market. Slip op. at 15-16. Similarly, the majority suggests that because "in the existing competitive wholesale market, scarcity of electric power will be reflected in higher prices throughout the market," its authority under *section 35.004\(e\)* to ensure that ancillary services are available at reasonable prices would permit it broad power to regulate conduct throughout the entire wholesale market. Slip op. at 16. As a matter of statutory construction, [**79] I disagree that *section 39.101* and *section 35.004\(e\)* grant the Commission such broad-ranging regulatory power in the wholesale market. See *Reliant Energy v. Public Util. Comm'n*, 101 S.W.3d at 145 (overbroad Commission rule invalid).

Moreover, even if *section 39.101* and *35.004\(e\)* would otherwise confer general power on the Commission to act in some manner with regard to wholesale transactions, such an authorization is not limitless--rather, the Commission must act in conformity with the broader statutory objectives and framework of the electricity deregulation statutes.

<sup>4</sup> In such an environment, it is perhaps not surprising that several of the market participants equate *rule 25.503* with back-door price regulation. They contend that uncertainty regarding the nature of competitive conduct that is proscribed, the prospect of sanctions based not on intent but mere effect, and a "guilty until proven innocent" burden of proof has compelled them to cling to any guidance they could discern from the rule, such as the Commission's reference to marginal cost pricing in the preamble to the rule. See 29 Tex. Reg. 1899, 1916 (2004) (to be codified at *16 Tex. Admin. Code § 25.503* (Pub. Util. Comm'n)) ("Pricing in excess of marginal cost by a seller who is immune from the chastening hand of competition is an abuse of market power.").

Were it otherwise, the Commission's general duties to ensure "safe, reliable, and reasonably priced electricity" in the retail market, as contemplated in section 39.101, and that ancillary services are available at "reasonable prices," per section 35.004\(e\), could be invoked to justify virtually any manner of regulation (including that of prices) if, in the Commission's judgment, such actions would ensure "reliability" and "reasonable prices." The limitation that prevents such measures lies not within the terms of sections 39.101 or 35.004\(e\) but in the overall structure and general objectives of [*80] electricity deregulation legislation<sup>5</sup> and the legislature's explicit mandate that "regulatory authorities . . . shall authorize or order competitive rather than regulatory methods to achieve the goals of the chapter to the greatest extent feasible and shall adopt rules and orders that are practical [*852] and limited so as to impose the least impact on competition." Tex. Util. Code Ann. §§ 39.001\(a\), \(c\); see State of Texas v. Public Utility Commission of Texas, 131 S.W.3d 314 at 321 (rule invalid if it contravenes specific statutory language or runs counter to general objectives of statute); see also Railroad Comm'n v. Lone Star Gas Co., 844 S.W.2d 679, 685, 36 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 436 (Tex. 1992) (determining factor whether particular administrative agency has exceeded its rule-making powers is "that the rule's provisions must be in harmony with the general objectives of the Act involved."). The majority overlooks the context of sections 39.101 and 35.004\(e\) within the statutory framework.

[**81] Beyond the majority's reliance on sections 39.101 and 35.004\(e\), it continually returns to the notion that Commission members and staff are experts to whose decisions we should defer. It couples this deference with policy observations to the effect that "electricity is different." I concede that the Commission has expertise regarding the behavior of the Texas electricity market and that the legislature intended it to have some flexibility in effectuating its statutory duties. However, even if the legislature intends that an agency created to centralize expertise in a certain regulatory area "be given a large degree of latitude in the methods it uses to accomplish its regulatory function," Texas Mun. Power Agency v. Public Util. Comm'n, 150 S.W.3d 579, 586 (Tex. App.--Austin 2004, pet. filed), an agency may not, in the guise of implied powers, exercise what is effectively a new power on the theory that such exercise is expedient for the agency's purpose, Public Util. Comm'n v. GTE-Southwest, Inc., 901 S.W.2d 401, 407, 38 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 485 (Tex. 1995), nor may it contravene specific statutory language, run counter to the general objectives of the statute, or impose additional [*82] burdens, conditions, or restrictions in excess of or inconsistent with the relevant statutory provisions. State v. Public Util. Comm'n, 131 S.W.3d at 321.

I also recognize the unique nature of electricity as a commodity, which can create some conceptual challenges when applying antitrust or other economic concepts. However, nothing about the nature of electricity suggests that we should construe Commission statutory power more broadly than the terms of those enactments would otherwise provide. The legislature was aware of the unique nature of electricity when it deregulated the industry, enacted its competition mandates in chapter 39, and employed antitrust concepts in the standards it chose to govern the wholesale marketplace. Those standards should govern our analysis of the Commission's power here and, in my view, compel us to invalidate rule 25.93.

Finally, by reaching such a conclusion, I do not, as the majority accuses, "ignore" legislative intent to protect consumer welfare in a deregulated electricity market, much less suggest that consumer protection is not a statutory goal. To the contrary, our duty is to faithfully follow the legislature's intent to advance [*83] consumer welfare, but we should not lose sight of the legislature's overarching policy judgment that consumer welfare is ordinarily best advanced by vigorously competitive retail and wholesale electricity markets rather than by regulation. See Tex. Util. Code Ann. § 39.001\(a\) & \(d\). And, where, as in section 39.157, the legislature has carefully and precisely balanced competing considerations in its pursuit of consumer welfare--preventing market abuses without causing what it views as too great a chilling effect on competition--we should be faithful to its judgment and ensure that the Commission's rules are in conformity.

For these reasons, I respectfully dissent.

Bob Pemberton, Justice

---

<sup>5</sup> The legislature enacted section 35.004\(e\) as part of the 1999 electricity deregulation bill. See Act of May 27, 1999, 76th Leg., R.S., ch. 405, §§ 17, 39, 1999 Tex. Gen. Laws 2543, 2552, 2558-2602.

---

End of Document

Xcaliber Int'l Ltd., LLC v. Edmondson

United States District Court for the Northern District of Oklahoma

May 20, 2005, Decided ; May 20, 2005, Filed

Case No. 04-CV-0922-CVE-PJC

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26705 *; 2005 WL 5654220

XCALIBER INTERNATIONAL LIMITED, LLC, and KT&G CORP., Plaintiffs, v. W.A. DREW EDMONDSON, in his official capacity as Attorney General, State of Oklahoma, Defendant.

Subsequent History: Reconsideration denied by Xcaliber Int'l Ltd., LLC v. Edmondson, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40448 \(N.D. Okla., Aug. 31, 2005\)

Affirmed by KT&G Corp. v. AG of Okla., 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 16190 \(10th Cir. Okla., July 23, 2008\)

Prior History: Xcaliber Int'l Ltd., LLC v. Edmondson, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43890 \(N.D. Okla., Apr. 5, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

allocable share, manufacturers, market share, escrow, antitrust, cigarette, summary judgment, costs, private party, Sherman Act, Participating, plaintiffs', advertisements, cartel, state action, price-fixing, settlement, tobacco, exempt, output, prices, join

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Remedies

HN1 Regulated Practices, Private Actions

To bring an antitrust claim for injunctive relief, private plaintiffs must show, above and beyond the constitutional case or controversy requirements: (1) that the acts violating the antitrust laws threatened to cause those plaintiffs injury in fact to their business or property; (2) that that injury is not too remote or duplicative of the recovery of a more directly injured person; and (3) that such injury is antitrust injury, which is defined as the kind of injury that the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and flows from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN2 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 is appropriate where there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The plain language of Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\) mandates the entry of summary judgment, after adequate time for discovery and upon motion, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. Summary judgment procedure is properly regarded not as a disfavored procedural shortcut, but rather as an integral part of the Federal Rules as a whole, which are designed to secure the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN3 Summary Judgment, Burdens of Proof

When the moving party has carried its burden under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\), its opponent must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts. Where the record taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the non-moving party, there is no genuine issue for trial. The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of a non-moving plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the trier of fact could reasonably find for the plaintiff. In essence, the inquiry for the court is whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law. In its review, the court construes the record in the light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act

HN4 Scope, Exemptions

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., prohibits private parties from entering into agreements, combinations, or conspiracies in unreasonable restraint of trade, but does not prohibit a state from directly imposing restraints on competition in the exercise of its police and regulatory powers. A state legislature may set prices or control output; it simply may not authorize or require private parties to do so. If there has been no delegation of regulatory authority to private parties, the state action is "ipso facto" immune from antitrust challenge and so, not subject to preemption. Further, where a state does not authorize or require a party to engage in private or hybrid conduct that would violate antitrust laws, Midcal analysis is not required.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN5 Scope, Exemptions

Because the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., does not prohibit state governments from directly imposing restraints on competition in the exercise of their police and regulatory powers, to prevail on a preemption claim under the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must show that it is injured by a hybrid restraint, which is defined as a government action delegating regulatory power to private parties so that they can enforce their own private market decisions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

HN6 Scope, Exemptions

A state's unstated motive in enacting legislation is irrelevant. State action is exempt from antitrust liability regardless of the state's motives in taking the action. As long as the conduct causing anticompetitive effect is unilateral state action, taken under that state's police powers, it is protected from preemption by the state action doctrine.

Counsel: [*1] For Xcaliber International Limited, LLC, Plaintiff: Christopher D Kiesel, Roy Kiesel Keegan & Denicola, Baton Rouge, LA; David Ryan Cordell, Conner & Winters (Tulsa), TULSA, OK; Ernest Albert Eugene Gellhorn, Ernest Gellhorn Law Firm, WASHINGTON, DC; Kyle M Keegan, Roy Kiesel Keegan & Denicola, Baton Rouge, LA; Lee Ira Levinson, Bodenhamer & Levinson PC, Tulsa, OK; Bruce Wayne Freeman, Conner & Winters (Tulsa), TULSA, OK; Leonard Violi, MAMARONECK, NY.

For KT&G Corp, Plaintiff: Bruce Wayne Freeman, Conner & Winters (Tulsa), TULSA, OK; Christopher D Kiesel, Roy Kiesel Keegan & Denicola, Baton Rouge, LA; David Ryan Cordell, Conner & Winters (Tulsa), TULSA, OK; Ernest Albert Eugene Gellhorn, Ernest Gellhorn Law Firm, WASHINGTON, DC; Kyle M Keegan, Roy Kiesel Keegan & Denicola, Baton Rouge, LA; Lee Ira Levinson, Bodenhamer & Levinson PC, Tulsa, OK; Leonard Violi, MAMARONECK, NY; Shelly Lambert Carter, Conner & Winters (Tulsa), TULSA, OK.

For Attorney General of the State of Oklahoma, WA. Drew Edmondson, in his official capacity as Attorney General, W A Edmondson, Defendant: Gary D Wilson, WASHINGTON, DC; Guy Lee Hurst, Office of the Attorney General (OKC-4545), OKLAHOMA CITY, [*2] OK; Mark Greenwold, National Association of Attorneys General, WASHINGTON, DC; Mark Lawton Jones Office of the Attorney General (OKC-4545) OKLAHOMA CITY, OK; Peter J Levin, National Association of Attorneys General, WASHINGTON, DC; Susan K Noland, Office of the Attorney General (OKC-4545), OKLAHOMA CITY, OK.

Judges: CLAIRE V. EAGAN, CHIEF JUDGE.

Opinion by: CLAIRE V. EAGAN

Opinion

---

ORDER

Now before the Court are the motion and amended motion for summary judgment (Dkt. ## 79 and 124)<sup>1</sup> filed by the defendant W. A. Drew Edmondson, Attorney General of the State of Oklahoma ("Attorney General"), as to the antitrust claim brought against him by plaintiffs Xcaliber International Limited, LLC ("Xcaliber") and KT&G Corp. ("KT&G").

[*3] I.

Plaintiffs Xcaliber and KT&G each manufacture tobacco products that are distributed in Oklahoma. In the mid-1990s, several states sued major tobacco manufacturers to recover costs incurred through the treatment of smoking-related diseases as a result of the manufacturers' marketing practices and violations of consumer protection, antitrust, and various state laws. These suits were settled by the execution of a Master Settlement Agreement ("MSA") in 1998. This agreement was signed by fifty-two governmental jurisdictions: 46 states (including Oklahoma), the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and four territories, now designated by the MSA as "Settling States." The manufacturer signatories of the MSA were Phillip Morris, Lorillard, Brown & Williamson, and R.J. Reynolds, collectively referred to as the "Original Participating Manufacturers" ("OPMs").

---

<sup>1</sup> The amended motion (Dkt. # 124) was submitted before plaintiffs' response was filed, but only officially filed thereafter. The amended motion is not substantively changed from the original, only correcting citation problems. The response was filed with reference to the original motion; the reply was originally filed with reference to the amended motion. The sur-reply was filed with reference to both. The Court will therefore address both.

Under the terms of the MSA, the Settling States agreed to release their claims against the OPMs in return for annual payments, the amount of which is specified in the MSA and adjusts for changes in the overall volume of cigarette sales. Each manufacturer's responsibility for these payments is based principally on its own market [*4] share. The annual payment is allocated among the Settling States according to a fixed formula. Oklahoma's allocable share under the MSA is 1.036137% of the total national payments. The MSA also prohibits PMs from political lobbying, restricts their trade association activities, and forces them to relinquish legal challenges to state laws regulating tobacco. It also contains a variety of prohibitions on advertising and promotional activities, such as advertisements aimed at the youth market, outdoor advertisements, transit advertisements, and advertisements containing cartoons.

The MSA also includes a provision permitting other cigarette manufacturers to join the agreement. Those who joined within 90 days of the MSA's execution date are exempt from annual MSA payments, provided their yearly market shares do not exceed their 1998 levels or 125% of their 1997 levels. Other manufacturers who become "Subsequent Participating Manufacturers" ("SPMs") after the expiration of that period do not benefit from this exemption. Both exempt and non-exempt SPMs are bound by the advertising and other restrictions of the MSA. Non-exempt SPMs make payments to the Settling States based on the numbers [*5] of cigarettes they sell. OPMs and SPMs are collectively referred to as "Participating Manufacturers" ("PMs"). Manufacturers declining to join the MSA are referred to as "Non-Participating Manufacturers" ("NPMs").

The terms of the MSA also anticipate changes in market share resulting from the activity of NPMs. Loss of OPM market share to NPMs generally trebles the decrease in payment obligations by OPMs when a loss of more than two percent results from a "disadvantage" arising from the MSA's terms, such as price competition from NPMs (cause of market share loss is determined by a national economic consulting firm). Such changes in market share would result in a significant loss in tobacco settlement revenue by the Settling State. Under the MSA, a Settling State may immunize itself from that loss by enacting and enforcing a form Escrow Statute which requires NPMs distributing in that state either to join the MSA as SPMs and make future settlement payments accordingly, or to make regular deposits based on their cigarette sales into a rolling escrow account. Oklahoma has enacted such a statute ("Escrow Statute") codified at Okla. Stat. tit. 37, § 600.21 et seq.

The escrow payments [*6] made under the Oklahoma Escrow Statute are either to be released to the state in satisfaction of any judgment or settlement obtained against that manufacturer in a suit brought by the state, or returned to the NPM after twenty-five (25) years. The original statute also provided for an immediate refund of any amount paid into escrow greater than the allocable share Oklahoma would have received had the NPM been a PM. This is referred to as the "Allocable Share Release Provision" (Okla. Stat. tit. 37, § 600.23\(B\)\(2\) (2001)) and was intended to create an equivalence between the NPMs' escrow obligation under the escrow statute and their hypothetical payment obligations under the MSA had they been PMs.

The Attorney General contends that this original version of the statute created an unintended loophole. The statute operated as intended only if the NPMs distributed their products nationally because then the total escrow obligation to all states with similar tobacco statutes would approximate the total payments those NPMs would have made under the MSA. However, if an NPM concentrated its sales in only a few states, especially if those states had small allocable share percentages, as [*7] does Oklahoma, that NPM could recoup the majority of its escrow payments through the Allocable Share Release Provision. For example, an NPM selling cigarettes only in Oklahoma was able to obtain a release of nearly ninety-nine (99) percent of its escrow payments, and would have no escrow obligation to any other state.

To remedy this unintended consequence, in 2003, Oklahoma enacted the Allocable Share Amendment, which went into effect on January 1, 2005. Under the amended statute, releases may be obtained only for amounts in excess of the MSA payments a given NPM would have been required to make as a PM on account of the number of cigarettes sold in Oklahoma, without reference to Oklahoma's MSA allocable share. For an NPM concentrating its sales in Oklahoma, this means significantly smaller releases of escrow payments than under the original provision.

Plaintiffs allege that the effect of the amendment is not only to prevent them from competing against PMs, but to drive them out of business altogether. Xcaliber and KT&G filed suit against the Attorney General on December 10, 2004, challenging the amended statute on antitrust grounds, alleging that it supports a price-fixing scheme [*8] and an output cartel among the PMs (who are private parties), which is illegal per se under section 1 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1), and which has caused irreparable damage to their business and property.

The Attorney General moves for summary judgment on the grounds that: (1) the Allocable Share Amendment is not preempted because it is state action that neither mandates nor authorizes private parties to commit a per se violation of the Sherman Act; and (2) plaintiffs cannot prevail by claiming that the effect of the Allocable Share Amendment is to establish an output cartel and price-fixing scheme by MSA participating manufacturers because (a) plaintiffs lack legal interest or standing to challenge the MSA <sup>2</sup> and (b) the undisputed facts establish that nothing in the MSA or the implementing statutes operates to support or establish such a cartel, or any other hybrid restraint on competition, leaving the Allocable Share Amendment immune from antitrust scrutiny under the state action doctrine.

[*9] II.

HN2 [↑] Summary judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 is appropriate where there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986); Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986); Kendall v. Watkins, 998 F.2d 848, 850 (10th Cir. 1993). The plain language of Rule 56\(c\) mandates the entry of summary judgment, after adequate time for discovery and upon motion, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 317. "Summary judgment procedure is properly regarded not as a disfavored procedural shortcut, but rather as an integral part of the Federal Rules as a whole, which are designed 'to secure the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action.'" Id. at 327.

HN3 [↑] "When the moving party has carried its burden under Rule 56\(c\), its opponent must do more than simply show that [*10] there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts. ... Where the record taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the non-moving party, there is no 'genuine issue for trial.'" Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586-87, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986) (citations omitted). "The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the [trier of fact] could reasonably find for the plaintiff." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252. In essence, the inquiry for the Court is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 250. In its review, the <sup>2</sup> HN1 [↑] To bring an antitrust claim for injunctive relief, private plaintiffs must show, above and beyond the constitutional case or controversy requirements, "(1) that the acts violating the antitrust laws ... threatened to cause [those plaintiffs] injury in fact to [their] business or property; (2) that this injury is not too remote or duplicative of the recovery of a more directly injured person; [and] (3) that such injury is antitrust injury,' which is defined as the kind of injury that the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." 2 Phillip E. Areeda et al., Antitrust Law P335a (2d ed. 2000) (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977)); see also Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 182 F.3d 745, 750 (10th Cir. 1999); Sports Racing Servs., Inc. v. Sports Car Club of Am., Inc., 131 F.3d 874 (10th Cir. 1997); City of Chanute, Kan. v. Williams Natural Gas Co., 955 F.2d 641, 652 (10th Cir. 1992). Plaintiffs' complaint sufficiently alleged both antitrust injury and causal connection to withstand a motion to dismiss. However, at this stage, the Court must address the merits of plaintiffs' allegations of antitrust injury before proceeding with standing analysis.

Court construes the record in the light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment. Garratt v. Walker, 164 F.3d 1249, 1251 (10th Cir. 1998).

III.

Defendant first argues that Oklahoma's Allocable Share Amendment is not preempted because it is state action that does not "compel or permit -- either expressly or impliedly [*11] -- any private party to engage in any type of anti-competitive conduct." Defendant's Amended Motion (Dkt. # 124), at 7. For the most part, this argument has already been addressed by the Court's order of April 5, 2005 in connection with defendant's motion to dismiss, wherein the Court found that the Allocable Share Amendment "does not, on its face, mandate or authorize antitrust violations, nor place irresistible pressure on private parties to violate antitrust laws." Order (Dkt. # 103) at 14.

Nonetheless, plaintiffs have argued that raising costs for PM competitors (NPMs) constitutes a per se violation of antitrust law.<sup>3</sup> As the Court noted its April 5, 2005 order, the Sherman Act HN4 prohibits private parties from entering into agreements, combinations, or conspiracies in unreasonable restraint of trade, but does not prohibit a state from directly imposing restraints on competition in the exercise of its police and regulatory powers. See Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 350-51, 63 S. Ct. 307, 87 L. Ed. 315 (1943). A state legislature may set prices or control output; it simply may not authorize or require private parties to do so. Id.; see also F.T.C. v. Ticor Title Ins. Co., 504 U.S. 621, 632-33, 112 S. Ct. 2169, 119 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1992). [*12] Although plaintiffs assert that "the Amended Statute grants Participating Manufacturers (OPMs and SPMs) additional power to increase their prices by imposing costs on their NPM competitors without any semblance of effective state supervision," in fact, the statute directly sets the cost increase, capping it at the level of MSA-imposed costs. This, as a unilateral state action, makes state supervision a non-issue. Private cigarette manufacturers, PMs, have no control or discretion over the setting of these NPM costs.

[*13] Accordingly, the Court reiterates that, standing alone, the Allocable Share Amendment is not preempted by the Sherman Act. However, consideration of the Allocable Share Amendment within the context of the MSA and its implementing legislation could produce a different result, and so the Court proceeds with an analysis of the alleged anticompetitive effect.

IV.

Defendant moves for summary judgment on the ground that plaintiffs cannot prevail by claiming that the effect of the Allocable Share Amendment is to support an output cartel and price-fixing scheme by MSA participating manufacturers because nothing in the MSA establishes such an alleged cartel. In fact, they argue, (1) the undisputed facts establish that nothing in the MSA-related statutes operates to effect anything that could be claimed to be a hybrid restraint; and (2) there is no other authority supporting plaintiffs' claim of preemption.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs cite United States v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 221-223, 60 S. Ct. 811, 84 L. Ed. 1129 (1940), for the proposition that the Sherman Act condemns any agreement or state legislation that raises, depresses, fixes, pegs, or stabilizes the price of a commodity. Plaintiff's Response (Dkt. # 114), at 14 (emphasis added). However, Socony Vacuum was the criminal prosecution of an oil company and others under Section 1 of the Sherman Act and dealt only with private action. Similarly, the other cases cited in plaintiffs' response and surreply briefs to support the argument that raising rivals' costs is a per se violation involve only private action. See United States v. Andreas, 216 F.3d 645 (7th Cir. 2000); Gen. Leaseways, Inc. v. Nat'l Truck Leasing Assn., 744 F.2d 588 (7th Cir. 1984); Nat'l Soc'y. of Prof'l Eng'r's v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 98 S. Ct. 1355, 55 L. Ed. 2d 637 (1978).

<sup>4</sup> Defendant also argues that (1) there is no basis for evaluating the MSA or Allocable Share Amendment under the rule of reason; and (2) even if the analysis laid out in California Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Midcal Aluminum, Inc., 445 U.S. 97, 105, 100 S. Ct. 937, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1980), were applied, state supervision of the only conduct required or authorized by the statute -- payment of statutorily specified amounts into escrow--would prevent any challenge to the Allocable Share Amendment.

[*14] HN5 Because the Sherman Act does not prohibit state governments from directly imposing restraints on competition in the exercise of their police and regulatory powers, to prevail on a preemption claim under the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must show that it is injured by a hybrid restraint, which is defined as a government action delegating regulatory power to private parties so that they can enforce their own private market decisions. See 324 Liquor Corp. v. Duffy, 479 U.S. 335, 345-46, 107 S. Ct. 720, 93 L. Ed. 2d 667 \(1987\); Fisher v. City of Berkeley, 475 U.S. 260, 268, 106 S. Ct. 1045, 89 L. Ed. 2d 206 \(1986\); Rice v. Norman Williams Co., 458 U.S. 654, 665, 102 S. Ct. 3294, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1042 \(1982\) (Stevens, J., concurring); Parker, 317 U.S. at 350-51. Accordingly, the Court must now determine whether any such power has been delegated to PMs, through the enactment of the Allocable Share Amendment, to enforce their own private market decisions about cigarette pricing.<sup>5</sup>

[*15] Plaintiffs argue that the anticompetitive effects of the Allocable Share Amendment arise out of its alleged effective enforcement of an MSA scheme changing the competitive equilibrium in the cigarette market. Plaintiffs cite the conclusion of the Third Circuit that "the penalty of higher settlement payments for increased market share [has discouraged] reducing prices ... [and instead created for MSA signatories] an incentive to raise prices to match increases by competitors." Plaintiff's Response (Dkt. # 114), at 18 (quoting A.D. Bedell Wholesale Co. v. Philip Morris Inc., 263 F.3d 239, 248 \(3d Cir. 2001\)). They allege the same cartel in this case.

However, there is no evidence that the MSAA incorporates penalties for increased market share by any class of PM which would serve to effect a market-sharing or price-fixing agreement. There is no provision in the MSA, nor any evidence in the summary judgment record, to support the claim that OPM or non-exempt SPM payments for increased market share would be in any way disproportionate to the payments they made based on the market share they had upon joining the MSA. See MSA, Part IX; Defendant's Amended Motion [*16] (Dkt. # 124), Ex. 4, Report of Jonathan Gruber, P 10. Although there is certainly a sharp rise in payments for exempt SPMs who exceed their grandfathered market share, the evidence in the summary judgment record indicates that the amount they pay at that point is not disproportionate when compared to the payments made all along by non-exempt SPMs, and so does not act as a penalty. MSA, Part IX(i); Defendant's Amended Motion (Dkt. # 124), Ex. 4, Report of Jonathan Gruber, P43; Id., Ex. 15, Report of Jeremy Bulow, P50; Plaintiffs' Response (Dkt. # 114), Ex. A, Deposition of Jeremy Bulow, at 68,11.8-16. Further, both experts agree that as long as their marginal costs are still lower than their marginal revenues, all of these manufacturers will continue to produce regardless of changes in their relative market shares. Plaintiffs' Response (Dkt. # 114), Ex. A, Deposition of Jeremy Bulow, at 13, 11. 2-25; Id. at 68,11.8-16; Defendant's Amended Motion (Dkt. # 124), Ex. 4, Report of Jonathan Gruber, P51. According to both experts, each manufacturer makes a unilateral decision as to price and output in light of the costs imposed by the MSA and its implementing legislation, including [*17] the Allocable Share Amendment.<sup>6</sup> Defendant's Amended

If there has been no delegation of regulatory authority to private parties, the state action is "ipso facto" immune from antitrust challenge and so, not subject to preemption. Hoover v. Ronwin, 466 U.S. 558, 567-68, 104 S. Ct. 1989, 80 L. Ed. 2d 590 \(1984\). Further, where a state does not authorize or require a party to engage in private or hybrid conduct that would violate antitrust laws, Midcal analysis is not required. Massachusetts Food Ass'n v. Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Comm'n, 197 F.3d 560 \(1st Cir. 1999\). Accordingly, because the Court has found no hybrid restraint, nor any other manner in which the Allocable Share Amendment serves to enforce an private decision to restrain competition, it does not reach either of these arguments.

<sup>5</sup> Although plaintiffs, in their surreply, assert that the Court has found the Allocable Share Amendment serves to enforce the MSA, obviating the need for private parties to act to create an anticompetitive scheme, plaintiffs have overstated the Court's order addressing defendant's motion to dismiss. By its nature, an order addressing a motion to dismiss makes no finding as to the merits of a case. The sole purpose of such an order is to determine whether the allegations of a plaintiff's complaint sufficiently support a claim for relief. The Court found that the allegations supported an antitrust claim, not that the allegations had been proved.

<sup>6</sup> Although plaintiffs point to the Allocable Share Amendment's imposition of higher costs upon NPMs, and their resultant increase in prices, the fact that the higher costs may affect NPM decisions about where to distribute their cigarettes or lessen their competitive advantage as against PMs has no bearing on antitrust analysis as long as there is no private or hybrid restraint. So, although these facts may be disputed, they do not create a genuine issue of material fact as to plaintiffs' antitrust claim.

Motion (Dkt. # 124), Ex. 4, Report of Jonathan Gruber, PP10, 51; Plaintiffs' Response (Dkt. # 114), Ex. A, Deposition of Jeremy Bulow, at 18,11.4-8.

For these reasons, although the Allocable Share Amendment may be said to lessen the competitive threat of NPMs for PMs by narrowing the gap created by MSA-imposed costs, it cannot be said to serve to enforce any market-sharing or price-fixing agreement among manufacturers, or any other private decision to [*18] restrain competition.<sup>7</sup> The Allocable Share Amendment cannot be said to create or constitute either a private or a hybrid restraint. It is therefore protected from antitrust scrutiny by the state action doctrine.

V.

Finally, plaintiffs have presented an abundance of evidence that the actual purpose, and perhaps even the effect, of the Allocable Share Amendment, is to protect the market share of participating manufacturers and to drive NPMs [*19] out of business, rather than to advance the public health and safety goals contemplated by the MSA. However, HN6[<sup>8</sup>] a state's unstated motive in enacting legislation is irrelevant. See City of Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc., 499 U.S. 365, 379, 111 S. Ct. 1344, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382 (1991) (rejecting an interpretation of the Sherman Act "that would allow Plaintiffs to look behind the actions of state sovereigns to base their claims on 'perceived conspiracies to restrain trade'"); Hoover v. Ronwin, 466 U.S. 558, 580, 104 S. Ct. 1989, 80 L. Ed. 2d 590 (1984) (state action is "exempt from antitrust liability regardless of the State's motives in taking the action"). As long as the conduct causing anticompetitive effect is unilateral state action, taken under that state's police powers, as discussed above, it is protected from preemption by the state action doctrine.

VI.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that defendant's motion for summary judgment (Dkt. ## 79 and 124) is hereby granted.<sup>8</sup>

[*20] Dated this 20th day of May, 2005.

CLAIRES V. EAGAN, CHIEF JUDGE

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

JUDGMENT

This matter has come before the Court for consideration and an Order granting summary judgment in favor of the defendant has been entered as to plaintiffs' antitrust claim. The Order resolved all remaining issues in this case, leaving nothing to be litigated.

---

<sup>7</sup> Although plaintiffs have pointed to the Bedell court's recognition of OPM lock-step price increases following the initial enactment of the MSA implementing legislation and to the OPMs' similar substantial price increases in January 2005, they have offered no evidence, other than temporal proximity, supporting a causal connection between these later price increases and the Allocable Share Amendment. This, in light of the expert testimony that PMs make their output and pricing decisions unilaterally, is insufficient to raise a genuine issue of material fact.

<sup>8</sup> Because the Court has found no Sherman Act violation, and so no antitrust injury, it grants summary judgment based on state action immunity and does not reach the remainder of the standing analysis discussed in note 2 supra.

In the briefing related to the motion for preliminary injunction, plaintiffs also claim to seek an injunction against enforcement of any associated tax regulations intended to be applied in connection with the Allocable Share provision. Because the Court has dismissed constitutional challenges to the amended escrow statute, and granted summary judgment as to the antitrust claim, the issue of the tax regulations is moot.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that judgment is hereby entered for the defendant W.A. Drew Edmondson, in his official capacity as Attorney General, State of Oklahoma and against plaintiffs' Xcaliber International Limited, LLC and KT&G Corporation pursuant to the Court's Order on plaintiffs' antitrust claim.

Dated this 20th day of May, 2005.

CLAIRE V. EAGAN, CHIEF JUDGE

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

---

End of Document

California ex rel. Lockyer v. Safeway, Inc.

United States District Court for the Central District of California

May 25, 2005, Decided ; May 25, 2005, Filed

No. CV 04-0687-GHK(SSx)

Reporter

371 F. Supp. 2d 1179 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10572 **; 177 L.R.R.M. 2674; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,805

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, ex rel. BILL LOCKYER, Plaintiff, vs. SAFEWAY, INC., dba Vons, a Safeway Company, ALBERTSON'S, INC., RALPHS GROCERY COMPANY, a division of the Kroger Company, FOOD 4 LESS FOOD COMPANY, a division of the Kroger Company, and DOES 1 through 100, inclusive, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Summary judgment denied by California v. Safeway, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120337 \(C.D. Cal., Mar. 6, 2008\)

Prior History: California ex rel. Lockyer v. Safeway, Inc., 355 F. Supp. 2d 1111, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2744 \(C.D. Cal., 2005\)

Core Terms

---

exemption, negotiations, nonstatutory, antitrust, lockout, collective bargaining, Supermarkets, parties, revenue sharing, Sales, multiemployer, anti trust law, Sherman Act, revenue-sharing, collective bargaining process, bargaining unit, labor dispute, bargaining, labor law, commerce, immune, competitor, tail, national labor policy, collective-bargaining, bargaining process, provisions, employees, Redistribution, pre-strike

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

371 F. Supp. 2d 1179, *1179L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10572, **10572

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > Discovery Materials

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > Directed Verdicts

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN1[ Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

A court may grant summary judgment only if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). Defendants, having raised the nonstatutory labor exemption as an affirmative defense, bear the burden of proof on this defense at trial. To be entitled to summary judgment, a moving party with the burden of proof at trial must come forward with evidence which would entitle it to a directed verdict if the evidence went uncontested at trial. Summary judgment is appropriate when the issue turns only on questions of law, the resolution of which does not involve disputed material facts.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN2[ Labor, Nonstatutory Exemptions

Federal labor statutes set forth a national labor policy favoring collective bargaining, and require good-faith bargaining over wages, hours and working conditions. Moreover, multiemployer bargaining itself is a well-established, important, pervasive method of collective bargaining, offering advantages to both management and labor. This process, however, necessarily entails some amount of restraint on competition. In an attempt to harmonize the Sherman Act with the national labor policy of promoting the peaceful settlement of industrial disputes by subjecting labor-management controversies to the mediatory influence of negotiation, the U.S. Supreme Court has recognized a nonstatutory labor exemption to antitrust liability. The implicit exemption recognizes that, to give effect to federal labor laws and policies and to allow meaningful collective bargaining to take place, some restraints on competition imposed through the bargaining process must be shielded from antitrust sanctions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Coercion & Duress > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

371 F. Supp. 2d 1179, *1179L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10572, **10572

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Contracts Law > Defenses > Illegal Bargains

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN3 Labor, Nonstatutory Exemptions

National labor policy places beyond reach of the Sherman Act agreements between unions and employers as to "when, as well as how long, employees must work."

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Employment Contracts > Conditions & Terms > Compensation & Benefits

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Impasse Resolution

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Employment Contracts > Conditions & Terms > General Overview

HN4 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

As a matter of logic, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to require groups of employers and employees to bargain together, but at the same time to forbid them to make among themselves or with each other any of the competition-restricting agreements potentially necessary to make the process work or its results mutually acceptable.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Federal Preemption > Primacy of Labor Policy

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN5 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The "nonstatutory exemption to the antitrust laws" has never been regarded as an open-ended invitation to those involved in a labor dispute to restrain competition in the product market. It is a limited nonstatutory exemption from antitrust sanctions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

371 F. Supp. 2d 1179, *1179L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10572, **10572

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

HN6 Scope, Exemptions

There are limits to what a union or an employer may offer or extract in the name of wages, and because they must bargain does not mean that the agreement reached may disregard other laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Negotiable Instruments > Negotiations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN7 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The U.S. Supreme Court has focused on harmonizing labor and antitrust laws by applying the nonstatutory labor exemption where there was an actual or potential conflict between the interests of labor relations and antitrust enforcement. Where no such conflict existed, it declined to apply the exemption. As is apparent from the Court's case law, the inquiry is necessarily fact specific and requires application of various considerations that help discern whether the harmonizing principle is served by applying the exemption to the challenged conduct in a particular case. In a recent case, the Court noted that the conduct took place during and immediately after a collective-bargaining negotiation. It grew out of, and was directly related to, the lawful operation of the bargaining process. It involved a matter that the parties were required to negotiate collectively. And it concerned only the parties to the collective-bargaining relationship. While the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California does not view this statement as declaring rigid factors that must be found in every case for the exemption to apply, it nevertheless believes that the Supreme Court signaled the importance of these considerations in determining whether there is an actual or potential conflict between labor and antitrust laws that requires accommodation through the application of the exemption.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

HN8 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The "nonstatutory exemption to the antitrust laws" is ill-suited for actions taken after termination or successful completion of the collective bargaining process.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Impasse Resolution

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Strikes & Work Stoppages

HN9[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Once a strike is over and a new collective bargaining agreement is agreed upon, there is not even an arguable case for reliance on the collective bargaining process to justify an exemption from the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN10[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Antitrust laws are directed at conduct that suppresses competition in the marketing of goods and services.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN11[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

While national labor policy encourages collective bargaining, it does not require, imply or ensure that the parties to the bargaining process must have equality of bargaining position at all times. While a negotiating party should be able to take appropriate action to respond to opposing tactics, such action should not be protected categorically from antitrust scrutiny merely because it is helpful to the negotiating position of a party to the bargaining process.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN12[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Methods used in labor negotiations are not immune from antitrust attack simply because the goal is legal.

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Strikes & Work Stoppages

HN13[] Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations, Strikes & Work Stoppages

The statutory linkage of strikes and lockouts demonstrates that they are two sides of the same coin under national labor policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Strikes & Work Stoppages

**HN14** [ ↴ ] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The same way a strike restrains the employees' provision of services to the employer, a lockout restrains the employers' purchase of those services from the employees. Both are fundamentally restraints on labor. Specifically, they are restraints on the labor market governed by a particular collective bargaining agreement. Though such restraints may indirectly affect commerce by restricting production or sales of goods or services to consumers, they are not the kind of restraints at which the Sherman Act is aimed. The work stoppage, whether initiated by the employers in a lockout or by the employees in a strike, does not restrict competition in the market among competitors in the industry.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Governments > Federal Government > US Congress

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

**HN15** [ ↴ ] Antitrust & Trade Law, Clayton Act

The nonstatutory exemption is not a mere equalization of the specific immunities afforded to organized labor by Congress in the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts, but rather is a judicially-created exemption that is necessary for an entirely different statutory scheme--the National Labor Relations Act--to function as Congress intended.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Unfair Labor Practices > Employer Violations > Interference With Protected Activities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Collectives & Cooperatives > Clayton Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Strikes & Work Stoppages

**HN16** [ ↴ ] Labor, Nonstatutory Exemptions

The basic sources of organized labor's exemption from federal antitrust laws are §§ 6, 20 (15 U.S.C.S. § 17; 29 U.S.C.S. § 52) of the Clayton Act, and 29 U.S.C.S. §§ 104, 105, 113 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act. These statutes declare that labor unions are not combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, and exempt specific union activities, including secondary picketing and boycotts, from the operation of the antitrust laws. They do not exempt concerted action or agreements between unions and nonlabor parties. The U.S. Supreme Court has recognized, however, that a proper accommodation between the congressional policy favoring collective bargaining under the National Labor Relations Act and the congressional policy favoring free competition in business markets requires that some union-employer agreements be accorded a limited nonstatutory exemption from antitrust sanctions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN17 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

While Brown extended the nonstatutory exemption to encompass certain employer-only agreements, it did not fundamentally alter the dynamics of the relationship between the nonstatutory and statutory exemptions. It held that employers are entitled to the nonstatutory exemption over agreements that are necessary to make the statutorily authorized collective-bargaining process work as Congress intended. Therefore, any application of the implicit nonstatutory exemption must be limited to those instances where the exemption is necessary to carry out Congress's intent as expressed in national labor policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

HN18 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Mere lawfulness under the labor laws is not sufficient to create an antitrust immunity. Labor policy may be indifferent as to certain conduct, and then no labor policy purpose is served by immunizing it if it is anticompetitive.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

HN19 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The incidental benefits that revenue sharing affords to employers in their labor negotiations cannot be utilized as a cat's-paw to pull employers' chestnuts out of the antitrust fires.

Counsel: For State of California, ex rel. Bill Lockyer, Plaintiff: Olivia Karlin, Barbara M. Motz, CAAG - Office of the Attorney General of California, Los Angeles, CA.

For Albertsons, Inc., Defendant: Eric P. Enson, Jeffrey A. LeVee, Phillip A. Proger, Amy A. Stathos, Jones Day, Los Angeles, CA.

For Food 4 Less Food Company, a division of the Kroger Company, Defendant: Peter F. Burns, Linda S. Husar, Robert B. Pringle, Thelen Reid and Priest, San Francisco, CA.

For Ralphs Grocery Company a division of the Kroger Company, Defendant: Peter F. Burns, Linda S. Husar, Robert B. Pringle, Thelen Reid and Priest, San Francisco, CA.

371 F. Supp. 2d 1179, *1179L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10572, **10572

For Safeway Inc., a Safeway Company, Defendant: Daniel A Beck, Latham & Watkins, Los Angeles, CA; Peter K. Huston, J. Thomas Rosch, Latham & Watkins, San Francisco, CA.

For Los Angeles Times Communicaitons, LLC, doing business as Los Angeles Times, Intervenor: Erica L Craven, Karl Olson, Levy Ram & Olson, San Francisco, CA; Karlene Worthington Goller, Los Angeles Times Legal Dept., Los Angeles, CA.

Judges: [\[\*\*1\]](#) GEORGE H. KING, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: GEORGE H. KING

Opinion

---

[*1181] MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

RE: DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

I

INTRODUCTION

On February 2, 2004, California Attorney General Bill Lockyer, on behalf of the State of California ("the State"), filed a complaint alleging that defendants Safeway, Inc., d.b.a. Vons, Albertson's, Inc., Ralphs Grocery Company, ("the Supermarkets") and Food 4 Less Food Company ("Food 4 Less") (collectively "Defendants") engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade and commerce in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. 15 U.S.C. § 1. The State alleged that Defendants violated antitrust laws by entering into a Mutual Strike Assistance Agreement ("MSAA") whereby they agreed, among other things, to share revenue in the event of a strike. Defendants now move for summary judgment, arguing that their MSAA is immunized from antitrust challenge because it is related to the Supermarkets' participation in multiemployer collective bargaining and thus falls within the nonstatutory labor exemption to the antitrust laws. Having carefully considered all of the [\[\*\*2\]](#) parties' briefs, evidence and oral arguments, we rule as follows:

II

Summary Judgment Standard

HN1 [Footnote] We may grant summary judgment only "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). See also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986). Defendants, having raised the nonstatutory labor exemption as an affirmative defense, bear the burden of proof on this defense at trial. To be entitled to summary judgment, a moving party with the burden of proof at trial "must come forward with evidence which would entitle it to a directed verdict if the evidence went uncontested at trial." C.A.R. Transp. Brokerage Co. v. Darden Rests., Inc., 213 F.3d 474, 480 (9th Cir. 2000) (quoting Houghton v. South, 965 F.2d 1532, 1536 (9th Cir. 1992)). Summary judgment is appropriate when the issue turns only on questions of law, "the resolution of which does not involve disputed [\[\*\*3\]](#) material facts." Applied Med. Res. Corp. v. U.S. Surgical Corp., 352 F. Supp. 2d 1119, 1123 (C.D. Cal. 2005).

III*Facts

Virtually all relevant facts are undisputed. Ralphs, Albertson's and Vons, three of the largest supermarket chains in Southern California, joined together in a multiemployer collective bargaining unit to negotiate with certain United Food and Commercial Workers ("UFCW") labor organizations. Their collective bargaining agreement ("CBA") with UFCW was set to expire on October 5, 2003. (Defs.' Ex. H). In anticipation of a labor dispute, the Supermarkets executed a pair of MSAs on September 5, 2003.<sup>1</sup> (Cox Decl. P 6). Pursuant to the MSAA, the Supermarkets agreed to lock out all union employees within 48 hours in the event any of their stores were to experience a strike. They also agreed to share revenue according to a fixed formula,<sup>2</sup> beginning at "12:01 a.m. on the Monday at the start of the week in which the strike or lockout . . . commences and continuing for two . . . full weeks following the week in which each strike or lockout ends." (MSAA at P 4(C)). Moreover, the revenue sharing was not limited to the employers participating [**4] in the multiemployer bargaining unit. It included Food 4 Less, a chain that was not a signatory to the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's CBA.

On October 11, 2003, the unions struck local Vons stores. (Cox Decl. P 7). In response, Ralphs and Albertson's locked out their union employees the next day. (Schroeder Decl. P 12; Bohn Decl. P 9). The unions initially picketed all three supermarket chains, but stopped picketing Ralphs stores on October 31, 2003. (Schroeder Decl. P 13). Selective picketing of Vons and Albertson's stores continued until the end of the strike in late February 2004.<sup>3</sup> Ultimately, Ralphs and Food 4 Less paid Vons and Albertson's approximately $ 142 million in revenue [**5] sharing for the strike period, and another $ 4.2 million for the two-week period following the strike. (Schroeder Decl. P 13).

IV*Discussion

The State does not challenge the entirety of the MSAA. Instead, it claims only that the revenue-sharing provision, the inclusion of Food 4 Less, and the so-called two week "tail" provision (the "challenged provisions" or "challenged conduct") violate [*1183] antitrust laws. Defendants assert, and the State disputes, that all of the challenged provisions are immune from antitrust scrutiny under the nonstatutory labor exemption. Our task on this motion is limited to deciding whether the nonstatutory labor exemption applies to these challenged provisions. If so, the State's antitrust claim necessarily fails. If not, further proceedings will be necessary to determine [**6] whether these provisions in fact

A*The Nonstatutory Labor Exemption

---

<sup>1</sup> Although there are two separate MSAs in the record, each covering different labor organizations, they have identical terms. (Pls.' Exs. 16 & 17). We thus refer to them as a single agreement.

<sup>2</sup> The revenue-sharing formula is set forth at paragraph 6 of the MSAA, and is reproduced verbatim as Appendix A to this Memorandum and Order.

<sup>3</sup> The Supermarkets and the unions entered into an agreement to end the strike on February 26, 2004. The unions' members ratified the agreement on February 29, 2004. (Cox Decl. P 7; Schroeder Decl. P 15).

HN2<sup>4</sup> Federal labor statutes set forth a national labor policy favoring collective bargaining, and require good-faith bargaining over wages, hours and working conditions. Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 518 U.S. 231, 236, 135 L. Ed. 2d 521, 116 S. Ct. 2116 (1996).<sup>4</sup> Moreover, "[m]ultiemployer bargaining itself is a well-established, important, pervasive method of collective bargaining, offering advantages to both management and labor." Id. at 240. This process, however, necessarily entails some amount of restraint on competition. In an attempt to harmonize the Sherman Act with the national labor policy "of promoting the peaceful settlement of industrial disputes by subjecting labor-management controversies to the mediatory influence of negotiation," the Supreme Court recognized a nonstatutory labor exemption to antitrust liability. United Mine Workers of Am. v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 665, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965) (quoting Fibreboard Paper Prods. Corp. v. NLRB, 379 U.S. 203, 211, 13 L. Ed. 2d 233, 85 S. Ct. 398 (1964)). "[T]he implicit exemption recognizes that, to give effect to federal labor laws and policies and to allow [**7] meaningful collective bargaining to take place, some restraints on competition imposed through the bargaining process must be shielded from antitrust sanctions." Brown, 518 U.S. at 237. violate the antitrust laws.

For example, in Local Union No. 189, Amalgamated Meat Cutters, and Butcher Workmen v. Jewel Tea Co., 381 U.S. 676, 679-80, 14 L. Ed. 2d 640, 85 S. Ct. 1596 (1965) (plurality opinion) (White, J.), a meat cutters union successfully negotiated a concession from a multiemployer bargaining unit by which the markets agreed that meat would not be sold before 9 a.m. or after 6 p.m. Jewel Tea Company and National Tea Company, two of the employers in the bargaining unit, signed the agreement under duress [**8] of a strike vote. Contending that the agreement was illegal, they brought suit under the Sherman Act. Id. at 680-81. Justice White, writing for a plurality, concluded that the agreement was immune from antitrust attack under the nonstatutory labor exemption because HN3 national labor policy places beyond reach of the Sherman Act agreements between unions and employers as to "when, as well as how long, employees must work." Id. at 691. Were it otherwise, collective bargaining would be frustrated. See id. at 689; Connell Constr. v. Plumbers & Steamfitters Local Union No. 100, 421 U.S. 616, 622, 44 L. Ed. 2d 418, 95 S. Ct. 1830 (1975) (stating that "the goals of federal labor law never could be achieved" were it otherwise).

Also, in Brown, 518 U.S. at 234, the Supreme Court considered the exemption in the context of an agreement solely among employers. When [*1184] NFL employers reached an impasse with players in negotiations over salaries for a developmental squad, the employers unilaterally implemented the developmental squad program at the salary they had last proposed. Id. at 235. The players alleged the employers' agreement [**9] among themselves to implement the wage provisions violated the Sherman Act. Id. The Court disagreed, concluding that the exemption applied to the employers' practice of jointly imposing the "last best good-faith wage offer" at an impasse. Id. at 250. It also observed that HN4 "[a]s a matter of logic, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to require groups of employers and employees to bargain together, but at the same time to forbid them to make among themselves or with each other any of the competition-restricting agreements potentially necessary to make the process work or its results mutually acceptable." Id. at 237 (emphasis in original).

However, HN5 the exemption has never been regarded as an open-ended invitation to those involved in a labor dispute to restrain competition in the product market. It is a "limited nonstatutory exemption from antitrust sanctions." Connell, 421 U.S. at 622 (emphasis added). For example, in Pennington, 381 U.S. at 668-69, the Supreme Court held that the exemption did not protect an agreement between a union and large mine operators that sought to eliminate smaller companies, [**10] thereby allowing the larger companies to control the market. Among other things, the agreement forced a particular wage and royalty scale upon the smaller operators. Id. at 660. The Court noted that "there is nothing in the labor policy indicating that the union and the employers in one bargaining unit are free to bargain about the wages, hours and working conditions of other bargaining units or to attempt to settle these matters for the entire industry. On the contrary, the duty to bargain unit by unit leads to a quite different conclusion." Id. at 666. Moreover, the conduct ran directly counter to policies underlying the antitrust laws. Id. at 668. Thus, in harmonizing the Sherman Act with labor law, there was no basis for applying the limited exemption. Id. at 668-69. HN6<sup>5</sup> "[T]here are limits to what a union or an employer may offer or extract in the name of wages, and because they must bargain does not mean that the agreement reached may disregard other laws." Id. at 665.

---

<sup>4</sup> Throughout this opinion we refer to Brown v. Pro Football, Inc. simply as "Brown." There is, however, another similarly named, relevant Supreme Court opinion. See NLRB v. Brown, 380 U.S. 278, 13 L. Ed. 2d 839, 85 S. Ct. 980 (1965). To distinguish the two, we refer to the latter by its full name ("NLRB v. Brown").

Likewise, in Connell, 421 U.S. at 619-26, the Supreme Court considered the scope of the exemption in a case in [**11] which a union, through picketing, reached an agreement with general contractors to deal only with subcontractors who were parties to the union's collective bargaining agreement. Although the union's goal was to organize the subcontractors' employees, it eschewed any interest in representing any employees of the general contractors. Thus, the agreement was reached outside of any collective bargaining between the union and the general contractors. The Court concluded that the union's methods were not immune from antitrust attack simply because its goal was legal under labor law. Id. at 625. The agreement imposed on the general contractors caused all nonunion subcontractors to become ineligible to compete for available work. Balancing labor policy with the interests protected by the antitrust laws, the Court explained:

This kind of direct restraint on the business market has substantial anticompetitive effects, both actual and potential, that would not follow naturally from the elimination of competition over wages and working conditions. It contravenes antitrust policies to a degree not justified by congressional labor policy, and [*1185] therefore cannot claim a nonstatutory [**12] exemption from the antitrust laws.

Id.

In all of these decisions, HN7<sup>5</sup> the Supreme Court's focus was on harmonizing labor and antitrust laws by applying the nonstatutory labor exemption where there was an actual or potential conflict between the interests of labor relations and antitrust enforcement. Where no such conflict existed, the Court declined to apply the exemption. As is apparent from the Court's case law, the inquiry is necessarily fact specific and requires application of various considerations that help us discern whether the harmonizing principle is served by applying the exemption to the challenged conduct in a particular case.

In deciding that the exemption applied in Brown, its most recent opinion on the issue, the Court noted that the "conduct took place during and immediately after a collective-bargaining negotiation. It grew out of, and was directly related to, the lawful operation of the bargaining process. It involved a matter that the parties were required to negotiate collectively. And it concerned only the parties to the collective-bargaining relationship." Brown, 518 U.S. at 250. While we do not view this statement as declaring [**13] rigid factors that must be found in every case for the exemption to apply,<sup>5</sup> we nevertheless believe that the Court signaled the importance of these considerations in determining whether there is an actual or potential conflict between labor and antitrust laws that requires accommodation through the application of the exemption.

[**14] Each of the considerations described in Brown relates in some way to the scope of the exemption. While none is controlling, together they provide a valuable analytical tool for us to use in deciding whether the challenged conduct merits application of the exemption in this case.

<sup>5</sup> Prior to the Supreme Court's decision in Brown, the Ninth Circuit used a three-factor test to determine whether this exemption applied. Phoenix Elec. Co. v. Nat'l Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 81 F.3d 858, 861 (9th Cir. 1996) (applying the exemption when "(1) the restraint primarily affects the parties to the agreement and no one else, (2) the agreement concerns wages, hours, or conditions of employment that are mandatory subjects of collective bargaining, and (3) the agreement is produced from bona fide, arm's-length collective bargaining.") (citing test from Mackey v. Nat'l Football League, 543 F.2d 606, 614 (8th Cir. 1976)). To the extent that this so-called "Mackey test" exempts only agreements between unions and employers, it does not survive Brown, which extended the exemption to an employer-only agreement. See Clarett v. Nat'l Football League, 369 F.3d 124, 134 (2d Cir. 2004) ("the suggestion that the Mackey factors provide the proper guideposts . . . simply does not comport with the Supreme Court's most recent treatment of the non-statutory labor exemption in Brown. . . ."). Moreover, while the Mackey test required all three factors to be present, Brown does not adopt such a rigid test. But even if Phoenix Elec. Co. were still good law, the challenged provisions would clearly not be exempt from antitrust scrutiny because they do not concern wages, hours or conditions of employment as required by the second factor of the Mackey test.

BBrown's Considerations1. The Timing of the Revenue Sharing Provisions

The first consideration set forth in Brown examines whether the timing of the conduct was closely connected to the collective bargaining process. It is undisputed that the Supermarkets' multiemployer bargaining unit, in anticipation of the impending labor dispute, entered into the MSAA on September 5, 2003, one month before the expiration of their CBA. The MSAA's revenue-sharing terms were triggered [*1186] by a strike against or lockout by any one of the Supermarkets. (MSAA at P 5(F)). In this way, the timing of the revenue sharing generally fell within the collective bargaining process.

However, the timing analysis is complicated by the fact that the revenue sharing ran for not only the entire duration of the strike, but also two full weeks after the conclusion of the labor dispute. Defendants assert that [**15] the "tail" is justified under Brown because the Supreme Court applied the exemption to conduct taking place "during and immediately after a collective-bargaining negotiation." Brown, 518 U.S. at 250 (emphasis added). However, viewing Brown in the context of its facts, it is clear that the time following the breakdown in negotiations between the players and the NFL was itself part of the bargaining process.

During labor negotiations, the National Football League proposed its wage terms for a developmental squad to the players' union in April 1989, which the players rejected. Id. at 234. Two months later, in June, negotiations broke down, and the parties reached an impasse. Id. at 235. The league then unilaterally instituted its proposal. Id. But the labor dispute remained very much alive, even though negotiations had ceased. No agreement had yet been reached. The time "immediately after a collective-bargaining negotiation" described by the Supreme Court was still within an ongoing labor dispute. In this case, by contrast, the MSAA's two-week tail occurred after the conclusion of the labor dispute.

An impasse in [**16] negotiations, like the one in Brown, "may occur several times during the course of a single labor dispute, since the bargaining process is not over when the first impasse is reached. . ." Id. at 246. Moreover, during such an impasse in negotiations, "[t]he multiemployer bargaining unit ordinarily remains intact. . . . The duty to bargain survives; employers must stand ready to resume collective bargaining." Id. at 244. This situation contrasts sharply with the one now before us in which the challenged conduct during the tail period occurred after a new CBA had already been successfully negotiated, and the labor dispute was over.

Brown does not provide any basis for applying the exemption to an agreement among employers that persists after a new CBA has been successfully negotiated. In holding that the exemption may not apply to agreements that are "sufficiently distant in time and circumstances from the collective-bargaining process," the Supreme Court pointed to two specific examples illustrating such distance: decertification of a union, and an "extremely long" impasse accompanied by instability or "defunctness" of a multiemployer bargaining [**17] unit. Id. at 250. Both examples involve the collapse of collective bargaining in a way that terminates the process. The multiemployer negotiations with the union do not merely cease temporarily under such circumstances; rather, the process is entirely over due to the unraveling of the collective bond holding together the parties on one side of the negotiation. The Court's citation of these examples lends further support to our view that HN8[] the exemption is ill-suited for actions taken after termination or successful completion of the collective bargaining process.

Defendants argue that the tail serves national labor policy because they can more effectively maintain their unified front in dealing with the unions during negotiations if they know they will have some protection from competition after a labor dispute and while they await the return of their former customers. Nothing in the record supports Defendants' assertions [*1187] that the collective bargaining process could not function, or would even be substantially impaired, without this tail provision. The Supermarkets believed that some of their customers were likely to stay away for many months after the strike's [**18] conclusion. (Cox Decl. P 8; Schroeder Decl. P 11). Indeed, one of Defendants' witnesses declared that six months after the strike's conclusion, consumers still had not returned to their pre-strike shopping patterns. (Schroeder Decl. P 15). The two-week tail thus did not do away with the economic impact the Supermarkets faced when recovering from the loss of their customers. The fact that they suffered lingering economic impact despite the tail, and they nevertheless have a new CBA with the unions in place, illustrates that it was not necessary to the collective bargaining process for the employers to be buffered from the effects of changed shopping patterns. See Brown, 518 U.S. at 237-38.

Once the Supermarkets succeeded in negotiating their agreement with the unions, national labor policy ceased to serve as a justification for the challenged conduct.<sup>6</sup> Their concerns about customers' post-strike shopping preferences are not matters of labor law, but primarily matters of competition. Under national economic policy favoring competition, the problem of regaining customers who stray to competitors is uniquely within each business's own, separate ability to solve. [\[\*\*19\]](#) They can devise discounting opportunities, promotions, special services and all manner of creative enticements designed to lure customers back, just as they did to win customers from competitors in the pre-strike period. We are aware of no case that has ever held, or even suggested, that a tail period like that in Defendants' MSAA should fall within the ambit of the nonstatutory labor exemption.

We conclude that the revenue-sharing tail provision was not sufficiently temporally connected to the collective bargaining process to favor application of the exemption because the conduct at issue transpired not merely at an impasse in negotiations, [\[\*\*20\]](#) but after the bargaining process itself had concluded successfully. The timing of this conduct weighs against application of the exemption to the tail period.

On the other hand, the timing of the revenue sharing during the strike occurred within the context of an ongoing collective bargaining process. Negotiations were still underway during the strike, and no CBA had yet been reached. The timing of this part of the challenged conduct weighs in favor of applying the exemption.

2. Connection to Lawful Operation of the Bargaining Process

The next consideration set forth in Brown focuses on the nature of the employers' conduct. We examine whether the subject of the employers' agreement was sufficiently connected to the collective bargaining process.

The challenged provisions of the MSAA reallocate revenues among competitors during and after the strike period. The matter thus falls within Congress's core concerns in enacting the Sherman Act. See Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U.S. 469, 487-88, 84 L. Ed. 1311, 60 S. Ct. 982 \(1940\) (discussing the kind of restraint at which the Sherman Act is aimed), 492-93 (discussing HN10↑ [\[\*1188\]](#) antitrust laws being directed at conduct that "suppress[es] . . . [\[\*\*21\]](#) . competition in the marketing of goods and services. . . .") & 495 n.16 (discussing the antitrust laws' emphasis on "competitive conditions in the industry."). The revenue-sharing terms of the MSAA implicate labor policy at best indirectly by purportedly encouraging the employers to maintain their unity in bargaining; however, they directly affect market competition by freezing these competitors' relative market shares<sup>7</sup> [\[\*\*22\]](#) at pre-strike levels and redistributing revenue from one competitor to another pursuant to a fixed formula. The potential anticompetitive effects of such conduct do not follow naturally from the elimination of competition over wages, hours and working conditions, see Connell, 421 U.S. at 625, and are not primarily directed at the labor market.<sup>8</sup> Rather, the potential effects of the revenue sharing are directed at Defendants' own competitive relationship with one another and have no direct connection to any term being negotiated with the unions.

<sup>6</sup> By this we do not mean to suggest that national labor policy supports use of a revenue-sharing agreement during a strike. See discussion infra Part IV.B.2. We simply point out that HN9↑ once the strike is over and a new CBA is agreed upon, there is not even an arguable case for reliance on the collective bargaining process to justify an exemption from the antitrust laws.

<sup>7</sup> We use the phrase "relative market shares" in a very specific sense. Defendants shared revenue based on each chain's individual share of the aggregated, pre-strike sales. While this did not necessarily constitute apportionment of the entire market for groceries in Southern California, by its own terms it sought to maintain each competitor's portion of their aggregated share of that total market.

[**23] Defendants argue that revenue sharing promotes national labor policy because revenue sharing is necessary for them to effectively resist union "whipsawing" (i.e., selective picketing of one employer within a multiemployer bargaining unit in order to sever that employer's economic interest from that of the other employers). Thus, the challenged conduct is necessary to maintain relatively equal bargaining power.

Defendants' argument is based on a faulty premise. HN11 While national labor policy encourages collective bargaining, it does not require, imply or ensure that the parties to the bargaining process must have equality of bargaining position at all times. In essence, Defendants argue that in order to allow them to fend off any potential adverse bargaining tactic by the unions, the employers must be able to not only formulate appropriate counter-measures, but also have such measures categorically immunized from antitrust scrutiny. While we do not question that a negotiating party should be able to take appropriate action to respond to opposing tactics, we do not agree that such action should be protected categorically from antitrust scrutiny merely because it is helpful to the [**24] negotiating [\*1189] position of a party to the bargaining process. National labor policy has never promised parties engaged in collective bargaining that they will be shielded from economic duress during (and after) a labor dispute. In fact, labor law seems to presume that sometimes the playing field may be uneven. See generally NLRB v. Ins. Agents' Int'l Union, 361 U.S. 477, 489-90, 4 L. Ed. 2d 454, 80 S. Ct. 419 \(1960\). Congress has not conferred upon the National Labor Relations Board ("NLRB") the power to create an "'ideal' or balanced' state of collective bargaining." Id. at 499-500. As the Supreme Court long ago recognized, the risk of some economic hardship to both sides is built into the collective bargaining process, and that hardship (or, at least the threat of it) is ultimately part of what drives negotiations by bringing both parties to the table to compromise. See id. at 489-90. But just because use of or resistance to economic pressure may be permissible under labor law does not mean that the collective bargaining process is itself compromised if any or all such actions are not exempt from antitrust scrutiny.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Before Brown, courts generally limited the application of the exemption to agreements whose anticompetitive restraints fell primarily and directly on the labor market. See Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., 311 U.S. App. D.C. 89, 50 F.3d 1041, 1051 \(D.C. Cir. 1995\), aff'd 518 U.S. 231, 135 L. Ed. 2d 521, 116 S. Ct. 2116 \(1996\) ("[T]he case for applying the exemption is strongest where a restraint on competition operates primarily in the labor market and has no anti-competitive effect on the product market."); Mid-Am. Reg'l Bargaining Ass'n v. Will County Carpenters District Council, 675 F.2d 881, 893 \(7th Cir. 1982\) ("Thus, a complaint must allege conduct operating as a direct restraint upon the business market in order to avoid application of the nonstatutory exemption."); Consol. Express, Inc. v. N.Y. Shipping Ass'n, 602 F.2d 494, 513 \(3rd Cir. 1979\), vacated on other grounds, 448 U.S. 902, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131, 100 S. Ct. 3040 \(1980\) ("The term nonstatutory exemption . . . is a shorthand description of an interpretation of the Sherman Act, making that statute inapplicable to restraints imposed in the interest of lawful union monopoly power in the labor market."). Brown did not negate or implicitly overrule this nexus between exempted conduct and the labor market. See Connell, 421 U.S. at 622 ("[T]he nonstatutory exemption offers no . . . protection when a union and a nonlabor party agree to restrain competition in a business market.").

<sup>9</sup> Defendants cite two out-of-circuit cases for the proposition that employer revenue-sharing agreements like this one are protected by the nonstatutory labor exemption. In the first, the Second Circuit upheld a joint strike insurance plan against an antitrust challenge. Kennedy v. Long Island R.R., 319 F.2d 366, 374 \(2d Cir. 1963\). However, the applicability of the nonstatutory labor exemption was not before, and was not considered by, the court. The court focused instead upon whether the insurance policy was a substantive violation of the antitrust laws. Of course, whether the challenged MSAA provisions violate the antitrust laws is not before us on this motion. Thus, Kennedy offers us no guidance here.

Defendants also rely upon a case in which several airlines joined together in a mutual aid pact. Air Line Pilots Ass'n Int'l v. Civ. Aeronautics Bd., 163 U.S. App. D.C. 451, 502 F.2d 453 \(D.C. Cir. 1974\). This case does not assist our inquiry because the court declined to address the antitrust issue due to the plaintiff's failure to exhaust an administrative remedy. Id. at 457. Further, Air Line Pilots involved an explicit statutory exemption in the Federal Aviation Act, not the implicit nonstatutory exemption now before us. Id. at 457 & n.14 (citing 49 U.S.C. § 1384 (1974), which relieved the potential defendant "from the operation of the antitrust laws" (repealed by the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984, PL 98-443)).

[**25] The HN12 methods used in labor negotiations are not immune from antitrust attack simply because the goal is legal. See Connell, 421 U.S. at 625. Here, there is no showing that the Supermarkets and the unions cannot bargain collectively if revenue-sharing provisions like those in the MSAA were subject to antitrust scrutiny.

Defendants also argue there is fundamentally no difference between mutual aid agreements that provide for joint action locking out union employees, or shutting down production, see, e.g., Clune v. Publishers' Ass'n, 214 F. Supp. 520, 522 \(S.D.N.Y. 1963\), aff'd 314 F.2d 343 (2d Cir. 1963) (per curiam), and mutual aid agreements providing for the sharing of revenue. They go so far as to contend that the revenue-sharing provisions in their MSAA are analytically indistinguishable from lockout agreements as both are defensive tools used to combat whipsawing. Because revenue sharing purportedly keeps the employers' economic interests aligned, Defendants contend that without it, picketed stores would be pressured to accede to the unions' demands through the threat of losing customers who prefer to shop at non-picketed stores. [**26] Like a lockout, revenue sharing theoretically strengthens employers' resolve to stand together through the strike. See Brown, 518 U.S. at 245 (discussing NLRB v. Brown, 380 U.S. 278, 289, 13 L. Ed. 2d 839, 85 S. Ct. 980 \(1965\)), in which the Supreme [*1190] Court held that hiring replacement workers during a lockout was calculated to "preserv[e] the integrity of the multiemployer bargaining unit."). "Labor law permits employers, after impasse, to engage in considerable joint behavior, including joint lockouts and replacement hiring." Id. Defendants also contend that revenue sharing has no more effect on the market than a lockout, which decreases production and thereby affects the availability of goods and services to consumers. For these reasons, Defendants argue that the rationale of the decisions sanctioning other kinds of employer mutual aid pacts, such as lockout agreements, dictates that the nonstatutory labor exemption should apply to Defendants' revenue sharing in this case.

While Defendants' argument may have superficial appeal, a closer examination of the nature of the mutual aid at issue reveals that there are significant differences between a lockout, or a production stoppage, [**27] and revenue sharing. Employer lockouts are the flip-side of employee strikes. Congress statutorily recognized the use of lockouts as a lawful economic weapon in labor disputes. NLRB v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 449 \("the Buffalo Linen Case"\), 353 U.S. 87, 92-93, 1 L. Ed. 2d 676, 77 S. Ct. 643 \(1957\) ("The unqualified use of the term 'lock-out' in several sections of the Taft-Hartley Act is statutory recognition that there are circumstances in which employers may lawfully resort to the lockout as an economic weapon."). The Taft-Hartley Act uses "strike" and "lock-out" jointly, as alternate forms of the same concept (i.e., a work stoppage induced by a labor dispute). See id. at 92 n.16 (citing 29 U.S.C. § 158\(d\)\(4\) ("no resort to strike or lock-out' during 60-day notice period"); 29 U.S.C. § 173\(c\) ("Director of Mediation Service to seek to induce parties to settle dispute peacefully without resort to strike, lock-out, or other coercion'"); 29 U.S.C. § 176 ("appointment of board of inquiry by President when threatened or actual strike or lock-out' creates a national emergency"); 29 U.S.C. § 178 [**28] ("power to enjoin 'strike or lock-out' in case of national emergency")) (emphasis added). Though the Supreme Court has not expressly passed on whether an "employer lockout is the corollary of the employees' statutory right to strike," id. at 93 n. 19, we conclude that it functions as such in light of the statutory linkage of the two. See id. at 92 n.16. HN13 The statutory linkage of strikes and lockouts demonstrates that they are two sides of the same coin under national labor policy.

Viewing lockouts as the analog of strikes, we look to the historical relationship between strikes and the Sherman Act to understand why this sort of mutual aid is immune from antitrust review. In 1924, the Supreme Court considered whether a strike against manufacturers gave rise to an antitrust claim against the union or its members. United Leather Workers' Int'l Union v. Herkert & Meisel Trunk Co., 265 U.S. 457, 68 L. Ed. 1104, 44 S. Ct. 623 \(1924\). The employers charged that the union's strike obstructed the manufacture and shipment of goods to be sold in interstate commerce. Id. at 462. Chief Justice Taft, writing for the majority, reasoned that the "mere reduction [**29] in the supply of an article [in] commerce [through the] prevention of its manufacture is ordinarily an indirect and remote obstruction to that commerce." Id. at 471 (emphasis added). It only directly obstructs commerce when "the necessary effect upon such commerce . . . is to enable those preventing the manufacture to monopolize its supply or control its price, or discriminate as between its would-be purchasers. . . ." Id.

Similarly, in Apex Hosiery, 310 U.S. at 481-83, a hosiery manufacturer [*1191] sought to recover antitrust damages from a union for losses the manufacturer suffered from a strike at its factory. The Supreme Court recognized that the strike "naturally and inevitably" caused the cessation of production and shipment of goods. Id.

at 484. However, it questioned whether this was the kind of restraint on trade that the Sherman Act sought to prevent. Id. at 487. It concluded that the Sherman Act does not police interference with the movement of goods and services. Id. at 490. Rather, it polices "'trusts' and . . . combinations' of businesses and of capital organized and directed [**30] to control of the market by suppression of competition in the marketing of goods and services. . . ." Id. at 492-93 (emphasis added). Its emphasis is on "competitive conditions in the industry." Id. at 495 n.16. The Supreme Court reviewed the common law doctrines of restraint, including conduct such as fixing prices, dividing market territories, and restricting production, all of which tend to raise prices and suppress competition. Id. at 497. It held that the strike had no effect on prices of hosiery in the market, and did not have as its purpose the restraint of competition. Id. at 501. It reasoned that under the Clayton Act, labor is not a commodity or article of commerce, and therefore restraints on the employees' services to the employer are not restraints of trade or commerce. Id. at 503.

HN14 [↑] The same way a strike restrains the employees' provision of services to the employer, a lockout restrains the employers' purchase of those services from the employees. Both are fundamentally restraints on labor. Specifically, they are restraints on the labor market governed by a particular CBA. Though [**31] such restraints may indirectly affect commerce by restricting production or sales of goods or services to consumers, see United Leather Workers, 265 U.S. at 471, they are not the kind of restraints at which the Sherman Act is aimed. Apex Hosiery, 310 U.S. at 487. The work stoppage, whether initiated by the employers in a lockout or by the employees in a strike, does not restrict competition in the market among competitors in the industry.

This distinction in the nature of the restraint is illustrated in Clune, 214 F. Supp. at 529-31, a case in which all the city newspaper publishers stopped production and thereby ceased "purchasing" the labor of printing pressmen who had targeted some of the newspapers with a strike. Relying on United Leather Workers, 265 U.S. at 471, the district court concluded that this production stoppage was analogous to the reduction in the supply of an article in commerce that would result from an employee strike. See Clune, 214 F. Supp. at 530-31. The court extended the rationale for exempting strikes from the Sherman Act to the employers' production stoppage. [**32] Like a strike or lockout, this production stoppage directly restrained labor, and had an indirect effect on commerce, but "such results [were] not the direct interference with interstate commerce which the Sherman Anti-Trust Act forbids." Id. at 529 (quoting United States v. San Francisco Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 57 F.Supp. 57, 60-61 (N.D. Cal. 1944)).

The foregoing demonstrates why Defendants are mistaken in their contention that the revenue-sharing agreement at issue in this case is analytically indistinguishable from lockouts. While lockouts restrain labor (by halting the employers' purchase of the employees' services), and thereby indirectly affect commerce, the MSAA's revenue-sharing provisions do not affect the availability of labor, but instead guarantee, during (and for two weeks after) the [*1192] strike, that each of the Supermarkets will be entitled to its pre-strike percentage share of their aggregate sales. As such the challenged provisions affect primarily matters of competition in the product market. This consideration weighs against applying the exemption to the Supermarkets' challenged conduct.

3. Connection to Mandatory Subjects of [**33] Negotiations

It is undisputed that the revenue-sharing provisions of the MSAA do not concern mandatory subjects of collective bargaining (i.e., wages, hours or working conditions). The lack of any connection to the core activities of collective bargaining weighs against application of the nonstatutory labor exemption to any of the revenue-sharing provisions of the MSAA.

4. Effect on Parties Not Involved in the Collective Bargaining

The final consideration of the Brown analysis focuses on whether the employers' agreement concerned only parties to the collective bargaining relationship. Ralphs, Vons and Albertson's were involved in negotiating a CBA as a single, multiemployer bargaining unit. They were therefore indisputably parties to the collective bargaining process.

Food 4 Less, however, was not part of the Supermarkets' multiemployer bargaining unit. Food 4 Less had its own, separate CBA with the unions which, unlike the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's CBA that expired on October 5, 2003, did not expire until February 28, 2004, and was subsequently extended to April 4, 2004.<sup>10</sup> Additionally, representatives of the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's multiemployer bargaining unit [**34] would have no role in negotiating Food 4 Less's future CBA with its unions. (MSAA at P 8(D)). Nevertheless, the revenue-sharing provisions of the MSAA obligated Food 4 Less to share its revenue with the Supermarkets in return for an agreement from Vons and Albertson's to do likewise were Food 4 Less to experience a strike in its future labor negotiations.<sup>11</sup> (See MSAA at P 8(A)).

The parties have presented conflicting evidence as to the entity status of Food 4 Less.<sup>12</sup> This [**35] factual dispute is not material to our inquiry on this motion because our focus here is not on whether the employers' agreement affects independent corporate entities, but rather on whether it affects parties outside the collective bargaining relationship. The existence of a separate Food 4 Less CBA resolves that question. As a matter of labor law, [*1193] the revenue sharing provision involved a party outside the collective bargaining relationship. It is the potential conflict between labor and antitrust laws that is at issue here, not the law of business associations. Food 4 Less (however defined) was not a member of the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's multiemployer collective bargaining unit.

[**36] Defendants also contend that Food 4 Less should not be considered a party outside the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's multiemployer collective bargaining unit because some of the terms of Food 4 Less's own CBA were tied to terms in Ralphs's contract with the unions. Specifically, Food 4 Less's employees received health and welfare benefits equal to 75 percent of the value of those benefits in Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's CBA. Additionally, Food 4 Less's CBA recognized the experience level obtained by certain classes of workers who had previously worked under the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's CBA. However, the linkage of Food 4 Less's employees' benefits and service credits to Ralphs's CBA does not make Food 4 Less a "party" to the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's collective bargaining unit for purposes of the present analysis. This contractual linkage was incidental to the collective bargaining relationship. Indeed, the MSAA itself restricted its members from participating in Food 4 Less's own future negotiations with the unions. (MSAA at P 8(D) ("[T]he Management Committee will have no direct role with respect to Food4Less' [sic] conduct of its negotiations with the UFCW locals."))

Defendants argue [**37] that inclusion of third parties does not weigh against application of the exemption. They rely on Kennedy, 319 F.2d at 372-74. As we previously noted,<sup>13</sup> Defendants' reliance on Kennedy is misplaced inasmuch as the Second Circuit did not consider the applicability of the nonstatutory labor exemption.

Defendants also rely on Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butchers Workmen v. Wetterau Foods, Inc., 597 F.2d 133 \(8th Cir. 1979\). There, a wholesale supplier provided a supermarket with temporary replacement workers in order to enable the supermarket to remain open during a strike. The union sued, alleging a violation of the Sherman Act. However, the agreement affected only labor, in the same way that a strike or lockout would. The court in Wetterau Foods specifically recognized that "[d]efining the boundaries of [the nonstatutory labor exemption] has not proved <sup>10</sup> The record contains two separate collective bargaining agreements between Food 4 Less and UFCW locals. (See Pl.'s Exs. 2-3). Both agreements ran from February 27, 2000 through February 28, 2004. (Id.). As the differences between these two agreements are not salient to the present dispute, we refer to them as a single agreement.

<sup>11</sup> Food 4 Less never received the benefit of this reciprocal revenue-sharing provision, however, as it was able to avert a strike when negotiating its own CBA. (Supp. Schroeder Decl. PP 2-5).

<sup>12</sup> The State proffered the Food 4 Less CBA that was executed by an entity referred to as Food 4 Less of California, Inc. which appears to be a corporate entity distinct from Ralphs. (Pl.'s Exs. 2-3). In fact, Food 4 Less is sometimes treated as a separate entity in The Kroger Company's public filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the corporate hierarchy. (See Pl.'s Exs. 1, 49-51). Defendants submitted evidence demonstrating that Food 4 Less is merely a dba of Ralphs, and "Food 4 Less of California" is a dormant subsidiary whose name was used in error on Food 4 Less's CBA. Defendants also demonstrated that Food 4 Less's administrative structure is closely tied to Ralphs's own operations, and that Food 4 Less had an interest in the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's CBA because Food 4 Less's own contract would be affected by it. (Schroeder Decl. PP 3-5, 7, 14; Defs.' Exs. I & J).

<sup>13</sup> See discussion supra n.9.

an easy task. A court must balance the degree of interference with federal [**38] labor policy with the magnitude of the restraint of trade and whether the restraint directly or indirectly affects market prices and free competition for the consuming public." Id. at 136.

In analyzing this factor, we note that Food 4 Less's status as a party outside the Ralphs/Vons/Albertson's collective bargaining unit cannot be disconnected from its status as a competitor of the stores within that bargaining unit such as Vons and Albertson's. Unlike the wholesale supplier who was not a competitor of the store engaged in the labor dispute in Wetterau Foods, Food 4 Less competes with at least two of the Supermarkets.<sup>14</sup> The [*1194] involvement of this competitor who operates under a separate CBA weighs against Defendants. We conclude that this consideration militates against extending the limited nonstatutory labor exemption to this revenue-sharing agreement.

[**39] C.

Other Considerations

1. Defendants' Proposed Parity Rule

At oral argument, Defendants argued that as a matter of parity, as long as an agreement among employers is designed to counter a union tactic protected by the statutory labor exemption, it should receive a corresponding immunity from the nonstatutory exemption. (Reporter's Transcript ("RT") at 34:6-10). Defendants claim that because revenue sharing was a tactic adopted to combat whipsawing, the nonstatutory immunity should apply to the challenged provisions.

Defendants purportedly derive this rule from Brown's statement that the Court's decision "is not intended to insulate from antitrust review every joint imposition of terms by employers, for an agreement among employers could be sufficiently distant in time and in circumstances from the collective-bargaining process that a rule permitting antitrust intervention would not sufficiently interfere with that process." Brown, 518 U.S. at 250. (See RT 19:20 (arguing that this language was the controlling portion of Brown); RT 24:9-15 (arguing that the "specific issues of bargaining" discussed in the sentence laying out the four [**40] considerations do not limit the exemption)). According to Defendants, concerted employer activity that is related to bona fide efforts to counter union labor tactics is sufficiently close in time and circumstances to the collective bargaining process to warrant application of the exemption.

This argument is flawed for a number of reasons. First, the language Defendants quote from Brown is a caveat on the Court's holding, not the holding or its rationale. The structure of the opinion makes clear that timing and circumstance are not the only relevant considerations. Defendants' reading ignores the proper context of the Court's discussion. The Court announced its holding and rationale as follows:

For these reasons, we hold that the implicit ("nonstatutory") antitrust exemption applies to the employer conduct at issue here. That conduct took place during and immediately after a collective-bargaining negotiation. It grew out of, and was directly related to, the lawful operation of the bargaining process. It involved a matter that the parties were required to negotiate collectively. And it concerned only the parties to the collective-bargaining relationship.

<sup>14</sup> Defendants also cite a district court case from the Southern District of New York for the proposition that inclusion of Food 4 Less in the MSAA does not preclude application of the exemption. See Sage Realty Corp. v. ISS Cleaning Servs. Group, Inc., 936 F. Supp. 130, 137-39 (S.D.N.Y. 1996). The primary holding of the case was that the plaintiff suffered no antitrust injury. Id. at 136-37. The district court's analysis of the applicability of the exemption sheds no light on the relevant considerations set forth in Brown. See id. at 137-38. Significantly, it offers no guidance whatsoever on the implications of involvement of a competitor, like Food 4 Less, who is not a member of the multiemployer bargaining unit. See id. at 138 n.7 (noting that the defendants' actions had no anticompetitive effect on the market). We do not find Sage Realty's analysis of the exemption persuasive in a situation, like ours, in which the conduct at issue involved an employer who is purportedly a horizontal competitor of the members of the multiemployer bargaining unit.

Id. [**41] The next sentence, which Defendants cite, set forth a limitation on the holding and its fact-based inquiry: "Our holding is not intended to insulate . . . every joint imposition of terms by employers. . . ." Id. Defendants mistake the Court's fact-based limitation of its holding for the holding itself.

By failing to address the full rationale for the holding in Brown, Defendants ignore whether the agreement "involve[s] a matter that the parties were required to negotiate collectively" and whether it "concern[s] only the parties to the collective-bargaining relationship," two considerations important to the Court's decision. [*1195] Id. We are not persuaded by any formulation of a test that simply ignores considerations the Supreme Court has deemed relevant.

Second, Defendants' reading of the nonstatutory exemption as requiring a per se parity rule represents a fundamental misunderstanding of the interplay between the statutory and nonstatutory exemptions. HN15[<sup>14</sup>] The nonstatutory exemption is not a mere equalization of the specific immunities afforded to organized labor by Congress in the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts, but rather is a judicially-created exemption that is necessary [**42] for an entirely different statutory scheme—the National Labor Relations Act \("NLRA"\)—to function as Congress intended. As the Supreme Court explained:

HN16[<sup>15</sup>] The basic sources of organized labor's exemption from federal antitrust laws are §§ 6 and 20 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 17 and 29 U.S.C. § 52, and the Norris-LaGuardia Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 104, 105, and 113. These statutes declare that labor unions are not combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, and exempt specific union activities, including secondary picketing and boycotts, from the operation of the antitrust laws. They do not exempt concerted action or agreements between unions and nonlabor parties. The Court has recognized, however, that a proper accommodation between the congressional policy favoring collective bargaining under the NLRA and the congressional policy favoring free competition in business markets requires that some union-employer agreements be accorded a limited nonstatutory exemption from antitrust sanctions.

Connell, 421 U.S. 621-22 (citations omitted). See also Brown, 518 U.S. at 236 [**43] (citing various provisions of the NLRA, 29 U.S.C. §§ 151, 153, 158, as sources of policy that form the basis of the nonstatutory exemption); Allen Bradley Co. v. Local Union No. 3, IBEW, 325 U.S. 797, 801-06, 89 L. Ed. 1939, 65 S. Ct. 1533 \(1945\) (discussing history and purpose of statutory exemption); United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U.S. 219, 230-31, 85 L. Ed. 788, 61 S. Ct. 463\(1941\) (same).

HN17[<sup>16</sup>] While Brown extended the nonstatutory exemption to encompass certain employer-only agreements, it did not fundamentally alter the dynamics of the relationship between the nonstatutory and statutory exemptions. See Brown, 518 U.S. 237-38 (holding that employers are entitled to the nonstatutory exemption over agreements that are "necessary to make the statutorily authorized collective-bargaining process work as Congress intended."). Therefore, any application of the implicit nonstatutory exemption must be limited to those instances where the exemption is necessary to carry out Congress's intent as expressed in national labor policy. Defendants' interpretation of the exemption impliedly invites us to legislate an extension of the nonstatutory exemption to include a strict rule of [**44] parity that Congress has not chosen to embrace. We decline Defendants' invitation.<sup>15</sup>

---

<sup>15</sup> Defendants also imply that because lockouts, which are afforded the nonstatutory immunity, are "responses" to strikes, revenue sharing, which is a "response" to selective picketing, should be similarly immune. The syllogism is false. "Responsiveness" is not the touchstone of the nonstatutory immunity. As we addressed above, see supra discussion Part IV.B.2, lockouts warrant immunity because their primary and direct restraint falls on the labor market. The same cannot be said of the revenue sharing scheme in the MSAA.

In conclusion, we find no support for Defendants' proposed rule of parity in the statutory scheme, case law or policy considerations [*1196] underlying the labor and antitrust laws. Nor can we discern any rationale for adopting such rule in lieu of weighing the four considerations set forth in Brown.

2. Defendants' Proposed Reliance on the NLRB

Defendants argue that an antitrust court should not police [**45] the tactics used in collective bargaining because the NLRB already has authority to review their conduct, and the specter of an antitrust court's additional involvement would impair the functioning of that process. See Brown, 518 U.S. at 242 (noting that the NLRB, rather than antitrust courts, has "primary responsibility for policing the collective-bargaining process."). After oral argument, Defendants filed copies of several recent NLRB letter opinions in which the Board found that an allegedly similar mutual strike assistance agreement used by some of the Supermarkets in a different labor dispute did not violate the NLRA.

This argument misapprehends our role in this action. We do not purport to decide what is appropriate action under labor law. However, Congress has not vested the NLRB with responsibility to enforce the Sherman Act, review anticompetitive effects upon the market, or harmonize the nation's labor laws with the Sherman Act. The NLRB is charged with reviewing different aspects of such conduct. See Ins. Agents, 361 U.S. at 498-99 (discussing NLRB's responsibility for reviewing whether parties' conduct evidences a good-faith desire to [**46] come to an agreement). Just as the NLRA serves a purpose different from that of the Sherman Act, our role in determining the applicability of the nonstatutory labor exemption is different from the NLRB's inquiry into whether a labor practice is unfair under national labor policy. We thus cannot agree with Defendants that the NLRB's decision about the permissibility of such conduct as a matter of labor law is a sufficient condition for applying the nonstatutory labor exemption in the face of an antitrust challenge. In fact, Supreme Court precedent is to the contrary. See Connell, 421 U.S. at 625 (holding that a union's conduct was not immune from antitrust sanctions simply because its goal is lawful). See also P. Areeda & H. Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 256e (2002) HN18[] ("[M]ere lawfulness under the labor laws is not sufficient to create an antitrust immunity. Labor policy may be indifferent as to certain conduct, and then no labor policy purpose is served by immunizing it if it is anticompetitive.").

V

Conclusion

We have considered the harmonizing principle that underlies the nonstatutory labor exemption to the antitrust laws, and have carefully weighed [**47] the relevant considerations noted in Brown. Overall, the challenged revenue-sharing provision of the MSAA is not sufficiently connected to the subject matter of the collective bargaining process, or to matters required to be negotiated collectively. Defendants' revenue-sharing agreement directly implicates competition among competitors in an industry by redistributing revenue earned at certain companies to others that were less successful during the strike, and by freezing each Defendant's relative market share at pre-strike levels, not only during a strike, but also for at least two weeks after successful completion of the bargaining process. This redistribution of revenue included a competitor that was not part of the multiemployer bargaining unit. The challenged provisions' potential anticompetitive effects do not follow naturally from the collective bargaining process, and they are neither necessary to, nor implied [*1197] by, the functioning of that process. As labor law has not been shown to be impaired by subjecting this sort of revenue sharing to antitrust scrutiny, there is no conflict between antitrust and labor laws that requires reconciliation by application of the exemption. [**48] We thus hold that the challenged provisions are not protected from potential antitrust liability by the limited nonstatutory labor exemption. HN19[] The incidental benefits that revenue sharing affords to employers in their labor negotiations "cannot be utilized as a cat's-paw to pull employers' chestnuts out of the antitrust fires." United States v. Women's Sportswear Mfrs. Ass'n, 336 U.S. 460, 464, 93 L. Ed. 805, 69 S. Ct. 714 (1949) (Jackson, J.).

Alternatively, we hold that the exemption also cannot be applied to this revenue-sharing agreement because of the involvement of Food 4 Less, a competitor that was not part of the multiemployer collective bargaining unit, and the inclusion of the tail period that took the employers' conduct entirely outside the collective bargaining process.

Defendants' motion for summary judgment is DENIED.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: May 25, 2005

GEORGE H. KING

United States District Judge

ATTACHMENT

Appendix A-Paragraph 6 of the MSAA

The revenue-sharing terms of paragraph 6(A) of the MSAA are set forth verbatim in this appendix.

6. CPA CALCULATIONS OF COST-SHARING PAYMENTS. The CPA shall compute the amount of cost-sharing, if any, due to/from each [**49] of the employers as set forth below. An example of this calculation is attached hereto as Exhibit A. The computations shall be as follows:

A. Revenue Sharing

- (i) For the Pre-Strike Base Period, the CPA will compute each Employer's percentage share ("the Pre-strike Sales Share") of the Employers' combined average weekly sales for stores in the Covered Area.
- (ii) For the Strike/Lockout Period, the CPA will compute the dollar amount of increase or decrease in each Employer's average weekly sales as compared to that Employer's average weekly sales in the Pre-Strike Base Period ("Dollar Change in Sales").
- (iii) For the Strike/Lockout Period, the CPA will compute the total dollar change in average weekly sales for all Employers ("Total Weekly Sales Lost") by combining each Employer's Dollar Change in Sales.
- (iv) The CPA will compute a presumed redistribution of lost sales ("The Dollar Sales Redistribution") by multiplying the Total Average Weekly Sales lost figure by each Employer's Pre-Strike Sales Share.
- (v) The CPA will compute the dollar difference for each Employer between the Employer's Dollar Change in Sales and the Dollar Sales Redistribution. The resulting [**50] amount shall be identified as the ("Sales Sharing Amount") [sic].
- (vi) The CPA will compute a presumed redistribution of lost sales ("the Dollar Sales Redistribution") by multiplying the Total Average Weekly Sharing Amount by fifteen percent (15%) and then multiplying the result by the number of weeks in the Strike/Lockout Period. (See Exhibit A attached hereto.) The Employer(s) due reimbursement under this section is/are the one(s) whose total average weekly sales lost during the Strike/Lockout [*1198] period [sic] exceeds the redistributed amount.

Dixie Gas & Food, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

May 25, 2005, Decided ; May 25, 2005, Filed

Case No. 03 C 8210

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12010 *; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,854; 57 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d (Callaghan) 976

DIXIE GAS & FOOD, INC.; ZAINAB, INC. dba HOMEWOOD SHELL; BW SERVICES, INC. dba ORLAND PARK SHELL; SAINT SEBASTIAN, INC. dba SHELL MINI MART; HAISAG, INC. dba HAZEL CREST SHELL; GOPI CORP. dba GOPI SHELL; and JET, INC. dba GARFIELD SHELL, Plaintiffs, v. SHELL OIL COMPANY; EQUILON ENTERPRISES LLC dba SHELL OIL PRODUCTS US; and EQUIVA SERVICES LLC, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Summary judgment granted by, Claim dismissed by Dixie Gas & Food, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16823 \(N.D. Ill., Mar. 3, 2008\)

Core Terms

---

plaintiffs', Franchise, motion to dismiss, prices, non-conformity, allegations, counts, practices, economic duress, damages, franchisees, notice, Robinson-Patman Act, stations, dealer, buyer, declaratory judgment, franchise agreement, products, fuels, wagon, tank, price discrimination, good faith, parties, renewal, seller

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN1[] Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

There is no heightened pleading standard for antitrust claims.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > General Overview

HN2[] Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

To succeed on a Robinson-Patman Act price discrimination claim, plaintiffs must allege that: (i) more than one sale of commodities occurred; (ii) by the same seller; (iii) to different purchasers; (iv) at different prices among competitors; and (v) that the discrimination had a prohibited effect on competition. 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\).

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Assignments & Transfers

HN3[] Distributorships & Franchises, Assignments & Transfers

815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 705/6 explicitly prohibits various practices only in connection with the offer or sale of any franchise made in the state.

Torts > ... > Prospective Advantage > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > Business Torts > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN4[] Intentional Interference, Elements

To win on a claim for interference with a prospective economic advantage under Illinois law, a plaintiff must show: (1) his reasonable expectation of entering into a valid business relationship; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the plaintiff's expectancy; (3) purposeful interference by the defendant that prevents the plaintiff's legitimate expectancy from ripening into a valid business relationship; and (4) damages to the plaintiff resulting from such interference.

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > Subject Matter > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil & Petroleum Products > Gasoline Fuels > Gasoline Dealers & Distributors

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Contract Provisions > Contract Terms > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Contract Terms > Gap Filler Provisions > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Contract Terms > Gap Filler Provisions > Open Price

HN5[] Sales (Article 2), Subject Matter

810 Ill. Comp. Stat. 2-305(b) says that an open price term in a contract that is to be set by one party unilaterally must be set by that party in good faith: Open Price Term (2) A price to be fixed by the seller or by the buyer means a price for him to set in good faith.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Sales of Goods > Remedies > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Sales of Goods > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Standards of Performance & Liability > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > Acceptance of Goods > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > Notice Requirements > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > Notice Requirements > Notice of Breach

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Standards of Performance & Liability > Performance > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Buyer Remedies > Damages > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Remedies > Buyer's Damages & Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Sales of Goods > Performance > General Overview

HN6 [] Sales of Goods, Remedies

810 Ill. Comp. Stat. 5/2-714 provides. Buyer's Damages for Breach in Regard to Accepted Goods. (1) Where the buyer has accepted goods and given notification (subsection (3) of Section 2-607) he may recover as damages for any non-conformity of tender. 810 Ill. Comp. Stat. 5/2-607(3) states that where a tender has been accepted (a) the buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovers or should have discovered any breach notify the seller of the breach or be barred from any remedy.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Breach > Breach of Warranty

Contracts Law > ... > Sales of Goods > Warranties > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > ... > Standards of Performance & Liability > Performance > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Sales of Goods > Breach, Excuse & Repudiation > General Overview

HN7 [] Breach, Breach of Warranty

810 Ill. Comp. Stat. 2-714 non-conformity typically is associated with breaches of warranty or other claims arising from a physical non-conformity of the goods received as opposed to a non-conformity related to price. However, Illinois courts have found 810 Ill. Comp. Stat. 2-714 non-conformities for non-warranty related contractual breaches.

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > Federal Declaratory Judgments > Discretionary Jurisdiction

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > Federal Declaratory Judgments > General Overview

HN8 [] Federal Declaratory Judgments, Discretionary Jurisdiction

Under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201 et seq., federal courts have discretion to decline to hear a declaratory judgment action, even though it is within their jurisdiction. Declaratory judgment is appropriate, among other instances, where, the controversy has ripened to a point where one of the parties could invoke a coercive remedy (i.e. a suit for damages or an injunction) but has not done so.

Counsel: [*1] For Dixie Gas & Food, Inc., Zainab, Inc., BW Services, Inc., Caspian Petroleum Co., Saint Sebastian Inc., Haisag Inc, Gopi Corp, Jet Inc, Plaintiffs: Timothy John Coffey, Attorney at Law, Chicago, IL; William L Taylor, Taylor & Powell, LLC, Alexandria, VA; Nikki Fong, Thomas P Bleau, Bleau Fox & Associates, Los Angeles, CA; Timothy John Coffey, Law Office of Timothy J. Coffey, Glen Ellyn, IL.

For Shell Oil Company, Equilon Enterprises, LLC, Equiva Services, LLC, Defendants: David M Harris, Dawn Ann Morville Johnson, Greensfelder, Hemker & Gale, PC, St Louis, MO; Emily C Singley, Greensfelder, Hemker & Gale, P.C., Belleville, IL; James Thomas O'Neill, James T. O'Neill, Attorney at Law, Chicago, IL.

Judges: Judge Gottschall.

Opinion by: Joan B. Gottschall

Opinion

---

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

The plaintiffs in this action are several operators of Shell-branded gas station/mini mart businesses in Northern Illinois: Dixie Gas & Food, Inc., Zainab, Inc. dba Homewood Shell; BW Services, Inc. dba Orland Park Shell; Saint Sebastian, Inc. dba Shell Mini Mart; Haisag, Inc. dba Hazel Crest Shell; Gopi Corp. dba Gopi Shell; and Jet, Inc. dba Garfield Shell. The defendants are Shell Oil Company, [*2] Equilon Enterprises LLC dba Shell Oil Products US, and Equiva Services LLC<sup>1</sup> (collectively, "Shell"). Plaintiffs allege that they are all Shell franchisees, and that Shell has engaged in violations of federal antitrust law as well as various Illinois laws.

Before the court is Shell's motion to dismiss all nine counts of plaintiffs' complaint under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\). For the reasons discussed below, Shell's motion to dismiss is granted as to counts 1, 3 (only with respect to plaintiff Haisag, Inc.), 4, 6, 8, and 9, and denied as to counts 2, 3 (except as to plaintiff Haisag, Inc.); 5, and 7.

Jurisdiction

Plaintiffs allege federal question jurisdiction for violations of the [*3] Robinson-Patman Price Discrimination Act, 15 U.S.C. §13 ("Robinson-Patman Act"), as well as diversity jurisdiction. The remaining eight counts of the complaint allege state law claims.

Count 2 (Robinson-Patman Act)

As it is the basis for federal question jurisdiction in this case, the court first analyzes the sufficiency of plaintiffs' pleading as to their Robinson-Patman Act claims in count 2 of the complaint. Plaintiffs' count 2 alleges that Shell has engaged in price discrimination with respect to sales of motor vehicle fuels, in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act.

---

<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs allege that Equilon and Equiva Services are related to and controlled by Shell Oil Company, and that all defendants are jointly and severally liable for the acts complained of in this lawsuit. Defendants do not contest this characterization in their motion to dismiss.

As an initial matter, Shell's motion to dismiss implies that plaintiffs must meet a heightened pleading standard for their antitrust allegations, asserting that plaintiffs' Robinson-Patman Act claims are "vague and confusing," that plaintiffs "summarily" assert injury to themselves and to competition, and that plaintiffs' price discrimination claim "is so lacking in particularity" that it should be dismissed. Unfortunately for Shell, HN1 there is no heightened pleading standard for antitrust claims. *Hammes v. Aamco Transmissions, Inc.*, 33 F.3d 774, 782 \(7th Cir. 1994\) [*4] (noting that the Supreme Court has disallowed lower courts from imputing rule to antitrust claims that they must be pled with particularity).

HN2 To succeed on a Robinson-Patman Act price discrimination claim, plaintiffs must allege that: (i) more than one sale of commodities occurred; (ii) by the same seller; (iii) to different purchasers; (iv) at different prices among competitors; and (v) that the discrimination had a prohibited effect on competition. 15 U.S.C. § 13\(a\); *Goodloe v. Nat'l Wholesale Co.*, No. 03C7176, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13630, at \*26 \(N.D. Ill July 3, 2004\), citing *Kundrat v. Chicago Bd. Options Exch., Inc.*, No. 01C7456, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16908, at \*18 \(N.D. Ill. Sept. 6, 2002\), and *Windy City Circulating Co., Inc. v. Charles Levy Circulating Co.*, 550 F. Supp. 960, 966 \(N.D. Ill. 1982\).

Under this standard, plaintiffs have provided adequate allegations to support their Robinson-Patman Act claim. Plaintiffs have alleged that Shell engaged in more than one sale of motor vehicle fuels (Complaint P22, 65-66); the "same motor vehicle fuels" are the commodities that were priced discriminatorially [*5] (Complaint P61); that Shell actually discriminated in price between competing vendors without mitigating justification (Complaint P62 - 64); and that this alleged discriminatory pricing has caused injury to plaintiffs in particular and to competition generally (Complaint P65, 67-70). For good measure, plaintiffs have included other allegations (apparently under the assumption that they should plead facts to support all elements required to prove a Robinson-Patman violation), including that the allegedly discriminatory sales occurred in interstate commerce. (Complaint P66.) Shell's motion to dismiss count 2 is denied.

Count 1 (Economic Duress)

In count 1 plaintiffs seek damages based on their allegations that they were forced into signing franchise renewal agreements through tactics by Shell that constitute economic duress under Illinois law. (Complaint PP31 -59); see *Alexander v. Standard Oil Co.*, 97 Ill. App. 3d 809, 423 N.E.2d 578, 582-83, 53 Ill. Dec. 194 \(Ill. App. Ct. 1981\). Shell first argues that this theory is preempted by the remedial scheme of the Petroleum Marketing Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 2801, et seq. ("PMPA") that governs the franchisee/franchisor [*6] relationship after a franchise agreement has been terminated or non-renewed. 15 U.S.C. § 2806. This theory has been explicitly rejected by the Seventh Circuit. *Dersch Energies, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co.*, 314 F.3d 846 \(7th Cir. 2002\). As was the case in Dersch Energies, the parties here do not dispute that plaintiffs did renew their franchise agreements (if under protest), which divests plaintiffs of the ability to proceed under the PMPA's provisions regarding unlawful termination or non-renewal. This does not bar them from bringing state law causes of action attacking formation of the contract: In fact, Dersch Energies specifically notes that state law economic duress claims are allowed as to petroleum franchise agreements. *Dersch Energies*, 314 F.3d at 862 (where plaintiff actually renewed petroleum franchise agreement, she is "entitled to bring a state law claim . . . such as economic duress").

Shell also asserts that plaintiffs' economic duress claim is identical to the "constructive termination" theory that has been rejected in PMPA cases by the Seventh Circuit. *Jet, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co.*, 381 F.3d 627 \(7th Cir. 2004\), [*7] affirming *Jet, Inc. v. Shell Oil Co.*, No. 02C2289, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22951 \(N.D. Ill. Nov. 22, 2002\). This argument is a red herring; plaintiffs' economic duress claim is brought under state law, not the PMPA, making Jet inapplicable. *Jet*, 381 F.3d at 630 (holding that where franchisees actually renewed their franchise agreements, they could not state a claim "for wrongful renewal under the PMPA").

Shell also argues that there is no Illinois cause of action allowing an award of damages on an economic duress claim; rather, the theory of economic duress is available only to support avoidance of obligations undertaken as a result of actionable economic pressure. Shell's main case is *Shields Enters. v. First Chicago Corp.*, 975 F.2d 1290 \(7th Cir. 1992\), which directly supports this position. See also *Tibor Mach. Prods. v. Freudenberg-Nok, No.*

94C7635, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2360, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. Feb. 29, 1996\). Shell is correct in pointing out that plaintiffs have requested only damages, not avoidance of their franchise agreements, and have thus failed to state a claim under a theory of economic duress. Count [*8] 1 is dismissed with prejudice. Shields Enters., 975 F.2d at 1297 (affirming dismissal with prejudice of claim based on non-existent Illinois cause of action for damages based on economic duress).

Count 3 (Fraud)

Count 3 is brought by all plaintiffs except for Gopi, Inc. dba Gopi Shell, and claims damages for common-law fraud. Shell argues that plaintiffs have failed to allege fraud with the specificity required by Fed. R. Civ. Pro. 9\(b\). Citing the familiar "who, what, when, where, and how" pleading standard for fraud in the Seventh Circuit, Shell claims that the complaint alleges only generally that plaintiffs were misled by-Shell's representatives into believing that no rent relief measures were available from Shell to franchisees, when in fact Shell did have contemporaneous rent-relief programs available.<sup>2</sup> DiLeo v. Ernst & Young, 901 F.2d 624, 627 \(7th Cir. 1990\) (describing who, what, when, where, and how pleading standard for fraud). Contrary to Shell's arguments, plaintiffs have pled fraud with the specificity required by Rule 9\(b\). For example, plaintiffs allege:

in the case of plaintiffs [*9] Dixie Gas & Food, Inc., Zainab, Inc. dba Homewood Shell, and BW Services, Inc. dba Hickory Hills Shell, their principals, Abdul Basit and Waseem Ahmed met with Jeff Root [whom plaintiffs allege to be one of "their Equilon representatives"] at the Hickory Hills Shell service station in or about the late summer or fall of 1998 and complained to him about the high contract rents. They were told that nothing could be done about it, and they could either accept the new contract rents or give up the service stations.

(Complaint PP 75, 75(a)). This is typical of the level of specificity provided as to all plaintiffs who allege fraud, and includes each necessary allegation to complete the "who, what, when, where and how" formula. (Complaint PP75(a)-(e).) Further supporting allegations are to be found throughout the complaint. Thus, Shell's motion to dismiss count 3 is denied with respect to all plaintiffs alleging fraud, with the exception of plaintiff Haisag, Inc. dba Hazel Crest Shell ("Haisag"), as to which no approximate dates of alleged misrepresentation are specifically alleged. Ackerman v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 172 F.3d 467, 470 \(7th Cir. 1999\) [*10] (emphasizing importance of "when" component of pleading fraud). For this reason, Shell's motion to dismiss count 3 is granted as to Haisag only.

[*11] Counts 4 & 5 (Illinois Franchise Disclosure Act)

Next, Shell asserts that counts 4 and 5 must be dismissed because they fail to allege facts sufficient to establish that the Plaintiff is a franchisee within the meaning of the Illinois Franchise Disclosure Act, 815 ILCS 705/1, et seq. ("Franchise Act"). Shell asserts that to have standing under the Franchise Act, plaintiffs must plead allegations to support all elements establishing that plaintiffs meet the Franchise Act's definition of "franchisee" (a multi-part test according to Shell), and also argues that allegations going to each element of the claimed statutory violation must be pled to avoid dismissal. The court rejects this argument, which attempts to apply state fact pleading standards in federal court where notice pleading is the law. Bennett v. Schmidt, 153 F.3d 516, 518\(7th Cir. 1998\) ("[Federal] complaints need not plead law or match facts to every element of a legal theory."). Plaintiffs have adequately pled standing under the Franchise Act; throughout their complaint plaintiffs allege that they are franchisees of Shell, and that the defendant Shell entities [*12] are franchisors. Shell's standing argument fails, and as to Count 5 (alleging inter-franchisee price discrimination prohibited by 815 ILCS 705/18), Shell makes no other argument. Shell's motion to dismiss is denied with respect to Count 5.

<sup>2</sup> Count 3 is based on allegations that each plaintiff was eligible for an "Interim Rent Challenge" (a Shell program allowing for a reduction in lease rates for franchisees who complained of high rents), that Shell intentionally withheld information from plaintiffs about the Interim Rent Challenge, and affirmatively misrepresented to plaintiffs that Shell had no procedure available to franchisees to challenge allegedly excessive rental rates. (Complaint PP 76-85.) In addition to its Rule 9 argument, Shell claims (without citation to authority) that there can be no claim for damages based on these facts, essentially because such damages would be speculative. This argument fails. While plaintiffs may face a difficult challenge in proving the extent of damages, their allegations are sufficient to state a claim. See, e.g., McHugh v. Westpac Banking Corp., Nos. 93C3058, 93C3059, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11397, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 1995\) (noting that allegations of lost business opportunities are sufficient to support a claim for Illinois common law fraud).

With respect to count 4 (alleging fraudulent business practices prohibited by 815 ILCS 705/6), however, Shell's motion to dismiss is granted. While plaintiffs do not need to plead factual allegations going to each and every element of a section 705/6 claim, they do need to plead enough to state a claim under the plain language of the statute. HN3 [Section 705/6] explicitly prohibits various practices only "in connection with the offer or sale of any franchise made in this State." 815 ILCS 705/6. While count 4 sets forth many alleged actions of Shell that may (or may not) rise to the level of fraudulent practices under section 705/6, it fails to allege that these actions were undertaken in connection with the offer or sale of any of plaintiffs' franchises. The closest plaintiffs come to alleging fraud in connection with an offer or sale of one of plaintiffs' franchises [*13] is in P96(h) of the complaint:

Plaintiffs are informed and believe, and based thereon allege, that SHELL, EQUIVA and EQUILON have violated § 815 ILCS 705/6 [sic] by . . . (h) failing to disclose that Defendants would attempt to discourage prospective buyers of Plaintiffs' franchises in an attempt to eliminate independent franchisees, such as Plaintiffs, and other unfair business practices designed at forcing franchisees to "walk away" from their stations and/or reducing the goodwill value of Plaintiffs' stations so that it could exercise a right of first refusal at an artificially low purchase price.

This general language, free of references to any particular proposed offers or sales of the franchises at issue in this litigation, is inadequate to allege fraudulent practices by Shell in connection with an actual offer or sale of a franchise. On this basis, Shell's motion to dismiss count 4 is granted.

Count 6 (Illinois Deceptive Trade Practices Act)

Plaintiffs' count 6 alleges that certain Shell business practices complained of throughout the complaint also violate Illinois' Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act, [815 ILCS 510/1 \[\*14\] , et seq.](#) ("IUDTPA"). Here, as in Industry Specialty Chems., Inc. v. Cummins Engine Co., Inc., 902 F.Supp. 805, 812-13 (N.D. Ill. 1995), "conspicuously absent from plaintiff's complaint is an allegation that defendants misrepresented [plaintiffs'] products as their own, or confused the public as to the source or sponsors of their products." In other words, while Shell's business practices toward plaintiffs may be actionable under other statutes or common law, plaintiffs fail to allege anywhere in the complaint that Shell has attempted to pass off any products, or has otherwise created any likelihood of confusion as to the source of any products, and so have failed to state a claim under the IUDTPA. McGraw-Edison Co. v. Walt Disney Productions, 787 F.2d 1163, 1175 (7th Cir. 1986) ("Under the Illinois Deceptive Trade Practices Act a defendant is liable only if the plaintiff can establish a likelihood of confusion between the parties' products.") Shell's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' count 6 is granted.

Count 7 (Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage)

Plaintiff Caspian Petroleum Co. dba Orland Park Shell ("Caspian") is the only [*15] plaintiff bringing count 7, alleging interference with prospective economic advantage. Caspian claims that through delaying tactics and other unspecified interference, Shell interfered with Caspian's attempt to sell its franchise to a qualified prospective purchaser.

HN4 To win on a claim for interference with a prospective economic advantage under Illinois law, a plaintiff must show: "(1) his reasonable expectation of entering into a valid business relationship; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the plaintiff's expectancy; (3) purposeful interference by the defendant that prevents the plaintiff's legitimate expectancy from ripening into a valid business relationship; and (4) damages to the plaintiff resulting from such interference." [Fellhauer v. City of Geneva, 142 Ill. 2d 495, 568 N.E.2d 870, 878, 154 Ill. Dec. 649 (Ill. 1991). Again, a plaintiff in federal court need not allege facts going to each of these elements in detail, and here Caspian has alleged enough to assert its claim, stating that: it had a qualified prospective buyer and a signed contract to sell its franchise, that it notified Shell of the expected sale (by requesting Shell's approval), that Shell interfered with the prospective sale [*16] for the purpose of scuttling the sale, and that this (among other things) has resulted in Caspian's inability to sell its station for a reasonable price. (Complaint PP124-30.) Shell's motion to dismiss count 7 is denied. *Telewizja Polska USA, Inc. v. EchoStar Satellite Corp., No. 02C3293, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17936, at *35-36 (N.D. Ill. Sep. 3, 2004)*.

Count 8 (Illinois Uniform Commercial Code)

In count 8 plaintiffs (with the exception of Caspian and Haisag) allege that Shell has at various times since 1998 violated section 2-305 of Illinois' Uniform Commercial Code, 810 ILCS 5/2-101, et seq. HN5 Section 2-305\(1\)\(b\) says that an open price term in a contract that is to be set by one party unilaterally must be set by that party in good faith: "§2-305. Open Price Term. . . . (2) A price to be fixed by the seller or by the buyer means a price for him to set in good faith." Plaintiffs claim that "dealer tank wagon prices" (which appears to mean the wholesale prices at which Shell sells motor fuel to retail service stations) are open price terms of the dealer agreements between the complaining plaintiffs and Shell (Complaint P133), [*17] that Shell did not set these prices in good faith or according to reasonable commercial standards (Complaint P134), and that it unjustifiably provided preferred tank wagon pricing to company-owned and/or other preferred dealers. (Complaint P135.) When taken as true, these allegations are sufficient to state a claim that Shell did not set an open price term (dealer tank wagon prices) in good faith. 810 ILCS 5/2-305\(1\)\(b\). Unfortunately for plaintiffs, however, the inquiry does not stop there - plaintiffs have failed to allege that they gave required notice to Shell of its alleged breaches.

HN6 810 ILCS 5/2-714 mandates that plaintiffs needed to provide Shell with notification of Shell's alleged pricing breaches: "§ 2-714. Buyer's Damages for Breach in Regard to Accepted Goods. (1) Where the buyer has accepted goods and given notification (subsection (3) of Section 2-607) he may recover as damages for any non-conformity of tender . . . . Subsection \(3\) of 810 ILCS 5/2-607 states that "where a tender has been accepted (a) the buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovers or should have discovered any breach notify the seller [*18] of the breach or be barred from any remedy."

The court notes that it is not immediately obvious that plaintiffs' acceptance of the allegedly overpriced fuels qualifies as acceptance of "non-conforming" goods under section 2-714. HN7 Section 2-714 non-conformity typically is associated with breaches of warranty or other claims arising from a physical non-conformity of the goods received as opposed to a "non-conformity" related to price. See, e.g., Klockner, Inc. v. Federal Wire Mill Corp., 663 F.2d 1370, 1380 (7th Cir. 1981) (breach of warranty counterclaim). However, Illinois courts have found section 2-714 non-conformities for non-warranty related contractual breaches. See, e.g., Franklin Grain & Supply Co. v. Ingram, 44 Ill. App. 3d 740, 358 N.E.2d 922, 925, 3 Ill. Dec. 379 (Ill. App. Ct. 1976) (late delivery of goods ordered). Neither of the parties has cited a case directly holding that price can constitute a section 2-714 non-conformity, nor has the court located one. The closest case on point is Tudor v. Jewel Food Stores, Inc., 681 N.E.2d 6, 10-11, 288 Ill. App. 3d 207, 224 Ill. Dec. 24 (Ill. App. Ct. 1997), in which the Illinois Appellate Court affirmed the dismissal of a grocery store customer's claim under [*19] section 2-714 that the defendant had overcharged her for groceries because the plaintiff failed to provide notice to defendants of non-conformities of marked prices versus prices charged, as required by section 2-714. The Tudor court did not reflect explicitly on whether price could stand as a non-conformity under section 2-714, but merely noted that plaintiff had failed to present the notice required under section 2-607 and affirmed dismissal on that ground. In the absence of contrary authority, the court accepts Tudor's implication that a breach of a contractual price term can qualify as a non-conformity under section 2-714.

The court also notes that the Uniform Commercial Code Comment attached to section 2-714 states that "the 'non-conformity' referred to in subsection (1) includes not only breaches of warranties but also any failure of the seller to perform according to his obligations under the contract." As discussed, one of Shell's (alleged) obligations (as implied by section 2-305\(1\)\(b\)) under each of the contracts with plaintiffs was to sell fuel to plaintiffs according to dealer tank wagon prices that were set in good faith. 810 ILCS 5/2-305\(1\)\(b\) [*20]. Plaintiffs apparently accepted all dealer tank wagon deliveries and do not allege that they have ever provided notice to Shell of its alleged dealer tank wagon pricing breaches. Filing this lawsuit did not serve as proper notice. Tudor, 681 N.E.2d at 10-11 ("Only a consumer buyer who suffers a personal injury may satisfy the section 2-607 notice requirement by filing a complaint against the seller.") Plaintiffs do not claim that they provided any pre-lawsuit notice to Shell of the alleged nonconformities in pricing, and attempt to dismiss Shell's argument with a single irrelevant sentence. For these reasons, Shell's motion to dismiss count 8 is granted. Klockner, 663 F.2d at 1380 (affirming judgment against purchaser's breach of warranty counterclaim on grounds that purchaser failed to provide pre-lawsuit notice of claimed breach under section 2-607\(5\)\(a\).)

Count 9 (Declaratory Judgment as to All Counts)

Count 9 of the complaint essentially duplicates plaintiffs' other counts, except that instead of requesting damages, plaintiffs request declarations of the parties' rights and obligations under various agreements, as well as declarations [*21] that Shell violated the statutes and common law rights under which plaintiffs claim for damages and other relief in counts 1-8. HN8 Under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201 et seq., "federal courts have discretion to decline to hear a declaratory judgment action, even though it is within their jurisdiction." Tempco Elec. Heater Corp. v. Omega Eng'g, Inc., 819 F.2d 746, 747 \(7th Cir. 1987\). Tempco notes that declaratory judgment is appropriate, among other instances, where, "the controversy has ripened to a point where one of the parties could invoke a coercive remedy (i.e. a suit for damages or an injunction) but has not done so." Tempco, 819 F.2d at 749. In distinction, here there is a suit for damages underway (via counts 1-8) based on the same issues raised in count 9. Thus, the process for determination on the merits is underway in this suit, and the additional declaratory judgment action requested by plaintiffs is redundant. Amari v. Radio Spirits, Inc., 219 F. Supp. 2d 942, 944 \(N.D. Ill. 2002\), citing Associated Mills, Inc. v. Regina Co., Inc., 675 F. Supp. 446, 448 \(N.D. Ill. 1987\); [*22] Wireless Marketing Corp. v. Cherokee, Inc., No. 98C1406, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16114 \(N.D. Ill. Oct. 6, 1998\); Resource Asset Mgmt., Inc. v. Continental Stock Transfer & Trust Co., 896 F. Supp. 782, 785 \(N.D. Ill. 1995\) (dismissing declaratory judgment action where larger, more comprehensive substantive action was pending in same district); Biosite, Inc. v. Xoma Ltd., 168 F. Supp. 2d 1161, 1165 \(N.D. Cal. 2001\) (dismissing declaratory judgment action where similar substantive action involving more claims was pending in same district before same judge).

Additionally, fairness to the parties and judicial economy weigh in favor of dismissal of the declaratory judgment count here. Amari, 219 F. Supp.2d at 944. Both parties will be able to have the substantive merits of their positions decided without plaintiffs' declaratory judgment claims, and the litigation will be made more efficient by eliminating the unnecessary declaratory judgment count. Id. at 944-45. For these reasons, the court declines to exercise jurisdiction to hear count 9, and Shell's motion to dismiss count 9 is granted.

Leave [*23] to Amend Complaint

As to most counts, plaintiffs have requested in their response to Shell's motion to dismiss that they be allowed to amend their complaint as to any counts that are dismissed. Each of these requests is denied without prejudice. If plaintiffs would like to amend their complaint in light of this opinion (or for any other reason), they may do so in conformance with the applicable rules of the court within thirty days of the date of this Memorandum Opinion and Order.

Dated: May 25, 2005

ENTER:

Joan B. Gottschall

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Or. v. Weyerhaeuser Co.

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

December 6, 2004, Argued and Submitted, Portland, Oregon ; May 31, 2005, Filed

Nos. 03-35669 and 03-35984

Reporter

411 F.3d 1030 *; 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 9897 **

CONFEDERATED TRIBES OF SILETZ INDIANS OF OREGON; SMOKEY POINT HARDWOOD, INC., Plaintiffs, ROSS-SIMMONS HARDWOOD LUMBER COMPANY, INC., Plaintiff-Appellee, v. WEYERHAEUSER COMPANY, Defendant-Appellant.

Subsequent History: Later proceeding at Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Ross-Simmons Hardwood Lumber Co., 126 S. Ct. 714, 163 L. Ed. 2d 566, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 8568 (U.S., 2005)

US Supreme Court certiorari granted by Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Ross-Simmons Hardwood Lumber Co., 126 S. Ct. 2965, 165 L. Ed. 2d 948, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 4908 (U.S., 2006)

Vacated by, Remanded by Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Ross-Simmons Hardwood Lumber Co., 127 S. Ct. 1069, 166 L. Ed. 2d 911, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1333 (U.S., Feb. 20, 2007)

Prior History: [**1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Oregon. D.C. No. CV-00-01693-OMP. Owen M. Panner, Senior District Judge, Presiding.

Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Or. v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25830 \(D. Or., Oct. 27, 2003\)

Disposition: AFFIRMED.

Core Terms

---

sawlogs, prices, predatory, costs, bidding, overbidding, new trial, monopolization, barriers, anticompetitive conduct, probability, damages, attorney's fees, competitors, consumers, lumber, alder, monopoly power, hardwood, cases, matter of law, market power, jury's finding, award damages, achievement, recoupment, substantial evidence to support, market share, predation, buy-side

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

411 F.3d 1030, *1030L2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 9897, **1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN1 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, provides in part that every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of an antitrust violation.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

HN2 [down] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

The appellate court applies a de novo standard of review to legal issues.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Monopoly power exercised on the buy-side of the market is called "monopsony" power, and can violate § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2. Both sides of the market affect allocative efficiency, and hence consumer welfare. Antitrust laws are thus concerned with competition on the buy-side of the market as much as on the sell-side of the market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Pricing

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN4 [down] Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices, Predatory Pricing

In Brooke Group, the United States Supreme Court created a high standard of liability, holding that a plaintiff bringing a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, based on predatory sell-side pricing must show that: (1) the prices complained of are below an appropriate measure of its rival's costs; and (2) a dangerous probability existed that the rival would later recoup its investment in below-cost prices once it stopped such pricing. Thus, to establish liability under Brooke Group, a plaintiff must show that its competitor operated at a loss and was likely to recoup its losses.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Trials > Jury Trials > Province of Court & Jury

HN5 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The issue of whether specific conduct is anticompetitive in violation of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., is one of law.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN6 Courts, Judicial Precedent

An appellate court must view its decisions in light of intervening United States Supreme Court decisions closely on point.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > Motions for New Trials

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Abuse of Discretion

HN7 Standards of Review, De Novo Review

The appellate court generally reviews a district court's ruling on a motion for a new trial for an abuse of discretion. However, where the motion for a new trial rests solely on the ground that the jury instructions misstated the law, the appellate court reviews the district court's denial of the motion for a new trial de novo.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Monopoly Power

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

411 F.3d 1030, *1030L2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 9897, **1

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > Motions for New Trials

HN8 [down] Actual Monopolization, Monopoly Power

In Eastman Kodak, the United States Supreme Court held that a defendant violates the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., by using monopoly power to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN9 [down] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

The appellate court reviews the district court's denial of a motion for judgment as a matter of law de novo.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > General Overview

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Standards of Review > Substantial Evidence > General Overview

HN10 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

To uphold a jury's verdict, the appellate court must find that substantial evidence supports it. Substantial evidence is such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. When reviewing the record as a whole, the appellate court must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party, keeping in mind that credibility determinations, the weighing of the evidence, and the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts are jury functions, not those of a judge. In reviewing a defendant's entitlement to judgment as a matter of law in the antitrust context, the appellate court presumes that a reasonable jury knows and understands the law, the facts of the case, and the realities of the market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN11 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

To establish attempted monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, a plaintiff must demonstrate that the defendant: (1) engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct; (2) had a specific intent to monopolize; and

(3) a dangerous probability of the defendant's achievement of monopoly power in the relevant market existed. Additionally, the plaintiff must show causal antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Jury Instructions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Standards of Review > Substantial Evidence > General Overview

HN12 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Where the district court instructs the jury separately regarding monopolization and attempted monopolization, and the jury enters separate liability verdicts on each of the counts, the appellate court can affirm the judgment if substantial evidence supports the jury's verdict as to either claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Standards of Review > Substantial Evidence > Sufficiency of Evidence

HN13 [blue icon] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Anticompetitive or predatory acts are those that tend to exclude or restrict competition on some basis other than efficiency.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Attempted monopolization requires proof of intent to monopolize or eliminate competition. Anticompetitive conduct alone can satisfy the specific intent requirement if the conduct forms the basis for a substantial claim of restraint of trade or is clearly threatening to competition or clearly exclusionary.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

HN15 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Monopoly power is the power to control prices or exclude competition. In determining whether there is a dangerous probability of monopolization, the court considers the relevant market and the defendant's ability to lessen or destroy competition in that market. To control prices unilaterally, the defendant must have obtained market power. A plaintiff can demonstrate that the defendant had market power either by presenting direct evidence of the injurious exercise of that power or by presenting circumstantial evidence that defined the relevant market, demonstrated that the defendant held a dominant share of the market, and showed that significant barriers to entry into and expansion within the market exist.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > Inferences

HN16 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize*

Market share alone does not raise an inference of a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power if there are low entry barriers or other evidence of a defendant's inability to control prices or exclude competitors. Entry barriers are additional long-run costs that were not incurred by incumbent firms but must be incurred by new entrants, or factors in the market that deter entry while permitting incumbent firms to earn monopoly returns. Such barriers may include legal license requirements, control of an essential resource, entrenched buyer preferences, and higher capital costs for new entrants. Entry barriers that justify a finding of market power must be capable of constraining the normal operation of the market to the extent that the problem is unlikely to be self-correcting. The entry of new competitors does not necessarily demonstrate a lack of barriers to entry. If new entrants are insufficient to take significant business away from the predator, they are unlikely to represent a challenge to the predator's market power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > General Overview

HN17 [blue icon] Private Actions, Remedies*

The appellate court gives substantial deference to a jury's damages award. In antitrust cases, the appellate court accepts a degree of uncertainty when evaluating damages awards because of the inherent difficulty of ascertaining business damages when the vagaries of the marketplace usually deny the court sure knowledge of what a plaintiff's situation would have been in the absence of the defendant's antitrust violation. The appellate court will affirm the jury's damages award if it is not based upon speculation or guesswork. It is sufficient if a reasonable basis of computation is afforded, although the result be only approximate.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Abuse of Discretion

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Clearly Erroneous Review

HN18 [blue icon] Standards of Review, Abuse of Discretion

The appellate court upholds a district court's award of attorneys' fees unless it abused its discretion or committed a clear error of law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Pricing

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN19 [blue icon] Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices, Predatory Pricing

Brooke Group does not apply in a predatory bidding case because the benefit to consumers and stimulation of competition are less likely to result here than in predatory pricing cases. A plaintiff bringing a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, based on predatory overbidding in a relatively inelastic market need not show that the defendant operated at a loss and that a dangerous probability of the defendant's recoupment of those losses existed to succeed on its claim.

Counsel: Stephen V. Bomse, M. Laurence Popofsky and Heather N. Leal, Heller Ehrman White & McAuliffe LLP, San Francisco, California, for the appellant.

Michael E. Haglund, Haglund, Kelley, Horngren & Jones, LLP, and Roy Pulvers, Lindsay, Hart, Neil & Weigler, LLP, Portland, Oregon, for the appellee.

Judges: Before: Thomas G. Nelson and Johnnie B. Rawlinson, Circuit Judges, and William W Schwarzer, * Senior District Judge. Opinion by Judge T.G. Nelson.

Opinion by: Thomas G. Nelson

Opinion

---

[*1033] T.G. NELSON, Circuit Judge:

---

* he Honorable William W Schwarzer, Senior United States District Judge for the Northern District of California, sitting by designation.

Ross-Simmons Hardwood Lumber Company brought this action against Weyerhaeuser Company for antitrust violations under Section 2 of the Sherman Act.<sup>1</sup> [*1034] Ross-Simmons alleged that Weyerhaeuser monopolized and attempted to monopolize the Pacific Northwest input market for alder sawlogs through its purchases of sawlogs. Ross-Simmons prevailed in a jury trial on both its monopolization [**2] and attempted monopolization claims. After trebling the jury's damages award, the court entered judgment for Ross-Simmons and denied Weyerhaeuser's motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial. The court also awarded attorneys' fees and costs to Ross-Simmons. Weyerhaeuser appeals the court's denial of its motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial, and seeks reversal of the judgment. Weyerhaeuser also separately appeals the district court's award of attorneys' fees and costs to ensure that any reversal of the judgment or remand for a new trial would also result in reversal of the award of attorneys' fees and costs. We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and we affirm.

[**3] I. BACKGROUND

The forests west of the Cascade Mountains in Oregon and Washington contain sufficient hardwood to support the only concentration of hardwood sawmills in the western United States. These mills are part of what is often called the "alder industry" after the area's predominant hardwood species, which accounts for 95% of the annual Pacific Northwest hardwood lumber production. The three principal players in the alder portion of the hardwood industry are: (1) timberland owners and loggers who supply alder sawlogs; (2) production facilities, including sawmills, that buy sawlogs and process them into finished alder lumber; and (3) purchasers who buy hardwood lumber from production facilities. Both parties in this case fall under the second category: they operate sawmills.

The plaintiff-appellee, Ross-Simmons Hardwood Lumber Company, was a pioneer in the alder lumber business, starting in 1962. It operated its mill in Longview, Washington continuously until it went out of business in 2001. From 1990 to 1997, Ross-Simmons experienced modest prosperity, but from 1998 to 2001, its production declined. From 1998 to 2001, sawlog prices increased while finished lumber prices [**4] decreased. This was unusual: historically, the price of alder sawlogs fluctuated with the price of finished lumber. Because its materials costs went up and its production went down, Ross-Simmons incurred losses totaling nearly $ 4.5 million, forcing it to shut down in 2001. Ross-Simmons blamed its failure on Weyerhaeuser.

The defendant-appellant, Weyerhaeuser Company, was established in 1900. In 1980, it acquired Northwest Hardwoods, Inc. (also "Weyerhaeuser"), and now owns six hardwood sawmills in the Pacific Northwest. Weyerhaeuser is one of the largest manufacturers of hardwood lumber in the world. From 1998 to 2001, the period in which Ross-Simmons's profits dropped, Weyerhaeuser's share of the Pacific Northwest market for alder sawlogs was approximately 65%.

Ross-Simmons alleged that Weyerhaeuser artificially increased sawlog prices to drive Ross-Simmons and other competitors out of business. At trial, Ross-Simmons offered testimony and other evidence to prove that Weyerhaeuser attempted to eliminate competitors by driving up sawlog prices and restricting access to sawlogs through: (1) predatory overbidding (i.e., paying a higher price for sawlogs than necessary); (2) overbuying [**5] (i.e., buying more sawlogs than it needed); (3) entering restrictive or exclusive agreements with sawlog suppliers; and (4) making misrepresentations to state officials in order to obtain sawlogs from state forests. Weyerhaeuser attributed Ross-Simmons's failure [*1035] to substandard equipment, inefficient operations, poor management, and inadequate capital investment.

The court instructed the jury on the applicable law, including the elements of both monopoly and attempted monopoly, the law regarding anticompetitive conduct in the form of predatory overbidding, and the issue of damages. With respect to overbidding, the court instructed the jury that, if it found that Weyerhaeuser paid higher prices than necessary for sawlogs, the jury could regard that as an anticompetitive act. The jury found for Ross-Simmons on both the monopolization and attempted monopolization claims, and awarded damages of $ 26,256,406. After trebling the damages award, the court entered judgment in the amount of $ 78,769,218 against Weyerhaeuser. The court then denied Weyerhaeuser's motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial, and awarded attorneys' fees and costs to Ross-Simmons.

---

<sup>1</sup> 15 U.S.C. § 2.  Section 2 of the Sherman Act provides, in relevant part, that "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty" of an antitrust violation. Id.

Weyerhaeuser appeals [**6] the judgment, arguing that: (1) it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law because it had no market power in the alder sawlog market and the alleged anticompetitive acts were not actionable under § 2 of the Sherman Act, (2) it is entitled, in the alternative, to a new trial because the jury instructions misstated the law of predatory overbidding, and (3) it is entitled to reversal of the judgment because Ross-Simmons's damages theory was speculative. Weyerhaeuser also appeals the court's grant of attorneys' fees and costs to Ross-Simmons so that any reversal of the judgment or remand for a new trial would also result in reversal of the award of attorneys' fees and costs.

II. ANALYSIS

Weyerhaeuser's challenges to the court's denial of its motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial present us with a legal question of first impression: whether the prerequisites set forth in Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.<sup>2</sup> for establishing liability in sell-side predatory pricing cases apply in cases where a defendant engages in buy-side predatory bidding by raising the cost of inputs. We address this legal issue at the outset, HN2[↑] applying a de novo [**7] standard of review.<sup>3</sup> For the reasons discussed below, we conclude that Brooke Group does not control in the buy-side predatory bidding context at issue here.

Our conclusion that Brooke Group does not apply here disposes of Weyerhaeuser's challenge regarding a new trial due to erroneous jury instructions in its entirety. The court properly instructed the jury regarding predatory overbidding. Our holding that Brooke Group is inapplicable also partially resolves Weyerhaeuser's challenge regarding judgment as a matter of law. Because Weyerhaeuser further contends that the evidence was insufficient to support the jury's verdict, we must examine that contention, however. After doing so, we conclude that substantial evidence did support the jury's finding of attempted monopolization. Thus, we affirm [**8] the court's denial of Weyerhaeuser's motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial.

Two issues remain unresolved after we address the issue related to Brooke Group. They are: (1) damages, and (2) attorneys' fees and costs. We resolve them as follows. First, we uphold the jury's award of damages because it was based upon an appropriate estimate of damages. Second, [*1036] we conclude that the court properly granted attorneys' fees and costs in favor of Ross-Simmons. Accordingly, we affirm.

A. ISSUES RELATED TO BROOKE GROUP

1. Inapplicability of Brooke Group

HN3[↑] Monopoly power exercised on the buy-side of the market is called "monopsony" power, and can violate § 2 of the Sherman Act.<sup>4</sup> [**9] Both sides of the market affect allocative efficiency, and hence consumer welfare.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> 509 U.S. 209, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578 \(1993\).

<sup>3</sup> Los Angeles Mem'l Coliseum Comm'n v. Nat'l Football League, 791 F.2d 1356, 1360 \(9th Cir. 1986\) (stating that we review questions of law de novo).

<sup>4</sup> See United States v. Syufy Enters., 903 F.2d 659, 663 n.4 \(9th Cir. 1990\) ("Syufy II"); ROGER D. BLAIR & JEFFREY L. HARRISON, MONOPSONY: ANTITRUST LAW AND ECONOMICS at 68-81 (1993) (discussing monopsonist behavior that violates the Sherman Act).

Antitrust laws are thus concerned with competition on the buy-side of the market as much as on the sell-side of the market.<sup>6</sup>

[**10] Weyerhaeuser argues that, regardless of whether a case involves sell-side predatory pricing or buy-side predatory bidding, the same standard of liability should apply. Weyerhaeuser invites the court to borrow the standard of liability set forth in Brooke Group, a sell-side predatory pricing case. HN4<sup>7</sup> In Brooke Group, the Court created a high standard of liability, holding that a plaintiff bringing a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act based on predatory sell-side pricing must show that: (1) "the prices complained of are below an appropriate measure of its rival's costs," and (2) "a dangerous probability" existed that the rival would later "recoup[] its investment in below-cost prices" once it stopped such pricing.<sup>8</sup> Thus, to establish liability under Brooke Group, a plaintiff had to show that its competitor operated at a loss and was likely to recoup its losses. Weyerhaeuser contends that the same standard should apply in buy-side predatory bidding cases. Specifically, Weyerhaeuser argues that the jury instructions were erroneous because the court did not instruct the jury that overbidding for sawlogs could be anticompetitive conduct only if Weyerhaeuser operated at a [**11] loss and a dangerous probability of its recouping of losses existed.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, Weyerhaeuser argues that, as a matter of law,<sup>9</sup> the alleged predatory overbidding [*1037] was not actionable anticompetitive conduct under the Sherman Act because Ross-Simmons did not satisfy the two Brooke Group requirements. We reject Weyerhaeuser's arguments regarding the applicability of Brooke Group.

[**12] The Brooke Group Court established a high liability standard for sell-side predatory pricing cases because of its concern with the facts that consumers benefit from lower prices and that cutting prices often fosters competition.<sup>10</sup> The Court stated that "low prices benefit consumers regardless of how those prices are set, and so long as they are above predatory levels, they do not threaten competition."<sup>11</sup> The Court further recognized that above-cost pricing is either "competition on the merits, or is beyond the practical ability of a judicial tribunal to control without courting intolerable risks of chilling legitimate price-cutting."<sup>12</sup> As a result, the Court did not want to make the standard of liability "so low that antitrust suits themselves became a tool for keeping prices high."<sup>13</sup>

---

<sup>5</sup> See BLAIR & HARRISON, supra note 5, at 36-61 (explaining the social welfare losses that result when a dominant buyer or collusive buyers set a non-optimal price for inputs).

<sup>6</sup> See, e.g., Mandeville Island Farms, Inc. v. Am. Crystal Sugar Co., 334 U.S. 219, 227, 235-36, 92 L. Ed. 1328, 68 S. Ct. 996 (1948) (explaining that price fixing by a buyer's cartel violates §§ 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act); Am. Tobacco Co. v. United States, 328 U.S. 781, 801-04, 90 L. Ed. 1575, 66 S. Ct. 1125 (1946) (stating that a conspiracy to increase prices of cheaper tobacco and thereby drive out manufacturers of lower-priced cigarettes violated § 2 of the Sherman Act); Reid Bros. Logging Co. v. Ketchikan Pulp Co., 699 F.2d 1292, 1298 n.5 (9th Cir. 1983) (discussing that a conspiracy to bid more for logs to drive competitors out was anticompetitive conduct); National Macaroni Mfrs. Ass'n v. FTC, 345 F.2d 421, 426-27 (7th Cir. 1965) (holding that an agreement of macaroni producers to reduce the amount of durum wheat purchased as an input for pasta production was per se unlawful); see also Blair & Harrison, supra note 5, at 68-81 (discussing cases).

<sup>7</sup> Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 222, 223-24.

<sup>8</sup> The relevant jury instruction, as finally formulated, stated:

One of Plaintiffs' contentions in this case is that the Defendant purchased more logs than it needed or paid a higher price for logs than necessary, in order to prevent the Plaintiffs from obtaining the logs they needed at a fair price. If you find this to be true, you may regard it as an anticompetitive act.

<sup>9</sup> Los Angeles Land Co. v. Brunswick Corp., 6 F.3d 1422, 1425 (9th Cir. 1993) (stating that HN5<sup>10</sup> the issue of "whether specific conduct is anticompetitive in violation of the Sherman Act is one of law").

<sup>10</sup> Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 223, 226.

<sup>11</sup> Id. at 223 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

<sup>12</sup> Id. (citation omitted).

[**13] We recognize that in buy-side predatory bidding cases, as in sell-side predatory pricing cases, the price level itself is the anticompetitive weapon. However, an important factor distinguishes predatory bidding cases from predatory pricing cases: benefit to consumers and stimulation of competition do not necessarily result from predatory bidding the way they do from predatory pricing.<sup>14</sup> We turn now to the short-term and long-term effects of predatory bidding.

[**14] In a predatory bidding scheme, a firm pays more for materials in the short term, and thereby attempts to squeeze out those competitors who cannot remain profitable when the price of inputs increases.<sup>15</sup> [**15] No consumer benefit results during this predation period if the firm raises or maintains the same price level for its finished [*1038] products. Although consumers might temporarily benefit if a firm lowered prices during the predation period, a reduction in prices would place even greater pressure on competitors, thereby increasing the threat to competition arising from the predatory bidding.<sup>16</sup> Thus, even though a short-term benefit to consumers might occur in some predatory bidding situations, serious concerns about the threat to competition would concurrently arise in those situations. Moreover, predatory bidding claims do not directly challenge a firm's decision to cut prices; instead, they focus on a firm's decision to raise the cost of inputs. Therefore, the concerns the Brooke Group Court expressed about depriving consumers of the temporary benefit of low prices do not necessarily apply when predatory bidding is at issue.<sup>17</sup>

In the long run, to carry out a predatory bidding scheme successfully, a firm would have to recoup the higher costs it had paid for its materials. If it succeeded in driving out competition, during this recoupment period the firm would likely pay less for its materials while charging consumers a higher price.<sup>18</sup> [**16] The firm would have little incentive to pass on the benefit of lower input prices to consumers when it possessed greater market power and needed to recoup the higher costs it had paid for its materials. Thus, the overall effect of a predatory bidding scheme would result in harm to consumers.<sup>19</sup>

<sup>13</sup> Id. at 226-27.

<sup>14</sup> See Wash. Alder LLC v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15269, 2004 WL 1717650, at \*1 \(D. Or. July 27, 2004\) ("Consumers don't benefit from higher raw material prices, or by logs rotting in the lumber yard. Nor is deliberately driving log prices up, simply to deprive competitors of logs, likely to be confused with legitimate competition."); John B. Kirkwood, Buyer Power and Exclusionary Conduct: Should Brooke Group Set the Standards for Buyer-Induced Price Discrimination and Predatory Bidding?, 72 ANTI-TRUST L.J. 625, 655 (2005) ("It seems indisputable that any negative impact of a predatory bidding case on downstream price competition is less direct and less certain than the impact of a predatory pricing case, which is a direct assault on a seller's decision to lower prices to its customers."); id. at 667 (stating that "because predatory bidding cases attack a firm's decision to increase prices, not reduce them, they do not represent a direct assault on price cutting"); Richard O. Zerbe, Jr., Monopsony and the Ross-Simmons Case: A Comment on Salop and Kirkwood, 72 ANTITRUST L.J. 717, 724 (2005) (stating that consumer harm can be presumed in the instant case because it involves "a limited, relatively inelastic, resource-based input market [for alder logs] and a much broader output market"). But see Steven C. Salop, Anticompetitive Overbuying by Power Buyers, 72 ANTITRUST L.J. 669, 702 (2005) (stating that "the difficulty of distinguishing an anticompetitive overbuying strategy from a competitive purchase expansion can be similar to the difficulties in predatory pricing matters" and that in some situations, "it may be difficult for a court to know whether the firm is attempting to predate or simply competing in the input market with rivals who are also purchasing the inputs").

<sup>15</sup> Kirkwood, supra note 15, 72 ANTITRUST L.J. at 652.

<sup>16</sup> In this case, the price of finished lumber decreased while the cost of sawlogs increased during the alleged predation period. It is unclear from the record whether lumber prices decreased because of a decision Weyerhaeuser made, or for other reasons.

<sup>17</sup> See Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 223, 226-27.

<sup>18</sup> See Kirkwood, supra note 15, 72 ANTITRUST L.J. at 653.

<sup>19</sup> We note that the recoupment phase of a predatory bidding scheme mirrors the recoupment phase of a predatory pricing scheme. See id.

Although in some situations rising input prices might encourage new companies to enter the supply side of the market and expand output, thereby increasing innovation and efficiency so that consumers benefit in the long run through price decreases and product improvements, this is not such a situation. The nature of the input supply at issue here does not readily allow for market expansion. The evidence shows that, during the alleged predation period, the supply of alder sawlogs remained relatively stable or declined. Nothing suggests this situation will change -- alder sawlogs are "a natural resource of limited annual supply in a relatively inelastic market." <sup>20</sup> Thus, at least in this case, predatory bidding is less likely than predatory pricing to result in a benefit to consumers or the stimulation of competition. As a result, the concerns that led the Brooke Group Court to establish a high standard of liability in the predatory pricing context do [\[\*\*17\]](#) not carry over to this predatory bidding context with the same force. Therefore, the standard for liability in this predatory bidding case need not be as high as in predatory pricing cases. Accordingly, we hold that the high standard of liability in Brooke Group does not apply here because this case involves predatory bidding in a relatively inelastic market, not predatory pricing.

Our decision in Reid Bros. Logging Co. v. Ketchikan Pulp Co.<sup>21</sup> [\[\*\*19\]](#) provides further support for our holding today that the prerequisites in Brooke Group do not apply [\[\*1039\]](#) here. Although the Supreme Court decided Brooke Group after we decided Reid Bros.,<sup>22</sup> Brooke Group involved a different factual situation and did not overrule Reid Bros.<sup>23</sup> In Reid Bros., we affirmed a finding [\[\*\*18\]](#) of liability under § 1 of the Sherman Act that was based in part on a predatory buying claim.<sup>24</sup> The plaintiff in Reid Bros. argued that the defendants conspired to bid preclusively on timber sales at higher prices than necessary to block the plaintiff from buying necessary timber.<sup>25</sup> The defendants argued that the district court erred by finding predatory bidding when there was no evidence that the high prices paid for timber would prevent the defendants from covering their marginal costs on the ultimate sale of the processed timber.<sup>26</sup> We rejected the defendants' argument and held that such a "blind application of a numerical test would only frustrate the intent of the Sherman Act."<sup>27</sup> This statement that a rigid, numerical test should not apply when a buy-side overbidding scheme was at issue further supports our holding that Brooke Group is inapplicable here. Thus, our conclusion that Brooke Group does not apply is consistent with our precedent. We now turn to the effect our conclusion has on Weyerhaeuser's arguments for a new trial and for judgment as a matter of law.

2. New Trial

---

<sup>20</sup> See Zerbe, supra note 15, 72 ANTITRUST L.J. at 722 (explaining that the alder sawlog market is "highly inelastic," in part because the alder harvest is a byproduct of the more important softwood harvest).

<sup>21</sup> 699 F.2d 1292.

<sup>22</sup> See United States v. Gay, 967 F.2d 322, 327 \(9th Cir. 1992\) (stating that HN6 we must view our decisions in light of intervening Supreme Court decisions closely on point).

<sup>23</sup> See Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 214-16.

<sup>24</sup> Reid Bros., 699 F.2d at 1297-98. Section 1 of the Sherman Act prohibits "every contract, combination . . . , or conspiracy[] in restraint of trade or commerce." 15 U.S.C. § 1.

<sup>25</sup> See Reid Bros., 699 F.2d at 1297-98.

<sup>26</sup> Id. at 1298 n.5.

<sup>27</sup> Id.

HN7 [↑] We generally review a court's ruling on a motion for a new trial for an abuse of discretion.<sup>28</sup> However, because Weyerhaeuser's motion for a new trial rested solely on the ground that the jury instructions misstated the law regarding Ross-Simmons's overbidding claim, we review the court's denial of the motion for a new trial de novo.<sup>29</sup> [**21] Because we hold today that Brooke Group does not govern in this case, the court did not need to instruct the jury that overbidding for sawlogs [**20] could be anticompetitive conduct only if Weyerhaeuser operated at a loss and a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's recoupment of its losses existed. The instructions as a whole provided sufficient guidance regarding how to determine whether conduct was anticompetitive.<sup>30</sup>

[**22] [**1040] Moreover, the instructions were consistent with HN8 [↑] Supreme Court precedent stating that a defendant violates the Sherman Act by using monopoly power "to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor."<sup>31</sup> Thus, the jury instructions "fairly and adequately covered the issues presented, correctly stated the law, and were not misleading."<sup>32</sup> Accordingly, we affirm the court's denial of Weyerhaeuser's motion for a new trial.

3. Judgment as a Matter of Law

HN9 [↑] "We review [the] district court's denial of [the] motion for judgment as a matter of law de novo."<sup>33</sup> Our holding regarding the inapplicability of Brooke Group [**23] resolves one of the issues related to Weyerhaeuser's challenge to the denial of judgment as a matter of law: Weyerhaeuser's contention that, as a matter of law, the

<sup>28</sup> Janes v. Wal-Mart Stores Inc., 279 F.3d 883, 886 \(9th Cir. 2002\).

<sup>29</sup> Costa v. Desert Palace, Inc., 299 F.3d 838, 858 \(9th Cir. 2002\) (en banc) (stating that "we generally review the formulation of instructions for an abuse of discretion, but whether an instruction misstates the law is a legal issue reviewed de novo"), aff'd, 539 U.S. 90, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 123 S. Ct. 2148 \(2003\). Whether we review the denial of a new trial under the abuse of discretion standard or de novo standard matters little here because "[a] district court by definition abuses its discretion when it makes an error of law." See Del Monte Dunes at Monterey, Ltd. v. City of Monterey, 95 F.3d 1422, 1426 \(9th Cir. 1996\) (quoting Koon v. United States, 518 U.S. 81, 100, 135 L. Ed. 2d 392, 116 S. Ct. 2035 \(1996\)), aff'd, 526 U.S. 687, 143 L. Ed. 2d 882, 119 S. Ct. 1624 \(1999\).

<sup>30</sup> The court instructed the jury regarding anticompetitive conduct as follows:

Anti-competitive conduct is conduct that has the effect of wrongly preventing or excluding competition, or frustrating or impairing the efforts of other firms to compete for customers within the relevant market, making it very difficult or impossible for competitors to engage in fair competition. Not everything that enables a company to gain or maintain a monopoly is anti-competitive.

In deciding whether conduct is anti-competitive, you should consider whether the conduct lacks a valid business purpose, or unreasonably or unnecessarily impedes the efforts of other firms to compete for raw materials or customers, or if the anticipated benefits of the conduct flow primarily from its tendency to hinder or eliminate competition. Anti-competitive conduct does not include ordinary means of competition, such as offering better products or services, exercising superior skill or business judgment, utilizing more efficient technology, better marketing, or exercising natural competitive advantages such as unique geographic access to raw materials or markets.

....

One of Plaintiffs' contentions in this case is that the Defendant purchased more logs than it needed or paid a higher price for logs than necessary, in order to prevent the Plaintiffs from obtaining the logs they needed at a fair price. If you find this to be true, you may regard it as an anti-competitive act.

<sup>31</sup> Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 482-83, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072 \(1992\) (quoting United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 107, 92 L. Ed. 1236, 68 S. Ct. 941 \(1948\)).

<sup>32</sup> See Mockler v. Multnomah County, 140 F.3d 808, 812 \(9th Cir. 1998\) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

<sup>33</sup> Janes, 279 F.3d at 886 (italics omitted).

alleged predatory overbidding could not be actionable anticompetitive conduct under § 2 of the Sherman Act because Ross-Simmons did not show that Weyerhaeuser operated at a loss and that a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's recoupment of its losses existed. Because Brooke Group does not apply in this case, Ross-Simmons did not have to meet the high standard of liability in Brooke Group before relying upon predatory overbidding to satisfy the anticompetitive conduct requirement. Our holding regarding Brooke Group does not resolve Weyerhaeuser's argument that Ross-Simmons's evidence was insufficient to support the jury's verdict, however. Accordingly, we now turn to the issue of whether substantial evidence supports the jury's verdict.<sup>34</sup> We conclude that the record contains substantial evidence.

[**24] "Substantial evidence is such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion."<sup>35</sup> When reviewing the record as a whole, we must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party, keeping in mind that "credibility determinations, the weighing of the evidence, and [*1041] the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts are jury functions, not those of a judge."<sup>36</sup> In reviewing a defendant's entitlement to judgment as a matter of law in the antitrust context, we presume that "a reasonable jury . . . know[s] and understand[s] the law, the facts of the case, and the realities of the market."<sup>37</sup>

HN11 [↑] To establish attempted monopolization under [**25] § 2 of the Sherman Act,<sup>38</sup> [**26] Ross-Simmons had to demonstrate that Weyerhaeuser: (1) engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct, (2) had a specific intent to monopolize, and (3) a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's achievement of monopoly power in the relevant market existed.<sup>39</sup> Additionally, Ross-Simmons had to show causal antitrust injury.<sup>40</sup> We first examine whether the record contains substantial evidence of anticompetitive conduct.

a. Anticompetitive conduct

HN13 [↑] Anticompetitive or predatory acts are those that tend to exclude or restrict competition "on some basis other than efficiency."<sup>41</sup> The record contains substantial evidence of over-bidding for sawlogs to support the jury's finding of anticompetitive conduct. The evidence shows that during the period of alleged predation: (1) sawlog prices increased while prices for finished lumber decreased, (2) Weyerhaeuser had a dominant share of the market

<sup>34</sup> HN10 [↑] To uphold the jury's verdict, we must find that substantial evidence supports it. Gilbrook v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d 839, 856 (9th Cir. 1999).

<sup>35</sup> Syufy Enters. v. Am. Multicinema, Inc., 793 F.2d 990, 992 (9th Cir. 1986) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted) ("Syufy I").

<sup>36</sup> Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986).

<sup>37</sup> See Brooke Group, 509 U.S. at 243.

<sup>38</sup> HN12 [↑] Because the court instructed the jury separately regarding monopolization and attempted monopolization, and the jury entered separate liability verdicts on each of the counts, we can affirm the judgment if substantial evidence supports the jury's verdict as to either claim. See Del Monte Dunes, 95 F.3d at 1426 (stating that the court could affirm the judgment on either of two alleged violations when the district court instructed the jury that it should award damages to the plaintiff if it found for the plaintiff on any alleged violation). We conclude below that substantial evidence supports the jury's verdict on the attempted monopolization claim. Therefore, we do not address the monopolization claim.

<sup>39</sup> Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884 (1993); Rebel Oil Co. v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 51 F.3d 1421, 1432-33 (9th Cir. 1995).

<sup>40</sup> Rebel Oil, 51 F.3d at 1433. Weyerhaeuser does not address this element, presumably because if Ross-Simmons's theory that high sawlog prices drove it out of business is viable, Ross-Simmons has satisfied the injury element. Thus, we do not discuss it.

<sup>41</sup> See Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467, 105 S. Ct. 2847 (1985) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

for alder sawlogs and an ability to control alder sawlog prices, (3) Weyerhaeuser suffered declining profits due to the high prices it was paying for raw materials, [**27] and (4) Weyerhaeuser employed a strategy of raising sawlog prices. Based on this evidence, the jury could reasonably have concluded that Weyerhaeuser engaged in anticompetitive conduct by overbidding for sawlogs. We need not analyze whether substantial evidence supports the other alleged anticompetitive acts because the evidence of predatory overbidding sufficiently supports the finding that Weyerhaeuser engaged in anticompetitive conduct.<sup>42</sup> We now turn to the issue of whether substantial [*1042] evidence supports the jury's finding of specific intent.

[**28] b. Specific intent

HN14  Attempted monopolization requires proof of intent to monopolize or eliminate competition.<sup>43</sup> The record contains substantial evidence of specific intent to eliminate competition based on: (1) Weyerhaeuser's anticompetitive conduct itself, (2) the testimony of Weyerhaeuser's employees, and (3) Weyerhaeuser's business projections regarding sawlog prices.

Anticompetitive conduct alone can satisfy the specific intent requirement if the conduct "form[s] the basis for a substantial claim of restraint of trade" or is "clearly threatening to competition or clearly exclusionary."<sup>44</sup> As discussed above, Ross-Simmons offered evidence that Weyerhaeuser overpaid for sawlogs while its profits declined. Weyerhaeuser's overbidding for sawlogs clearly threatened competition because it restricted competitors' access to the limited supply of sawlogs. Thus, Weyerhaeuser's conduct on its own supports a reasonable inference of specific intent to eliminate [**29] competition.

The testimony of Weyerhaeuser's employees further showed that Weyerhaeuser intended to control prices and eliminate competition. One of Weyerhaeuser's former senior analysts, Eugene Novak, acknowledged on the stand that Weyerhaeuser had the power -- and was aware of its power -- to influence prices in the alder sawlog market. Novak also authored a memorandum regarding the costs of sawlogs and lumber in which he stated that the increase in sawlog prices despite Weyerhaeuser's predominant market share made no sense. Novak estimated that, due to the excessive prices Weyerhaeuser paid for sawlogs, it "had given up some $ 40 to $ 60 million dollars in the last three years." He testified that his boss, Vicki McInnally, who was a member of the senior management team, [**30] told him that "that was the strategy that [Weyerhaeuser] designed." A former sales manager for Weyerhaeuser, Cliff Chulos, also testified that "it was taken as a given by everyone that [Weyerhaeuser] could influence price; that [Weyerhaeuser] had to be a major influence." Thus, the testimony in the record supports the finding that Weyerhaeuser specifically intended to eliminate competition.

Moreover, Weyerhaeuser's business projections about sawlog prices indicated that it planned to lower the prices it paid for sawlogs after acquiring a greater market share as a result of decreased competition. Weyerhaeuser tracked competitors' profit margins and estimated the potential effects of targeted increases in sawlog costs on the ability of low-margin competitors to survive. Such evidence also supports an inference that Weyerhaeuser sought to foreclose competition rather than simply to increase its own business.<sup>45</sup> Thus, when viewed in its entirety, the evidence sufficiently supports a finding of specific intent to control prices and eliminate competition. We now turn to <sup>42</sup> See Coastal Abstract Serv., Inc. v. First Am. Title Ins. Co., 173 F.3d 725, 736 (9th Cir. 1999) (affirming judgments of liability on defamation claims where two of the three statements upon which jury verdicts were based were not actionable as a matter of law). The other alleged anticompetitive acts were: overbuying sawlogs, entering into exclusive agreements for sawlogs, and making misrepresentations to state officials to obtain sawlogs from state forests.

<sup>43</sup> Spectrum Sports, 506 U.S. at 456.

<sup>44</sup> Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1309 (9th Cir. 1982); see Spectrum Sports, 506 U.S. at 459 (stating that unfair tactics can suffice to prove intent to monopolize).

<sup>45</sup> See IIIA AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, ANTITRUST LAW, P 805b at 340 n.10 (2d ed. 2002) ("In a perfectly competitive market[,] a firm makes price and output decisions without regard to the likely responses of others.").

the question of whether substantial evidence supports the finding that a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's [**31] achievement of monopoly power existed.

[*1043] c. Dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power

HN15 [+] Monopoly power is the "power to control prices or exclude competition." <sup>46</sup> In determining whether there is a dangerous probability of monopolization, we consider "the relevant market and the defendant's ability to lessen or destroy competition in that market." <sup>47</sup> To control prices unilaterally, Weyerhaeuser had to have obtained market power. <sup>48</sup> Ross-Simmons could demonstrate that Weyerhaeuser had market power either by presenting direct evidence of the injurious exercise of that power or by presenting circumstantial evidence that: defined the relevant market, demonstrated that the defendant held a dominant share of the market, and showed that significant barriers to entry into and expansion within [**32] the market exist. <sup>49</sup> We hold that substantial evidence supports the jury's finding that a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's achievement of monopoly power existed.

The record contains some direct evidence that could support the jury's finding that a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's achievement of monopoly power existed. The testimony from Weyerhaeuser's employees showed that Weyerhaeuser had the power to influence prices and had used its power to raise the price of sawlogs. This direct evidence of Weyerhaeuser's injurious exercise of market power is substantial enough by itself to support the jury's [**33] finding of a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power. We nonetheless examine the circumstantial evidence as well because that evidence provides additional support for the jury's finding.

(i) Market share

Weyerhaeuser does not dispute Ross-Simmons's data that, during the relevant time period, Weyerhaeuser's share of the relevant market was approximately 65%. Weyerhaeuser's business records showed that its share was 64% in 1998, with projected increases. We have held a 44% market share sufficient as a matter of law to support a finding of market power for attempted monopolization. <sup>50</sup> Thus, we conclude that Weyerhaeuser's approximately 65% market share supports a finding of market power.

HN16 [+] Market share alone, however, does not raise an inference of a dangerous [**34] probability of achieving monopoly power if there are "low entry barriers or other evidence of a defendant's inability to control prices or exclude competitors." <sup>51</sup> We therefore turn to the issue of whether significant barriers to entry and expansion existed.

(ii) Barriers to entry and expansion

<sup>46</sup> United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 571, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 \(1966\) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

<sup>47</sup> Spectrum Sports, 506 U.S. at 456. Weyerhaeuser does not dispute that the relevant market consists of the market for alder sawlogs in the Pacific Northwest.

<sup>48</sup> See Rebel Oil, 51 F.3d at 1434.

<sup>49</sup> Id.

<sup>50</sup> Id. at 1438; see also Oahu Gas Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Res., Inc., 838 F.2d 360, 366-67 \(9th Cir. 1988\) (finding a declining 68 market share sufficient to establish market power for an actual monopolization claim).

<sup>51</sup> Syufy II, 903 F.2d at 664 (citations omitted).

"Entry barriers are additional long-run costs that were not incurred by incumbent firms but must be incurred by new entrants, or factors in the market that deter entry while permitting incumbent firms to earn monopoly returns."<sup>52</sup> Such [*1044] barriers may include legal license requirements, control of an essential resource, entrenched buyer preferences, and higher capital costs for new entrants.<sup>53</sup> Entry barriers that justify a finding of market power must "be capable of constraining the normal operation of the market to the extent that the problem is unlikely to be self-correcting."<sup>54</sup> We conclude that the high capital costs new entrants faced and the [**35] limited availability of sawlogs were barriers to entry that justified an inference of monopoly power.

At the outset, we address Weyerhaeuser's argument that the entry of four new mills during the alleged predation period demonstrated a lack of barriers to entry. We have held that the entry of new competitors does not necessarily demonstrate a lack of barriers to entry.<sup>55</sup> If new entrants are "insufficient to take significant business away from the predator, they are unlikely to represent a challenge to the predator's market power."<sup>56</sup> The evidence did not show that the four new entrants took significant business from Weyerhaeuser or that they had a significant market share. In fact, evidence suggests that Weyerhaeuser's market share actually increased even though the [**36] four new mills entered the market.<sup>57</sup> Moreover, the evidence indicates that, as soon as the new entrants came into the market, they had to pay the sawlog prices Weyerhaeuser set. Thus, the evidence does not show that the four new entrants could take enough business away from Weyerhaeuser to allow the market to correct itself.<sup>58</sup> As a result, the entry of new competitors did not foreclose the possibility that barriers to entry existed. We now turn to the issue of whether higher capital costs and limited sawlog availability were barriers to entry.

Ross-Simmons offered expert testimony to support the proposition that the higher capital costs associated with entering [**37] the market constituted a barrier to entry. The record contains evidence that the advent of expensive new machines and product-grading, which did not exist when Weyerhaeuser entered the market, made market entry less feasible because new entrants had difficulty matching the necessary technology. The need for this new technology raised the cost of entering the market to $ 20-$ 25 million. While Weyerhaeuser also had to incur costs for machinery and product-grading, it was able to do so over time without bearing the burden of heavy front-end costs to gain entry into the market. Thus, substantial evidence supports the inference that higher capital costs were a barrier to entry.

With respect to the availability of raw materials, Weyerhaeuser argues that there were sufficient sawlogs available for all competitors if they could afford to buy them. However, Weyerhaeuser purchased approximately 65% of the available sawlogs during the period of alleged predation. The evidence further shows that Weyerhaeuser raised the price of sawlogs and entered into exclusive agreements that restricted competitors' access to sawlogs. By thus controlling or influencing a number of the available sawlog sources, [**38] Weyerhaeuser restricted access to the already limited sawlog supply.<sup>59</sup> Weyerhaeuser's [*1045] dominance in the market for sawlogs, its overbidding

<sup>52</sup> Rebel Oil, 51 F.3d at 1439 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

<sup>53</sup> Id.; Brunswick, 6 F.3d at 1428.

<sup>54</sup> Rebel Oil, 51 F.3d at 1439 (citation omitted).

<sup>55</sup> Id. at 1440.

<sup>56</sup> Id. (emphasis added).

<sup>57</sup> This increase in Weyerhaeuser's market share was likely due to the fact that although four new mills opened to compete with Weyerhaeuser during the alleged period of predation, thirty-one other competitors went out of business.

<sup>58</sup> See id. at 1439.

<sup>59</sup> See Syufy II, 903 F.2d at 667 (stating that an incumbent's control over a scarce commodity might give it a "substantial structural advantage").

practices, and its restrictive arrangements together support the inference that the limited supply of sawlogs was a barrier to entry.

The evidence shows that significant barriers to entry existed in the sawlog market in the form of high capital costs and limited raw materials, and that Weyerhaeuser had a dominant share of the market. Moreover, the record contains direct evidence of Weyerhaeuser's injurious exercise of market power. Therefore, we hold that substantial evidence supports the jury's finding that a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's achievement of monopoly power existed.

Because substantial evidence shows that Weyerhaeuser engaged in anticompetitive conduct through predatory overbidding, intended [**39] specifically to eliminate competition, and a dangerous probability of Weyerhaeuser's achievement of monopoly power existed, we uphold the jury's verdict against Weyerhaeuser on the attempted monopolization claim. Accordingly, we affirm the court's denial of Weyerhaeuser's motion for judgment as a matter of law.

B. REMAINING ISSUES

Two issues remain for our consideration: (1) damages, and (2) attorneys' fees and costs. For the reasons stated below, we uphold both the jury's damages award and the court's grant of fees and costs to Ross-Simmons.

1. Damages

HN17 We give substantial deference to a jury's damages award.<sup>60</sup> In antitrust cases, we accept a degree of uncertainty when evaluating damages awards because of the inherent "difficulty of ascertaining business damages" when "the vagaries of the marketplace usually deny us sure knowledge of what [a] plaintiff's situation would have been in the absence of the defendant's antitrust violation."<sup>61</sup> We will affirm the jury's damages award if it is not based upon "speculation or guesswork."<sup>62</sup> "It is sufficient if a reasonable basis of computation is afforded, although the result be only approximate."<sup>63</sup> We conclude that [**40] the jury based its award upon an appropriate estimate of damages.

Ross-Simmons's models for estimating damages properly relied upon the fundamental assumption that Weyerhaeuser maintained artificially high costs in the sawlog market during the damages period. Ross-Simmons's estimates were based either on testimony regarding Weyerhaeuser's annual loss in profits due to higher sawlog costs or on a decade's worth of data regarding Weyerhaeuser's [**41] average profit margin prior to the predatory period. The models accounted for changing market conditions by: (1) using data for actual sales and production of finished lumber, which took into account any reduced market demand or decrease in market prices for finished lumber, and (2) assuming that Weyerhaeuser could have controlled sawlog costs to maintain its previous profit [*1046] margins relative to the price of lumber. The evidence, as discussed above, supports the assumption that Weyerhaeuser had such control. Thus, we conclude that Ross-Simmons's damages models were not speculative, but provided a reasonable basis for computing damages. Accordingly, we uphold the jury's award of damages.

<sup>60</sup> Del Monte Dunes, 95 F.3d at 1435; see Los Angeles Mem'l, 791 F.2d at 1360.

<sup>61</sup> J. Truett Payne Co. v. Chrysler Motors Corp., 451 U.S. 557, 566-67, 68 L. Ed. 2d 442, 101 S. Ct. 1923 (1981); see Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 327 U.S. 251, 264-65, 90 L. Ed. 652, 66 S. Ct. 574 (1946); Eastman Kodak Co. v. S. Photo Materials Co., 273 U.S. 359, 379, 71 L. Ed. 684, 47 S. Ct. 400 (1927).

<sup>62</sup> Bigelow, 327 U.S. at 264.

<sup>63</sup> S. Photo, 273 U.S. at 379.

2. Attorneys' Fees and Costs

HN18 [↑] We uphold a court's award of attorneys' fees unless it abused its discretion or committed a clear error of law.<sup>64</sup> Because we affirm the jury's verdict of liability for attempted monopolization, Ross-Simmons remains a prevailing party entitled to attorneys' fees and costs. Thus, the district court properly granted attorneys' fees and costs to Ross-Simmons.

[**42] III. CONCLUSION

We conclude that HN19 [↑] Brooke Group does not apply in this predatory bidding case because benefit to consumers and stimulation of competition are less likely to result here than in predatory pricing cases. A plaintiff bringing a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act based on predatory overbidding in a relatively inelastic market need not show that the defendant operated at a loss and that a dangerous probability of the defendant's recoupment of those losses existed to succeed on its claim. Substantial evidence supports the jury's finding that Weyerhaeuser was liable for attempted monopolization. Therefore, we affirm the court's denial of Weyerhaeuser's motion for judgment as a matter of law or for a new trial. The jury based its damages award upon a reasonable estimate of damages. Therefore, we affirm the jury's damages award. Finally, because we affirm the jury's verdict, we also affirm the court's award of attorneys' fees and costs to Ross-Simmons.

AFFIRMED.

---

End of Document

---

<sup>64</sup> Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 879 F.2d 632, 635 (9th Cir. 1989).

Shaw v. United States

United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York

May 31, 2005, Decided

03-CV-3016 (ADS) (ARL)

Reporter

371 F. Supp. 2d 265 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10479 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,820

EDWARD SHAW, Petitioner, - against - UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Respondent.

Disposition: [**1] Petitioner's motion to set aside or vacate judgment of conviction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 denied; Pursuant to Rule 22(b) of Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and 28 U.S.C. § 2253\(c\)\(2\), a certificate of appealability DENIED, as Petitioner fails to make a substantial showing of a denial of a constitutional right.

Core Terms

---

bid, auction, antitrust, co-conspirators, conspiracy, guilty plea, commerce, ineffective assistance of counsel, sentence, counsel's performance, relevant market

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Criminal Law & Procedure > Habeas Corpus > Review > Burdens of Proof

Criminal Law & Procedure > Sentencing > Corrections, Modifications & Reductions > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Postconviction Proceedings > Motions to Set Aside Sentence

Criminal Law & Procedure > Postconviction Proceedings > Motions to Vacate Judgment

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Cognizable Issues > Sentences

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Custody Requirement > Custody Determinations > Satisfaction of Custody

Criminal Law & Procedure > Habeas Corpus > Procedure > General Overview

HN1 [blue icon] Review, Burdens of Proof

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 2255, a federal prisoner in custody may move the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside or correct the sentence on the basis that it was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or that the court was without jurisdiction to impose such sentence, or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack. 28 U.S.C.S. § 2255. The burden of proof is on the petitioner to establish his constitutional claims by a preponderance of the evidence.

371 F. Supp. 2d 265, *265L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10479, **1</sup>

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Criminal Process > Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Cognizable Issues > Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Postconviction Proceedings > Motions to Set Aside Sentence

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Cognizable Issues > General Overview

HN2 [down] Criminal Process, Assistance of Counsel

Although generally a petitioner who has failed to raise an issue on direct appeal may not do so in a 28 U.S.C.S. § 2255 petition claims of ineffective assistance of counsel may be brought for the first time in a § 2255 petition. Such is the case because such claims would not likely be made on direct appeal by an attorney who had represented the petitioner at trial based upon that attorney's own incompetence. In addition, the district court is the forum best suited to developing the facts necessary to determining the adequacy of representation.

Civil Procedure > Parties > Pro Se Litigants > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Habeas Corpus > Procedure > General Overview

HN3 [down] Parties, Pro Se Litigants

With regard to a petition for a federal writ of habeas corpus, if the petitioner is proceeding pro se his submissions must be liberally construed in favor of the petitioner.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Criminal Process > Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Effective Assistance of Counsel > Tests for Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

HN4 [down] Criminal Process, Assistance of Counsel

To establish ineffective assistance of counsel, a petitioner must demonstrate: (1) that his counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms; and (2) that counsel's deficient performance prejudiced the defense.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Criminal Process > Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Effective Assistance of Counsel > Tests for Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

HN5 [down] Criminal Process, Assistance of Counsel

With regard to the two part test for determining ineffective assistance of counsel, in evaluating the first prong of this test, the court must indulge in a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance, bearing in mind that there are countless ways to provide effective assistance in any given case and that even the best criminal defense attorneys would not defend a particular client in the same way. As for the second prong, to show prejudice, a defendant must demonstrate that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional performance, the outcome of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome. The court's central concern is not with "grading counsel's performance" but with discerning whether despite the strong presumption of reliability, the result of the particular proceeding is unreliable because of a breakdown in the adversarial process that our system counts on to produce just results.

371 F. Supp. 2d 265, *265L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10479, **1</sup>

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Criminal Process > Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Effective Assistance of Counsel > Tests for Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

HN6 [+] Criminal Process, Assistance of Counsel

Because it is all too tempting for a defendant to second-guess counsel's assistance after conviction, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has instructed that a reviewing court should be "highly deferential" in assessing counsel's performance. Although the test for ineffective assistance of counsel contains two prongs, the United States Supreme Court specifically noted that federal district courts need not address both components if a petitioner fails to establish either one. In particular, a court need not determine whether counsel's performance was deficient before examining the prejudice suffered by the defendant as a result of the alleged deficiencies.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Criminal Process > Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Defendant's Rights > Right to Counsel > Effective Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Effective Assistance of Counsel > Tests for Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Right to Counsel > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Defendant's Rights > Right to Counsel > General Overview

HN7 [+] Criminal Process, Assistance of Counsel

It is well-established that a defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel includes the right to representation by conflict-free counsel. In addition, prejudice will be presumed when a defendant shows (1) an actual conflict of interest that, (2) adversely affected his counsel's performance.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Penalties

Criminal Law & Procedure > Criminal Offenses > Miscellaneous Offenses > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Entry of Pleas > Guilty Pleas > General Overview

371 F. Supp. 2d 265, *265L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10479, **1</sup>

**HN8** [blue download icon] Clayton Act, Penalties

A relevant market and an antitrust injury are not required elements to prove a criminal violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Trials > Burdens of Proof > Prosecution

**HN9** [blue download icon] Sherman Act, Claims

Section 1 of the Sherman Act by its terms makes unlawful: every contract combination, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1. To prove a criminal violation of this section, the government must establish: (1) an agreement to a joint action such as a conspiracy formed by two or more entities; (2) that the defendant knowingly joined this conspiracy; (3) the agreement unreasonably restrained trade or commerce; and (4) that the conspiracy concerned goods or services in interstate commerce.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

**HN10** [blue download icon] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason

With regard to the Sherman Act, certain activities including bid-rigging are so anticompetitive that they constitute "per se" violations of the antitrust law. Where two or more persons agree that one will submit a bid for a project higher or lower than the others or that one will not submit a bid at all, then there has been an unreasonable restraint of trade which violates the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Trials > Burdens of Proof > Prosecution

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN11 [ ] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

With regard to the Sherman Act, "per se" bid rigging activity is presumed to be an unreasonable restraint on trade and therefore illegal because of its pernicious effect on competition and lack of any redeeming virtue. In this type of case, the government must only prove the existence of an agreement to partake in the "per se" illegal activity, and that the activity in question concerns goods or services in interstate commerce. The commerce requirement of the Sherman Act may be satisfied: (1) where the defendant's conduct directly interferes with the flow of goods in the stream of commerce (the "in commerce" test); or (2) where the defendant's conduct has a substantial effect on interstate commerce (the "effect on commerce" test).

Counsel: EDWARD SHAW, Petitioner, Pro se, Brooklyn, New York.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, ANTITRUST DIVISION, New York, New York, By: Debra Brookes, Attorney, John W. McReynolds, Attorney.

ROSLYNN R. MAUSKOPF, UNITED STATES ATTORNEY, EASTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, Central Islip, New York, By: AUSA Tanya Y. Hill.

Judges: ARTHUR D. SPATT, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: ARTHUR D. SPATT

Opinion

---

[*267] MEMORANDUM OF DECISION AND ORDER

This case involves charges that the petitioner Edward Shaw ("Shaw" or the "Petitioner") took part in a bid-rigging conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 (the "Sherman Act"). On April 30, 2002, pursuant to a Cooperation Agreement (the "Agreement"), the Petitioner pleaded guilty to a one-count information [\[\*2\]](#) charging him with conspiring to rig bids in violation of the Sherman Act.

Presently before the Court is a motion by the petitioner to set aside or vacate the judgment of conviction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 ("Section 2255") on the ground of ineffective assistance of counsel. For the reasons stated below, Shaw's petition is without merit and is denied.

I. BACKGROUND

On October 18, 2002, the Court accepted Shaw's plea of guilty to the one count information that was previously taken by United States Magistrate Judge Arlene R. Lindsay. He was also sentenced to three years probation, with special conditions that he serve four months home detention and undergo gambling therapy. According to the Government, on November 5, 2002, Shaw filed a notice of appeal. This appeal was withdrawn in May 2003.

In the instant petition, Shaw claims that he received ineffective assistance of counsel in violation of the Sixth Amendment because: (1) his attorney Frederick Schurr, Esq. ("Schurr"), disclosed confidential communications to the Government that was allegedly used against him; and (2) Schurr recommended that he plead guilty despite the absence of evidence of a [\[\*3\]](#) "relevant market" and an "antitrust injury."

A. The Nature of the Conspiracy

In or about January 2001, the Government uncovered a five-year long bid-rigging conspiracy involving Shaw and a number of other co-conspirators affecting public auctions conducted by the Nassau and Suffolk County Sheriffs' Offices. This scheme involved an agreement that the individuals would not bid against each other [*268] during the official auction. Rather, the group set a pre-determined price at which one designated individual was to bid on the auctioned property on the group's behalf instead of each member of the group bidding competitively against each other. In cases where at least three bids were required, two other conspirators would first submit intentionally low bids, thus enabling the designated bidder to win the property with a subsequent bid. Because the final bid was less than that which would have resulted had there been legitimate competitive bidding, this scheme prevented the respective creditors from receiving the maximum value of the auctioned properties.

The Government's investigation revealed that if the designated bidder won the particular item during the official auction, the co-conspirators [**4] would then hold a second, private "knock-out" auction. During the knock-out auction, the group would bid against one another to determine who would ultimately own the property. When a co-conspirator reached his dollar limit for a particular item, he stopped bidding and was "knocked out" of the private auction. The "knocked out" individual would receive a payoff from the winner of the knock-out auction that was based on his last bid before being knocked-out. After reimbursing the designated bidder in the official action, and compensating the other conspirators, the winner of the knock-out auction would take the item. The price that the winner of the item ultimately paid for the item was less than what would have been paid had there been legitimate competitive bidding at the official auction.

The Government's investigation further revealed that, when a third-party interested in bidding on an item appeared at the official auction, one of the co-conspirators, usually Shaw, would demand a cash payment from the third party in exchange for an agreement that the group would not bid against that outside party. To induce the third party to agree, Shaw would threaten to intentionally bid up [**5] the price of the property so that the third-party would pay more for the property. The cash payment by the third party was then divided among the group members.

According to Shaw's petition, in January 2001, a special agent of the FBI came to his home and accused him of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. The special agent advised Shaw to contact him after he retained a lawyer. Shaw subsequently contacted Norman Langer, Esq. ("Langer"). Langer had often hired Shaw to attend auctions in order to bid on property belonging to Langer's clients that was being sold at auction to collect on judgments against them.

The Government has attached as an exhibit to their opposition papers a letter dated July 31, 2003 from Schurr to John W. McReynolds, Attorney, Department of Justice, Antitrust Division. In this letter, Schurr explains that on January 26, 2001, he contacted the Special Agent and set January 29, 2001 as the date for a full disclosure by the Government of all the evidence against Shaw. At the January 29, 2001 meeting with McReynolds and Debra C. Brookes, Attorney, Department of Justice Antitrust Division, Schurr heard audio taped recordings made by a government undercover agent [**6] which revealed that Shaw told the undercover agent that he and his co-conspirators would not bid the price up in exchange for $ 300.00. Schurr also learned that the Government intended to seek indictment against Shaw and his co-conspirators for "mail fraud, tax evasion, fixing auctions, conspiracy, and violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act." Also at this meeting, the Government suggested the possibility of Shaw cooperating with the government in exchange for a 5K1.1 [*269] cooperation letter to reduce his exposure to incarceration.

After several meetings with Schurr, Shaw decided to cooperate with the Government. On February 20, 2001, Shaw and Schurr met with McReynolds, Brookes, Assistant United States Attorney ("AUSA") Tanya Hill, as well as two FBI Special Agents at which Shaw narrated in complete detail the nature of the Conspiracy with the hope of obtaining a 5K1.1 letter.

B. The Plea and Sentencing Proceeding

On April 30, 2002, Shaw pleaded guilty before Magistrate Judge Lindsay to a one count information charging him with conspiring to rig bids in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1. Schurr represented Shaw at the plea allocution. At this court proceeding, [**7] the Petitioner stated that he reviewed the Agreement with his attorney and understood the terms and conditions of the Agreement. Shaw also stated that he understood the charge against him. Shaw also explained in detail how he and the other co-conspirators agreed to manipulate the public auctions in the manner described above. Shaw also stated that he knew that he was bidding on property that came across state lines and that by entering this agreement he was "influencing the bidding process." Of importance in the determination of this motion, is the Petitioner's statement that as of that time, he was satisfied with his legal representation.

On October 18, 2002, this Court accepted the Petitioner's guilty plea and sentenced Shaw to three years' probation, with special conditions that he serve four months home detention and undergo gambling therapy.

II. DISCUSSION

Shaw contends that the judgement of conviction entered against him as a result of his plea of guilty was the result of ineffective assistance of counsel in violation of his Sixth Amendment rights because: (1) his attorney Frederick Schurr, Esq., disclosed confidential communications to the prosecution which was used [**8] against him; and (2) Schurr erred in failing to properly research the facts of this case so as to ascertain that he was not guilty of the crime charged because the Government lacked proof that there was a "relevant market" causing an "antitrust injury."

A. Standard of Review

HN1[] Pursuant to section 2255, a federal prisoner in custody "may move the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside or correct the sentence" on the basis that it "was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or that the court was without jurisdiction to impose such sentence, or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack . . ." 28 U.S.C. § 2255. The burden of proof is on petitioner to establish his constitutional claims by a preponderance of the evidence. See Triana v. United States, 205 F.3d 36, 40 \(2d Cir.\), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 956, 148 L. Ed. 2d 292, 121 S. Ct. 378 (2000); see also Whitaker v. Meachum, 123 F.3d 714, 716 \(2d Cir. 1997\).

HN2[] Although generally a petitioner who has failed to raise an issue on direct appeal may not do so in a § 2255 petition, [**9] see Underwood v. U.S., 166 F.3d 84, 87 \(2d Cir. 1999\), claims of ineffective assistance of counsel may be brought for the first time in a section 2255 petition. Frederick v. Warden, Lewisburg Correctional Facility, 308 F.3d 192, 197 n. 6 \(2d Cir. 2002\). Such is the case because such claims "would not likely be made on direct appeal [*270] by an attorney who had represented the petitioner at trial based upon that attorney's own incompetence." Riascos-Prado v. United States, 66 F.3d 30, 34-35 \(2d Cir. 1995\). In addition, "the district court [is] the forum best suited to developing the facts necessary to determining the adequacy of representation . . ." United States v. Doe, 365 F.3d 150, 153 \(2d Cir. 2004\) (quoting Massaro v. United States, 538 U.S. 500, 504-05, 123 S. Ct. 1690, 155 L. Ed. 2d 714 \(2003\)).

Finally, the Court is mindful that HN3[] the petitioner is proceeding pro se and that his submissions must be liberally construed in favor of the petitioner. See Chang v. U.S., 250 F.3d 79, 86 n. 2 \(2d Cir. 2001\).

B. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

HN4[] To establish ineffective [**10] assistance of counsel, a petitioner must demonstrate: (1) that his counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms; and (2) that counsel's deficient performance prejudiced the defense. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687-688, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 2064, 80 L. Ed.2d 674 \(1984\); see also Larrea v. Bennett, 368 F.3d 179, 183 \(2d Cir. 2004\).

HN5 In evaluating the first prong of this test, the Court must "indulge in a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance,' bearing in mind that 'there are countless ways to provide effective assistance in any given case' and that 'even the best criminal defense attorneys would not defend a particular client in the same way.'" United States v. Aguirre, 912 F.2d 555, 560 (2d Cir. 1990) (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689) (alterations in original); see also Larrea, 368 F.3d at 183. As for the second prong, to show prejudice, a defendant must demonstrate "that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional performance, [**11] the outcome of the proceeding would have been different." United States v. Levy, 377 F.3d 259, 264 (2d Cir. 2004) (quoting United States v. Gordon, 156 F.3d 376, 379 (2d Cir. 1998)). "A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Id. (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694). "The court's central concern is not with 'grading counsel's performance' but with discerning 'whether despite the strong presumption of reliability, the result of the particular proceeding is unreliable because of a breakdown in the adversarial process that our system counts on to produce just results.'" Aguirre, 912 F.2d at 560 (2d Cir. 1990) (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 696-97).

HN6 Because "it is all too tempting for a defendant to second-guess counsel's assistance after conviction," Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689, the Second Circuit has instructed that a reviewing court should be "highly deferential" in assessing counsel's performance. See Pratt v. Greiner, 306 F.3d 1190, 1196 (2d Cir. 2002) (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689, 104 S. Ct. 2052). [**12] Although the test for ineffective assistance of counsel contains two prongs, the Supreme Court specifically noted that federal district courts need not address both components if a petitioner fails to establish either one. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697. In particular, "a court need not determine whether counsel's performance was deficient before examining the prejudice suffered by the defendant as a result of the alleged deficiencies." Id.

1. As to the claim that Frederick Schurr, Esq., disclosed confidential communications.

In his petition, Shaw explains that he is "morally certain that [Schurr] proceeded [*271] to the Government, to share the information that [Shaw] told him, in order for the Government to make a colorable case against me, for him to try to justify the fifty thousand dollar fee." However, the Petition is lacking any specific details as to the content of the alleged disclosure; or the date, time, place, and to whom such disclosures were made. Nor does Shaw identify any facts or details that the Government had learned that was based on privileged information rather than information that the Government had obtained independently.

These conclusory [**13] allegations are insufficient for the Court to conclude that Schurr disclosed any confidential communications to the Government. Nor can the Court conclude that Schurr's performance did not meet the objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms. Even assuming the alleged disclosures were made by Schurr, the Petitioner fails to satisfy his burden as to the second prong of the Strickland test, namely that the outcome of the proceeding would have been different, but for Schurr's performance

Reading Shaw's petition liberally as the court is required to do with all pro se petitions, Shaw may also be asserting an ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on an alleged conflict of interest. Shaw's petition is riddled with allegations that Schurr had a conflict of interest because "Schurr's purpose was to make certain that [Shaw] not mention . . . Langer's name" and that "Schurr's motive was to literally steal fifty thousand dollars from [him] under the guise of a legal fee."

HN7 It is well-established that "[a] defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel includes the right to representation by conflict-free counsel." United States v. Schwarz, 283 F.3d 76, 90 (2d Cir. 2002). [**14] In addition, prejudice will be presumed when a defendant shows "(1) an actual conflict of interest that (2) adversely affected his counsel's performance," Id. However, once again, Shaw's petition is lacking any details as to this alleged conflict; how the presumed conflict caused an "actual lapse in representation," Locascio v. United States, 395 F.3d 51, 56 (2d Cir. 2005) (internal quotation and citation omitted); and how the outcome of this case would have been any different. See Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 348-50, 64 L. Ed. 2d 333, 100 S. Ct. 1708 (1980); Eisemann v. Herbert, 401 F.3d 102, 2005 U.S.App. LEXIS 4134, *9-10 (2d Cir. 2005). Finally, with regard to Shaw's assertions that Schurr's legal fee in the amount of $ 50,000 was excessive, the Court notes that a Section

2255 petition is not the proper forum for a fee dispute. Furthermore, the petition indicates that Shaw has filed a grievance with the Nassau County Bar Association with regard to these assertions against Schurr.

Accordingly, Shaw failed to demonstrate that Schurr had a conflict of interest that prejudiced the legal representation that he received, and this argument must similarly fail.

2. As to [**15] the claim that Schurr erred in recommending that he plead guilty despite the absence of evidence with regard to a "relevant market" or proof of an "antitrust injury."

Shaw next argues that Schurr's representation violated the Sixth Amendment because he failed to properly research the elements of a criminal antitrust violation, and therefore erred in advising him to plead guilty. In particular, Shaw contends that Schurr failed to advise him that the Government would not have been able to establish that there was a "relevant [*272] market" or an "antitrust injury." However, as set forth below, HN8[ a relevant market and an antitrust injury are not required elements to prove a criminal violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

HN9[ Section 1 by its terms makes unlawful: "every contract combination . . ., or conspiracy, in restraint of trade . . ." 15 U.S.C. § 1. To prove a criminal violation of this section, the Government must establish: (1) an agreement to a joint action such as a conspiracy formed by two or more entities; (2) that the defendant knowingly joined this conspiracy; (3) the agreement unreasonably restrained trade or commerce; and (4) that the conspiracy concerned [*16] goods or services in interstate commerce. See 3 L. Sands et al., Modern Federal Jury Instructions P58.04, Instr. 58 - 44 (2003); See United States v. Koppers Co., 652 F.2d 290, 295-96 (2d Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1083, 70 L. Ed. 2d 617, 102 S. Ct. 639 (1982); United States v. Gypsum Co., 438 U.S. 422, 435-43, 98 S. Ct. 2864, 57 L. Ed.2d 854 (1978); UCAR Intern., Inc. v. Union Carbide Corp., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 914, 2004 WL 137073, at *16 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 26, 2004).

Shaw also contends that there can be no antitrust crime because there was no evidence that he or his co-conspirators paid anything less than fair value for any of the property. Not so. If the co-conspirators had legitimately bid against each other during the "official auction," the sale price would presumably have been higher. Thus, Shaw's activities artificially and unlawfully reduced the price that the relevant items sold at auction. For that reason, HN10[ certain activities including bid-rigging are so anticompetitive that they constitute "per se" violations of the antitrust law. See Koppers Co., 652 F.2d at 294; see also United States v. W.F. Brinkley & Son Constr. Co., Inc., 783 F.2d 1157, 1161 (4th Cir. 1986) [**17] ("Where two or more persons agree that one will submit a bid for a project higher or lower than the others or that one will not submit a bid at all, then there has been an unreasonable restraint of trade which violates the Sherman Antitrust Act."); Philip Morris Inc. v. Heinrich, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9156, No. 95 Civ. 0328, 1996 WL 363156, at *9 (June 28, 1996) ("Courts have specifically classified bid-rigging as a form of price fixing that constitutes a per se violation." (citing authorities)).

Such HN11[ "per se" bid rigging activity is presumed to be an unreasonable restraint on trade and therefore illegal because of its "pernicious effect on competition and lack of any redeeming virtue." Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 78 S. Ct. 514, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545 (1958). In this type of case, the Government must only prove the existence of an agreement to partake in the "per se" illegal activity, see Koppers Co., 652 F.2d at 296 n. 6, and that the activity in question concerns goods or services in interstate commerce. Hamilton Chapter of Alpha Delta Phi, Inc. v. Hamilton College, 128 F.3d 59, 66-67 (2d Cir. 1997) (Stating that the [*18] commerce requirement of the Act may be satisfied: (1) "where the defendant's conduct directly interferes with the flow of goods in the stream of commerce (the 'in commerce' test); or (2) where the defendant's conduct has a substantial effect on interstate commerce (the 'effect on commerce' test) (citations omitted)). Therefore, Shaw's contention that Schurr erred by not properly advising him as to the elements of a criminal antitrust case is without merit.

The Court similarly finds Shaw's remaining arguments to be without merit. Accordingly, Shaw has failed to demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel and his petition is denied in its entirety.

371 F. Supp. 2d 265, *273L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10479, **18

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby

ORDERED, that the Petitioner's motion to set aside or vacate the judgment of conviction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 is denied; and it is further

ORDERED, that pursuant to Rule 22(b) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and 28 U.S.C. § 2253\(c\)\(2\), a certificate of appealability is DENIED, as the Petitioner fails to make a substantial showing of a denial of a constitutional \*\*19 right. Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 336, 123 S. Ct. 1029, 1039, 154 L. Ed.2d 931 \(2003\); Lucidore v. New York State Div. of Parole, 209 F.3d 107, 112 \(2d Cir. 2000\); and it is further ORDERED, that the Clerk is directed to close this case.

SO ORDERED.

Dated: Central Islip, New York

May 31, 2005

ARTHUR D. SPATT

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

Investors Corp. v. Bayer AG

Superior Court of Vermont, Chittenden County

June 1, 2005, Decided

No. 1011-04 Cncv

Reporter

2005 Vt. Super. LEXIS 92 *

INVESTORS CORPORATION OF VERMONT v. BAYER AG, ET AL.

Notice: THE TEXT OF THIS VERMONT TRIAL COURT OPINION IS UNOFFICIAL. IT HAS BEEN REFORMATTED FROM THE ORIGINAL. THE ACCURACY OF THE TEXT AND THE ACCOMPANYING DATA INCLUDED IN THE VERMONT TRIAL COURT OPINION DATABASE IS NOT GUARANTEED.

Subsequent History: Motion granted by *Investors Corp. v. Bayer, 2005 Vt. Super. LEXIS 34 \(Vt. Super. Ct., Aug. 3, 2005\)*

Prior History: *In re Polychloroprene Rubber Antitrust Litig., 360 F. Supp. 2d 1348, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1944 \(J.P.M.L., 2005\)*

Core Terms

---

purchasers, antitrust, damages, indirect, consumer, duplicate, putative class, consumer fraud, courts, suits, federal action, cases, unjust enrichment, consolidation, speculative, products, antitrust violation, finished product, anti trust law, necessary step, causation, prices, rubber, chain, steps

Judges: [*1] Richard W. Norton, Judge.

Opinion by: NORTON

Opinion

---

ENTRY

This matter concerns allegations of unfair trade practices. The plaintiff, Investors Corporation of Vermont, has sued the defendants for allegedly restraining trade of Ethylene Propylene Diene Monomer (EPDM), a component of Ethylene-propylene elastomers, which are the third-most common forms of synthetic rubber in the world. Investors Corporation seeks to form a class of all Vermont persons or business entities that indirectly purchased EPDM from the defendants from January 1994 through December 2002. Investors Corporation claims violations of 9 V.S.A. §§ 2453, 2465 (Vermont antitrust law) and 9 V.S.A. §§ 2453, 2461 (Vermont consumer fraud law), as well as unjust enrichment.

The defendants move to dismiss pursuant to V.R.C.P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The defendants argue that damages are too speculative given that the putative class of plaintiffs are mere indirect purchasers of downstream products, of which EPDM formed only a component part. In essence, the defendants' argument is that the putative class lacks standing under the Vermont antitrust and consumer fraud law.

In the alternative, the [*2] defendants request that this court stay this action pending resolution of a federal action by direct purchasers of EPDM. This federal action has been consolidated in the U.S. District Court for the District of Connecticut. See In re Ethylene Propylene Diene Monomer (EPDM) Antitrust Litig., 277 F. Supp. 2d 1373, 1373 (2003). The defendants argue that such a stay is warranted given the Vermont statute's directive that courts "take all necessary steps to avoid duplicate liability, including but not limited to the transfer or consolidation of all related actions." 9 V.S.A. § 2465(b).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion "should not be granted unless it is beyond doubt 'that there exist no facts or circumstances that would entitle the plaintiff to relief.'" Richards v. Town of Norwich, 169 Vt. 44, 48, 726 A.2d 81 (quoting Amiot v. Ames, 166 Vt. 288, 291, 693 A.2d 675 (1997)). The court "assumes that all factual allegations pleaded in the complaint are true . . . accept[ing] as true all reasonable inferences that may be derived from plaintiff's pleadings." Id. at 49. "A court should be 'especially reluctant to dismiss' a cause of action on the basis of the pleadings when the theory of liability is novel or extreme unless, 'beyond [*3] doubt, there [are] no circumstances or facts which plaintiff[] could prove which would entitle [her] to relief.'" In re Judicial Review of A.G., 151 Vt. 167, 169, 559 A.2d 656 (1989) (quoting Assoc. of Haystack Property Owners, Inc. v. Sprague, 145 Vt. 443, 446-47, 494 A.2d 122 (1985)) (second and third alterations in original).

The Vermont Consumer Fraud Act provides broad remedies for consumers injured by unfair trade practices and antitrust violations. "The Act expressly states that any consumer, reinforced by the definition of consumer as 'any person,' who suffers injury may bring an action under the statute against a 'seller, solicitor or other violator.'" Elkins v. Microsoft Corp., 174 Vt. 328, 331, 817 A.2d 9 (2002) (quoting 9 V.S.A. §§ 2453(a), 2461(b)). Moreover, "the express legislative intent behind the statute [is] to 'protect the public' against 'unfair or deceptive acts or practices' and to 'encourage fair and honest competition.'" Id. (quoting 9 V.S.A. § 2451). "In light of this purpose, . . . the VCFA is 'remedial in nature' and therefore must be construed 'liberally so as to furnish all the remedy and all the purposes intended.'" Id. (quoting State v. Custom Pools, 150 Vt. 533, 536, 556 A.2d 72 (1988)). "Of course, liberal [*4] construction does not allow [courts] to stretch the language beyond legislative intent." Id.

In a recent ruling, this court held that a putative class of consumers did not have antitrust standing to sue Visa and Mastercard for alleged injuries they incurred by purchasing items from merchants who used financial services from these institutions. See Fucile v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., No. S5160-03 CnC, 2004 Vt. Super. LEXIS 42, [WL] (Dec. 27, 2004) (Norton, J.). Visa and Mastercard had settled a multidistrict class action from merchants who alleged that the defendants had tied debit card services with credit card services in violation of federal antitrust law. See id. 2004 Vt. Super. LEXIS 42, at *2, [WL] at *1 (citing In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litig., 297 F. Supp. 2d 503 (E.D.N.Y. 2003)). The plaintiff, Fucile, argued that the inflated costs of these financial services were passed along to consumers by merchants who used them. In dismissing this complaint, this court adopted the antitrust standing principles articulated in Associated General Contractors v. Calif. State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1983), at least to the extent that these principles were consistent with Vermont law, which, unlike federal law, allows indirect [*5] purchaser suits. Applying the Associated General Contractors factors, this court held that Fucile's injury was too attenuated and remote from the alleged antitrust violation and his damages were too speculative. Fucile, 2004 Vt. Super. LEXIS 42, at *10, [WL] at *4-5. Fucile therefore lacked antitrust standing.

Here, Investors Corporation stands in a different posture than Fucile. Unlike Fucile, Investors Corporation and the putative class purchased the item allegedly affected by the defendant's actions (i.e., EPDM), albeit in varied forms as a component of Ethylene-propylene elastomers. According to the complaint, EPDM comprises 80 to 85 percent of Ethylene-propylene elastomers. Financial services, by contrast, are not components of common consumer goods, except, perhaps, in an extraordinarily abstract sense. Given that EPDM is a significant component of the product that putative class members purchased, the injury in this case is not as attenuated and remote and the damages are not as speculative.

As this court stated in Fucile, the relevant factors from Associated General Contractors are (1) whether there is a causal connection between the antitrust violation and the alleged harm, 459 U.S. at 537; (2) the directness of the [*6] injury, considering the "chain of causation," id. at 540; (3) whether the violator had an improper motive, id. at 537 and n.35; (4) whether the plaintiff's injury was of a type that Congress sought to redress by providing a private remedy, id. at 538; (5) whether the alleged damages are speculative, id. at 542; and (6) whether the nature of the action will keep "the scope of complex antitrust trials within judicially manageable limits," id. at 543.

Applying these factors to the instant case, there first exists a causal connection between the defendants' alleged price fixing and the putative class's injury. Because EPDM is a significant component part of the finished rubber products at issue, an increase in its price could have a ripple affect in the finished products, thereby increasing prices for the ultimate consumers.

The defendants argue that there are countless other inputs that determine the ultimate price of Ethylene-propylene elastomers, such as different marketing by third-party sellers, different forms of distribution, and different types of manufacturing. These multiple variables, the defendants argue, render injury and damages impossibly speculative, and therefore the causal [\[\*7\]](#) chain cannot be established. This may or may not be true, and other courts have expressed strong concerns about stretching antitrust law to cover damages in cases like these. See, e.g., Crouch v. Crompton Corp., Nos. 02 CVS 4375, 03 CVS 2514, 2004 WL 2414027, \*18-25, 2004 NCBC 7, PP 71-86 \(N.C. Super. Ct. 2004\) (analyzing complexity and costliness of adjudicating antitrust case based on rubber compounds and chemicals that form component of tire products at issue).<sup>1</sup> Indeed, the court in Crouch noted, citing a plea agreement from Canada, that at least in the case of tires, rubber compounds and chemicals form a mere 1 percent of the ultimate price of the finished product. [Id. \[WL\] at \*20-21, 2004 NCBC 7, P 76](#) (citing The Queen v. Crompton Corp. [2004] F.C. --).

Such facts, however, are far afield Rule 12(b)(6) motion analysis. The court will be better suited to assess whether Investors Corporation will be able to prove causation based on the alleged antitrust violation at the class certification and summary judgment stages. At this point in the proceeding, however, the court is not confident in holding that Investors Corporation lacks an ability to show causation. See Knevelbaard Dairies v. Kraft Foods, Inc., 232 F.3d 979, 989 \(9th Cir. 2000\) (holding that "disputed claims of causation and injury cannot be decided on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion"). Hence, factors one and two weigh in favor of standing.

Second, the court can infer an improper motive based on Investors Corporation's allegations. The alleged price-fixing was a conspiracy throughout U.S. and European markets, evidenced by coordinated price hikes close in time and amount. Investors Corporation alleges that defendants met during the class period; discussed prices, customers, and markets; agreed to charge prices at certain levels; issued price announcements in conformance with these agreements; and allocated markets and customers in accordance [\[\*9\]](#) with these agreements. One defendant, Crompton Corporation, has pleaded guilty to violating antitrust laws, and others have been contacted by antitrust authorities. These facts are enough to infer that the defendants had an improper motive to injure consumers like Investors Corporation and those in the putative class by allegedly fixing prices at artificially high levels. See Sullivan v. Tagliabue, 828 F. Supp. 114, 117 \(D. Mass. 1993\) (finding sufficient evidence to raise issue as to improper motive where plaintiff alleged that defendant sought to restrain and monopolize commerce and took action toward that goal). The third factor therefore weighs in favor of standing for Investors Corporation.

Third, the injury that Investors Corporation and the putative class suffered appears to be within the type of injury that the Legislature intended to address through the Vermont antitrust and consumer fraud law. If Investors Corporation can demonstrate that the increased EPDM prices affected the price of the goods purchased, then it will have established the type of injury to indirect purchasers that the Legislature intended to remedy by allowing indirect purchaser suits. The fourth factor weighs [\[\*10\]](#) in favor of standing for Investors Corporation.

Finally, as the court noted above, the damages may be somewhat speculative, and this weighs slightly against standing. But the court is not confident at this stage that Investors Corporation will not be able to employ economic models to assess how the price of EPDM affected the price of downstream products. As the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has recognized, "Complex antitrust cases . . . invariably involve complicated questions of causation and damages." Forsyth v. Humana, Inc., 114 F.3d 1467, 1478 (9th Cir. 1997). This case will likely prove to be no exception, but that is not reason enough to dismiss for lack of standing.

<sup>1</sup> Of course, the court's concerns in Crouch were partially based on the lack of express statutory indirect purchaser standing in North Carolina or any definitive ruling by the North Carolina Supreme Court on indirect purchaser standing. [Id. \[WL\] at \* 10-12, 2004 NCBC 7, PP 46-50](#). This is not the case in Vermont. See 9 V.S.A. § 2465\(b\); Elkins, 174 Vt. at 337-38 (holding that § 2465\(b\) was mere clarification and Vermont consumer fraud law [\[\*8\]](#) has always allowed indirect purchaser suits).

Considering this analysis, the court holds that Investors Corporation has standing to bring this antitrust and consumer fraud action. At the same time, however, the court does not wish to enunciate a bright-line rule regarding antitrust standing. As the Supreme Court of the United States noted in Associated General Contractors, standing determinations must ultimately rest on case-by-case analyses. 459 U.S. at 536-37 (1983). The court does not wish to suggest that in all cases where a product affected [*11] by anti-competitive behavior is a component of a finished product, antitrust standing exists for the consumer of the finished product. There may well be cases where products form such an minuscule portion of the finished product that antitrust standing is lacking. Indeed, in an abstract and theoretical way, the financial services in Fucile were part of the consumer goods at issue in that these goods could not have ultimately fallen into the hands of all paying consumers without the transactional means that were affected by price fixing. But even if the court were to consider such transactional means to be a part of the consumer goods as EPDM is to finished rubber products, they form an entirely less significant portion of the consumer goods. Transactional means of acquiring goods, therefore, cannot provide grounds for standing to sue the entities that provided them.

The defendants also argue that Investors Corporation lacks standing to bring an unjust enrichment claim because Investors Corporation and members of the putative class did not directly confer any benefit to the defendants. Vermont law does not require that the enrichment be directly conferred from one party to another in [*12] order for the latter party to have a colorable claim for unjust enrichment. "Under a quasi-contract theory of unjust enrichment, the law implies a promise to pay when a party receives a benefit and retention of the benefit would be inequitable." Brookside Memorials, Inc. v. Barre City, 167 Vt. 558, 559, 702 A.2d 47 (1997) (mem.).

As with the antitrust and consumer fraud claims, the link between purchases by Investors Corporation and the putative class and benefits to the defendants may be tenuous, but it is still properly alleged in the complaint. Moreover, because of the alleged antitrust and consumer fraud activities, it would be inequitable for the defendants to retain these benefits. Investors Corporation has therefore stated a valid unjust enrichment claim. The fact that Investors Corporation and the putative class did not deal directly with the defendants is not relevant, as long as the elements for unjust enrichment are pleaded. See In re K-Dur Antitrust Litig., 338 F. Supp. 2d 517, 544-45 (D.N.J. 2004); In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litig., 105 F. Supp. 2d 618, 670-71 (E.D. Mich. 2000).

Finally, the defendants argue in the alternative that the court should stay this action pending resolution [*13] of the federal direct purchaser action, contending that the Vermont Consumer Fraud Act's instruction that courts "take all necessary steps to avoid duplicate liability" suggests that a stay is appropriate. Antitrust law in the United States has an inherent problem of duplicate liability. Federal courts do not allow antitrust defendants to use a pass-on defense to show that the damages from anticompetitive behavior were ultimately absorbed by downstream purchasers. See Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 724-26, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1977). At the same time (and as a result of the no pass-on defense rule), federal courts also do not allow antitrust suits by indirect purchasers. See id. at 730-35. Therefore, defendants in federal court are liable for all damages, even if a plaintiff was able to relay the costs of anticompetitive activities to downstream consumers. Most states, including Vermont, however, have passed "Illinois Brick Repealer" laws, allowing indirect purchasers to recover for injuries related to antitrust violations. Donald I. Baker, Federalism and Futility: Hitting the Potholes on the Illinois Brick Road, 17-Fall Antitrust 14, 14 (2002). Because most state indirect purchaser antitrust [*14] actions stem from federal direct purchaser actions, see Ronald W. Davis, Indirect Purchaser Litigation: ARC America's Chickens Come Home to Roost on the Illinois Brick Wall, 65 Antitrust L.J. 375, 376 (1997), damages will inevitably be assessed twice against an antitrust defendant: once by the direct purchasers for all damages, even those passed along down the distribution chain, and then again by the indirect purchasers for whatever damages were actually passed along the distribution chain. Id. at 397-98; Baker, supra, at 16-17; see also *Crouch v. Crompton Corp., Nos. 02 CVS 4375, 03 CVS 2514, 2004 WL 2414027, *15-17, 2004 NCBC 7, PP 19160-65 (N.C. Super. Ct. 2004)* (discussing North Carolina cases triggered by events on federal level).

At first glance, the provision cited by the defendants would seem to combat this double recovery problem. But the very allowance of indirect purchaser antitrust suits gives rise to duplicate liability in the sense described above. Even if the court were to stay this action and await final resolution of the federal action, Investors Corporation and the putative class would still have a right to recover for injuries passed along to them from the direct [*15] purchasers under Vermont's statutory scheme.

A more reasonable interpretation of the "all necessary steps" provision is that the legislature intended consolidation of cases within Vermont to avoid overlapping damages to various classes. Indeed, the "steps" that the legislature identified included "transfer or consolidation of all related actions." 9 V.S.A. § 2465\(b\). Such steps would not address the duplicate liability that occurs with both federal direct purchaser and state indirect purchaser suits.

The court also notes that it could find no other state Illinois Brick repealer laws requiring stays in a case such as the instant action. Several state statutes include similar language, see, e.g., 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/7-2 ("[I]n any case in which claims are asserted against a defendant by both direct and indirect purchasers, the court shall take all steps necessary to avoid duplicate liability for the same injury including transfer and consolidation of all actions."); Minn. Stat. § 325D.57 ("In any subsequent action arising from the same conduct, the court may take any steps necessary to avoid duplicative recovery against a defendant"); N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340\(6\) ("In any action in [*16] which claims are asserted against a defendant by both direct and indirect purchasers, the court shall take all necessary steps to avoid duplicate liability including but not limited to the transfer and consolidation of all related actions."); S.D. Codified Laws § 37-1-33 ("In any subsequent action arising from the same conduct, the court may take any steps necessary to avoid duplicative recovery against a defendant"), but state courts have not defined these provisions to require stays in circumstances like those in this case.

The court could find only one statute that expressly warrants stays pending resolution of out-of-state direct purchaser litigation, but such stays are only authorized where indirect purchasers have obtained a judgment or settlement "prior to the completion of a direct purchaser's action." Haw. Stat. Ann. § 480-13\(c\)\(7\). Hawaiian courts are required to delay disbursement of damage awards to indirect purchasers until the direct purchasers' suits are resolved, the statute of limitations has run, or "in such a manner that will minimize duplication of damages to the extent reasonable and practicable." Id. Even this statute seems to recognize that duplication of damages [*17] will occur; it simply attempts to minimize such duplication. These statutes provide little guidance, but they do not support the issuance of stay in this action.

The defendants cite Asher v. Abbott Labs., 307 A.D.2d 211, 212, 763 N.Y.S.2d 555, 556 (N.Y. App. Div. 1998), in support of a stay pending a federal action. This court's reasoning in this case, however, had nothing to do with New York's statutory mandate that courts "take all necessary steps to avoid duplicate liability" in state antitrust cases. Rather, the appellate court merely held that interests of "comity, orderly procedure, and judicial economy" required a stay pending the conclusion of the federal action, particularly where "the federal action commenced first and discovery [had] been completed." Id. at 211; 763 N.Y.S.2d at 556.

The court is similarly inclined to abide by the goals of comity, orderly procedure, and judicial economy, but the defendants have provided little argument that a stay in this case would serve these goals. Although the multidistrict action in federal court is off to a head start, its discovery may not encompass the same areas necessary in this case, especially because injury here, if any, will involve [*18] costs passed down a distribution chain. Federal direct purchaser suits do not delve into such matters. The court therefore sees no need to halt this action only to have to engage in discovery anyway after the federal action concludes.

Moreover, issuing a stay and delaying a recovery for Investors Corporation and the putative class potentially for years would be contrary to the broad remedial purpose of the Vermont Consumer Fraud Act. As the court noted above, "the [Vermont Consumer Fraud Act] is 'remedial in nature' and therefore must be construed 'liberally so as to furnish all the remedy and all the purposes intended.'" Elkins v. Microsoft Corp., 174 Vt. 328, 331, 817 A.2d 9 (2002) (quoting State v. Custom Pools, 150 Vt. 533, 536, 556 A.2d 72 (1988)). A stay would not conform with this statutory purpose.

ORDER

For the foregoing reasons, the defendants motion to dismiss and alternative motion for a stay are DENIED.

---

End of Document

Nilavar v. Mercy Health System-Western Ohio

United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Western Division

June 2, 2005, Decided; June 2, 2005, Filed

Case No. 3:99cv612

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60941 *

SUNDAR V. NILAVAR, Plaintiff, vs. MERCY HEALTH SYSTEM-WESTERN OHIO, et al., Defendants.

Prior History: Nilavar v. Mercy Health Sys., 142 F. Supp. 2d 859, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20384 \(S.D. Ohio, Dec. 18, 2000\)

Core Terms

---

geographic, patients, radiology, Defendants', unreliable, antitrust, consumers, methodology, inpatient, residing, effects, provide a service, hospital setting, diagnostic, principles, anticompetitive, reliability, threshold, markets, expert testimony, codes, exclusive contract, motion to exclude, state law claim, expert opinion, calculation, Merger, medical services, geographic area, order to obtain

Counsel: [*1] For Sundar V Nilavar, Plaintiff: Kenneth A Lazarus, Maggi Ann Lazarus, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kenneth A Lazarus & Assoc, Washington, DC USA; Lee Charles Falke, LEAD ATTORNEY, Lee C Falke & Associates, Dayton, OH USA.

For Mercy Health System-Western Ohio, doing business as Mercy Medical Center, also known as Mercy Health Partners, doing business as Mercy Medical Hospital, Catholic Healthcare, Catholic Healthcare Partners, Michael J Peterson, Jerold A Maki, Defendants: Jeffrey R Teeters, LEAD ATTORNEY.

Judges: WALTER HERBERT RICE, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: WALTER HERBERT RICE

Opinion

---

DECISION AND ENTRY OVERRULING IN PART AND SUSTAINING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT OPINIONS AND TESTIMONY OF JOHN PISARKIEWICZ, PH.D. (DOC. #141)

Plaintiff Sundar V. Nilavar, M.D. ("Plaintiff" or "Nilavar"), is a radiologist who for years was employed by Springfield Radiology, Inc. ("SRI"). Up until 1995, SRI physicians provided diagnostic radiology services to three hospitals in the Springfield and Urbana areas, in Ohio, two of which are owned by Defendant Mercy Health Systems-Western Ohio ("MHS-WO" or "Mercy"). As of 1991, SRI was comprised of eleven principals. In March of 1995, MHS-WO invited different radiologists [*2] and radiology groups to tender proposals to be its exclusive provider of such services. In December of 1995, Diagnostic Imaging Associates of Ohio, Inc. ("DIA"), a firm led by Dr. Robin Osborn ("Osborn"), was awarded the contract by MHS-WO to be its exclusive provider of radiology services, effective

January 1, 1996. As a consequence, on December 20, 1995, MHS-WO notified Plaintiff that his clinical privileges would be terminated, effective January 1, 1996.<sup>1</sup>

On November 19, 1999, Plaintiff initiated the present litigation against MHS-WO; Catholic Healthcare Partners ("CHP"), MHS-WO's parent company; Michael J. Peterson ("Peterson"), the former Regional President and Chief Executive Officer of MHS-WO; and Jerrold A. Maki ("Maki"), Mr. Peterson's successor as Regional President and CEO of MHS-WO.<sup>2</sup> Plaintiff asserted eight causes of action, to wit: (1) contract in restraint of trade, in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1; (2) tying arrangement in restraint of trade, in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act; (3) contract and tying arrangement in restraint of trade, in violation of Ohio's Valentine Act, Chapter 1331 of the Ohio Revised Code; (4) a state law claim of tortious interference with a business relationship; (5) a state law [*3] claim of breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; (6) a state law claim of civil conspiracy; (7) a state law claim of denial of right to due process; and (8) a state law claim of breach of contract.

In a decision entered on December 19, 2000, the Court dismissed the following claims: 1) Plaintiff's federal and state antitrust claims of an illegal tying agreement (Count Two and a portion of Count Three); 2) state law claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Count Five); 3) state law conspiracy claims (Count Six) as brought against Maki and Peterson, in their entirety; and 4) state law conspiracy claim (Count Six) against MHS-WO and CHP, as based on the breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, federal and state antitrust claims, and violation of 26 U.S.C. § 501\(c\)\(3\). Nilavar v. Mercy Health System-Western Ohio, 142 F. Supp.2d 859 \(S.D.Ohio 2000\).

Currently before the Court is Defendants' Motion to Exclude Expert Opinions and Testimony of John Pisarkiewicz, Ph.D. (Doc. #141). Dr. Pisarkiewicz proposes to testify as to Plaintiff's definition of the relevant product and geographic markets at issue herein, and the purported effects of the exclusive contract on those markets. For the reasons that follow, Dr. Pisarkiewicz's [*4] proposed testimony as to the geographic market is unreliable and thus must be excluded. Furthermore, Dr. Pisarkiewicz is not qualified to offer an expert opinion as to alleged anticompetitive effects of Mercy's exclusive contract with DIA. As such, for the reasons described herein, his testimony on that issue will be excluded as well.

As the Court has noted previously, this matter is governed by the rule of reason. See Nilavar, 142 F. Supp.2d at 873. As opposed to the per se analysis of alleged antitrust violations, which identifies certain practices that "are entirely void of redeeming competitive rationales," a rule of reason analysis requires a court to analyze the history of the restraint and the restraint's effect on competition. National Hockey League Players' Ass'n v. Plymouth Whalers Hockey Club, 325 F.3d 712, 718 \(6th Cir. 2003\), citing Law v. Nat'l Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 134 F.3d 1010, 1016 \(10th Cir. 1998\). Under this analysis, an antitrust plaintiff must establish that the restraint, the conduct complained of, produces significant anticompetitive effects within relevant product and geographic markets. Id., citing Tanaka v. Univ. of Southern Cal., 252 F.3d 1059, 1063 \(9th Cir. 2001\). In this case, Dr. Pisarkiewicz would testify that the product market is defined as "the physician component of diagnostic radiology services provided in a hospital setting," with a relevant product submarket of the provision of such services to hospital inpatients [*5] (Report of John Pisarkiewicz, Ph.D. ("Pisarkiewicz Report"), Doc. #98 at ¶ 16). In his report, Dr. Pisarkiewicz defined the relevant geographic market as Clark and Champaign counties (Id.). The definition of the geographic market was subsequently amended by Dr. Pisarkiewicz as consisting of 19 ZIP codes "covering most of Clark and Champaign counties" (Doc. #144, Tab A (Second Affidavit of John Pisarkiewicz, Ph.D.), at 4-5).

I. Standards Governing Motions to Exclude Expert Testimony

The admissibility of expert testimony is governed by Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, which provides:

---

<sup>1</sup> The Court previously set forth a more thorough iteration of the facts and circumstances giving rise to this litigation. Nilavar v. Mercy Health System-Western Ohio, 142 F. Supp.2d 859 \(S.D.Ohio 2000\).

<sup>2</sup> Plaintiff also set forth claims against Osborn and DIA, all of which have been dismissed. See Doc. #71.

If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise, if (1) the testimony is based upon sufficient facts or data, (2) the testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods, and (3) the witness has applied the principles and methods reliably to the facts of the case.

In Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 125 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1993), the Supreme Court "established a general gatekeeping [or screening] obligation for trial courts" to exclude from trial expert [*6] testimony that is unreliable and irrelevant. Conwood Co., L.P. v. U.S. Tobacco Co., 290 F.3d 768, 792 (6th Cir. 2002) (citations omitted). This gatekeeping function applies "when considering all expert testimony, including testimony based on technical and other specialized knowledge." Clay v. Ford Motor Co., 215 F.3d 663, 667 (6th Cir. 2000), citing Kumho Tire Co., Ltd. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 141, 119 S. Ct. 1167, 143 L. Ed. 2d 238 (1999) (emphasis in original).

The district court must determine whether the evidence "both rests on a reliable foundation and is relevant to the task at hand." Id. (citation omitted). In assessing relevance and reliability, the district court must examine "whether the expert is proposing to testify to (1) scientific knowledge that (2) will assist the trier of fact to understand or determine a fact in issue." Jahn v. Equine Servs., PSC, 233 F.3d 382, 388 (6th Cir. 2000) (citations omitted). This involves a preliminary inquiry as to whether the reasoning or methodology underlying the testimony is scientifically valid and whether that reasoning or methodology properly can be applied to the facts in issue. Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). Some of the factors that may be used in such an inquiry include: (1) whether the theory or technique has been tested and subjected to peer review and publication, (2) whether the potential rate of error is known, and (3) its general acceptance. Hardyman v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 243 F.3d 255, 260 (6th Cir. 2001). "This inquiry is a flexible one, [*7] with an overarching goal of assessing the 'scientific validity and thus the evidentiary relevance and reliability' of the principles and methodology underlying the proposed expert testimony." United States v. Langan, 263 F.3d 613, 621 (6th Cir. 2001) (citation omitted). "[A] trial judge must have considerable leeway in deciding in a particular case how to go about determining whether particular expert testimony is reliable." Kumho Tire Co., Ltd. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 152, 119 S. Ct. 1167, 143 L. Ed. 2d 238 (1999).

II. Analysis

Defendants advance four arguments in support of their motion to exclude Dr. Pisarkiewicz's testimony, to wit: first, generally, that the proposed market definition is deficient as a matter of law; second, that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's definition of the product market is unreliable; third, that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's definition of the geographic market is unreliable; and fourth that he cannot provide expert testimony on the anticompetitive effects of the exclusive contract between Mercy and DAI. Following a brief discussion of Dr. Pisarkiewicz's qualifications as an expert, each argument will be addressed in turn.

A. Dr. Pisarkiewicz's Qualifications as an Expert

Dr. Pisarkiewicz is an economist and Principal Consultant at Nathan Associates, an economic consulting firm in Arlington, VA, and is also an adjunct Professor [*8] at George Washington University, where he teaches a graduate course in Health Economics. He served at the United States Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") as Acting Director of the Office of Policy Planning and Evaluation, and also as the FTC's chief economist in its antitrust suit against the American Medical Association (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 1). His qualifications to opine as to issues of market definitions and competition are not in serious dispute.<sup>3</sup>

B. Legal Propriety of Plaintiff's Proposed Market

The relevant product market is a product or service, or the smallest group of products or services, for which a hypothetical monopolist could profitably charge more than the competitive price for a significant period of time.

---

<sup>3</sup> But see infra, describing his lack of qualifications to opine as to health management quality issues.

Repeating arguments advanced in their Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. #117), Defendants insist that Plaintiff's market definition is legally foreclosed by decisions from courts examining similar instances of exclusive provider arrangements in the context of hospitals. Specifically, they rely heavily on the Supreme Court's decision in Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 (1984), as well as upon this Court's decision in Reddy v. Good Samaritan Hosp., 137 F. Supp.2d 948 (S.D. Ohio 2001). According to Defendants, these decisions stand for the proposition that [*9] "when a physician challenges a hospital's use of an exclusive contract, the relevant market is the area in which physicians compete for jobs" (Doc. #141 at 2-3). In other words, the Defendants contend that the product market is physicians' jobs, which, geographically, is a nationwide one. As such, Defendants urge the Court to reject Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinions, in that they posit a market different from the markets defined in Jefferson Parish and Reddy.

The Court rejects this argument because it disagrees with Defendants' interpretation of Jefferson Parish and Reddy. As will be spelled out more thoroughly when the Court decides Defendants' motion for summary judgment, those decisions did not define, as a matter of law, the relevant product and geographic markets for instances in which a hospital enters into an exclusive contract with a medical services provider.

Refusing to exclude Dr. Pisarkiewicz's testimony due to alleged legal insufficiency, the Court turns to Defendants' arguments that his opinions regarding the product and geographic markets should be excluded, because he failed to employ reliable principles and methods to reach those opinions. As a means of analysis, the Court [*10] initially discusses the opinion of Dr. Pisarkiewicz concerning the relevant product market, before turning to his opinion pertaining to the relevant geographic market.

C. Relevant Product Market

As noted supra, Dr. Pisarkiewicz finds the existence of a relevant product market consisting of the physician component of diagnostic radiology services provided in a hospital setting. Defendants' chief complaint is that there is no basis for distinguishing radiology services that are performed in a hospital setting from those performed in non-hospital settings, such as stand-alone clinics or imaging centers. Defendants make this argument in a number of different ways. None is persuasive.

They first argue that this classification was derived solely in reliance on Dr. Nilavar's opinion. However, the distinction is also made by Ian Marshall Lande, M.D., Plaintiff's expert in the science and practice of radiology. Specifically, Dr. Lande, whose proposed opinion testimony has not been challenged by Defendants,<sup>4</sup> identifies three pertinent differences between radiology services provided in a hospital setting and those provided in other facilities:

Firstly, the patient populations served are very different. [*11] Those served in hospitals typically are less stable medically, less agile, frequently the very old or young, often debilitated requiring the use of stretchers, traction devices, respirators, cardiac monitors, hyper alimentation, life support systems, infusion pumps, awkward medical equipment, orderly staff, paramedical personnel (therapists etc.) and nurses to name a few. Imaging these patients outside a hospital would be medically inappropriate if not impossible. Secondly, some patients have communicable diseases or suffer from disorders that require sterile environments. Imaging these patients outside a hospital would place the patient or general public at risk. Individuals referred from critical sections such as the ICU, emergency room, recovery room, or cardiac care unit clearly must have access to hospital based services. Finally, some studies require sedation, anesthesia, or intraoperative guidance, thereby limiting these types of procedures to a hospital setting.

Doc. #99, Tab E at 2. As such, the Court is unconvinced that the fact that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinion was informed by Dr. Nilavar necessarily renders unreliable the distinction between the locations where radiology services are [*12] provided. Even ignoring Dr. Lande's opinion, Defendants are unclear as to why Dr. Pisarkiewicz's reliance on the assessment of the practice of radiology by Dr. Nilavar, who is board-certified in that specialty, would render unreliable the principles and methods Dr. Pisarkiewicz relied upon when defining the relevant product market.

---

<sup>4</sup> Defendants had filed a Motion to Exclude Expert Opinions and Testimony of Ian Marshall Lande, M.D. Designated by Plaintiff Sundar V. Nilavar (Doc. #124), but subsequently withdrew said motion. See Agreed Order Relating to Discovery Motions (Doc. #143)).

Next, Defendants argue that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's classification of radiology services is not recognized by any radiological licensure or credentialing system, that it is not referenced in any of the case law regarding exclusive radiology contracts, and that it is repudiated by Defendants' expert (Doc. #141 at 5-6). On their face, none of these claims addresses the methodology employed by Dr. Pisarkiewicz in formulating his decision. Instead, they each refer to a point of supposed authority that reaches a conclusion that is in conflict with the conclusion reached by him. However, it is well established that a court's analysis of the reliability of expert testimony is to focus on the methodology and principles used by the expert, and not on the expert's results or conclusions. Clay, 215 F.3d at 667, citing Daubert, 509 U.S. at 595. For the same reason, reference to contrary conclusions of other authority [*13] (even other expert witnesses), without a critique of a proffered expert's methodology or an account of some logical insufficiency of the expert's opinion, will not invalidate proposed expert testimony under Rule 702.<sup>5</sup>

Defendants offer no other reasons for rejecting Dr. Pisarkiewicz's testimony with respect to his definition of the relevant product market. Accordingly, the methodology employed by Dr. Pisarkiewicz in defining the product market in this case is not a basis on which to exclude his expert opinion.

D. Relevant Geographic Market

In addition to defining a relevant product market, Plaintiff also has the burden of defining a relevant geographic market. The relevant geographic market is the locale in which consumers of a product or service can turn for alternate sources of supply. The central rubric in evaluating the relevant geographic market is as follows: "[T]he area of effective competition in the known line of commerce must be charted by careful selection of the market area in which the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practicably turn for supplies." White and White, Inc. v. American Hosp. Supply Corp., 723 F.2d 495, 501 \(6th Cir. 1983\) (quoting Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 81 S. Ct. 623, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 \(1961\)). A "properly defined geographic market includes potential suppliers [*14] who can readily offer consumers a suitable alternative to the defendant's services." Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Tenet Health Care Corp., 186 F.3d 1045, 1052 \(8th Cir. 1999\).

As noted supra, Dr. Pisarkiewicz defines the geographic market as an area composed of 19 ZIP codes contained within Clark and Champaign Counties. His primary tools for opining that Defendants exercise market power in that geographic area are the Elzinga-Hogarty test and the critical loss test. Defendants counter that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinion as to Mercy's market power is unreliable, because he has manipulated those tests in order to arrive at a calculation favorable to Plaintiff's argument.

1. Elzinga-Hogarty Test

The Elzinga-Hogarty test, devised by professors of economics Kenneth G. Elzinga and Thomas F. Hogarty, analyzes patterns of consumer origin and destination to identify relevant competitors of the contracting entities. See, e.g., Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Freeman Hosp., 69 F.3d 260, 264 \(8th Cir. 1995\); United States v. Rockford Memorial Corp., 717 F. Supp. 1251, 1266 \(N.D.Ill. 1989\), aff'd, 898 F.2d 1278 \(7th Cir.\), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 920 \(1990\). The test discerns market power by analyzing the movement of goods or services in or out of a proposed geographic market. It normally does so through the use of a two-pronged inquiry, to wit: the extent to which the product migrates out from inside the market and the extent to which the product migrates in from outside the market. For [*15] antitrust purposes, a plaintiff would need to show that such in-flow and out-flow is low in order to prove that the actions of a firm with market power could have an adverse effect on competition. In the normal scenario involving the sale of a product, the two prongs of the Elzinga-Hogarty test are referred to, respectively, as LOFI (Little Out From Inside) and LIFO (Little In From Outside).

---

<sup>5</sup> With respect to the purported case law rejecting Dr. Pisarkiewicz's definition of the product market, Defendants cite cases that are of the same ilk as Jefferson Parish and Reddy. Similarly to Defendants' reliance on Jefferson Parish and Reddy, the cases simply do not stand for the proposition that the relevant product market in this case has been defined as a matter of law, and, even if it had, such an argument would not, per se, be a reason to exclude Dr. Pisarkiewicz's testimony.

Of course, in a dispute arising out of the provision of health care, such as this one, the migration of products into or out from a particular geographic market is not implicated. Rather, the operative analysis in the health care setting is to determine what percentage of patients who reside within the geographic market leave that market to obtain medical services (out-migration of patients) and what percentage of patients who reside outside the geographic market travel to the market to obtain medical services (in-migration of patients). LOFI and LIFO scores are expressed in percentages — i.e., the sales of sellers located in the particular geographic area to customers in that same area divided by the total sales of these firms to all destinations, and the sales of firms in the producing area to [*16] customers located in that area divided by the total purchases these customers make from all sellers wherever located. Kenneth G. Elzinga and Thomas F. Hogarty, The Problem of Geographic Market Delineation Revisited: The Case of Coal, 23 The Antitrust Bulletin 1, 2 (1978). Therefore, to show that Mercy has market power, Plaintiff herein would need to show that few residents of his proposed geographic market leave the area to obtain hospital-based radiological services (low in-migration of Mercy's competitor's services) and that few patients residing outside of his proposed geographic market come to the area to obtain hospital-based radiological services (low out-migration of Mercy's services). Low percentages of patients inside the proposed geographic market migrating outside that market or low percentages of those residing outside migrating inside it would demonstrate the existence of a cohesive geographic market, which would cause an antitrust defendant's alleged anticompetitive conduct to have a greater impact upon that market.

The use of the Elzinga-Hogarty test proves (or disproves) an antitrust litigant's formulation of a relevant geographic market by establishing a minimum threshold [*17] percentage that must be met by the levels of in-migration and out-migration, as expressed in the ratios described above, in order to demonstrate the existence of a geographic market. Professors Elzinga and Hogarty wrote that the appropriate threshold for identifying a distinct geographic market is 90% of the consumers residing in a particular geographic area obtaining the relevant product within that area and 90% of those obtaining the product in that area residing therein. See id. (eschewing their initial formulation in a prior article of a 75% threshold as a "weak" result). In other words, a geographic market is properly defined when 10% or less of consumers in the area leave that area to obtain the relevant product and when 10% or less of consumers who obtain the relevant product within the geographic area come from outside the area. Courts which have employed the Elzinga-Hogarty test in antitrust cases agree that a 10% threshold is needed for a strong result. See, e.g., Gordon v. Lewiston Hosp., 272 F. Supp.2d 393, 426 (M.D.Pa. 2003); California v. Sutter Health System, 130 F. Supp.2d 1109, 1121 (N.D.Cal. 2001); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Freeman Hosp., 911 F. Supp. 1213, 1218 (W.D.Mo.) (recognizing Professors Elzinga's and Hogarty's express abandonment of a 25% threshold in favor of a 10% threshold), aff'd, 69 F.3d 260 (8th Cir. 1995).

In Dr. Pisarkiewicz's Report, he proposed a relevant geographic market of Clark and [*18] Champaign Counties, which includes Mercy Medical Center and Community Hospital in Springfield, Ohio (Clark County) and Mercy Memorial Hospital in Urbana, Ohio (Champaign County). The Elzinga-Hogarty percentages for that formulation of the geographic market were an in-migration ratio of 4.8% and an out-migration ratio of 25.0%. Even though Elzinga and Hogarty expressly characterized 25% as a weak result, Dr. Pisarkiewicz described it as "a good result" (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 30). Nonetheless, in the Report, he suggested that the results could be strengthened by utilizing individual ZIP codes rather than county borders (Id. at ¶ 33).

Contemporaneous with his deposition in this matter on July 22, 2003, Dr. Pisarkiewicz supplemented the Report with further analysis. As he predicted in his Report, the use of ZIP codes yielded stronger results than county boundaries. According to the Report, the results were strengthened by removing from consideration ZIP codes in the southwest corner of Clark County and from the northeast corner of Champaign County. Presumably, this is so, because individuals in those areas, which are closer to Dayton and Columbus, respectively, are likely to travel to [*19] hospitals in those larger markets instead of one of the three hospitals involved herein. This caused the outflow percentage to drop to 16%, while the inflow percentage increased to 11% (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 33). As Defendants note, this was still shy, on both accounts, of the 10% cut-off for a strong result under the Elzinga-Hogarty test. Accordingly, toward the conclusion of Dr. Pisarkiewicz's deposition, he expressed an intention to refine further the analysis in order to improve the results with respect to that test.

On September 12, 2003, Plaintiff submitted the Affidavit of John Pisarkiewicz, Ph.D., dated August 5, 2003 (Doc. #125, Ex. Q ("Pisarkiewicz Affidavit")). Therein, Dr. Pisarkiewicz reports that after further refinement of his analysis, the average of the LOFI and LIFO scores is 91.3% - a level that, according to Dr. Pisarkiewicz, "clearly meets the [Elzinga-Hogarty] guidelines" (Id. at ¶ 3(m)).

Defendants' first critique of Dr. Pisarkiewicz's methodology is based not on any refinement made to his original calculations, but to his overall practice of "appl[ying] hospital-wide inpatient data even though his client complains of a restraint of trade in diagnostic radiology [*201] procedures" (Doc. #141 at 7) (emphasis in original). In an affidavit of Dr. Pisarkiewicz filed subsequent to Defendants' motion to exclude his opinions (Doc. #144, Tab A ("Second Affidavit of John Pisarkiewicz")), he explains that this is a distinction without a difference, "because virtually every inpatient has some sort of radiology procedure" (Id. at ¶ 14). As Plaintiff notes, such hospital-wide inpatient data merely serves as a proxy for physician diagnostic radiology services (Doc. #144 at 9). Defendants quibble with this, yet the Court is unwilling to make a factual determination at this point as to whether Plaintiff's proxy argument is correct.

Regardless, the lion's share of Defendants' complaint with Dr. Pisarkiewicz's methodology relates to the refinements made subsequent to his original Report. In each instance, Defendants allege that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's refinement was actually a result-oriented manipulation intended to produce a LOFI/LIFO calculation that would be favorable to Plaintiff's claimed geographic market. Specifically, the adjustments at issue are the following: First, Dr. Pisarkiewicz excluded various specialty and out of state hospitals from his analysis.<sup>6</sup> Second [*211], he excluded patients who required a procedure for which more than 90% of patients left the market. Third, he excluded patients whose records did not report a code indicating what sort of procedure they obtained. Fourth, he excluded patients who received obstetrics and newborn care.

The Court is most troubled by the second exclusion — i.e., the exclusion of patients who required a procedure for which more than 90% of patients left the market. Dr. Pisarkiewicz explains that this exclusion was necessary in order to ignore procedures that are "generally not available or not available in sufficient quantity or quality at the three hospitals in the relevant market" (Pisarkiewicz Second Affidavit at ¶ 16). According to him, "[t]he whole point of these adjustments is to focus on the type of patients who would seek the types of service available at the three hospitals [in the proposed geographic area]. And it is the market for the radiology services available to these types of patients that was adversely affected by the actions of the defendants" (Id. at ¶ 18). In his opposition memorandum, Plaintiff echoes this explanation: "[T]he idea was to ensure that the LIFO/LOFI figures were not unfairly [*22] distorted through the inclusion of irrelevant data and to focus on the types of patients who seek the services available at the three hospitals within Clark and Champaign Counties. It is the [availability of] radiology services ... to these types of patients that was adversely affected by the actions of the Defendants" (Doc. #144 at 10).

First, this explanation is incorrect as a matter of law. The Sixth Circuit, in defining a geographic market, has indicated that, although there may be some cross-over of product at the edge of a market, "when the evidence indicates that a large proportion of consumers within the proposed area in fact turn to alternative sources of supply outside the proposed area, the market boundaries posited by the plaintiff must be rejected." Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1017 (6th Cir. 1999), citing Bathke v. Casey's Gen. Stores, Inc., 64 F.3d 340, 346 (8th Cir. 1995). This rationale was applied in the medical services context in Sutter, supra, to which Plaintiff claims fidelity in his application of the Elzinga-Hogarty test. In that case, which involved the merger of two hospitals, the court explained that

---

<sup>6</sup>These hospitals include Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center, Cleveland Clinic Foundation, James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute, Children's Hospital Columbus, and The Children's Medical Center of Dayton, Dearborn County, Gateway Rehab, Hillside Rehabilitation, Margaret Mary, Reid, Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital, St. Elizabeth, St. Lukes East and West, Todd Children's Hospital, "and other out of state hospitals" (Doc. #125 Ex. Q, Table 1).

[w]here a hospital outside of the proposed geographic market draws patients from the same region from which the merging hospitals draw their patients, the hospital located outside of the test [*23] market is considered a practical alternative to which patients residing in the area of overlap can turn for acute inpatient services.

California v. Sutter Health System, 84 F. Supp.2d at 1073. See also, Freeman Hosp., 911 F. Supp. at 1220 ("If the service area residents currently use other hospitals, then those hospitals are considered alternatives to the [hospitals within the proposed geographic market];" therefore, the geographic market must include those hospitals.). By Dr. Pisarkiewicz's own admission, there are a number of procedures for which a highly substantial percentage of patients (90% or more) leave the proposed geographic market. Accordingly, by ignoring these statistics, Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinion is unreliable, not merely in the methodological sense with which economists are concerned, but in a legal sense, as well.

Second, and possibly more important for present purposes, Dr. Pisarkiewicz's exclusion of services, the inclusion of which would cause Plaintiff's proposed geographic market to score worse on the Elzinga-Hogarty test, is a blatant contradiction of his proposed product market, and possibly an effort to manipulate that test. As noted supra, Plaintiff's proposed product market is the physician component of diagnostic radiology services provided in a [*24] hospital setting (Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Doc. #126 at 41); Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 16). This formulation did not limit the definition to certain types of diagnostic radiology services provided in a hospital setting, nor did it limit the definition to such services provided in certain circumstances. In fact, as noted supra, according to Dr. Pisarkiewicz, the provision of hospital-wide services can be used as a proxy for the provision of radiology services. Yet, in an effort to justify the exclusion of the above data, Dr. Pisarkiewicz claims that "[t]he relevant product market is limited to the products and services available at the 3 hospitals" (Pisarkiewicz Affidavit at ¶ 3(j)). If this statement is to be given weight, it constitutes a replacement of the originally-stated product market with an utterly self-serving product market, which Plaintiff seemingly would define as the market for services provided by the three hospitals located in Clark and Champaign Counties. First, this results-oriented mode of economic analysis is not acceptable. The history of Dr. Pisarkiewicz's analysis shows a concerted effort, spanning his expert [*25] witness report, his deposition and his two supplemental affidavits to tinker with the data such that the LOFI/LIFO scores would meet the 10% threshold. Obviously, Dr. Pisarkiewicz was successful in meeting the threshold, but only by way of contorting the market definitions into something lacking any basis in economics or antitrust law. As a consequence, he employed unreliable principles and methods. See Fed. R. Evid. 702(2).

Moreover, Dr. Pisarkiewicz himself admits that at least some of the patients who left the area for services (who were excluded from his analysis) did so not because the service they required was not available at one of the three hospitals in the area, but because they chose a hospital with services that they perceived to be better: "It is certainly the case that I excluded from consideration inpatients from the market who ... sought certain [procedures] generally not available or not available in sufficient quantity or quality at the three hospitals in the relevant market" (Pisarkiewicz Second Affidavit at ¶ 16) (emphasis added).<sup>7</sup> A consumer's choice to purchase a product that he or she believes to be of superior quality is emblematic of the presence of competition. The only possible [*26] basis for excluding transactions in which consumers freely exercised such choice would be to conceal the presence of actual competition. In asserting the inelasticity of patient demand for radiology services, Dr. Pisarkiewicz, in his original Report, explained that "the question of geographic boundaries is usually answered by examining where patients actually obtain hospital services" (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 28). Yet, his final calculations intentionally exclude the reality of where many patients in Clark and Champaign Counties obtain their hospital radiology services.

---

<sup>7</sup> With respect to the notion of "sufficient quantity," in his original Report, Dr. Pisarkiewicz explained that there are types of "specialized medical services ... for which patients are likely to search more widely and place greater trust in a hospital [that] performs these specialized procedures more frequently than [Mercy Medical Center, Mercy Memorial Hospital or Community Hospital]" (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 34). Accordingly, to say that a service is not available in sufficient quantity is actually another way of saying that it is perceived to be not available in sufficient quality.

The first and fourth exclusions described, supra, trigger essentially the same concerns because they operate to exclude data in a manner inconsistent with Plaintiff's proffered product market definition. Specifically, they exclude from consideration patients who traveled out of the area to visit specialty and or out of state hospitals (the first exclusion) as well as patients requiring obstetrics and newborn care services (the fourth exclusion). Like the 90% exclusion, Dr. Pisarkiewicz excluded these services because of their supposed unavailability in the proposed geographic market. Specifically, Dr. Pisarkiewicz admitted [*27] that obstetrics care is, in fact, available in the proposed geographic market (at Community Hospital) but possibly not in the quality or quantity preferred by consumers. As explained supra, the fact that consumers travel elsewhere for medical services that they perceive to be better suggests the presence of competition and does not suggest a reason for excluding such services from consideration. The same criticism applies to his exclusion of so-called specialty hospitals.<sup>8</sup> Again, as Defendants note, these facilities presumably perform the same sort of radiological services as the hospitals that are not excluded from Dr. Pisarkiewicz's data set, yet there is no explanation for their exclusion (Doc. #141 at 10).

Finally, with respect to the third exception — the elimination of cases that are missing procedure codes — Dr. Pisarkiewicz assumes that these cases would possess the same rates of in-migration and out-migration as those that are not missing the codes. Although the Court offers no opinion as to the efficacy of this assumption, it does agree with Defendants that, assuming Dr. Pisarkiewicz is correct, this exclusion would raise the exact same concerns as those that exist with regard [*28] to the 90% exclusion described, supra.

In terms of Daubert and Rule 702(2), Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinion is unreliable, given that it rests on unreliable principles and methods. Although the Court can assume, arguendo, that a standard application of the Elzinga-Hogarty test would be perfectly admissible under Daubert, the same cannot be said of Dr. Pisarkiewicz's application of that test to the facts of this case. To be sure, it appears that the Elzinga-Hogarty test has been tested and subjected to review, not only by other economists, but by the creators of the test themselves, who revisited its mechanics in order to address purported errors and to ensure what they believed to be more accurate results. See Kenneth G. Elzinga and Thomas F. Hogarty, The Problem of Geographic Market Delineation Revisited: The Case of Coal, 23 The Antitrust Bulletin 1 (1978) (responding to the test's critics and tweaking it accordingly). Further, based on the test's widespread use by courts which have adjudicated antitrust claims, see supra, it appears to be accepted generally in the economic and legal communities.

Yet, for the reasons described herein, Dr. Pisarkiewicz did not employ the Elzinga-Hogarty test in the [*29] manner in which it was intended. As the Supreme Court noted in a decision examining Daubert, although it is true that Daubert directs district courts to evaluate a proffered expert's methodology and not his conclusion, "nothing in either Daubert or the Federal Rules of Evidence requires a district court to admit opinion evidence that is connected to existing data only by the ipse dixit of the expert." General Electric Co. v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136, 146, 118 S. Ct. 512, 139 L. Ed. 2d 508 (1997). Here, Dr. Pisarkiewicz's conclusion that Plaintiff's proposed market satisfies the requirements of the Elzinga-Hogarty test is, at best, based on his ipse dixit that much data, deemed by this Court to be relevant, based upon the above discussions, should have been excluded from analysis. At worst, Dr. Pisarkiewicz's conclusion is based on a manipulation of the test employed in order to reach a preferred result. As the Court noted above, neither law nor logic compelled the adjustments that facilitated the conclusion reached by Dr. Pisarkiewicz with respect to the Elzinga-Hogarty test. At best, he employed unreliable methods and principles.

Based upon the foregoing, the Court concludes that the opinion of Dr. Pisarkiewicz with respect to Plaintiff's proposed geographic market definitions, [*30] insofar as they are based on an unreliable application of the Elzinga-Hogarty test, must be excluded.

2. Critical Loss Test

Dr. Pisarkiewicz also attempts to justify his exclusions using the critical loss test. Critical loss analysis inquires as to whether the purported monopolist would be able to raise prices without causing the "critical loss" of enough consumers to make the increase in prices unprofitable. Tenet, 186 F.3d at 1053. This test is employed by the FTC in its Horizontal Merger Guidelines, which are used by the FTC to ascertain a relevant geographic market in exercising its prosecutorial discretion to challenge a merger. See Department of Justice, Federal Trade Commission, Antitrust Division, 1992 Horizontal Merger Guidelines, 57 Fed. Reg. 41552 § 1.21. The Merger Guidelines define a geographic market "to be a region such that a hypothetical monopolist ... could profitably impose at least a 'small but significant and nontransitory' increase in price ["SNIP"]..." Id. The standard SNIP size recommended by the Merger Guidelines is a 5% increase. Sutter, 84 F. Supp.2d at 1077. Accordingly, the critical loss test addresses the question of whether the geographic market has been properly defined by analyzing the number of consumers that [*31] must leave the market, if faced with an anticompetitive price increase, before a hypothetical monopolist would abandon its attempts to impose a SNIP. Id. at 1076 (citations omitted). Herein, the critical loss test would ask how many patients would have to leave the market in order to defeat a price increase of 5%, and also whether those consumers actually would leave the market. Id. at 1077.

<sup>8</sup> Defendants suggest that some of the hospitals in Dr. Pisarkiewicz's list are not actually specialty facilities. For example, they suggest that the Cleveland Clinic "is not a specialty hospital at all but rather a tertiary acute care hospital" (Doc. #141 at 10).

Defendants' main complaint regarding Dr. Pisarkiewicz's utilization of the critical loss test is that he relied upon "gross charges" for inpatient and outpatient radiological services in calculating the critical loss figure, instead of the actual, net revenue obtained by the hospitals from such services (Doc. #141 at 13). Defendants also point out the "gross charges" for such radiological services are 30 to 40% higher than the actual revenue received. Dr. Pisarkiewicz defends the use of the gross charges in that they "become bargaining positions for negotiations with managed care plans," presumably making them instructive as to actual revenues (Pisarkiewicz Second Affidavit at ¶ 26). In any case, Dr. Pisarkiewicz also indicates that "these [were] the only data the defendant saw fit to turn over..." (Id.). For this reason, [*32] Plaintiff believes that Defendants' complaint "is grossly unfair" (Doc. #144 at 13).

Regardless of whether the data used by Dr. Pisarkiewicz to gauge supposed revenues was the correct set of data, and regardless of the fairness of Defendants' conduct, the Court believes that the same manipulations of the patient data that proved fatal to Dr. Pisarkiewicz's Elzinga-Hogarty analysis also prove fatal to his critical loss analysis. As suggested supra, an important factor of critical loss analysis is the determination of whether patients actually would leave the proposed market in the event of a SNIP. This is referred to as diversion analysis. See Sutter, 84 F. Supp.2d at 1078-81. As Defendants note, in Sutter, the court rejected the plaintiff's diversion analysis, pointing to, inter alia, the plaintiff's own Elzinga-Hogarty results, which indicated that one out of seven patients — approximately 14% - residing in the proposed market left in order to obtain inpatient services, even in the absence of a 5% price increase. Id. at 1080. Herein, before employing the dubious exclusions described supra, Dr. Pisarkiewicz found that 25% of residents within the proposed geographic market were leaving in order to obtain radiology services incident [*33] to hospital care. Given that 25% of the users of the relevant product (the physician component of radiology services in a hospital setting) are already leaving the proposed geographic market to obtain such services, it is inescapable that patients would leave that market in the event of a SNIP. Consequently, regardless of whether these patients left the area in order to obtain services that were not available in Clark or Champaign County, or whether they left in order to obtain services that were or were deemed superior to those available in those counties, it defies logic to suggest that these same patients would not leave in the event of an anticompetitive price increase. Dr. Pisarkiewicz insists that the fact that patients travel to locations such as Dayton or Columbus in order to obtain inpatient radiology services provided in connection with hospital services available in those places, and not available in the proposed geographic market, does not detract from his application of the test (Pisarkiewicz Second Affidavit at ¶ 19). Yet, as explained supra, this contradicts Plaintiff's stated formulation of the product market, which is diagnostic radiology services provided in a hospital [*34] setting. This definition does not distinguish radiology services based on the type of underlying care provided (other than whether it is being provided on an inpatient or outpatient basis). Implying that Plaintiff's market definition does make such a distinction is merely a results-oriented attempt to influence the geographic market analysis in Plaintiff's favor.

Defendants make other arguments incident to their critical loss analysis, regarding such issues as service area overlap and calculation of driving times between markets. The Court does not find it necessary to address those issues, since the flaws in Dr. Pisarkiewicz's diversion analysis are sufficient to defeat the reliability of his opinion regarding the critical loss test.

As it did with respect to the Elzinga-Hogarty test, the Court assumes, without deciding, that a standard application of the critical loss test would satisfy the requirements set forth in Daubert and Rule 702. Yet, because the Court can find no justifiable explanation for ignoring key data for the critical loss test, it concludes that Dr. Pisarkiewicz's principles and methods in applying that test are unreliable; therefore, the resultant, unreliable opinion must [*35] be excluded pursuant to Daubert and Rule 702.

E. Anticompetitive Effects

Lastly, Defendants dispute Dr. Pisarkiewicz's qualifications to opine as to the alleged anticompetitive effects of Mercy's contract with DIA. Specifically, Dr. Pisarkiewicz opines that this contract will cause such effects, because it will result in problems with record keeping and transcription services for physicians' notes at Mercy Hospitals, the reduction of patients' choice of physicians, and the excessive use of locum tenens physicians.<sup>9</sup>

Both Dr. Pisarkiewicz and Plaintiff's counsel have admitted in a number of different instances that Dr. Pisarkiewicz is offered as an expert in the area of economics, and not health care management. See, e.g., Pisarkiewicz Second Affidavit at ¶ 39 (expressing that he is unclear as to what role Dr. Osborn or DIA played with respect to the transcription problems — either in creating them or in being responsible for them); Pisarkiewicz Depo. at 187-88 (Plaintiff's counsel objecting to questions posed by Defendants' counsel regarding quality of transcription services because "[that subject is] completely outside the realm of his expertise"); Id. at 335-36 (explaining that his background [*36] does not include econometric analyses in health care using outcome quality variables); Id. at 314 (Plaintiff's counsel explaining that Dr. Pisarkiewicz "claims to be an expert in economics, not health management"). Dr. Pisarkiewicz's own description of his credentials describes his background in medical antitrust cases, with respect to market definitions and impact on competition, but is silent as to anything in his background that would qualify him as an expert in health care quality issues. See Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 1.

In view of the fact that neither Plaintiff nor Dr. Pisarkiewicz believes that his expertise extends to the health management quality concerns on which he purports to offer opinions, the Court concludes that Dr. Pisarkiewicz is not qualified to offer an expert opinion as to such.

III. Conclusion

Defendants' motion to exclude Dr. Pisarkiewicz's testimony is overruled insofar as it challenges his opinion regarding the definition of the relevant product market as the physician component of diagnostic radiology services provided in a hospital setting, with a relevant product submarket of the provision of such services to hospital inpatients. However, it is sustained, insofar as it [*37] seeks to exclude Dr. Pisarkiewicz's opinion regarding the relevant geographic market and the alleged anticompetitive effects of Mercy's exclusive contract with DIA, which are identified above.

June 2, 2005

/s/ Walter Herbert Rice

WALTER HERBERT RICE, JUDGE

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

---

End of Document

---

<sup>9</sup> Locum tenens physicians are essentially temporary physicians who, according to Dr. Pisarkiewicz, are "paid little and are unfamiliar with the staff, the equipment and the hospital procedures" and are paid less than regular physicians (Pisarkiewicz Report at ¶ 52).

Ramallo Bros. Printing, Inc. v. El Dia, Inc.

United States District Court for the District of Puerto Rico

June 3, 2005, Decided

Civil No. 02-2400 (JAF)

Reporter

392 F. Supp. 2d 118 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367 **; 2005-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75,051

RAMALLO BROS. PRINTING, INC., Plaintiffs, v. EL DIA, INC.; EDITORIAL PRIMERA HORA, INC., and ADVANCED GRAPHIC PRINTING, INC., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Related proceeding at Ramallo Bros. Printing, Inc. v. El Dia, Inc., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61972 \(D.P.R., Aug. 28, 2006\)

Core Terms

---

printing, shoppers, advertising, newspaper, supplements, insertion, pricing, printers, percent, sales, Defendants', monopolization, discounts, predatory, customers, delivery, bundling, summary judgment, editorial, package, anti trust law, market share, competitor, contracts, products, alleges, monopoly power, probability, consumers, profits

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery > Methods of Discovery > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > Discovery Materials

HN1 [] Summary Judgment, Motions for Summary Judgment

A district court should grant a motion for summary judgment if the pleadings, depositions, answers to the interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

392 F. Supp. 2d 118, *118LÁ2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367, **20367

HN2 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

A factual dispute is "genuine" if it could be resolved in favor of either party, and "material" if it potentially affects the outcome of the case.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Initial Burden of Persuasion

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Ultimate Burden of Persuasion

HN3 Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

On a motion for summary judgment, the moving party carries the burden of establishing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact; however, the burden may be discharged by showing that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. The burden has two components: (1) an initial burden of production, which shifts to the nonmoving party if satisfied by the moving party; and (2) an ultimate burden of persuasion, which always remains on the moving party.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN4 Summary Judgment, Burdens of Proof

On a motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of the adverse party's pleading but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e).

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN5 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment exists to pierce the boilerplate of the pleadings and assess the proof in order to determine the need for a trial.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

**HN6** [] Regulated Practices, Monopolies & Monopolization

Summary judgment may be especially appropriate in an antitrust case because of the chill antitrust litigation can have on legitimate price competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

**HN7** [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Antitrust claims by competitors aggrieved by their rivals' low prices require critical examination because those low prices benefit consumers and consumer welfare is the primary concern of the antitrust laws. Competition is a ruthless process. A firm that reduces cost and expands sales injures rivals. These injuries to rivals are byproducts of vigorous competition, and the antitrust laws are not balm for rivals' wounds. Thus, a plaintiff faces a stiff burden in any litigation under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

**HN8** [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Courts must be on guard against efforts of plaintiffs to use the antitrust laws to insulate themselves from the impact of competition.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

**HN9** [] Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment is particularly appropriate where the non-moving party does not rely on disputed facts but on unreasonable inferences. Creditable inferences must rest on solid, fact-specific footings.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Communications > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

**HN10** [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

392 F. Supp. 2d 118, *118L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367, **20367

To demonstrate attempted monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, a plaintiff must generally show: (1) the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

**HN11** [ ] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

A dangerous probability of success in the relevant market requires evidence that the defendant had sufficient market power to have been reasonably able to create a monopoly. Thus, a colorable claim for attempted monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, must include evidence of the market power of the defendants and, therefore, must, like claims under § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, include facts defining the relevant market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

**HN12** [ ] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

Section 2 of the Sherman Act forbids any monopoly, attempt to monopolize, or combination or conspiracy to monopolize. 15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

**HN13** [ ] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Any analysis of a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power ordinarily includes an analysis of a defendant's share of a properly defined relevant market. Proof of a defendant's high market share not an inflexible requirement, but courts should give weight to the traditional requirement and require exceptional circumstances before straying from it.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

**HN14** [ ] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

A market share of less than 50 percent does not support a finding of dangerous probability of achieving a monopoly.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Market Definition > Relevant Market > Geographic Market Definition

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN15 [blue icon] Sherman Act, Claims

As part of the dangerous probability analysis, the plaintiff has the burden to demonstrate a properly-defined relevant product and geographic market. Failure to prove the relevant market dooms a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Market Definition > Relevant Market > Geographic Market Definition

HN16 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

A plaintiff has the burden to prove each element of an attempted monopolization claim, or summary judgment is appropriate.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN17 [blue icon] Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment is warranted by any fatal factual deficiency in the non-movant's case.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Covenants not to Compete > General Overview

HN18 [blue icon] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

"Package" sales are widespread and ordinarily lawful. Buyers often find package sales attractive, and a seller's decision to offer such packages can merely be an attempt to compete effectively--conduct that is entirely consistent with the Sherman Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN19 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

It is undisputed that competition is enhanced when a firm is able to offer various marketing options, including bundling of support and maintenance service with the sale of equipment. Nor do such actions run afoul of the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN20 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

Tying is not automatically unlawful under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN21 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

To prove a per-se tying violation, a plaintiff must prove: (1) the tying and tied goods are two separate products; (2) the defendant affords consumers no choice but to purchase the tied product from it as a condition of obtaining the tying product; (3) the defendant has sufficient market power in the tying product market to distort consumers' choices with respect to the tied product; and (4) the tying arrangement forecloses a substantial volume of commerce.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN22 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

To establish coercion, a plaintiff must demonstrate that a defendant's pricing structure forces the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all or might have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms. The element of coercion, however, cannot be satisfied by mere discounts or other forms of package sales unless the combined purchase is the only economically-viable alternative.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN23 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

Products are not tied unless a package is the only viable economic option and a separate purchase is prohibitively expensive.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

392 F. Supp. 2d 118, *118LÁ2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367, **20367

HN24 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

A tying claim must fail absent any proof of anti-competitive effects in the market for the tied product.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN25 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

Two products exist for tying purposes only where there is substantial consumer demand for separate products. The answer to the question whether one or two products are involved turns not on the functional relation between them but rather on the character of the demand for the two items.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN26 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

The absence of a coerced purchase defeats any possibility of an unlawful tying arrangement.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN27 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

The essential characteristic of an invalid tying arrangement lies in the seller's exploitation of its control over the tying product to force the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all or might have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms.

Constitutional Law > ... > Freedom of Speech > Free Press > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Freedom of Speech > Commercial Speech > General Overview

HN28 Freedom of Speech, Free Press

Would-be advertisers have no right to compel a newspaper to accept their advertisements, let alone editorial material. An advertiser's right to free speech does not give it the right to make use of a newspaper's printing presses and distribution systems without the newspaper's consent.

Constitutional Law > ... > Freedom of Speech > Free Press > General Overview

HN29 Freedom of Speech, Free Press

A newspaper's right to control editorial content extends to how editorial materials are prepared. The government is prohibited from imposing a penalty in terms of the cost in printing and composing time and material and in taking up space that could be devoted to other material the newspaper may have preferred to print.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

**HN30** [L] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

Although few cases have addressed bundled pricing as a potential antitrust violation, one requirement is clear: The challenged prices must have the effect of excluding a single-product competitor.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

**HN31** [L] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

In determining whether bundled pricing constitutes an antitrust violation, the fact that the plaintiff is profitable is highly significant. Only price cutting that threatens equally or more efficient firms is condemned under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2. The plaintiff must prove that the defendant's pricing makes it unprofitable for the plaintiff to continue to produce.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

**HN32** [L] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

An attempted monopolization plaintiff basing its claims on predatory pricing must establish two prerequisites to recovery. First, the prices complained of must be below an appropriate measure of the defendant's costs. Second, recoupment must be probable; the alleged predator must have the ability to eliminate its competition and then recover its losses through future high prices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

**HN33** [L] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Although the United States Supreme Court has not specified the appropriate measure of cost in a predatory pricing case, the generally accepted standard in the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and most other circuits is whether a seller's prices exceed its incremental (or marginal) cost: Ordinarily the measure of a predatory price is price below incremental cost, that is to say, the addition to total cost (to the firm) of producing and selling additional output would exceed the return from selling that additional output.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

**HN34** [L] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Incremental or marginal cost is difficult to measure. The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and most other circuits, therefore, rely on average variable cost (those costs that change as output changes) as an approximation of incremental cost. In the First Circuit and most others, variable cost is the normal test of predation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN35 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Because the antitrust laws seek to promote vigorous price competition resulting in low prices, courts must be mindful that low prices are a positive aspect of a competitive marketplace and are encouraged by the antitrust laws. Courts, therefore, carefully scrutinize attempted monopolization claims based on predatory pricing. The requisites for proving predatory pricing are demanding because the conditions under which it is plausible are not common and because it can easily be confused with merely low prices which benefit consumers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN36 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Claims of below-cost pricing on a small percentage of a firm's sales are insufficient to raise a triable issue of predatory pricing.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN37 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Predation claims cannot be based on occasional instances of allegedly predatory pricing because they are not likely to drive rivals from the market and to permit the predator to raise prices and profits subsequently. A predatory pricing plaintiff can prevail only by adducing evidence suggesting that a defendant's overall price structure was predatory, not that a small minority of sales were below average variable cost.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN38 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Promotional discounts by new entrants are not regarded as predatory.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN39 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Unless continued over a long period of time, in which case it is no longer promotional, promotional pricing by new entrants is no threat to competition. Under these circumstances, courts find promotional prices lawful, no matter what that price-cost relationship.

392 F. Supp. 2d 118, *118LAW2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367, **20367

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Tax Law > ... > C Corporations > Insurance Companies > Deductions

Tax Law > ... > Losses > Net Operating Losses > General Overview

HN40 [↓] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Sales below average total cost (in other words, whether a firm has a bottom-line net loss) are irrelevant to predatory pricing analysis in the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and the majority of other circuits that have adopted the average variable cost standard.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN41 [↓] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

A final requirement of an attempted monopolization claim is evidence that the defendants had a specific intent to destroy competition or build monopoly. Evidence of a mere desire to increase market share or win customers from a competitor does not suffice.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN42 [↓] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

The necessary intent to monopolize is something more than an attempt to compete vigorously.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Hiring & Price Squeezes

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN43 [↓] Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices, Predatory Hiring & Price Squeezes

Predatory hiring cases must be proved by a showing that the hiring was made with such predatory intent, i.e., to harm the competition without helping the defendant, or by showing a clear nonuse in fact.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN44 [↓] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The offense of monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, requires proof that the defendants: (1) have acquired a monopoly in the relevant market; and (2) have willfully acquired or maintained that monopoly power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN45 [+] Private Actions, Standing

A private antitrust plaintiff must show antitrust injury or injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN46 [+] Private Actions, Standing

Competitors and consumers in the market where trade is allegedly restrained are presumptively the proper plaintiffs to allege antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN47 [+] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

Courts are reluctant to confine markets for delivery of particular types of advertising to a single method, given the variety of alternatives ordinarily available.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Physicians

HN48 [+] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

Puerto Rico's antitrust laws mirror the federal antitrust statutes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN49 [+] Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

The elements of a claim for unfair trade practices under 31 P.R. Laws Ann. § 5141 (1991 & Supp. 2001) are: (1) proof of the reality of the damage suffered; (2) a causal relationship between such damage and the action or omission of another person; and (3) said act or omission is negligent or wrongful.

Torts > ... > Business Relationships > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > Business Torts > Commercial Interference > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Business Relationships > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

Torts > ... > Contracts > Intentional Interference > Elements

HN50[ Intentional Interference, Elements

To establish a claim for tortious interference with a contractual relationship, a plaintiff must show: (1) the existence of a contract; (2) that the interfering party acted with intent and knowledge of the existence of the contract; (3) that the plaintiff suffered damages; and (4) that there exists a causal link between the injury and the interfering party's actions.

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

HN51[ Commercial Interference, Contracts

When a contract that is allegedly interfered with is terminable at will, the privilege of competition has been recognized. In such a case, there is no contract right to have the relation continued but only an expectancy, which is not actionable.

Counsel: [**1] For Ramallo Brothers Printing, Inc., Plaintiff: Allan Kanner, PHV Conlee S. Whiteley, Allan Kanner and Associates, P.C., New Orleans, LA; Camilo K. Salas, Salas & Co. L.C., New Orleans, LA; John F. Nevares, John F. Nevares & Assoc. PSC, San Juan, PR; PHV Daniel E. Buras, Jr., Stewart E. Niles, Jr., New Orleans, LA; PHV Lawrence J. Centola, Niles, Salas Bourque & Fontana, L.C., New Orleans, LA.

For El Dia, Inc., Editorial Primera Hora, Inc., Advanced Graphic Printing, Inc., Defendants: PHV Bruce W. Sanford, PHV Lee H. Simowitz, PHV Mark A. Cymrot, PHV Robert D. Lystad, PHV Ronald F. Wick, PHV Andrew J. Durkovic, PHV Elizabeth A. Scully, Baker & Hostetler LLP, Washington, DC; Salvador Antonetti-Zequeira, Ricardo F. Casellas, Roberto A. Camara-Fuertes, Fiddler, Gonzalez & Rodriguez, San Juan, PR.

For Sessions, Fishman & Nathan, LLP, Interested Party: Jack M. Alltmont, Sessions, Fishman & Nathan, LLP, New Orleans, LA.

For All Distribution, Inc., Interested Party: Gerardo Pavia, Pavia & Diaz Garcia, San Juan, PR.

For El Dia, Inc., Editorial Primera Hora, Inc., Advanced Graphic Printing, Inc., Counter Claimants: PHV Bruce W. Sanford, PHV Lee H. Simowitz, PHV Mark A. Cymrot, PHV Robert D. Lystad, PHV Ronald F. Wick, PHV Andrew J. Durkovic, PHV Elizabeth A. Scully, Baker [**2] & Hostetler LLP, Washington, DC; Salvador Antonetti-Zequeira, Ricardo F. Casellas, Roberto A. Camara-Fuertes, Fiddler, Gonzalez & Rodriguez, San Juan, PR.

For Ramallo Brothers Printing, Inc., Counter Defendant: Camilo K. Salas, Salas & Co. L.C., New Orleans, LA; John F. Nevares, John F. Nevares & Assoc. PSC, San Juan, PR.

Judges: JOSE ANTONIO FUSTE, Chief U. S. District Judge.

Opinion by: JOSE ANTONIO FUSTE

Opinion

---

[*123] OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiff Ramallo Bros. Printing, Inc. ("Plaintiff") brings the present action against Defendants El Dia, Inc. ("Defendant El Dia"); Editorial Primera Hora, Inc. ("Defendant Editorial Primera Hora"); and Advanced Graphic Printing, Inc. ("Defendant AGP"); alleging violations of Sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 15 and 26 \(1997 & Supp. I 2003\); Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 and 2, \(1997 & Supp. I 2003\); and various causes of action under state law, including the antitrust laws of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, 10 P.R. LAWS ANN. §§ 258, 260 and 268 (1997 & Supp. 2001). Docket Document Nos. 1, 13, 40. Plaintiff seeks injunctive and monetary relief. Id.

Defendants [**3] move for summary judgment. Docket Document Nos. 156, 189, 213. Plaintiff opposes the motion. Docket Document Nos. 176, 196.

I.

Factual and Procedural Synopsis

We derive the facts and allegations from our February 6, 2004, opinion and order, and from the parties' pleadings and statements of material fact. Docket Document Nos. 1, 12, 13, 38, 40, 59, 156, 176, 188, 196.

Plaintiff is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Puerto Rico, with its principal place of business in Puerto Rico. It is a commercial printer whose business consists of, inter alia, the printing of inserts ("shoppers") advertising the sale of goods, which are distributed by inserting them in newspapers of general circulation in Puerto Rico, as well as by other means. Shoppers are used by major retailers, such as supermarkets, drug stores, toy stores, and furniture stores as advertising vehicles for products offered for sale. Shoppers usually range in size from four to twelve pages, and contain color pictures of individual products, together with prices and other product information.

Plaintiff is part of a group of businesses that also includes a commercial forms printer, [**4] a software integration business, a paper company, and a boat distributor, as well as a three-building industrial complex that includes leased space for commercial tenants and houses Plaintiff's printing facilities, which are located in what Plaintiff describes on its website as a "world-class manufacturing environment."

Defendant El Dia is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Puerto Rico with its principal place of business in Puerto Rico. Defendant El Dia is the owner and publisher of El Nuevo Dia, the largest newspaper in Puerto Rico based on paid circulation and revenues. The business [*124] of the newspaper includes, inter alia, the distribution of shoppers printed by Defendant El Dia, Defendant AGP, and other commercial printers, including Plaintiff. Defendant El Dia is also part of a group of companies that includes Defendant Editorial Primera Hora and Defendant AGP, as well as other related businesses.

Defendant Editorial Primera Hora is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Puerto Rico with its principal place of business in Puerto Rico. Defendant Editorial Primera Hora owns and publishes Primera Hora, a daily Puerto Rico newspaper, which [**5] is a new entrant into the daily newspaper market. Primera Hora is printed by Defendant El Dia. Defendant Editorial Primera Hora's business also includes, inter alia, the distribution of a few shoppers.

Defendant AGP is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Puerto Rico with its principal place of business in Puerto Rico. Defendant AGP is a commercial printing company that was formed by Defendant El Dia in 1997. Defendant AGP's business, like that of Plaintiff, includes, inter alia, the printing of shoppers.

A. Newspaper Advertising in Puerto Rico

El Nuevo Dia and Primera Hora are two of four daily newspapers in Puerto Rico, all of which depend primarily on advertising for their revenues. Most retail newspaper advertising takes one of two forms: (1) display advertising that appears within the body of the newspaper, commonly referred to as "run of press" or ROP advertising, and (2) shoppers and other pre-printed inserts containing various types of advertising.

One vehicle for ROP advertising in El Nuevo Dia and El Vocero, Puerto Rico's two largest newspapers, is commercial supplements, sections of the newspaper usually containing [**6] both editorial content and display advertising by multiple advertisers. El Nuevo Dia publishes approximately 190 commercial supplements annually, including supplements published to commemorate Mother's Day, Christmas, and Secretaries' Week, or based on themes such as autos, weddings, and babies. El Nuevo Dia produces and prints commercial supplements on newsprint using the newspapers' staffs and presses. According to its publisher, El Vocero follows the same practice for producing commercial supplements.

A small portion of commercial supplements, called "corporate supplements," focus on a featured business and usually celebrate that business' anniversary or some other special event. Corporate supplements constitute a negligible portion of the advertising and commercial printing business in Puerto Rico. From 1999 to 2003, El Nuevo Dia had about 5,000 commercial inserts, but only 134 corporate supplements. Corporate supplements typically contain stories about a featured company and serve as a vehicle for the newspaper to sell advertising to sponsors, usually the featured company's vendors. Like commercial supplements, corporate supplements are produced entirely in-house. [**7] El Nuevo Dia has designated Creative Minds, a former El Nuevo Dia staff unit that is now a division of AGP, as its exclusive agent for producing corporate supplements, and it will only insert corporate supplements produced by Creative Minds. Creative Minds performs all the functions needed to produce the supplement, including preparation of editorial content and artwork, sales of advertising, coordination of the printing and insertion in the newspaper. Defendants' stated reasons for the policy of using only Creative Minds to produce corporate supplements are the need to maintain editorial [*125] integrity, to ensure the content is accurate and comports with its style and content policies, and to take advantage of the cost savings.

Shoppers and corporate supplements are printed most frequently on glossy paper rather than newsprint, a process that requires the services of a commercial printer with a web press -- such as Plaintiff and Defendant AGP -- because glossy paper products cannot be printed on newspaper presses. Plaintiff complains that it printed El Nuevo Dia's corporate supplements prior to Defendant AGP's formation, but El Nuevo Dia will now only use Defendant AGP [**8] to print corporate supplements.

With four daily newspapers, three of which are separately owned, Puerto Rico has one of the most competitive newspaper markets in the United States. Only six other U.S. cities have more than two daily newspapers. Daily newspapers also compete with many other methods available for retailers to deliver their advertising messages to consumers. Plaintiff's vice-president for sales and many of the advertiser-deponents identified the media competing with daily newspapers as television, radio, magazines, direct mail, outdoor advertising, catalogues, coupons, the Internet, and the many regional newspapers in Puerto Rico. Shoppers are only one option for advertisers to deliver their message.

Those retailers that include shoppers in their advertising mix also use a variety of competing delivery channels to distribute their shoppers. While newspapers are the most common delivery means, some advertisers also use door-to-door delivery, direct mail, and free distribution in stores, malls, and other places.

B. Competition Between Plaintiff and Defendant AGP

In 1995, Plaintiff acquired a commercial printer in Puerto Rico that competed directly with [**9] Plaintiff in the printing of shoppers, effectively leaving Plaintiff as the only high-volume printer of shoppers located in Puerto Rico. According to Plaintiff's economics expert, Dr. Franklin M. Fisher, Plaintiff printed in excess of 80 percent of the shoppers produced in Puerto Rico before Defendant AGP entered the market.

In the early 1990s, El Dia was a significant purchaser of commercial printing services for the printing of glossy magazines and other sections of its newspaper. El Dia also printed some advertising material, including shoppers, on newsprint using the same presses it used to print the newspaper, but El Dia did not have the presses necessary to print glossy paper products. El Dia considered entering the printing business as early as 1992 because it witnessed an exodus of printing business to off-island printers. Believing that upward of 40 percent of commercial printing for the Puerto Rican market was being performed offshore, El Dia decided to create AGP in 1997 to capture the offshore business and provide more competition within Puerto Rico.

Since Defendant AGP's formation, customers seeking lower prices and better service have moved regularly among printers. [**10] It has not been uncommon for advertisers to move their shopper business from Defendant AGP to Plaintiff, from Plaintiff to Defendant AGP, or back and forth on multiple occasions or to printers in other locations. A number of shoppers distributed in Puerto Rico are printed by printers located in the mainland United States and in the Dominican Republic. From 1999 to 2003, approximately 20 percent of [*126] the shoppers inserted into El Nuevo Dia were printed by companies located outside Puerto Rico.

Within two years of its formation, Defendant AGP was printing 31 percent of the shoppers inserted in El Nuevo Dia. Its percentage rose to 36 percent in 2000 but has remained largely unchanged thereafter.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff's share of inserts in El Nuevo Dia moved in a range between a low of 37 percent in 2000 and 2003 to a high of 46 percent in 2001. The number of shoppers Plaintiff printed for insertion in El Nuevo Dia increased by 63 percent between 1999 and 2003 and its revenues from all shoppers increased by 23 percent.

[**11] Even with the new competition from Defendant AGP, Plaintiff continues to advertise itself on its website as "the number one commercial printer in Puerto Rico and the Caribbean." Printing Impressions, which Plaintiff's website describes as "America's most influential journal for the printing and allied industries," ranks Plaintiff as 85th in 2004 among the top 400 printing companies in the United States -- up from 166th in the 2001 rankings. Plaintiff's audited financial statements show, and its chief financial officer testified, that Plaintiff has been consistently profitable each year from 1998 through 2003, both company-wide and for printing shoppers. Plaintiff's profits from shoppers are substantially larger than industry averages, according to Plaintiff's printing expert, who testified that Ramallo's profits represented an average of 12 percent of shopper sales, compared to an industry-wide average for newspaper inserts of 5.4 percent. Plaintiff's chief financial officer testified that Plaintiff's net sales and stockholders' equity also were "considerably greater" in 2003 than they were in 1996, the year before Defendant AGP was formed.

Plaintiff remains the largest printer [**12] of shoppers in Puerto Rico based on revenue. In 2003, Plaintiff reported approximately $ 18 Million in revenue from printing shoppers, compared to approximately $ 11.6 Million for Defendant AGP. Plaintiff today prints more shoppers than AGP and more than it did before Defendant AGP was formed.

Plaintiff's performance contrasts with Defendant AGP's struggles as a new entrant. While Defendant AGP was cash-flow positive prior to this lawsuit, it has only once shown a net profit. In February 2005, Defendant AGP laid off 20 percent of its work force and instituted other operational cost cuts in an attempt to improve its financial performance.

C. Defendants' Sales Practices

Like other newspapers, both El Nuevo Dia and Primera Hora give discounts to advertisers based on the volume of advertising they commit to the newspapers. Although newspapers publish rate cards showing rates for ROP advertising and for insertion of shoppers, advertisers testified that the rate card frequently serves as a starting point for negotiations between the newspaper and the advertiser. Plaintiff complains that sometimes the discounts for insertion services exceed 50 percent off rate card, [**13] but Plaintiff has not shown that these discounts are unusual, particularly for the large advertisers using shoppers in Puerto Rico, such as Wal-Mart, Pueblo, Walgreens, Pitusa, Sears, and J.C. Penney. Plaintiff admits that even with highly-discounted rates, Defendant El Dia makes a substantial profit from the insertion of shoppers.

El Nuevo Dia and Primera Hora insert shoppers without regard to the identity or location of the commercial printer that [*127] prints them. There is no evidence that either newspaper has ever refused to insert a shopper because it was printed by Plaintiff, or by any other commercial printer. Many of El Nuevo Dia's largest shopper insertion clients print shoppers with Plaintiff. Most advertisers that print with Defendant AGP negotiate with Defendant AGP separately from the newspapers. Defendants, however, have two programs in which an advertiser can receive a discount or other benefit from El Nuevo Dia or Primera Hora based, in part, on the advertiser's use of AGP: Group contracts and other package discount arrangements, and a loyalty points program called "Alcance." Plaintiff's complaint focuses on these two programs. The programs are not mandatory; [**14] they are provided as an option to customers.

---

<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff has not offered market share information. Defendants have submitted figures showing the number of shoppers inserted in El Nuevo Dia. These figures do not include shoppers distributed in other newspapers or by other means and, therefore, do not constitute complete market shares.

Defendants have entered into five group contracts with some advertisers that include prices for printing with Defendant AGP, as well as prices for shopper insertion or ROP advertising in El Nuevo Dia or Primera Hora. These contracts contain incentives for the advertiser to print with Defendant AGP, such as a lower price for insertion or 'ROP advertising if the advertiser provides a minimum volume of printing business to Defendant AGP. Defendants have also offered package pricing for printing, insert and ROP advertising to some advertisers, but Plaintiff has not submitted evidence quantifying these arrangements. Printing and insertion services are, however, always separately available from Defendants.

Defendants' "Alcance" program allows customers to accumulate points by purchasing ROP advertising, insertion, commercial printing, and other services from Defendants and other affiliated companies. These points may be redeemed for services, such as advertisements in El Nuevo Dia or Primera Hora. "Alcance" points may not be used, however, to purchase printing services from AGP. Some large advertisers do not receive "Alcance" [**15] points for their purchases because they negotiate for other price concessions.

D. Plaintiff's Allegations

Plaintiff filed the present complaint on September 16, 2002, alleging the following seven causes of [*128] action: (1) conspiracy to unreasonably lessen and eliminate competition in the markets for the printing and delivery of shoppers and corporate supplements, in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act; (2) unreasonable restraint of trade in the printing and delivery markets, in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act; (3) attempt to monopolize the printing market, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act; (4) conspiracy to monopolize the printing market, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act; (5) monopolization and maintenance of monopoly power in the delivery market, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act; (6) conspiracy to eliminate or injure competitors by misappropriating trade secrets and inducing competitors' employees to breach their employment contracts; and (7) violations of the antitrust laws of Puerto Rico. Docket Document No. 1. On November 5, 2002, Plaintiff filed an amended complaint alleging additional counts for violations of [**16] Puerto Rico's unfair trade practices law (count 8) and intentional interference with prospective economic advantages and business and contractual relationships under Puerto Rico law (count 9). Docket Document No. 13.

On November 13, 2002, Defendants moved to dismiss all counts 1 through 7, with the exception of count 3 as it pertained to corporate supplements, for failure to state a claim. Docket Document No. 21. Defendants also filed a counterclaim, alleging the following five causes of action: (1) abuse of process under Puerto Rico law; (2) commercial disparagement under Puerto Rico law; (3) violation of Section 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\); (4) tortious interference with contract under Puerto Rico law; and (5) violations of Article 1802 of the Civil Code of Puerto Rico, 31 P.R. LAWS ANN. § 5141. Docket Document No. 12. On November 21, 2002, Defendants filed a supplemental motion to dismiss counts 8 and 9 for failure to state a claim. Docket Document No. 25. Plaintiffs filed a second amended complaint on December 31, 2002. Docket Document No. 40.

On February 6, 2004, we granted Defendants' motion [**17] to dismiss counts 1, 4, and 6, finding that count 6 was time-barred and that Plaintiff's conspiracy claims failed because Defendants were commonly owned and controlled and, therefore, were legally incapable of conspiring with each other. We also dismissed count 8 insofar as it asserted claims under 10 P.R. LAWS ANN. § 259 (1997 & Supp. 2001), and count 9 insofar as it asserted a claim for interference with prospective economic relationships. Docket Document No. 59.

Plaintiff's surviving claims are counts 2,<sup>2</sup> 3, 5, 7, 8 (insofar as it asserts claims under Article 1802 of the Puerto Rico Civil Code, 31 P.R. LAWS ANN. § 5141 (1991 & Supp. 2001)), and 9 (insofar as it asserts a claim for tortious interference with business and contractual relationships). Id.

[**18] After exhaustive discovery that lasted more than a year, on March 1, 2005, Defendants moved for summary judgment. Docket Document No. 156. Plaintiff opposed the motion on April 4, 2005. Docket Document No. 176.

On May 13, 2005, Defendants voluntarily withdrew counts 2, 3, and 4 of the counterclaim. Docket Document No. 204. Defendants continue to maintain counts 1 and 5 of the counterclaim based on allegations that Plaintiff has used the lawsuit improperly to advance a plan to secure and maintain exclusive control over the commercial printing business in Puerto Rico. Plaintiff did not timely move for summary judgment against the counterclaim.

II.

Summary Judgment Motion Standard

The standard for summary judgment is straightforward and well-established. HN1 A district court should grant a motion for summary judgment "if the pleadings, depositions, and answers to the interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). HN2 A factual dispute is [**19] "genuine" if it could be resolved in favor of either party, and "material" if it potentially affects the outcome of the case. Calero-Cerezo v. United States DOJ, 355 F.3d 6, 19 (1st Cir. 2004).

HN3 The moving party carries the burden of establishing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact; however, the burden "may be discharged by 'showing' . . . that there is an absence of evidence to [*129] support the nonmoving party's case." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 325, 331, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986). The burden has two components: (1) an initial burden of production, which shifts to the nonmoving party if satisfied by the moving party; and (2) an ultimate burden of persuasion, which always remains on the moving party. See id. at 331.

HN4 The non-moving party "may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of the adverse party's pleading, but . . . must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(e\). HN5 Summary judgment exists "to pierce the boilerplate of the pleadings and assess the proof in order to determine the need for a trial." Euromodas, Inc. v. Zanella, 368 F.3d 11, 17 (1st Cir. 2004) [**20] (citing Wynne v. Tufts Univ. Sch. of Med., 976 F.2d 791, 794 (1st Cir. 1992)).

"The Supreme Court has emphasized . . . that HN6 summary judgment may be especially appropriate in an antitrust case because of the chill antitrust litigation can have on legitimate price competition." Indiana Grocery, Inc. v. Super Valu Stores, Inc., 864 F.2d 1409, 1412 (7th Cir. 1989) (citing Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 594-95, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986)). See also PepsiCo, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., 315 F.3d 101, 104 (2d Cir. 2002) (summary judgment often appropriate in antitrust cases "because of the concern that protracted litigation will chill pro-competitive market forces"). HN7 Antitrust claims by competitors aggrieved by their rivals' low prices require critical examination, because those low prices benefit consumers, and consumer welfare is the primary concern of the antitrust laws. "Competition is a ruthless process. A firm that reduces cost and expands sales injures rivals. . . . These injuries to rivals are byproducts of vigorous competition, and the antitrust laws are not balm for rivals' wounds. . . Thus the plaintiff [**21] faces a stiff burden in any [Sherman Act] § 2 litigation." Ball Mem'l Hosp., Inc. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., Inc., 784 F.2d 1325, 1338 (7th Cir. 1986). HN8[] "Courts must be on guard against efforts of plaintiffs to use the antitrust laws to insulate themselves from the impact of competition." Buffalo Courier-Express, Inc. v. Buffalo Evening News, Inc., 601 F.2d 48, 55 (2d Cir. 1979). HN9[] Summary judgment is particularly appropriate where the non-moving party does not rely on disputed facts, but on unreasonable inferences. "Creditable inferences must rest on solid, fact-specific footings." Quaker State Oil Refining Corp. v. Garrity Oil Co., 884 F.2d 1510, 1516 (1st Cir. 1989).

---

<sup>2</sup> Defendants contend that count 2 was necessarily dismissed as a result of our ruling on February 6, 2004, because our ruling dismissed all conspiracy claims and count 2 alleges concerted action under Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Plaintiff contends that count 2 is a claim for an unlawful tying arrangement under Section 1 of the Sherman Act and, therefore, the reasoning behind the dismissal of Plaintiff's other conspiracy counts does not apply. Because our discussion herein of Plaintiff's tying claims under Section 2 of the Sherman Act applies equally to a tying claim asserted under Section 1, we will treat count 2 as a surviving claim.

III.

Analysis

A. Attempted Monopolization

Plaintiff alleges that Defendants have attempted to monopolize the market for printing shoppers and corporate supplements in Puerto Rico by (1) unlawfully tying the printing of shoppers and corporate supplements to ROP advertising and insertion in El Nuevo Dia and Primera Hora, (2) unlawfully "bundling" printing services with ROP advertising and insertion in Defendants' newspapers, and (3) [**22] predatorily pricing Defendants' printing and insertion services. Docket Document No. 1. HN10[] To demonstrate attempted monopolization under Section 2 of the Sherman Act,<sup>3</sup> a plaintiff must generally show "(1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a [*130] specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884 (1993). HN11[] "[A] dangerous probability of success in the relevant market . . . requires evidence that the defendant had sufficient market power to have been reasonably able to create a monopoly.' . . . A colorable claim, thus, must include evidence of the market power of the defendants and, therefore, must, like Section 1 claims, include facts defining the relevant market." R.W. Int'l, Inc. v. Borden Interamerica, Inc., 673 F. Supp. 654, 657 (D.P.R. 1987) (Fuste, J.) (internal quotes omitted).

[**23] 1. Dangerous Probability of Achieving Monopoly Power

Defendants contend that Plaintiff has failed to show that Defendants have a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power in the market for printing shoppers and corporate supplements in Puerto Rico. Docket Document No. 156. Plaintiff contends that Defendants' practices nearly drove Plaintiff into bankruptcy, and that only a substantial new contract in another line of business enabled Plaintiff to survive. Docket Document No. 176. Plaintiff further contends that Defendants' policy regarding corporate supplements has already foreclosed all corporate supplement business to Plaintiff, and that if Defendants' practices continue, Defendant AGP will drive Plaintiff out of the business of printing shoppers. Id. Plaintiff's attempted monopolization theory depends on the allegation that Defendants will drive it out of the shopper printing market and absorb its market share, thereby acquiring monopoly power.

a. Plaintiff's Financial Health

In support of their motion, Defendants cite overwhelming and undisputed evidence that Plaintiff is healthy and viable and expects to remain so for the foreseeable [**24] future. Docket Document No. 156. Plaintiff has made a net profit from printing shoppers in every year since Defendant AGP was formed. Plaintiff's revenues from printing shoppers grew by more than 20 percent from 1999 to 2003 despite competition from Defendant AGP. Plaintiff's insertions in El Nuevo Dia, the newspaper Plaintiff claims is attempting to drive it out of business, increased by 63 percent between 1999 and 2003. Plaintiff has recently gained significant new shopper clients, including Wal-Mart and J.C. Penney (from AGP) and Walgreens (from mainland U.S. printers). Plaintiff continues to derive more revenue from shoppers (approximately $ 18 Million in 2003) than Defendant AGP (approximately $ 11.6 Million).

<sup>3</sup> HN12[] Section 2 of the Sherman Act forbids any monopoly, or attempt to monopolize, or combination or conspiracy to monopolize. 15 U.S.C. § 2.

Plaintiff's actions also reflect a financially and competitively healthy business, not a business on the brink of bankruptcy or exit from the printing market. Plaintiff has expanded and modernized its printing capacity with substantial investments in equipment since Defendant AGP entered the market, including the acquisition of three printing presses. Plaintiff submitted forecasted financial statements to its lender that predict steadily increasing sales and profits [**25] from 2004 through 2008. Plaintiff's chief financial officer and its outside auditor both testified that Plaintiff is a viable, healthy company, and that Plaintiff has made no plans or preparations to file for bankruptcy or discontinue the printing of shoppers. Plaintiff's chief executive officer directly contradicted his own company's case when he testified that he "cannot imagine" a time when Defendant AGP would be the sole printer of shoppers in Puerto Rico.

Plaintiff cites the testimony of its chief financial officer that, but for the addition [*131] of a new contract in a different line of business (telephone directory printing), Plaintiff might have undergone a reorganization that might have led to bankruptcy. Given Plaintiff's consistent profitability and position in the market, such speculative and self-serving testimony could not persuade a reasonable finder of fact that Plaintiff was ever on the verge of failure.

Plaintiff also cites an analysis of its publicly-available financial statements performed by Defendant AGP in which Defendant AGP observed that Plaintiff's high-debt level had resulted in a weak cash-flow position. The same document, however, notes a marked improvement [**26] in Plaintiff's profitability, which is consistent with the testimony of Plaintiff's own executives. Moreover, Plaintiff's debt load resulted from its decision to develop a large industrial park project; any resulting negative effect Plaintiff's debt service obligations may have had on its cash flow cannot be attributed to Defendants' actions.

Finally, Plaintiff relies on the opinion of its economics expert, Dr. Franklin M. Fisher, whose report states incorrectly that Plaintiff is unprofitable. When presented with Plaintiff's audited financial statements, Dr. Fisher dismissed Plaintiff's history of consistent profitability, and testified instead that Plaintiff was not earning "economic profits" from shoppers, i.e., that Plaintiff's profits do not represent a sufficient rate of return on its investment to provide Plaintiff's shareholders with an incentive to continue investing in the business. Dr. Fisher, however, did not calculate Plaintiff's "economic profits" for any year, testified that he lacked the information to do so, and has not provided any data to support his opinion. Plaintiff has not submitted any evidence that its profit margin on shoppers has decreased as a result [**27] of competition from Defendant AGP, and Plaintiff's printing expert opined that Plaintiff's profits exceed the industry average. Dr. Fisher's report and testimony regarding Plaintiff's unprofitability is factually incorrect, and his testimony about economic profits is speculative and also inconsistent with the testimony of Plaintiff's printing expert. Dr. Fisher's opinion on this point is, therefore, rejected.

By every measure of financial performance, there is no risk that Plaintiff is about to be "eliminated" from the market, as it alleges. The evidence on which Plaintiff relies, even when construed in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, is unpersuasive and implausible and creates no genuine issue of material fact. Plaintiff's contention that Defendants have a dangerous probability of achieving a monopoly in the printing market fails in the face of abundant and undisputed evidence of Plaintiff's financial health.

b. Plaintiff's Market Strength

HN13 [Any analysis of dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power ordinarily includes an analysis of defendant's share of a properly defined relevant market. See, e.g., Springfield Terminal Ry. v. Canadian Pac., Ltd., 133 F.3d 103, 107-08 (1st Cir. 1997)] [**28] (proof of defendant's high market share not "an inflexible requirement," but court should give "weight to the traditional requirement, and require exceptional circumstances before straying from it"). Despite the importance of this factor to the courts, Plaintiff has not undertaken market share calculations and professes ignorance of its own market share. The undisputed evidence submitted by Defendants regarding the printers of shoppers inserted in El Nuevo Dia further supports the conclusion that there is no reasonable probability that Defendants will achieve a monopoly in printing shoppers.

[*132] There is no doubt that the business of printing shoppers has become more competitive since Defendant AGP entered the market. Plaintiff complains that Defendant AGP quickly took about 30 percent of the market. Plaintiff's expert, Dr. Fisher, however, testified that Plaintiff was printing more than 80 percent of the shoppers printed in Puerto Rico before Defendant AGP began competing for the business. The evidence submitted by Defendants shows that Defendants' share of inserts that appeared in El Nuevo Dia remained roughly constant from 1999 through 2003, and more than 60 percent of the [*29] shoppers inserted in El Nuevo Dia have been printed by printers other than Defendant AGP, which does not suggest any trend toward monopoly power on the part of Defendants.

Even if offshore printers are excluded from the market as Plaintiff argues, effectively leaving Plaintiff and Defendant AGP as the only participants in the relevant market, Defendants' market share would necessarily remain below 50 percent. Plaintiff's revenues from shoppers exceed Defendant AGP's revenues from shoppers and corporate supplements combined for each year from 1999 through 2003. HN14 [↑] A market share of less than 50 percent does not support a finding of dangerous probability of achieving a monopoly. See, e.g., *U.S. Anchor Mfg. v. Rule Indus.*, 7 F.3d 986, 1001 \(11th Cir. 1993) (no dangerous probability of success as a matter of law because defendant's market share below 50 percent at all relevant times); *Indiana Grocery*, 864 F.2d at 1414-15 (50 percent share insufficient where plaintiff conceded that defendant "could never control" market); *United States v. Empire Gas Corp.*, 537 F.2d 296, 305 \(8th Cir. 1976\) (market shares of 50 percent and [*30] 47 percent insufficient for dangerous probability).

Plaintiff has not articulated any special circumstances that would lead us to forego the traditional reliance on market share analysis. On the contrary, the evidence of Plaintiff's continued financial strength and ability to compete vigorously confirms that Defendants do not have a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power in the shopper printing market.

Plaintiff alleges that Defendant AGP will gain a market share in excess of 50 percent by eliminating Plaintiff and absorbing its market share. Plaintiff's financial strength refutes this suggestion. The First Circuit has also rejected this theory in *Springfield Terminal*, where the plaintiff, a much smaller and more precariously-positioned competitor than Plaintiff here, asked the court to assume that the defendant would force it into bankruptcy and acquire it:

We would find attempt claims presumptively implausible if the challenged conduct has been in place for at least two years and the remaining market remains robustly competitive as evidenced by ongoing entry, profitability of rivals, and stability of their aggregate market share.

133 F.3d at 110 [*31] (quoting P. Areeda & H. Hovenkamp, FEDERAL ANTITRUST LAW, P 807f, pp. 360-61). Here, Plaintiff remains profitable, and there is no evidence that its market share is declining. Thus, Plaintiff's claim is inherently implausible, and Plaintiff has provided no evidence to support its allegation that it is about to be eliminated from the printing market.

c. Plaintiff's Failure To Establish A Relevant Market

HN15 [↑] As part of dangerous probability analysis, Plaintiff also has the burden to demonstrate a properly-defined relevant product and geographic market. *Fraser v. Major League Soccer, L.L.C.*, 284 F.3d 47, 61-62 [*133] (1st Cir.), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 885, 154 L. Ed. 2d 144, 123 S. Ct. 118 (2002) (failure to prove relevant market "dooms [plaintiffs']section 2 claims"); *Coastal Fuels of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Caribbean Petroleum Corp.*, 79 F.3d 182, 197 (1st Cir. 1996). Plaintiff's expert, Dr. Fisher, argues that the relevant geographic market is limited to printers physically located in Puerto Rico, because the time and expense required to transport shoppers into Puerto Rico from other locations, as well as other considerations, render printers outside Puerto Rico poor [*32] substitutes for Puerto Rican printers.

We do not believe a finder of fact could rationally exclude from the relevant market printers located outside Puerto Rico that currently sell significant quantities of shoppers into Puerto Rico. Currently, approximately 20 percent of the shoppers inserted in El Nuevo Dia are printed outside Puerto Rico, suggesting that offshore printers already compete substantially with Plaintiff and Defendant AGP. During the pendency of this lawsuit, a printer from the Dominican Republic successfully entered the market to print shoppers for distribution in Puerto Rico. Moreover, Dr.

Fisher admits that if prices increased sufficiently, the presence of offshore printers could constrain prices charged by Puerto Rican printers. Finally, the record reveals substantial testimony from customers that have used or considered offshore printers, or would do so if prices increased in Puerto Rico.

Plaintiff's allegation that Defendants have a dangerous probability of achieving a monopoly in the printing of shoppers is devoid of evidentiary basis for three reasons: Plaintiff is a healthy, viable company that shows no signs of being eliminated as a competitor; Defendants' [\[\*\*33\]](#) market shares do not reflect a risk that Plaintiff will be driven from the market; and Plaintiff's definition of the relevant geographic market is too narrow. HN16↑ Plaintiff has the burden to prove each element of its attempted monopolization claim, or summary judgment is appropriate. Springfield Terminal, 133 F.3d at 107-10 HN17↑ (summary judgment warranted by "any fatal factual deficiency" in non-movant's case). Summary judgment is, thus, appropriate on the attempted monopolization claim.

2. Predatory or Anticompetitive Conduct

Plaintiff also fails to meet its burden of creating a triable issue of material fact that Defendants engaged in any predatory or anticompetitive conduct. Plaintiff alleges three different types of anticompetitive conduct in support of its attempted monopolization claim: (1) unlawful tying, (2) unlawful bundling, and (3) predatory pricing. Docket Document No. 1.

In the tying and bundling claims, Plaintiff contends that Defendants' joint sales efforts - group contracts and other package discount offers and the "Alcance" program - are anticompetitive. HN18↑ "Package" sales, however, are widespread and ordinarily lawful. "Buyers often find package [\[\*\*34\]](#) sales attractive; a seller's decision to offer such packages can merely be an attempt to compete effectively - conduct that is entirely consistent with the Sherman Act." Jefferson Parish Hospital Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 12, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 \(1984\). See also Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 478-79, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072 \(1992\) HN19↑ ("It is undisputed that competition is enhanced when a firm is able to offer various marketing options, including bundling of support and maintenance service with the sale of equipment. Nor do such actions run afoul of the antitrust laws.") (footnote omitted); [SMS Sys. \[\\[\\*134\\]\]\(#\) Maint. Servs., Inc. v. Digital Equip. Corp., 188 F.3d 11, 21 \(1st Cir. 1999\)](#). See Daniel A. Crane, Multiproduct Discounting: A Myth of Nonprice Predation, 72 U. Chi. L. Rev. 27, 28-29 \(Winter 2005\) ("Package discounting. . . is a pervasive phenomenon in the national economy, and one that produces substantial consumer benefits.") (footnote omitted).

Package sales are unlawful only in limited circumstances that Plaintiff has failed to show. The undisputed evidence demonstrates that Defendants have engaged only in a vigorous and lawful [\[\*\*35\]](#) effort to compete with a dominant competitor in the commercial printing business.

Tying. Plaintiff contends that Defendants' offers of insertion and ROP advertising discounts to advertisers who print with Defendant AGP amounts to an unlawful tying of shoppers to insertion and advertising. Docket Document No. 1. Plaintiff further contends that Defendant El Dia's policy of inserting only corporate supplements that are produced by a unit of Defendant AGP constitutes an unlawful tying arrangement. Id.

HN20↑ "Tying is not automatically unlawful under the antitrust laws . . ." Coady Corp. v. Toyota Motor Distrib., Inc., 361 F.3d 50, 60 \(1st Cir. 2004\). HN21↑ To prove a per-se tying violation, Plaintiff must prove that: (1) the tying and tied goods are two separate products; (2) the defendant affords consumers no choice but to purchase the tied product from it as a condition of obtaining the tying product; (3) the defendant has sufficient market power in the tying product market to distort consumers' choices with respect to the tied product; and (4) the tying arrangement forecloses a substantial volume of commerce. United States v. Microsoft Corp., 346 U.S. App. D.C. 330, 253 F.3d 34, 85 \(D.C. Cir. 2001\); [\[\*\*36\] Borschow Hosp. and Med. Supplies, Inc. v. Cesar Castillo Inc., 96 F.3d 10, 17 \(1st Cir. 1996\)](#) (quoting Data Gen. Corp. v. Grumman Sys. Support Corp., 36 F.3d 1147, 1178 \(1st Cir. 1994\)).

Shoppers. With respect to printing shoppers, the evidence is undisputed that the sale of advertising space or insertion of shoppers in El Nuevo Dia is not conditioned on the purchase of printing from Defendant AGP. Dr. Fisher agrees that there is no evidence of what he calls "classic" tying arrangements with respect to shoppers. Plaintiff, however, contends that the second element of its tying claim - the coercion of advertisers to print shoppers with Defendant AGP - is met because Defendants allegedly coerce advertisers to use Defendant AGP by offering them discounts or lower prices on insertion and ROP advertising in the newspapers, as well as the accumulation of "Alcance" program points that can be redeemed at the newspapers. Docket Document No. 176. Plaintiff complains that it cannot offer the same types of discounts, but it has not quantified the discounts to which it objects; it has only submitted evidence of several examples of package offers [\[\*\*37\]](#) that it contends are coercive.

HN22↑ To establish coercion the plaintiff must demonstrate that defendant's pricing structure "force[s] the buyer into the purchase of tied product that the buyer either did not want at all, or might have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms." Wells Real Estate, Inc. v. Greater Lowell Bd. of Realtors, 850 F.2d 803, 814 (1st Cir. 1988) (quoting Jefferson Parish Hospital Dist. No. 2,466 U.S. at 12). See also Kell v. Am. Capital Strategies Ltd., 278 F.Supp.2d 156, 161 (D.P.R. 2003). The element of coercion, however, cannot be satisfied by mere discounts or other forms of package sales unless the combined purchase is the only economically-viable alternative. Marts v. Xerox, Inc., 77 F.3d 1109, 1113 (8th Cir. [\[\*135\]](#) 1996) HN23↑ (products not tied unless package is "only viable economic option" and separate purchase is "prohibitively expensive"); Ortho Diagnostic Sys. v. Abbott Lab., 920 F. Supp. 455, 471 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (collecting cases).

Plaintiff ignores this prevailing legal standard in the First Circuit and relies on a criticized and outdated Fourth Circuit opinion, [\[\*\*38\]](#) Advance Business Systems & Supply Co. v. SCM Corp., 415 F.2d 55 (4th Cir. 1969), for the proposition that any conditional discount on one product renders the sale of two products together a tying arrangement. Plaintiff would have this court find that related companies cannot lawfully enter into joint sales efforts involving package discounts. The court rejects this standard.

While Plaintiff repeatedly characterizes Defendants' package discount programs as coercive, it supports its claims with examples of advertisers that rejected Defendants' offers. This evidence misses the point. Defendants cannot be offering the "only viable economic option" (Marts, 77 F.3d at 1113) when advertisers frequently reject their offers. Defendants have submitted undisputed testimony from advertisers confirming that advertisers regularly reject group contracts offered by Defendants, other packages offered by Defendant AGP, and opportunities to accumulate "Alcance" points by printing with Defendant AGP. Not a single customer testified to being coerced to print with Defendant AGP in order to receive benefits from Defendants' newspapers. Defendants also have submitted undisputed [\[\*\*39\]](#) evidence that 62 percent of all El Nuevo Dia advertisers that inserted shoppers had them printed by Plaintiff and by other printers in the mainland or the Dominican Republic, not by Defendant AGP. The record also shows that Plaintiff has maintained an approximately constant share of major shopper accounts since 1999, including customers that it has won from Defendant AGP and customers who have turned down Defendants' package offers.

These facts demonstrate that buying advertising from El Nuevo Dia without also buying printing services from AGP cannot have been "prohibitively expensive." Philip Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, ANTITRUST LAW P 1758b (2d ed. 2004) at p. 328 (no tying arrangement based on package discounts unless separate sales outside of package are below ten percent of total sales). See also Ortho Diagnostic Sys., 920 F.Supp. at 472 (17 percent of revenue resulted from non-package sales; "This empirical evidence alone shows that the purchase [of these products from the defendant] at the unbundled prices was not economically prohibitive.").

Plaintiff has failed to produce any evidence that Defendants have coerced advertisers to print shoppers with [\[\*\*40\]](#) Defendant AGP. What Plaintiff equates with coercion amounts to nothing more than normal competitive activity. Accordingly, we find that a reasonable finder of fact could not conclude that Defendants coerced advertisers with their discounts and, therefore, Plaintiff's tying claim with respect to shoppers fails.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Plaintiff contends that Defendants have engaged in unlawful tying in violation of Section 1, and then argues that those tying arrangements support its attempted monopolization claims under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Docket Document No. 176. The existence of two separate products and the presence of coercion are essential elements of an unlawful tying arrangement under Section 1 of the Sherman Act. If Plaintiff's tying claims fail under Section 1, then they cannot provide evidence for its attempted monopolization claims under Section 2.

[*136] Corporate supplements. With respect to corporate supplements, Defendant El Dia has a policy that it will insert in the newspaper only corporate supplements [**41] produced by a unit of Defendant AGP. Plaintiff argues that this policy ties the distribution of corporate supplements, the tying product, with commercial printing by Defendant AGP, the tied product. Docket Document No. 176. Defendants assert that the policy does not satisfy the first and second elements necessary for a tying claim and is not anticompetitive. Docket Document No. 156. In addition, Defendants assert a First Amendment right to maintain the policy. Id. The court finds that Plaintiff has not established the elements of a tying claim and, therefore, will enter summary judgment against this claim.

Plaintiff makes a centerpiece of its case a de minimis part of the advertising and printing business in Puerto Rico. Plaintiff has not quantified the number of inserts it contends is printed within its alleged printing market, but Defendants have submitted undisputed evidence that of the 5,000 commercial inserts in El Nuevo Día in a five-year period only 134 were corporate supplements. Plaintiff has submitted evidence that one advertiser wanted to use Plaintiff to print its corporate supplement. Even Dr. Fisher concedes that El Nuevo Día's corporate supplement [**42] policy, standing alone, does not have a significant anticompetitive effect. HN24[] "The tying claim must fail absent any proof of anti-competitive effects in the market for the tied product." Wells Real Estate, 850 F.2d at 815. Plaintiff has failed to satisfy this burden.

Plaintiff also has failed to show the other elements of tying. Defendants contend that corporate supplements are not separate products, but rather two components of a single product -- the preparation of a section of the newspaper. Docket Document No. 156. Corporate supplements are one of several vehicles Defendant El Dia creates to sell advertising space, in this case to the featured company's sponsors. Plaintiff cannot distinguish corporate supplements from the newspaper's sports section or Defendant El Dia's own glossy paper magazines that are printed by Defendant AGP and inserted into the newspaper. Each of these products contains editorial material, as well as advertising that generates most of the newspaper's income.<sup>5</sup> The newspaper pays the costs of producing corporate supplements, including creative work, insertion, advertising sales, and printing, from sponsors' advertising revenues, just [**43] as the cost of other sections of the newspaper are paid for largely from advertising revenues.

HN25[] Two products exist for tying purposes only where there is substantial consumer demand for separate products. "The answer to the question whether one or two products are involved turns not on the functional relation between them, but rather on the character of the demand for the two items." Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2, 466 U.S. at 19; [**44] Data Gen. Corp., 36 F.3d at 1179 (internal quotations omitted). The evidence does not support a finding of such separate demand. Since the newspaper is paying [*137] the costs for the corporate supplements, the featured business is not purchasing printing or any of the other services needed to produce the corporate supplement and therefore is not providing a demand for printing. Even if the featured business were considered a printing customer, Plaintiff has not produced sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to conclude that the printing of corporate supplements constitutes a separate product.

For the same reason, Plaintiff cannot prove that Defendants coerce featured businesses to purchase printing from Defendant AGP. Because El Nuevo Día corporate supplements are financed through advertising revenues from the supplement, the featured business does not purchase printing, and thus it is not coerced to purchase any product.

HN26[] The absence of a coerced purchase defeats any possibility of an unlawful tying arrangement. Jefferson Parish Hospital Dist. No. 2, 466 U.S. at 12. HN27[] ("The essential characteristic of an invalid tying arrangement lies in the seller's [**45] exploitation of its control over the tying product to force the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all, or might have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms.").

---

<sup>5</sup> Corporate supplements, thus, resemble other advertising vehicles as to which courts have rejected tying claims that attempted to split integral components of those vehicles into tied and tying products. Hirsh v. Martindale-Hubbell, Inc., 674 F.2d 1343, 1347 (9th Cir. 1982) (advertising in legal directory and requirement to purchase copy of directory single product); RFD Publ'ns, Inc. v. Oregonian Publ'g. Co., 749 F.2d 1327, 1327 (9th Cir. 1984) (sale of newspaper advertising and advertising mailed to non-subscriber's single product).

Defendant El Dia's right to control the editorial content and preparation of corporate supplements is also protected by the First Amendment. HN28↑ Would-be advertisers have no right to compel a newspaper to accept their advertisements, let alone editorial material. "The [advertiser's] right to free speech does not give it the right to make use of the defendants' printing presses and distribution systems without defendants' consent." Chicago Joint Bd., Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Am. AFL-CIO v. Chicago Tribune Co., 435 F.2d 470, 478 (7th Cir. 1970). See also Person v. New York Post Corp., 427 F.Supp. 1297, 1301 (E.D.N.Y. 1977) (claim that newspaper could be ordered to carry plaintiff's advertisements "runs squarely against the wall of freedom of the press"). El Nuevo Dia has chosen to maintain editorial and business control over corporate supplements by assigning their production to Creative Minds, formerly an El Nuevo Dia \*\*46 staff unit that was transferred to Defendant AGP. This approach ensures the newspaper that the content of corporate supplements is accurate and comports with its style and content policies.

Plaintiff acknowledges that corporate supplements are an editorial product; it contends, however, that Defendant El Dia can maintain editorial control even while Plaintiff prints the corporate supplements, as it did prior to the creation of Defendant AGP. HN29↑ The newspaper's right to control editorial content, however, extends to how editorial materials are prepared. In Miami Herald Publ'g Co. v. Tornillo, the Supreme Court said that the government is prohibited from imposing a penalty "in terms of the cost in printing and composing time and material and in taking up space that could be devoted to other material the newspaper may have preferred to print." 418 U.S. 241, 256, 41 L. Ed. 2d 730, 94 S. Ct. 2831 \(1974\). Requiring the newspaper to engage an outside printer, when it can use an affiliated company, would impose unnecessary costs on the newspaper that would violate its First Amendment rights.

Accordingly, summary judgment will be entered against Plaintiff's tying claim regarding corporate supplements.

[\[\*\*47\]](#) Bundling. Plaintiff claims that when Defendants offer financial incentives - such as group contracts and the "Alcance" program - to encourage advertisers to print shoppers with AGP, these incentives constitute unlawful bundling. Docket Document No. 176. Defendants contend that [\[\*138\]](#) their joint selling practices are widely used, pro-competitive, and lawful. The court agrees with the Defendants.

HN30↑ Although few cases have addressed bundled pricing as a potential antitrust violation, one requirement is clear: The challenged prices must have the effect of excluding a single-product competitor. See P. Areeda & H. Hovenkamp, ANTITRUST LAW P 749 (2d ed. 2004 Supp.) at p. 182-83 ("[A] requirement that the bundling practice be sufficiently severe to exclude an equally efficient single-product rival, and without an adequate business justification, seems to strike about the right balance between permitting aggressive pricing while prohibiting conduct that can only be characterized as anticompetitive."). In Ortho Diagnostic Systems, summary judgment was granted against the plaintiff, a single-product competitor, because the plaintiff was indisputably able to compete profitably against [\[\*\*48\]](#) the multi-product defendant, despite the defendant's bundled pricing. HN31↑ "The fact [that the plaintiff was profitable] is highly significant. . . . Only price cutting that threatens equally or more efficient firms is condemned under Section 2." [The plaintiff must prove] "that the defendant's pricing makes it unprofitable for the plaintiff to continue to produce." 920 F. Supp. at 469-70.

Here, far from being excluded, Plaintiff has indisputably experienced consistent and increasing profits and sales during the seven years of Defendant AGP's existence, and Plaintiff consistently makes the largest volume of shopper sales in the alleged market. Plaintiff has provided no evidence of the amount of printing sales subject to bundling, the amount of printing sales it claims to have lost as a result of specific bundled contracts, or how any discounts or benefits offered in any group contract actually caused Plaintiff's loss of sales. Without specific data on the specific sales allegedly lost by Plaintiff subject to group contracts by Defendants, and without evidence that those sales were lost because of bundled pricing, Plaintiff has not demonstrated antitrust injury. Virgin Atl. Airways Ltd. v. British Airways PLC, 257 F.3d 256, 271 (2d Cir. 2001) [\[\*\*49\]](#) (requiring evidence showing "what percentage of bundled sales actually included one of the five routes at issue. . . . which of these flights were bundled with more competitive transatlantic routes, what prices were paid on the bundled flights, what costs were incurred, and whether [the defendant] realized sufficient profits to cover the alleged losses on the transatlantic flights").

Nor has Plaintiff shown that bundled discounts had a coercive effect on any customer. Virgin Atl. Airways Ltd., 257 F.3d at 270 (noting absence of "exhibits showing that specific customers felt compelled to purchase products under the defendant's bundling program because the plaintiff could not match the discounts"). Rather, Plaintiff's continued ability to outsell Defendants, together with the substantial evidence of customers who have rejected Defendants' group contracts and "Alcance" program offers to print with Plaintiff, demonstrate that these practices have had no discernible exclusionary effect on Plaintiff. In the absence of such an effect, Plaintiff's bundling claim necessarily fails.<sup>6</sup>

[**50] [*139] Predatory Pricing. Plaintiff alleges that Defendants have engaged in predatory or below-cost pricing of shopper printing and insertion services. Docket Document No. 1. The undisputed material facts fail to bear out this claim.

HN32 [+] An attempted monopolization plaintiff basing its claims on predatory pricing must establish "two prerequisites to recovery" under Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578 \(1993\). First, the prices complained of must be "below an appropriate measure of [the defendant's] costs." Id. at 223. Second, recoupment must be probable; the alleged predator must have the ability to eliminate its competition and then recover its losses through future high prices. Id. at 224.

HN33 [+] Although the Supreme Court has not specified the "appropriate measure" of cost in a predatory pricing case, the generally accepted standard in the First Circuit and most other circuits is whether a seller's prices exceed its incremental (or marginal) cost: "Ordinarily the measure of a 'predatory price' is price below 'incremental cost.' . . . that is to say, the addition to total cost (to the firm) of producing [**51] and selling additional output would exceed the return from selling that additional output." Clamp-All Corp. v. Cast Iron Soil Pipe Inst., 851 F.2d 478, 483 \(1st Cir. 1988\) (Breyer, J.) (emphasis original; citation omitted). See also Barry Wright Corp. v. ITT Grinnell Corp., 724 F.2d 227, 232 \(1st Cir. 1983\) (Breyer, J.).

HN34 [+] Incremental or marginal cost is difficult to measure. The First Circuit and most other circuits, therefore, rely on average variable cost (those costs that change as output changes) as an approximation of incremental cost. In the First Circuit and most others, variable cost is "the normal test of predation[.]" Tri-State Rubbish, Inc. v. Waste Mgmt., Inc., 998 F.2d 1073, 1080 \(1st Cir. 1993\). See also Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 532 \(5th Cir. 1999\); Morgan v. Ponder, 892 F.2d 1355, 1360 \(8th Cir. 1989\); Northeastern Tel. Co. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 651 F.2d 76, 88 \(2d Cir. 1981\).

HN35 [+] Because the antitrust laws seek to promote vigorous price competition resulting in low prices, "we must be mindful that low prices are a positive aspect [**52] of a competitive marketplace and are encouraged by the antitrust laws." Virgin Atl. Airways Ltd., 257 F.3d at 269. Courts, therefore, carefully scrutinize attempted monopolization claims based on predatory pricing. "The requisites for proving predatory pricing are demanding, because the conditions under which it is plausible are not common, and because it can easily be confused with merely low prices which benefit consumers." Tri-State Rubbish, Inc., 998 F.2d at 1080. See also Virgin Atl. Airways Ltd., 257 F.3d at 266 ("The Supreme Court has expressed deep skepticism regarding the viability of proving a predatory pricing scheme."); Stearns Airport Equip. Co., 170 F.3d at 527 (same); Bathke v. Casey's Gen. Stores, Inc., 64 F.3d 340, 343 \(8th Cir. 1995\) (same).

---

<sup>6</sup> LePage's Inc. v. 3M, 324 F.3d 141 \(3d Cir. 2003\), cert. denied, 542 U.S. 953, 124 S. Ct. 2932, 159 L. Ed. 2d 835 (2004), relied on by Plaintiff, is inapposite. The single-product plaintiff in 3M was unable to compete with the defendant's multi-product discounts: The plaintiff's "healthy operating income" fell and became "large operating losses," its sales and its market share declined, and it closed one of its two plants. 324 F.3d at 161-62. Here, Plaintiff has been profitable, its shopper sales have increased, its market share has remained constant, and it has added new production capacity. Moreover, in 3M, the defendant was an admitted monopolist that used its multi-product discounts to prevent the plaintiff from successfully entering the market. Id. at 159-60. Here, Defendant AGP was a new entrant and Plaintiff was the dominant incumbent, whose market share prior to AGP's entry was in excess of 80 percent.

Defendants have presented an analysis by an accounting expert that concludes that Defendant AGP did not price below average variable cost during the 1999-2003 period, i.e., that Defendant AGP maintained [*140] a positive "contribution margin" - revenues less variable costs - for its shopper printing business throughout that period. Plaintiff responded [*53] with an analysis by its economic expert, Dr. Fisher, that examined transactions with particular customers of Defendant AGP, and (among other things) treated discounts granted to those customers by Defendants El Dia and Primera Hora as deductions from Defendant AGP's revenues. Even with those recalculations, however, Dr. Fisher still concluded that Defendant AGP had a 21-percent positive contribution margin for the shopper customers he examined using one methodology, and a 26-percent positive contribution margin for the shopper customers he examined using an alternative methodology. It is, therefore, undisputed that Defendant AGP priced above its average variable costs in its overall shopper printing business.

Dr. Fisher also concluded that a limited number of printing jobs, representing 10 percent of Defendant AGP's sales by one methodology, and 8 percent of Defendant AGP's sales by an alternative methodology, were priced below its average variable costs. Even if Dr. Fisher is correct, HN36 claims of below-cost pricing on a small percentage of a firm's sales are insufficient to raise a triable issue of predatory pricing. HN37 Predation claims cannot be based on occasional instances of allegedly [*54] predatory pricing, because they are not likely to drive rivals from the market and to permit the predator to raise prices and profits subsequently. A predatory pricing plaintiff can prevail only by adducing "evidence suggesting defendants' overall price structure was predatory," not that a small minority of sales were below average variable cost. Morgan, 892 F.2d at 1361 (emphasis original). See also Steams Airport Equip. Co., 170 F.3d at 529 ("[The plaintiff] has introduced no evidence that its survival is threatened by the sales lost to the rare, sporadic predation that it allege[s]."); Taylor Publ'g Co. v. Jostens, Inc., 216 F.3d 465, 478 \(5th Cir. 2000\) (alleged predatory pricing too limited to exclude competitor); Springfield Terminal, 133 F.3d at 109 (one example of below-cost pricing insufficient).<sup>7</sup>

[**55] Dr. Fisher also computed the portion of Defendant AGP's sales that he asserted was below average total cost, i.e., the extent to which Defendant AGP's revenues did not cover both its variable and fixed costs. HN40 Sales below average total cost (in other words, whether a firm has a bottom-line net loss) are irrelevant to predatory pricing analysis in the First Circuit and the majority of other circuits that have adopted the average variable cost standard. Adjusters Replace-A-Car, Inc. v. Agency Rent-A-Car, Inc., 735 F.2d 884, 891, 892 \(5th Cir. 1984\) ("costly error" for plaintiff to interpret statement that defendant "had suffered 'a net loss from operations' [*141] to be effectively an admission of predatory pricing;" plaintiff erroneously ignored "the difference between a net operating loss and a price below average variable cost"); Berlyn, Inc. v. Gazette Newspapers, Inc., 223 F. Supp. 2d 718, 734-35 \(D. Md. 2002\) (summary judgment on predation claim that newspaper's losses were funded by parent company; "Simply losing money is not a 'pricing policy.'"), aff'd, 73 Fed. Appx. 576 \(4th Cir. 2003\).<sup>8</sup>

[**56] 3. Specific Intent to Monopolize

---

<sup>7</sup> Plaintiff also argues that Defendant AGP charged prices below average variable cost to certain customers when it first entered the market in 1997, and shortly thereafter. Docket Document No. 176. HN38 Promotional discounts by new entrants, however, are not regarded as predatory. HN39 "Unless continued over a long period of time, in which case it is no longer promotional, promotional pricing by new entrants . . . [is] no threat to competition. . . . Under these circumstances courts find promotional prices lawful, no matter what that price-cost relationship." III Phillip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law 492 (2002) (footnote omitted). See also Am. Academic Suppliers, Inc. v. Beckley-Cardy, Inc., 922 F.2d 1317, 1322 \(7th Cir. 1991\) ("It is commonplace for new entrants to use deep discounts to persuade customers to switch from established firms. These promotional discounts raise no antitrust problems. . . ., though often they are below incremental cost in a superficial sense."). Moreover, Defendant AGP's general manager in 1997-1998, in testimony offered by Plaintiff, said that the company never priced below cost.

<sup>8</sup> In its complaint, Plaintiff also alleges that Defendant El Dia engaged in below-cost pricing of insertion services in the newspaper. Docket Document No. 1. Plaintiff subsequently contended that Defendant El Dia's above-normal profits on insertion proved that it possessed market power. Docket Document No. 176. Those two positions are inconsistent. Defendants' accounting expert concluded that Defendants priced above average variable costs for insertion services, and there is no genuine dispute that Defendants' insertion pricing was not below any relevant measure of cost.

HN41 [↑] A final requirement of an attempted monopolization claim is evidence that the defendants had a "specific intent to destroy competition or build monopoly[.]" Times-Picayune Publ'g Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 626, 97 L. Ed. 1277, 73 S. Ct. 872 \(1953\). Evidence of a mere desire to increase market share or win customers from a competitor does not suffice. E.g., Spectrum Sports, Inc., 506 U.S. at 459 HN42 [↑] ("the necessary intent to monopolize . . . is something more than an attempt to compete vigorously").

Plaintiff has not shown that any of Defendants' conduct evidences an intent to monopolize the printing market. Plaintiff's principal evidence of intent consists of an affidavit from Defendant AGP's first general manager for the proposition that shortly before Defendant AGP was formed, Defendant AGP hired some of Plaintiff's employees with the knowledge that doing so would harm Plaintiff.

This testimony, however, does not establish an intent to monopolize the printing market. HN43 [↑] Predatory hiring cases must be proved by a showing that the hiring "was made with such predatory intent, i.e., to harm the competition without helping the [**57] [defendant], or by showing a clear nonuse in fact." Universal Analytics, Inc. v. MacNeal-Schwendler Corp., 914 F.2d 1256, 1258 \(9th Cir. 1990\) (emphasis added). Here, it is undisputed that Defendant AGP did use the employees who formerly worked for Plaintiff, and the affidavit acknowledges that hiring the employees benefited Defendant AGP by providing it with skilled employees who would not need to be trained.

Thus, Plaintiff has failed to demonstrate that Defendants had a specific intent to monopolize the printing market.

B. Monopolization

Plaintiff also alleges that Defendant El Dia has monopolized the market for the delivery of shoppers in Puerto Rico. Docket Document No. 1. Plaintiff has failed to raise a triable issue with regard to this claim, and summary judgment is, therefore, appropriate.

HN44 [↑] The offense of monopolization under Section 2 of the Sherman Act requires proof that the defendants (1) have acquired a monopoly in the relevant market and (2) have willfully acquired or maintained that monopoly power. Eastman Kodak Co., 504 U.S. at 481 (citing United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 \(1966\)). [**58]

As a threshold matter, Plaintiff lacks standing to assert an antitrust claim for monopolization of the market for the [*142] delivery of shoppers. HN45 [↑] A private antitrust plaintiff must show "antitrust injury," or "injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent[.]" Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 334, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 \(1990\). Plaintiff is neither a consumer nor a competitor in the delivery market; Plaintiff neither advertises through the use of shoppers nor does it deliver shoppers to consumers in competition with Defendants. HN46 [↑] "Competitors and consumers in the market where trade is allegedly restrained are presumptively the proper plaintiffs to allege antitrust injury." Serpa Corp. v. McWane, Inc., 199 F.3d 6, 10 \(1st Cir. 1999\).

Even if it had standing, Plaintiff has not presented a triable issue as to whether Defendants possess monopoly power in a relevant market. Plaintiff contends that the relevant market is limited to the delivery of shoppers through newspapers of general circulation in Puerto Rico. Plaintiff excludes all other forms of advertising and other methods of delivering shoppers from its market definition. There are [**59] three competing newspaper companies in Puerto Rico that operate four daily newspapers: El Nuevo Dia and Primera Hora (which are under common ownership with Defendants), El Vocero, and the San Juan Star. Plaintiff's complaint alleges that each of these newspapers is in the shopper delivery market. Docket Document No. 1. It is unusual in the United States for cities with populations larger than Puerto Rico to have three independently-owned competitive daily newspapers. Plaintiff has not presented evidence to support the hypothesis that Defendants have monopoly power in shopper delivery despite the presence of two other competing newspapers also available to shopper advertisers.

It is also undisputed that shoppers are delivered to consumers in Puerto Rico by methods other than insertion in daily newspapers. Those other methods include house-to-house delivery, direct mail, and in-store distribution. While these methods may not be perfect substitutes for newspaper delivery, it is undisputed that numerous advertisers use them to distribute significant numbers of shoppers in Puerto Rico. Wal-Mart, for instance, delivers only 15 percent of its shoppers through newspapers. [**60] It is also undisputed that firms exist in Puerto Rico that specialize in such alternative delivery methods, including at one time a firm owned in part by Plaintiff itself. Barriers to entry for such firms appear to be low. See Advo, Inc. v. Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc., 51 F.3d 1191, 1200 (3d Cir. 1995). Once again, Plaintiff has excluded from its market definition competitors that are already competing in the market. HN47[<sup>14</sup>] Courts are reluctant to confine markets for delivery of particular types of advertising to a single method, given the variety of alternatives ordinarily available. Menasha Corp. v. News America Mktg. In-Store, Inc., 354 F.3d 661, 664 (7th Cir. 2004) ("The number of ways to promote a product is large, and even a stranglehold over at-shelf coupon dispensers would affect only a tiny portion of these means."). Plaintiff's market definition is, thus, too narrow.

Finally, Plaintiff does not identify evidence of anticompetitive conduct by the Defendants that constituted the willful acquisition or maintenance of monopoly power in the alleged delivery market. There is no evidence that Defendants took any action that reduced competition either [**61] among daily newspapers, or among alternative shopper delivery methods such as direct mail, house-to-house delivery, and in-store distribution.

C. Violations of Puerto Rico Antitrust Laws

Plaintiff alleges that Defendants also have violated the antitrust laws of [*143] Puerto Rico, 10 P.R. LAWS ANN. §§ 258, 260 and 268 (1997 & Supp. 2001). Docket Document No. 1. HN48[<sup>15</sup>] Puerto Rico's antitrust laws, however, mirror the federal antitrust statutes. See Coastal Fuels of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Caribbean Petroleum Corp., 79 F.3d 182 (1st Cir. 1996); Podiatrist Ass'n, Inc. v. La Cruz Azul De Puerto Rico, Inc., 332 F.3d 6, 16 (1st Cir. 2003); Leopoldo Fontanillas, Inc. v. Luis Ayala Colon Sucesores, Inc., 283 F. Supp. 2d 579, 592 (D.P.R. 2003). Plaintiff bases its Puerto Rico law antitrust claim on the same allegations that serve as the basis for its federal law antitrust claim. Accordingly, for the same reasons Plaintiff's federal antitrust claims fail as a matter of law, Plaintiff's Puerto Rico law antitrust claim also fails as a matter of law.

D. Unfair Trade Practices

Plaintiff also asserts a claim for [**62] unfair trade practices under Article 1802 of the Puerto Rico Civil Code, 31 P.R. LAWS ANN. § 5141 (1991 & Supp. 2001)). Docket Document No. 1. HN49[<sup>16</sup>] The elements of a claim under Article 1802 are (1) proof of the reality of the damage suffered; (2) a causal relationship between this damage and the action or omission of another person; and (3) said act or omission is negligent or wrongful. Woods-Leber v. Hyatt Hotels of Puerto Rico, Inc., 951 F. Supp. 1028, 1035-36 (D.P.R. 1996).

Plaintiff has not established that Defendants committed any negligent or wrongful acts. On the contrary, we have found that Defendants have engaged in legitimate competition as a matter of law. Accordingly, Plaintiff cannot prove that any of Defendants' conduct constitutes an unfair trade practice under Article 1802.

E. Tortious Interference

Plaintiff also asserts a claim for tortious interference with business and contractual relationships. Docket Document No. 1. HN50[<sup>17</sup>] To establish such a claim, Plaintiff must show: "(1) the existence of a contract; (2) that the interfering party acted with intent and knowledge of the existence of a contract; (3) that [**63] plaintiff suffered damages; and (4) that there exists a causal link between the injury and the interfering party's actions." Fontanillas, 283 F. Supp. 2d at 588 (citing General Office Prods. Corp. v. A.M. Capen's Sons, Inc., 15 P.R. Offic. Trans. 727, 115 D.P.R. 553, 558-59 (1984)). Moreover, HN51[<sup>18</sup>] when the contract allegedly interfered with is terminable at will, "the privilege of competition has been recognized. In such a case, there is no contract right to have the relation continued, but only an expectancy," which is not actionable. Id. (quoting Dolphin Int'l of Puerto Rico v. Ryder Truck Lines, 127 D.P.R. 869, 883, 1991 Juris P.R. 13 (1991)).

Here, Plaintiff has not identified any specific contract that Defendants are alleged to have interfered with, let alone evidence from which a finder of fact could determine whether any such contract was terminable at will. Instead,

Plaintiff relies on the general assertion that "shopper printing is handled mainly on a contract basis," Docket Document No. 176, and identifies specific accounts that it claims Defendants "targeted," in some cases unsuccessfully. Id. Because Plaintiff and Defendant AGP are competitors, that Defendant [**64] AGP gained customers from Plaintiff is neither surprising nor unlawful. Even if the customers taken by Defendant AGP had contracts with Plaintiff - which Plaintiff has not established - the burden is on Plaintiff to show that the contracts were in effect when the customer switched printers, that the contracts were not terminable at will, and that Defendant AGP was aware of the existence and non-terminable nature of the contracts. Plaintiff has made no such showing.

[*144] Finally, Plaintiff relies on evidence of Defendant AGP's hiring of Plaintiff's employees in 1997 in support of its tortious interference claim. We previously dismissed Plaintiff's predatory hiring claim as barred by the statute of limitations, Docket Document No. 59, and need not revisit the claim here.

IV.

Conclusion

This case falls into the category of antitrust actions against which the Supreme Court warned: It has been brought by a dominant competitor against a new entrant and has had potentially-serious anticompetitive effects. The record includes depositions from fifteen advertisers who have testified to the pro-competitive impact of having a new commercial printer in Puerto Rico. Plaintiff's [**65] case, by contrast, has been marked by legal theories that conflict with controlling Supreme Court and First Circuit precedents, and factual allegations unsupported by any facts or based upon implausible inferences.

In accordance with the foregoing, we GRANT Defendants' summary judgment motion as to all remaining counts of the complaint. Judgment shall be entered accordingly.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, this 3rd day of June, 2005.

S/Jose Antonio Fuste

JOSE ANTONIO FUSTE

Chief U. S. District Judge

---

End of Document

Mothershed v. Justices of the Supreme Court

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

April 15, 2005, Argued and Submitted, San Francisco, California ; June 6, 2005, Filed

No. 03-16878

Reporter

410 F.3d 602 *; 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 10407 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,826

GEORGE L. MOTHERSHED, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT; CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT, STATE OF ARIZONA; SUPREME COURT OF ARIZONA DISCIPLINARY COMMISSION; HEARING OFFICER; BAR COUNSEL OF ARIZONA STATE BAR ASSOCIATION; STATE OF OKLAHOMA JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT; OKLAHOMA PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY TRIBUNAL OF THE SUPREME COURT, Chief Master; OKLAHOMA PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY TRIBUNAL OF THE SUPREME COURT, Trial Panel of February 1, 2002; GENERAL COUNSEL OF OKLAHOMA BAR ASSOCIATION; TRIAL COUNSEL OF OKLAHOMA BAR ASSOCIATION; RUDOLPH HARGRAVE, Oklahoma Supreme Chief Justice; MADELINE HARGRAVE, Wife; ROBERT E. LAVENDER, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; MAXINE LAVENDER, Wife; JOSEPH M. WATT, Vice-Chief Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; CATHY WATT, Wife; RALPH B. HODGES, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; JANELLE HODGES, Wife; MARIAN P. OPALA, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; JANE DOE OPALA, Wife; DANIEL J. BOUDREAU, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; JANE DOE BOUDREAU, Wife; YVONNE KAUGER, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; NED BASTOW, Husband; HARDY SUMMERS, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; MARILYN SUMMERS, Wife; JAMES WINCHESTER, Justice, Oklahoma Supreme Court; SUSAN WINCHESTER, Wife; J. DANIEL MORGAN, Chief Master, Professional Responsibility Tribunal of the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma; JANE DOE MORGAN, Wife; J. PATRICK KENT, Presiding Master, Professional Responsibility Tribunal of the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma; JANE DOE KENT, Wife; ROBERT L. HERT, JR., Member of Trial Panel of the Professional Responsibility Tribunal of the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma; JANE DOE HERT, Wife; DANA WILLIAMS, Member of Trial Panel of the Professional Responsibility Tribunal of the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma; DALE CABINESS, Member of Trial Panel of the Professional Responsibility Tribunal of the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma; JANE DOE CABINESS, Wife; DAN MURDOCK, General Counsel, Supreme Court of Oklahoma; JANE DOE MURDOCK, Wife; ALLEN J. WELCH, Bar Counsel, Oklahoma Supreme Court; JANE DOE WELCH, Wife; CHARLES E. JONES, Chief Justice, Arizona Supreme Court; JANE DOE JONES, Wife; RUTH V. MCGREGOR, Vice Chief Justice, Arizona Supreme Court; JOHN DOE MCGREGOR, Husband; STANLEY FELDMAN, Justice, Arizona Supreme Court; JANE DOE FELDMAN, Wife; REBECCA WHITE BERCH, Justice, Arizona Supreme Court; JOHN DOE BERCH, Husband; MICHAEL D. RYAN, Justice, Arizona Supreme Court; JANE DOE RYAN, Wife; PETER CAHILL, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; JESSICA GIFFORD FUNKHOUSER, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; CYNTHIA L. CHOATE, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; BARBARA ATWOOD, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; C. ALAN BOWMAN, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; CRAIG MEHRENS, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; STEVEN G. NELSON, Member of the Disciplinary Commission of the Supreme Court of Arizona; LOREN J. BRAUD, Bar Counsel, Arizona Supreme Court aka Loren J. Broad; JANE DOE BRAUD, Wife aka Jane Doe Broad; JOHN PRESSLEY TODD, Hearing Office 7X, Arizona Supreme Court; JANE DOE TODD, Wife; NOEL K. DESSAINT, Clerk, Arizona Supreme Court; WILLIAM M. SPENCE, Attorney; JANE DOE SPENCE, Wife, Defendants-Appellees.

Subsequent History: Amended by, Rehearing denied by Mothershed v. Justices of the Supreme Court, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 14804 \(9th Cir. Ariz., July 21, 2005\)

410 F.3d 602, *602L 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 10407, **10407

Reprinted as amended at *Mothershed v. Justices of the Supreme Court, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 14812 \(9th Cir. Ariz., July 21, 2005\)*

Prior History: [\[\*\*1\]](#) Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. D.C. No. CV-02-02375-RCB. Robert C. Broomfield, District Judge, Presiding.

*State ex rel. Okla. Bar Ass'n v. Mothershed, 2003 OK 34, 66 P.3d 420, 2003 Okla. LEXIS 37 \(Okla., 2003\)*

Disposition: AFFIRMED.

Core Terms

---

Antitrust, district court, disciplinary proceeding, regulation, practice of law, challenges, state court, disciplinary, state bar, Sherman Act, out-of-state, quotation, marks, subject matter jurisdiction, lower federal court, federal court, restrictions, lack subject matter jurisdiction, anti trust law, overbreadth, proceedings, state-court, decisions, licensed

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > Disciplinary Proceedings > Hearings

**HN1**  Disciplinary Proceedings, Hearings

See Okla. R. Disc. Proc. 6.7, Okla. Stat. tit. 5, ch. 1, app. 1-A.

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

**HN2**  Legal Ethics, Practice Qualifications

Ariz. Sup. Ct. R. 33(d) provides that a member in good standing of the bar of another State may be admitted to appear pro hac vice in Arizona upon approval by the court hearing the matter.

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

**HN3**  Legal Ethics, Practice Qualifications

Ariz. Sup. Ct. R. 34 lists the requirements for admission to the State Bar of Arizona, which include passing the bar examination and being certified by the Committee on Character and Fitness as possessing good moral character.

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction on Certiorari > Considerations Governing Review > State Court Decisions

**HN4**  Considerations Governing Review, State Court Decisions

The Rooker-Feldman doctrine's applicability is confined to cases of the kind from which the doctrine acquired its name: cases brought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court judgments rendered before the district court proceedings commenced and inviting district court review and rejection of those judgments.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > State Court Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction on Certiorari > Considerations Governing Review > State Court Decisions

HN5 Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Jurisdiction Over Actions

Under Rooker-Feldman, lower federal courts are without subject matter jurisdiction to review state court decisions, and state court litigants may therefore only obtain federal review by filing a petition for a writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court of the United States. The doctrine does not, however, prohibit a plaintiff from presenting a generally applicable legal challenge to a state statute in federal court, even if that statute has previously been applied against him in state court litigation.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > Disbarments

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Federal Questions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction on Certiorari > Considerations Governing Review > State Court Decisions

HN6 Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Jurisdiction Over Actions

United States district courts have subject-matter jurisdiction over general challenges to state bar rules, promulgated by state courts in nonjudicial proceedings, which do not require review of a final state-court judgment in a particular case. They do not have jurisdiction, however, over challenges to state-court decisions in particular cases arising out of judicial proceedings even if those challenges allege that the state court's action was unconstitutional. Review of those decisions may be had only in the United States Supreme Court.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

HN7 Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Jurisdiction Over Actions

Where subject-matter jurisdiction will involve no arduous inquiry, both expedition and sensitivity to state courts' coequal stature should impel a federal court to dispose of that issue first.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN8 [down] Appeals, Standards of Review

A circuit court of appeals may affirm a district court's dismissal on any ground supported by the record.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

HN9 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The United States Supreme Court has held that the Sherman Act does not apply to certain categories of state action. One of these categories is the regulation of attorneys by a state supreme court.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

HN10 [down] Scope, Exemptions

Ariz. Sup. Ct. R. 33(d) and 34 are compelled by direction of the State acting as a sovereign and are exempt from Sherman Act challenges.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN11 [down] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

The Arizona Uniform State Antitrust Act is interpreted in conformity with the federal antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN12 [down] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1412.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

HN13 [blue icon] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

In light of the Arizona legislature's avowed desire to achieve uniformity between the Uniform State Antitrust Act and the federal antitrust laws, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit concludes that the Arizona Supreme Court would most likely hold that its rules governing attorney conduct are not amenable to state law antitrust challenges.

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN14 [blue icon] Federal & State Interrelationships, Erie Doctrine

When interpreting state law, federal courts are bound by decisions of the state's highest court. In the absence of such a decision, a federal court must predict how the highest state court would decide the issue.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > Third Party Standing

Constitutional Law > ... > Case or Controversy > Standing > Third Party Standing

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > Scope

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Standing

Governments > Legislation > Overbreadth

HN15 [blue icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

A plaintiff generally must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties. This limitation is relaxed in the First Amendment context, however, because when there is a danger of chilling free speech, society's interest in having the statute challenged may outweigh the prudential considerations that normally counsel against third-party standing. A plaintiff's ability to invoke so-called "overbreadth standing" has nothing to do with whether or not his own First Amendment rights are at stake but instead depends upon whether the plaintiff satisfies the requirement of injury-in-fact, and whether he can be expected satisfactorily to frame the issues in the case.

Constitutional Law > Bill of Rights > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Association

410 F.3d 602, *602L<sup>A</sup>2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 10407, **1

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Right to Counsel > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > Scope

Constitutional Law > Bill of Rights > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom to Petition

HN16 [blue speech bubble icon] Fundamental Freedoms, Freedom of Association

The right to hire and consult an attorney is protected by the *First Amendment's* guarantee of freedom of speech, association and petition.

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Right to Counsel > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

HN17 [blue speech bubble icon] Counsel, Right to Counsel

While the United States Supreme Court has acknowledged that the right to consult with an attorney falls within the *First Amendment's* purview, the Court has also repeatedly emphasized that the States have broad power to regulate the practice of law. The Court has explained that the interest of the States in regulating lawyers is especially great since lawyers are essential to the primary governmental function of administering justice, and have historically been officers of the courts.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel > Right to Counsel > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom of Speech > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > General Overview

HN18 [blue speech bubble icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

In order to further its substantial interest in regulating the legal profession, the State of Arizona may institute reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions on Arizonans' *First Amendment* right to consult with an attorney. Time, place, and manner regulations are reasonable provided that the restrictions are justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech, that they are narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest, and that they leave open ample alternative channels for communication of the information.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

HN19 [blue download icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

The principal inquiry in determining content neutrality is whether the government has adopted a regulation of speech because of disagreement with the message it conveys. Speech restrictions are content-neutral when they can be justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

HN20 [blue download icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

Ariz. Sup. Ct. R. 33(d) and 34 are content-neutral because they impose a generally applicable prohibition on the retention of out-of-state counsel without regard to the subject matter of the representation. (The rules do not, for example, prohibit out-of-state counsel from undertaking only certain categories of representation, such as suits against the State or against tobacco companies).

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

HN21 [blue download icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

A time, place, and manner regulation is narrowly tailored as long as the substantial governmental interest it serves would be achieved less effectively absent the regulation and the regulation achieves its ends without significantly restricting a substantial quantity of speech that does not create the same evils.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

Governments > Courts > Rule Application & Interpretation

Legal Ethics > Unauthorized Practice of Law

Legal Ethics > Practice Qualifications

HN22 [blue download icon] Judicial & Legislative Restraints, Time, Place & Manner Restrictions

The State of Arizona has a significant interest in regulating the practice of law within its boundaries and Ariz. Sup. Ct. R. 33(d) and 34 further that interest by ensuring that attorneys practicing in the State are qualified and possess a familiarity with Arizona law.

Counsel: George L. Mothershed, Phoenix, Arizona, argued the cause for the appellant and filed a brief.

LeslieAnn Haacke, Renaud Cook Drury Mesaros, P.A., Phoenix, Arizona, argued the cause for the appellees; Terry Goddard, Attorney General, Phoenix, Arizona, Rosa Mroz, Assistant Attorney General, Phoenix, Arizona, N. Todd McKay, Renaud Cook Drury Mesaros, P.A., Phoenix, Arizona, Charles K. Babb, Assistant Attorney General, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and Allen J. Welch, Oklahoma Bar Association, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, were on the brief.

Judges: Before: Alfred T. Goodwin, Robert R. Beezer, and Diarmuid F. O'Scannlain, Circuit Judges. Opinion by Judge O'Scannlain.

Opinion by: Diarmuid F. O'Scannlain

Opinion

---

[*604] O'SCANNLAIN, Circuit Judge:

We must decide whether a disbarred attorney may collaterally attack his state bar disciplinary proceedings in federal court.

[*605] I

In 1999, the State Bar of Arizona initiated disciplinary proceedings against George L. Mothershed, an attorney who was licensed by the Oklahoma Bar Association but who lived and [*2] practiced in Arizona. In response to the disciplinary board's allegation that he had unlawfully practiced law in the State, Mothershed entered a special appearance and moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that he had not received a summons. The hearing officer denied this motion, and Mothershed subsequently refused to participate further in the disciplinary proceedings. A default judgment was entered against him, and the Supreme Court of Arizona issued an order censuring Mothershed for engaging in the unauthorized practice of law. See In re Mothershed, No. SB-01-0076-D, 2001 Ariz. LEXIS 63 (2001).

The Oklahoma Bar Association thereafter initiated its own disciplinary proceedings against Mothershed. A three-member trial panel found that he had unlawfully practiced law in Arizona, and the Supreme Court of Oklahoma entered an order disbarring him. See State ex rel. Okla. Bar Ass'n v. Mothershed, 2003 OK 34, 66 P.3d 420, 428 (Okla. 2003).

Mothershed responded by filing suit in the United States District Court for the District of Arizona against the Justices of the Oklahoma Supreme Court, the three members of the Oklahoma disciplinary trial panel, [*3] and several officials of the Oklahoma Bar Association (the "Oklahoma Defendants"). He also sued the Justices of the Arizona Supreme Court, the Clerk of the Arizona Supreme Court, the members of the Arizona Supreme Court Disciplinary Commission, the hearing officer in the Arizona disciplinary proceedings, and a state bar staff counsel (the "Arizona Defendants"). Mothershed alleged that the Arizona disciplinary proceedings were invalid because he had not been served with a summons. He contended that the Oklahoma proceedings were likewise defective because his hearing did not occur between thirty and sixty days after appointment of the trial panel, as required by Rule 6.7 of the Oklahoma Rules Governing Disciplinary Proceedings.<sup>1</sup> Based upon these alleged procedural shortcomings, Mothershed asserted a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for due process and other constitutional violations, as well as state law tort claims for interference with contractual relationships, defamation, abuse of process, malicious prosecution, false light, and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

---

<sup>1</sup> The rule provides:

HN1 [The Chief Master or Vice-Chief Master of the Professional Responsibility Tribunal shall notify the respondent and the General Counsel of the appointment and membership of the Trial Panel and of the time and place for hearing, which shall not be less than thirty (30) nor more than sixty (60) days from the date of appointment of the Trial Panel. Extensions of this period may be granted by the Chief Master (or the Vice-Chief Master, in case of the unavailability of the Chief Master) for good cause shown.]

[**4] Mothershed also contended that Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34,<sup>2</sup> which set forth the pro hac vice admission requirements for out-of-state attorneys and the standards for admission to the State Bar of Arizona, violate Arizonans' First Amendment right to consult with an attorney and contravene both the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, and the Arizona Uniform State Antitrust Act, ARIZ. REV. STAT. § 44-1402. Mothershed requested damages totaling more than $ 330 million [*606] and an injunction reinstating his membership in the Oklahoma Bar Association and prohibiting the defendants from interfering with his Arizona law practice.

[**5] After the defendants moved to dismiss the complaint on various grounds, the district court dismissed the Oklahoma defendants due to the absence of personal jurisdiction. The court later dismissed the claims against the Arizona defendants on the ground that Mothershed was improperly seeking review of the Arizona bar disciplinary proceedings in a lower federal court and that subject matter jurisdiction was therefore absent under the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. Mothershed timely appealed.

II

In the face of growing judicial uncertainty about HN4↑ the Rooker-Feldman doctrine's parameters, the Supreme Court recently reiterated that its applicability "is confined to cases of the kind from which the doctrine acquired its name: cases brought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court judgments rendered before the district court proceedings commenced and inviting district court review and rejection of those judgments." Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Saudi Basic Indus. Corp., 544 U.S. 280, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 1521-22 (2005); see also Rooker v. Fid. Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413, 416, 68 L. Ed. 362, 44 S. Ct. 149 (1923); D.C. Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462, 486-87, 75 L. Ed. 2d 206, 103 S. Ct. 1303 (1983). [*6]

We must therefore decide whether Mothershed's claims fall within the Rooker-Feldman doctrine's narrowed scope.

A

HN5↑ Under Rooker-Feldman, lower federal courts are without subject matter jurisdiction to review state court decisions, and state court litigants may therefore only obtain federal review by filing a petition for a writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court of the United States. See Rooker, 263 U.S. at 416 (holding that a federal district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over a suit that effectively sought review of an Indiana state court's decision); Feldman, 460 U.S. at 486-87 (holding that a federal district court was without subject matter jurisdiction to entertain a challenge to a decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals); see also 28 U.S.C. § 1257 ("Final judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari . . . ."). The doctrine does not, however, prohibit a plaintiff from presenting a generally applicable legal challenge to a state statute in federal court, even if that statute [*7] has previously been applied against him in state court litigation.

This distinction is well illustrated by the Feldman decision itself. There, two aspiring attorneys had petitioned the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for a waiver of a D.C. bar rule requiring applicants to have graduated from an accredited law school. Feldman, 460 U.S. at 466. After the Court of Appeals denied their petitions, the plaintiffs filed suit in federal district court challenging both the D.C. bar rule's general constitutionality and the District of Columbia court's decision in their particular cases. Id. at 468, 472. The Supreme Court held that the district court possessed subject matter jurisdiction over the former claim but not the latter. Id. at 486-87. The Court explained:

HN6↑ United States district courts . . . have subject-matter jurisdiction over general challenges to state bar rules, promulgated [*607] by state courts in nonjudicial proceedings, which do not require review of a final state-court judgment in a particular case. They do not have jurisdiction, however, over challenges to state-court decisions in particular cases arising out of [**8] judicial proceedings even if those challenges allege that the state court's action was unconstitutional. Review of those decisions may be had only in this Court.

<sup>2</sup> HN2↑ Rule 33(d) provides that a member in good standing of the bar of another State may be admitted to appear pro hac vice in Arizona upon approval by the court hearing the matter. HN3↑ Rule 34 lists the requirements for admission to the State Bar of Arizona, which include passing the bar examination and being certified by the Committee on Character and Fitness as possessing good moral character.

Id. at 486; see also id. at 482 n.16 ("Orders of a state court relating to the admission, discipline, and disbarment of members of its bar may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court of the United States on certiorari to the state court, and not by means of an original action in a lower federal court." (quoting MacKay v. Nesbett, 412 F.2d 846, 846 (9th Cir. 1969)) (alteration in original)).

Similarly, in Craig v. State Bar of California, 141 F.3d 1353, 1354 (9th Cir. 1998) (per curiam), the plaintiff filed a § 1983 claim in federal court against the California bar after the state supreme court denied review of the California Committee of Bar Examiners' refusal to modify the new-attorney oath to comport with his religious beliefs. We held that subject matter jurisdiction was absent because the plaintiff was seeking review of his individual claim and did not present a general challenge to the California bar's policy. Id. We reasoned that a plaintiff [**9] can challenge the state supreme court's denial of bar admission to a particular applicant, the validity of the state's rules governing admission, or both. Lower federal courts lack subject matter jurisdiction over the first type of challenge . . . . In contrast, a general attack on a state's admissions rules may be heard by lower federal courts because a state supreme court acts in a nonjudicial capacity when it promulgates such rules.

Id. (citation omitted).

B

Mothershed alleges that the Oklahoma defendants denied him due process and committed various state law torts because the Oklahoma bar disciplinary panel did not hold its hearing within the thirty-to-sixty-day time frame required by Rule 6.7 of the Rules Governing Disciplinary Proceedings. Because Mothershed does not contend that Rule 6.7 is systematically disregarded in all attorney disciplinary proceedings or that the rule is itself facially invalid, he is not asserting a "general challenge[] to [a] state bar rule[]." Feldman, 460 U.S. at 486. Rather, Mothershed is alleging that the Oklahoma defendants failed to apply Rule 6.7 during his own state bar disciplinary hearing, which constitutes [**10] a "challenge[] to [a] state-court decision[] in [a] particular case[]." Id. Under the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, the district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to review Mothershed's Oklahoma disciplinary proceedings, and we therefore affirm the dismissal of the Oklahoma defendants.<sup>3</sup>

[**11] C

Mothershed's claims premised upon the alleged absence of a summons directing him to appear at the Arizona disciplinary [*608] hearing are likewise barred by the Rooker-Feldman doctrine because these claims constitute a particularized challenge to the Arizona disciplinary proceedings' results. The district court therefore correctly concluded that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction over Mothershed's § 1983 and state law tort claims against the Arizona defendants, all of which are premised upon his failure to receive a summons.

D

Mothershed also alleges, however, that the admission requirements set forth in Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 violate Arizonans' First Amendment right to consult an attorney of their choosing and contravene both the Sherman Antitrust Act and the Arizona Uniform State Antitrust Act. These claims pertain to the rules' validity as applied to all attorneys within Arizona (and, indeed, all Arizona residents) and thus do not present an individualized challenge to Mothershed's bar disciplinary proceedings. Rather--like the Feldman plaintiffs' general constitutional attack on the D.C. bar's accreditation requirement--these claims constitute [**12] a general challenge to the rules governing admission to the Arizona bar. See Hoover v. Ronwin, 466 U.S. 558, 564-65, 80 L. Ed. 2d 590, 104 S. Ct. 1989 (1984) (entertaining a Sherman Act challenge to the Arizona bar exam's grading methodology brought by an attorney who had earlier contested his own exam results in separate Arizona state court proceedings).

<sup>3</sup>The district court's dismissal of the Oklahoma defendants was premised upon the absence of personal jurisdiction, not subject matter jurisdiction. HN7 Where "subject-matter jurisdiction will involve no arduous inquiry," however, "both expedition and sensitivity to state courts' coequal stature should impel the federal court to dispose of that issue first." Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 587-88, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760, 119 S. Ct. 1563 (1999). Here, the subject matter jurisdiction inquiry involves a straightforward application of the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, and we accordingly adhere to the Supreme Court's admonition by relying upon the lack of subject matter jurisdiction to dismiss the Oklahoma defendants.

Because "a general attack on a state's admissions rules may be heard by lower federal courts," Craig, 141 F.3d at 1354, the district court erred by concluding that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction over Mothershed's First Amendment and antitrust claims against the Arizona defendants.

III

Although the district court did indeed possess subject matter jurisdiction over Mothershed's general challenges to the Arizona Supreme Court rules, HN8[<sup>1</sup>] we "may affirm the district court's dismissal on any ground supported by the record." Wolfe v. Strankman, 392 F.3d 358, 362 (9th Cir. 2004). We first consider Mothershed's antitrust claims and then turn to his First Amendment challenge.

A

In Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 352, 87 L. Ed. 315, 63 S. Ct. 307 (1943), HN9[<sup>1</sup>] the Supreme Court held that the Sherman Act does [**13] not apply to certain categories of state action. Later decisions have held that one of these categories is the regulation of attorneys by a state supreme court. In Bates v. State Bar of Arizona, 433 U.S. 350, 359, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810, 97 S. Ct. 2691 (1977), for example, the plaintiffs alleged that an Arizona bar disciplinary rule prohibiting advertising by attorneys violated the Sherman Act. The Court determined that the Arizona Supreme Court--not the state bar--was the "real party in interest." Id. at 361. That court had "adopted the rules," id., and was "the ultimate body wielding the State's power over the practice of law," id. at 360. Because the advertising restrictions were "compelled by direction of the State acting as a sovereign," id. (internal quotation marks omitted), they were not amenable to a Sherman Act challenge.

Likewise, in Hoover v. Ronwin, 466 U.S. at 565, a plaintiff who had failed the Arizona bar exam filed suit against the members of the Committee on Examinations and Admissions alleging that the manner in which they graded the exam violated the Sherman Act. Although the individual members of the Committee [**14] were [*609] the named defendants, the Court concluded that the suit was barred by Parker's state-action exception because the "Arizona Supreme Court necessarily delegated the administration of the admissions process to the Committee . . . and retained the sole authority to determine who should be admitted to the practice of law in Arizona." Id. at 573. Accordingly, the conduct being "challenge[d] was in reality that of the Arizona Supreme Court." Id.; cf. Goldfarb v. Va. State Bar, 421 U.S. 773, 790, 44 L. Ed. 2d 572, 95 S. Ct. 2004 (1975) (holding that a minimum fee schedule enforced by the Virginia state bar did not fall within the Parker exception because the fee schedule was not mandated by the Virginia Supreme Court and thus it could not "fairly be said that the State of Virginia through its Supreme Court Rules required the anticompetitive activities").

Here, Mothershed alleges that Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 violate the Sherman Act. These claims are squarely foreclosed by Bates and Hoover. Although Mothershed's claim is nominally against certain state bar officials and the Supreme Court Justices in their individual capacities, it [**15] is the Supreme Court of Arizona that is the "real party in interest" because the state bar rules that Mothershed is challenging are promulgated by the court in its supervisory role over the practice of law in Arizona. See In re Shannon, 179 Ariz. 52, 876 P.2d 548, 571 (Ariz. 1994) ("the determination of who shall practice law in Arizona and under what condition is a function placed by the state constitution in this court" (internal quotation marks omitted)). HN10[<sup>1</sup>] Rules 33(d) and 34 are therefore "compelled by direction of the State acting as a sovereign," Bates, 433 U.S. at 360 (internal quotation marks omitted), and are exempt from Sherman Act challenges.

B

Mothershed also asserts a state antitrust claim under Arizona law. HN11 [↑] The Arizona Uniform State Antitrust Act "is interpreted in conformity with the federal [antitrust laws]." Arizona v. Maricopa County Med. Soc'y, 643 F.2d 553, 554 n.1 \(9th Cir. 1980\), rev'd on other grounds, 457 U.S. 332, 73 L. Ed. 2d 48, 102 S. Ct. 2466 \(1982\); see also Wedgewood Inv. Corp. v. Int'l Harvester Co., 126 Ariz. 157, 613 P.2d 620, 623 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1979) ("The Arizona legislature clearly [**16] intended to strive for uniformity between federal and state antitrust laws."). Indeed, ARIZ. REV. STAT. § 44-1412 explicitly provides, HN12 [↑] "It is the intent of the legislature that in construing [the Uniform State Antitrust Act], the courts may use as a guide interpretations given by the federal courts to comparable federal antitrust statutes." Cf. Bunkers Glass Co. v. Pilkington PLC, 206 Ariz. 9, 75 P.3d 99, 102, 106 \(Ariz. 2003\) (acknowledging the federal antitrust laws' general "importance" to the interpretation of the Uniform State Antitrust Act, while also observing that Arizona courts need not "rigidly follow federal precedent on every issue of antitrust law regardless of whether differing concerns and interests exist in the state and federal systems").

No court has previously had occasion to consider whether there exists a state-action exception to the Arizona antitrust laws. Nevertheless, HN13 [↑] in light of the Arizona legislature's avowed desire to achieve uniformity between the Uniform State Antitrust Act and the federal antitrust laws, the Arizona Supreme Court would most likely follow Bates and Hoover and hold that its rules [**17] governing attorney conduct are not amenable to state law antitrust challenges. See Assurance Co. of Am. v. Wall & Assocs. LLC of Olympia, 379 F.3d 557, 560 \(9th Cir. 2004\) HN14 [↑] ("When interpreting [*610] state law, federal courts are bound by decisions of the state's highest court. In the absence of such a decision, a federal court must predict how the highest state court would decide the issue . . ." (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)). Mothershed's state law antitrust claim therefore fails for the same reason as its federal counterpart.

C

Mothershed contends that Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 violate the First Amendment right of Arizonans to consult with a lawyer of their choosing. Because Mothershed does not allege that he has himself suffered a First Amendment injury, we must first determine whether he has standing to pursue this claim on behalf of other Arizonans.

1

HN15 [↑] A "plaintiff generally must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties." Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 499, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343, 95 S. Ct. 2197 \(1975\). This limitation is relaxed in the First Amendment [**18] context, however, because "when there is a danger of chilling free speech, . . . society's interest in having the statute challenged" may outweigh the prudential considerations that normally counsel against third-party standing. Sec'y of State v. Joseph H. Munson Co., 467 U.S. 947, 956, 81 L. Ed. 2d 786, 104 S. Ct. 2839 \(1984\). A plaintiff's ability to invoke so-called "overbreadth standing" "has nothing to do with whether or not [his] own First Amendment rights are at stake" but instead depends upon whether the plaintiff "satisfies the requirement of 'injury-in-fact,' and whether [he] can be expected satisfactorily to frame the issues in the case." Id. at 958; see also Gospel Missions of Am. v. City of Los Angeles, 328 F.3d 548, 554 \(9th Cir. 2003\) ("the requirements of 'overbreadth standing' [are] injury-in-fact and the ability to frame the issues in the case satisfactorily").

In Secretary of State v. Joseph H. Munson Co., 467 U.S. at 950, for example, a for-profit company that charged charities a fee for raising funds on their behalf brought a First Amendment challenge to a Maryland statute that prevented charities from paying [**19] more than 25% of their funds as expenses. Although the plaintiff was not itself a charity and did not allege that its own First Amendment rights were infringed, id. at 955, the Court concluded that the company had overbreadth standing to pursue the claim. The Court reasoned that, as a result of the statute, charities were reluctant to contract with the plaintiff because it charged fees in excess of 25% and that the plaintiff's impetus to challenge the statute was therefore consonant with the charities' First Amendment interests. Id. at 958 ("The activity sought to be protected is at the heart of the business relationship between Munson and its clients, and Munson's interests in challenging the statute are completely consistent with the First Amendment interests of the charities it represents."); see also Clark v. City of Lakewood, 259 F.3d 996, 1010-11 \(9th Cir. 2001\) (holding that the owner of an adult entertainment establishment had overbreadth standing to pursue a First Amendment challenge against provisions of an ordinance that required the employees of such establishments to obtain a license because the licensing scheme--although [\[\*\*20\]](#) not directly applicable to the owner--threatened his business's viability).

Here, Mothershed alleges that the prohibitions embodied in Rules 33(d) and 34 have a chilling effect upon Arizonans' [\[\*611\]](#) purported First Amendment right to consult with out-of-state counsel. Like the plaintiff in Munson, Mothershed--though not alleging any First Amendment harm to himself--has incurred a financial injury because these rules prevent him from practicing law in the State. Mothershed's violation of these provisions has also resulted in his being censured by the Arizona Supreme Court. Moreover, Mothershed has a strong interest in obtaining the invalidation of Rules 33(d) and 34 because he desires to practice law in Arizona without being admitted to the state bar. Mothershed therefore satisfies our requirements for overbreadth standing because he has suffered an injury-in-fact and can be expected to pursue the First Amendment claim vigorously. See id. at 1011 (concluding that the owner of the adult entertainment establishment could "satisfactorily frame the issues in the case" because he "ha[d] a vested interest in having the [licensing] Ordinance over-turned").

2

Although [\[\*\*21\]](#) the First Amendment's applicability in the area of lawyer-client relations is not well-defined, we recognize that--at least as a general matter--HN16↑ the "right to hire and consult an attorney is protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech, association and petition." Denius v. Dunlap, 209 F.3d 944, 953 (7th Cir. 2000); see also United Mine Workers of Am. v. Ill. State Bar Ass'n, 389 U.S. 217, 221-22, 19 L. Ed. 2d 426, 88 S. Ct. 353 (1967) (holding that a union had a First Amendment right to employ a salaried attorney to represent members pursuing workers' compensation claims); DeLoach v. Bevers, 922 F.2d 618, 620 (10th Cir. 1990) ("The right to retain and consult an attorney . . . implicates . . . clearly established First Amendment rights of association and free speech.").

HN17↑ While the Supreme Court has acknowledged that the right to consult with an attorney falls within the First Amendment's purview, the Court has also repeatedly emphasized that "the States have broad power to regulate the practice of law." Ill. State Bar Ass'n, 389 U.S. at 222. The Court has explained that the "interest of the States in regulating [\[\*\*22\]](#) lawyers is especially great since lawyers are essential to the primary governmental function of administering justice, and have historically been 'officers of the courts.'" Goldfarb, 421 U.S. at 792.

HN18↑ In order to further its substantial interest in regulating the legal profession, the State of Arizona may institute reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions on Arizonans' First Amendment right to consult with an attorney. Time, place, and manner regulations are reasonable provided that "the restrictions 'are justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech, that they are narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest, and that they leave open ample alternative channels for communication of the information.'" Kuba v. 1-A Agric. Ass'n, 387 F.3d 850, 858 (9th Cir. 2004) (quoting Ward v. Rock Against Racism, 491 U.S. 781, 791, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661, 109 S. Ct. 2746 (1989) (internal quotation marks omitted)).

HN19↑ "The principal inquiry in determining content neutrality . . . is whether the government has adopted a regulation of speech because of disagreement with the message it conveys. Speech restrictions are content-neutral [\[\*\*23\]](#) when they can be justified without reference to the content of the regulated speech." Honolulu Weekly, Inc. v. Harris, 298 F.3d 1037, 1043 (9th Cir. 2002) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). HN20↑ Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 are content-neutral because they impose a generally applicable [\[\*612\]](#) prohibition on the retention of out-of-state counsel without regard to the subject matter of the representation. (The rules do not, for example, prohibit out-of-state counsel from undertaking only certain categories of representation, such as suits against the State or against tobacco companies).

HN21↑ A time, place, and manner regulation is narrowly tailored as long as the substantial governmental interest it serves "would be achieved less effectively absent the regulation and the regulation achieves its ends without . . . significantly restricting a substantial quantity of speech that does not create the same evils." Galvin v. Hay, 374 F.3d 739, 753 (9th Cir. 2004) (internal quotation marks omitted; alteration in original). As already noted, HN22↑ the State of Arizona has a significant interest in regulating the practice of law within its boundaries, see [\[\*\*24\]](#)

Bates, 433 U.S. at 361 ("the regulation of the activities of the bar is at the core of the State's power to protect the public"), and Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 further that interest by ensuring that attorneys practicing in the State are qualified and possess a familiarity with Arizona law. The rules' narrow tailoring is further evidenced by the fact that they do not impose a blanket prohibition on the appearance of out-of-state attorneys in Arizona courts. Rather, they provide that a qualified out-of-state attorney may be admitted pro hac vice by an Arizona court.

Lastly, Rules 33(d) and 34 leave open ample alternative channels through which Arizonans can obtain legal representation. Notwithstanding the restrictions on out-of-state attorneys, Arizonans have access to legal representation from the thousands of attorneys licensed by the Arizona bar.

Because Arizona Supreme Court Rules 33(d) and 34 are reasonable time, place, and manner regulations of Arizonans' First Amendment right to retain and consult with a lawyer, Mothershed's First Amendment claim fails as a matter of law.

IV

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the district court is

AFFIRMED. [**25]

---

End of Document

Miller's Pond Co., LLC v. City of New London

Supreme Court of Connecticut

January 7, 2005, Argued ; June 7, 2005, Officially Released

SC 17166

Reporter

273 Conn. 786 *; 873 A.2d 965 **; 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210 ***; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,823

MILLER'S POND COMPANY, LLC, ET AL. v. CITY OF NEW LONDON ET AL.

Prior History: [***1] Action to recover damages for, inter alia, the defendants' alleged violation of the state antitrust act, and for other relief, brought to the Superior Court in the judicial district of New London, where the case was transferred to the Complex Litigation Docket at Norwich; thereafter, the court, McLachlan, J., granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment and rendered judgment thereon in their favor, from which the plaintiffs appealed.

Miller's Pond Co., L.L.C. v. City of New London, 2003 Conn. Super. LEXIS 57 \(Conn. Super. Ct., Jan. 10, 2003\)

Disposition: Reversed; further proceedings.

Core Terms

---

pond, immunity, antitrust, municipal, state action, water supply, regulations, water company, antitrust statute, trial court, defendants', department of public health, service area, plans, coordinating, facilities, environmental protection, antitrust liability, wholesale, relevant market, authorization, regional, public water supply, ambulance service, water system, quotation, marks, public utilities commission, water supply system, water authority

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN1[] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

273 Conn. 786, *786A 873 A.2d 965, **965A 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

HN2 [down] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-44b.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Pretrial Judgments > Judgment on Pleadings

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Pretrial Judgments > General Overview

HN3 [down] Pretrial Judgments, Judgment on Pleadings

A motion for judgment on the pleadings requires a situation where the parties are willing to admit the facts and place their entire case on the legal issues raised, waiving the right to replead if the legal issue is decided against them.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN4 [down] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-26.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN5 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-27.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Market Allocation

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN6 [down] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-28.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

273 Conn. 786, *786A 873 A.2d 965, **965A 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN7[] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-29.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN8[] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

Under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-29, a "tying arrangement" is an agreement by a party to sell one product but only on the condition that the buyer also purchase a different (tied) product, or at least agree that he will not purchase that product from any other supplier.

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN9[] Public Improvements, Sanitation & Water

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 25-33c.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Questions of Fact & Law

Civil Procedure > ... > Standards of Review > Plain Error > General Overview

HN10[] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The extent to which anticompetitive conduct is specifically directed or required by the government is a mixed question of fact and law. Mixed questions of fact and law are subject to plenary review on appeal.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions > Preservation for Review

HN11[] Appeals, Standards of Review

A reviewing court may consider an alternate ground for affirmance that was raised before the trial court.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN12[] Legislation, Interpretation

273 Conn. 786, *786L<sup>873</sup> A.2d 965, **965L<sup>2005</sup> Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

In construing statutes, the fundamental objective of the Supreme Court of Connecticut is to ascertain and give effect to the apparent intent of the legislature. That court seeks to determine, in a reasoned manner, the meaning of the statutory language as applied to the facts of the case, including the question of whether the language actually does apply. In seeking to determine that meaning, the court looks to the words of the statute itself, to the legislative history and circumstances surrounding its enactment, to the legislative policy it was designed to implement, and to its relationship to existing legislation and common law principles governing the same general subject matter.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN13 [  ] Legislation, Interpretation

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 1-2z.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN14 [  ] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Governments > Local Governments > Claims By & Against

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Governments > Local Governments > Duties & Powers

Governments > Local Governments > Ordinances & Regulations

HN15 [  ] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

Federal case law holds that Parker immunity does not apply directly to local governments. A municipality's restriction of competition may sometimes be an authorized implementation of state policy, and have Parker immunity where that is the case. A municipality that desires Parker immunity must show that, under the state statutory scheme, it has both authority to regulate and authority to suppress competition. A court's inquiry into a municipality's statutory authority to regulate the field in question has been described as not exacting, because whether an ordinance is actually authorized by state statute suggests that as long as the local enactment is within a broad view of the authority granted by the state, whether it is actually violative of that statute is a question for state authorities, not one of federal antitrust law. Moreover, with respect to the municipality's authority to suppress competition despite the requirement of a clear articulation of a state policy to authorize anticompetitive conduct, the statutory authorization need not be explicit; the requirement is met if suppression of competition is the foreseeable result of what the statute authorizes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN16 [  ] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

273 Conn. 786, *786A 873 A.2d 965, **965A 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Connecticut has its own statutory version of state action immunity in the form of Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters > Jurisdiction > Primary Jurisdiction

Communications Law > ... > Regulated Entities > Telephone Services > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > Utility Companies

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters > Jurisdiction > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN17 Jurisdiction, Primary Jurisdiction

The Connecticut Antitrust Act, Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-24 et seq., incorporates, in modified form, and with notable exceptions, various provisions of such federal antitrust laws as, for example, the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, the Antitrust Civil Process Act, and of such state antitrust laws as the provisions embodied in the proposed Uniform State Antitrust Act. Under these circumstances, reference to opinions of courts in other jurisdictions, federal and state, on pertinent antitrust law issues, where appropriate, are an aid to interpretation of certain questions arising under the Connecticut statute.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > Utility Companies

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

273 Conn. 786, *786L<sup>873</sup> A.2d 965, **965L<sup>2005</sup> Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Liability

HN18 [blue icon] Energy & Utilities, State Regulation

The antitrust exception authorized by Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\) represents a narrowly drawn version of the doctrine of state action immunity from antitrust liability articulated by the United States Supreme Court in Parker v. Brown. The Court in that case carved out an exemption from Sherman Act liability for activities commanded or directed by a state legislature. Section 35-31\(b\) limits that holding by purporting to immunize only activities that are specifically required or directed by state or federal statutes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Trials > Burdens of Proof > Prosecution

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN19 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

Under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\), in order to be shielded by qualified state action immunity, a defendant must show that its anticompetitive conduct was specifically directed or required by the government.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN20 [blue icon] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

The legislative history of the Connecticut Antitrust Act, Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-24 et seq., clearly establishes that it was intentionally patterned after the antitrust law of the federal government. Construction of the Act is aided by reference to judicial opinions interpreting the federal antitrust statutes. Accordingly, the Supreme Court of Connecticut follows federal precedent when it interprets the Act unless the text of Connecticut's antitrust statutes, or other pertinent state law, requires the court to interpret it differently.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN21 [blue icon] Private Actions, Standing

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-35.

273 Conn. 786, *786L<sup>873</sup> A.2d 965, **965L<sup>2005</sup> Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN22 [down] Private Actions, Standing

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 15.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN23 [down] Legislation, Interpretation

Where statutes contain specific and general references covering the same subject matter, the specific references prevail over the general.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

Governments > Legislation > General Overview

HN24 [down] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

Neither the legislative history of Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-44b nor the language of the statute as enacted requires: (1) the repeal of antitrust statutes unique to Connecticut, without a parallel provision in the federal scheme; or (2) the overruling of state case law interpreting those statutes that are specific to Connecticut.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN25 [down] Legislation, Interpretation

The canon--that where statutes contain specific and general references covering the same subject matter, the specific references prevail over the general--is itself a form of extratextual evidence of the meaning of the statute.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN26 [down] Legislation, Interpretation

While canons certainly do have their place in the construction of statutes, it is unwise to elevate them over all other forms of extratextual evidence because, for almost every maxim found in the "grab bag" of canons, an equal and opposite proposition may be found. Although the so-called canons of statutory construction may at times serve as useful tools in deciphering legislative meaning, to rely on any one of them as a compelling factor in the interpretive process is problematic, because there are two opposing canons on almost every point. The so-called canons are not that, at least in the sense that any one of them reliably can be determined to apply or not to apply in any given case. They are, instead, merely guides drawn from experience, to be employed or not to be employed carefully and judiciously, depending on the circumstances. To permit them to displace the conclusions that careful interpretation yields would be a disservice to the legislative process, as well as to the judicial exercise of interpreting legislative language based upon the premise that the legislature intends to enact reasonable public policies.

273 Conn. 786, *786A 873 A.2d 965, **965A 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Legislatures

HN27 Legislation, Interpretation

The Connecticut General Assembly is always presumed to know all the existing statutes and the effect that its action or non-action will have upon any one of them, as well as the interpretation that the courts have placed upon one of its legislative enactments and of the effect that its own nonaction, thereafter, may have.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN28 Legislation, Interpretation

The doctrine of stare decisis counsels that a court should not overrule its earlier decisions unless the most cogent reasons and inescapable logic require it. In assessing the force of stare decisis, Connecticut case law has emphasized that courts should be especially cautious about overturning a case that concerns statutory construction.

Governments > Legislation > Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

Governments > Legislation > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN29 Legislation, Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

Implied repeal of a statute is not favored and will not be presumed where the old and new statutes can coexist peaceably.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

HN30 Market Definition, Relevant Market

Proper analysis in an antitrust case first requires determination of the relevant market. The relevant market for purposes of antitrust litigation is the area of effective competition within which the defendant operates. Market definition generally is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry.

273 Conn. 786, *786A 873 A.2d 965, **965A 2005 Conn. LEXIS 210, ***1

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN31 [blue download icon] Public Improvements, Sanitation & Water

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 25-33d(c) defines "exclusive service area" as an area where public water is supplied by one system.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Pretrial Judgments > Judgment on Pleadings

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Record on Appeal

HN32 [blue download icon] Pretrial Judgments, Judgment on Pleadings

An appellant bears responsibility for providing an adequate record for review.

Administrative Law > Agency Adjudication > Decisions > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Pretrial Judgments > Judgment on Pleadings

Administrative Law > Agency Adjudication > Decisions > Res Judicata

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Appellate Review > Standards of Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Questions of Fact & Law

Real Property Law > Zoning > Judicial Review

HN33 [blue download icon] Decisions, Collateral Estoppel

Whether a trial court properly granted a motion for summary judgment is a question of law subject to de novo review.

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN34 [blue download icon] Public Improvements, Sanitation & Water

The administrative definition of "available water" includes water supplied by contract, as well as that obtained through active sources. Conn. Agencies Regs. § 25-32d-1a(4). To be "available," however, the contract must not be subject to cancellation or suspension.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

HN35 [ ] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The mere pervasiveness of a regulatory scheme does not immunize an industry from antitrust liability for conduct that is voluntarily initiated.

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Governments > Local Governments > Finance

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Types of Statutes > Special Legislative Acts

Governments > Local Governments > Duties & Powers

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN36 [ ] Utility Companies, Buying & Selling of Power

In Connecticut, regulation of water companies begins at their inception. Water companies may not be formed without a special act of the General Assembly after investigation and a report by the department of environmental protection, the department of public health and the department of public utility control into, inter alia, the proposed company's financial solvency, its water supply system adequacy and potability, and the effect on water supplies of other systems. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 2-20a. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 7-234 provides that municipalities may acquire, construct and operate a municipal water supply system where (1) there is no existing private waterworks system, (2) the owner or owners of a private waterworks system are willing to sell or transfer all or part of such system to the municipality, or (3) a public regional waterworks system within said town, city or borough or district is willing to sell or transfer all or part of the system to the municipality. The extensive regulatory scheme is in furtherance of the legislative finding and general statement of policy articulated in § 25-33c.

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN37 [ ] Public Improvements, Sanitation & Water

See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 25-33c.

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Environmental Law > Natural Resources & Public Lands > General Overview

Environmental Law > Water Quality > General Overview

Governments > Public Improvements > Sanitation & Water

HN38[] Energy & Utilities Law, Utility Companies

Connecticut's statutes and regulations envision a significant degree of cooperation, and indeed, regional coordination of water companies. The statutes also envision extensive planning in conjunction with that coordination.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

HN39[] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

Generalized statements of policy or implications from the sheer pervasiveness of a regulatory scheme as a whole simply do not have the requisite specificity under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\). This is consistent with the ordinary meaning of the word "specific" used in the statute, defined as meaning explicitly set forth, definite, or intended for, applying to, or acting on a particular thing. Section 35-31\(b\) immunity requires a statute that addresses the challenged conduct directly and explicitly and accordingly is not triggered by implication alone.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN40[] Courts, Judicial Precedent

Trial court opinions are, although entitled to serious consideration, not binding authority in the Supreme Court of Connecticut.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN41[] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

For purposes of application of the antitrust exemption of Conn. Gen. Stat. § 35-31\(b\), use of the term "may" does not support the notion that a defendant's action is specifically directed or required by statute.

Counsel: Ben A. Solnit, for the appellants (plaintiffs).

Michael P. Carey, with whom was John J. Radshaw III, for the appellees (defendants).

Judges: Sullivan, C. J., and Borden, Norcott, Palmer and Vertefeuille, Js. In this opinion BORDEN, PALMER and VERTEFEUILLE, Js., concurred. SULLIVAN, C. J., concurring.

Opinion by: NORCOTT

Opinion

---

[*788] [**967] NORCOTT, J. The principal issue in this appeal is whether the trial court properly determined that the defendants, the city of New London (city), the New London water and water pollution control authority (New London water authority), the town of Waterford, and the Waterford water pollution control authority (Waterford water authority), [**968] are immune from antitrust liability under General Statutes § 35-31 (b) [***2] <sup>1</sup> because their alleged anticompetitive activities were "specifically directed or required" by statute with respect to the wholesale water market in the New London area. The plaintiffs, Miller's Pond Company, LLC (Miller's Pond Company), Gary Saunders and Thomas Schacht,<sup>2</sup> appeal<sup>3</sup> from the judgment of the trial court following its grant of the defendants' motion for summary judgment. They contend that the trial court improperly: (1) applied § 35-31 (b), which exempts certain activities from the Connecticut Antitrust Act, General Statutes § 35-24 et seq., when those activities are "specifically directed or required by a statute of this state, or of the United States," to the facts of the present case; and (2) granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment because there are unresolved factual issues about the definition of the relevant market. As an alternate ground for affirming the trial court's decision, the defendants contend [*789] that General Statutes § 35-44b<sup>4</sup> requires us to apply the broader federal case law principles governing state action antitrust immunity that have evolved from the United States Supreme Court decision [***3] in Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 350-51, 63 S. Ct. 307, 87 L. Ed. 315 (1943). We reverse the judgment of the trial court and remand the case for further proceedings.

[***4] The record reveals the following facts and procedural history.<sup>5</sup> The defendants own water sources and water treatment, transmission and distribution facilities that serve the city, Waterford and other parts of southeastern Connecticut; the New London water authority and the Waterford water authority are the "two dominant water utilities" in southeastern Connecticut. The defendants own every source of freshwater and all related supply facilities that are located within their municipal borders and "capable of serving the region," except for Miller's Pond (pond), an approximately seventy-seven acre manmade lake located in the northeastern corner of Waterford. Miller's Pond Company owns and has exclusive riparian rights to the pond, which is served by several tributaries and receives water from a 9.83 square mile [*969] watershed, making it "the only significant [*790] untapped surface fresh water reservoir capable of supplying the relevant geographic market served by the defendants." That relevant market consists of the city, Waterford and portions of Montville and East Lyme, and may be expanded to include Groton, Ledyard, Preston and Norwich upon completion of a planned water interconnection loop. [***5]

Since 1988, the plaintiffs have been seeking to sell or develop the pond as a water source for utilities in the region or as a private water supply for industrial or [***6] recreational facilities. Indeed, in 1998, Miller's Pond Company entered into an agreement with the Connecticut Water Company to develop the sale and distribution of either raw or treated water from the pond in the New London region. The potential market in the region is controlled, however, by the defendants.

<sup>1</sup> General Statutes § 35-31 (b) provides: HN1 [↑] "Nothing contained in this chapter shall apply to those activities of any person when said activity is specifically directed or required by a statute of this state, or of the United States."

<sup>2</sup> Saunders is a founding member of Miller's Pond Company, LLC, and Schacht is a managing member of that company.

<sup>3</sup> The plaintiffs appealed from the judgment of the trial court to the Appellate Court, and upon the unopposed motion of the defendants, we transferred the appeal to this court pursuant to General Statutes § 51-199 (c) and Practice Book § 65-2.

<sup>4</sup> General Statutes § 35-44b provides: HN2 [↑] "It is the intent of the General Assembly that in construing sections 35-24 to 35-46, inclusive, the courts of this state shall be guided by interpretations given by the federal courts to federal antitrust statutes."

<sup>5</sup> For purposes of their motion for summary judgment, the defendants admitted all of the factual allegations in the plaintiffs' complaint. The trial court, therefore, treated the defendants' motion for summary judgment as the equivalent of a common-law motion for judgment on the pleadings. See, e.g., Sewer Commission v. Norton, 164 Conn. 2, 5, 316 A.2d 775 (1972) (stating that HN3 [↑] motion for judgment on pleadings "requires a situation where the parties are willing to admit the facts and place their entire case on the legal issues raised, waiving the right to replead if the legal issue is decided against them" [internal quotation marks omitted]). Accordingly, for purposes of this appeal, we accept as undisputed the facts pleaded in the complaint, and unless otherwise noted, quotations from the record originate from that pleading.

The city previously had supplied water to Waterford from sources owned and controlled by the city until December, 1986, when the long-term supply contract expired. During renegotiations of that agreement, Waterford informed the city that it intended to develop its own water supply system using the pond as the primary water source. The city opposed this plan, and in April, 1988, it imposed a moratorium on new water connections in Waterford, which was to remain in place until Waterford signed a new water service agreement with the city. Thereafter, Waterford abandoned its efforts to supply its water independently and, in October, 1988, it signed a new agreement for a term of forty-eight years (1988 agreement).

The 1988 agreement defined the water supply relationship between the city and Waterford. Its stated purpose is "to provide the terms and conditions pursuant to which (1) [***7] the city will supply water to water consumers in [Waterford]; (2) other municipalities in New London County may have the opportunity to receive [*791] water from the city through the supply facilities, transmission facilities and distribution facilities in [Waterford] and the city; and (3) the city and [Waterford] will negotiate in good faith toward the goal of a regional water and/or sewer system. This agreement provides for the use of the distribution facilities in [Waterford] and for the use of the supply facilities and transmission facilities owned or controlled by the city to provide water to water consumers in [Waterford]." The agreement also states that "the city and [Waterford] will use their best efforts to deter the construction and operation of new independent water systems in the city and [Waterford] respectively."<sup>6</sup> The 1988 agreement defines an "independent water system" as "any private water company or system, private community water system, or private community well serving more than one water consumer."

[***8] The city also has an agreement to supply water to portions of the town of Montville. By its terms, the agreement required Montville to enter into a separate agreement with Waterford for the use of Waterford supply facilities needed for the city to deliver water to Montville.<sup>7</sup> Waterford [**970] and Montville entered into this agreement in April, 1990 (1990 agreement). The 1990 agreement has several conditions that, inter alia, permit Montville to develop its own water sources only if that "development or purchase does not result in material depletion of any water resources of Waterford [or the [*792] city] which are presently planned or existing; and . . . does not result in material depletion of any water resources of Waterford or [the city] which come into existence in the future and are located outside of Montville." The pond is the only property not already owned by the defendants that is subject to the restriction in the 1990 agreement, and the plaintiffs claim that the conditions in the 1990 agreement restrict their ability to market the pond to Montville as a regular or emergency water supply.

[***9] In regulatory submissions to the department of public health addressing planning matters, both Waterford and the city have recognized the pond as an existing or future component of their water supply systems. The city included the pond in its plan in 1988 as a direct response to a notice from a realtor that the pond might be offered for sale on the open market.

As previously noted, the plaintiffs have been attempting to develop the pond either as a water source for the region or as a private supply for industrial or recreational facilities since 1988. They allege, however, that the defendants have, in accordance with the "best efforts to deter the construction and operation of new independent water systems" clause in the 1988 agreement, interfered with their development efforts in a variety of ways. For example, in December, 1998, the plaintiffs and representatives from the Connecticut Water Company met with the New London water authority and offered to enter into an agreement to sell water to the city. The city rejected this offer and refused to deal; in February, 1999, the chief administrator of the New London water authority threatened to use eminent domain proceedings if the [***10] plaintiffs did not sell the pond to the city.<sup>8</sup> In April, 2000, Waterford, in accordance with [*793] its officials' understanding of the "best efforts" clause in the agreement, similarly refused to deal with the plaintiffs.

---

<sup>6</sup> The 1988 agreement also provides that, in the event that the city determines that a water shortage exists, Waterford "shall" make available "a suitable additional source of water supply," if possible. If there is no additional source available, the city may refuse to accept new applications for water service in both the city and Waterford until the supply reserves are replenished.

<sup>7</sup> The plaintiffs note that during the negotiation of the 1990 agreement, Waterford refused to allow the Faria Corporation, a major industry in Montville, to have access to water for fire protection purposes.

In February, 1998, the city filed an application with the department of environmental protection to divert waters from Hunts Brook, which is located upstream from the pond. Had that department granted this application, it would have reduced the flow of water into the pond by approximately 8 million gallons per day, and reduced the safe yield of the pond by one third. In May, 1998, the plaintiffs announced their intention to develop the pond similarly, and subsequently, in November, 1998, they filed their own [***11] application with the department of environmental protection to develop the pond as a regional water supply source and to dredge the valuable sand and gravel deposits from the basin. The department of environmental protection rejected this application without prejudice in October, 1999, because neither the city nor Waterford, as potential users of the water, had agreed to endorse the plaintiffs' application or join it.

In December, 1998, the department of environmental protection informed the city that its diversion application was incomplete, and instructed it to report on alternatives to the diversion of Hunts Brook, including obtaining water from the pond as [**971] well as from other nearby towns such as Groton and Norwich.<sup>9</sup> Consistent with the 1988 agreement, the city has continued to refuse to discuss obtaining water from the pond, the plaintiffs or the Connecticut Water Company.

[***12] In January, 1999, the plaintiffs attended a public information meeting at Waterford town hall that was held in conjunction with the department of environmental protection permitting process. The day after that meeting, [*794] the plaintiffs met with Waterford's first selectman, Thomas Sheridan, who informed them of Waterford's desire to purchase the pond. Sheridan told the plaintiffs of Waterford's continued opposition to the development of the pond as an independent water supply. He likewise informed them that they would never be allowed to develop a water business and that "he had the power to put [the] plaintiffs' project 'on hold for two years' with a telephone call to Hartford." Shortly thereafter, in February, 1999, a meeting was held at the department of environmental protection offices in Hartford, attended by department personnel, New London water authority administrator Thomas Bowen, and counsel. Notes from that meeting indicate that Bowen told the department of environmental protection that the city was considering taking the pond by eminent domain.

On February 9, 1999, Bowen wrote on the city's behalf to the Southeast Water Utility Coordinating Committee. He advised the committee [***13] of the city's immediate need for water from the pond, as well as the city's and Waterford's interests in purchasing the pond. Bowen mentioned assurances of future supply that the city had made to Montville, as well the defendants' opposition to the existence of another water company, like the plaintiffs' business, in the area.

Several days later, the city and Waterford executed a memorandum of understanding to develop new water sources (memorandum). The memorandum was negotiated through several secret meetings that were held at locations other than regular public facilities, including the dry-cleaning business of the chairman of the New London water authority. This memorandum, drafted in furtherance of the 1988 agreement, states that Waterford "and the city desire to act in a joint and coordinated manner to pursue the acquisition, development, and management of additional new water supply resources," through either direct purchase or the use [*795] of eminent domain. Early drafts of the memorandum referred specifically to the pond. Subsequent submissions by the city and Waterford to the department of public health continued to refer to the pond as a component of their water systems, but [***14] without the plaintiffs' consent. The inclusion of the pond in these supply plans triggers the anticompetitive provision of the Montville agreement, which prevents Montville from doing business with the plaintiffs.

---

<sup>8</sup> The New London water authority reiterated its refusal to deal with the plaintiffs at a meeting in May, 2000. The chairman of the water authority told the plaintiffs that "we're the only game in [Waterford]. Forget going into the water business and forget the Connecticut Water Company."

<sup>9</sup> These other sources are located outside the city and Waterford, and are not subject to the 1988 agreement and its deterrence clause.

Thereafter, in May, 2000, the plaintiffs met again with the New London water authority to discuss the city's expressed intention to acquire the pond. The city again declined the plaintiffs' offer to conduct business respecting the pond's water, and Bowen again reiterated the city's plan to use the power of eminent domain to take the pond if the plaintiffs did not abandon their water business and sell the pond to the city.

[**972] The plaintiffs also state that the city has manipulated market conditions by inflating the available safe yield of water. This market manipulation was done in accordance with the terms of the 1988 agreement that restricted Waterford's ability to seek water source supplies beyond those provided by the city, particularly by conditioning that ability on the city's unilateral declaration of a supply shortage. See footnote 6 of this opinion. Shortly after the execution of the 1988 agreement, the city increased its declared figure for safely available water [***15] by 30 percent, from 5.4 million gallons per day to 7 million gallons per day. Both the department of environmental protection and the department of public health have challenged the accuracy of this figure, and an independent department of environmental protection study conducted in April, 1991, calculated that only 5.1 million gallons per day were available as a safe yield. Engineering standards at that time would have justified the declaration of a supply emergency, thus opening up a supply market into which the plaintiffs could have [*796] competed. The department of public health ordered the city to conduct additional studies, which it did not commence until 1999 under the terms of a consent order. In October, 1999, the city reported that 5.7 million gallons of water per day were available, which was "perilously close" to the actual usage of 5.6 million gallons per day. The city did not, however, report this figure to the state because it could have resulted in a moratorium on new water connections and created a market for additional supply. Rather, the city reported another inflated figure of 6.4 million gallons to the department of public health, which remains under continued study.

[***16] In August, 2000, the plaintiffs brought this action for damages and injunctive relief, claiming that the defendants' conduct constituted: (1) restraint of trade in violation of General Statutes § 35-26; <sup>10</sup> (2) monopolization in violation of General Statutes § 35-27; <sup>11</sup> (3) "per se" unlawful acts in violation of General Statutes § 35-28; <sup>12</sup> [***17] and (4) illegal tying arrangements in violation of General Statutes § 35-29 <sup>13</sup> with [**973] respect to the 1988 and 1990 [*797] agreements. The defendants subsequently moved for summary judgment.

The trial court, taking [***18] as undisputed the facts alleged in the pleadings; see footnote 5 of this opinion; concluded that the defendants were immune from antitrust liability because their activities constituted state action

<sup>10</sup> General Statutes § 35-26 provides: HN4 [↑] "Every contract, combination, or conspiracy in restraint of any part of trade or commerce is unlawful."

<sup>11</sup> General Statutes § 35-27 provides: HN5 [↑] "Every contract, combination, or conspiracy to monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or monopolization of any part of trade or commerce is unlawful."

<sup>12</sup> General Statutes § 35-28 provides: HN6 [↑] "Without limiting section 35-26, every contract, combination, or conspiracy is unlawful when the same are for the purpose, or have the effect, of: (a) Fixing, controlling, or maintaining prices, rates, quotations, or fees in any part of trade or commerce; (b) fixing, controlling, maintaining, limiting, or discontinuing the production, manufacture, mining, sale, or supply of any part of trade or commerce; (c) allocating or dividing customers or markets, either functional or geographical, in any part of trade or commerce; or (d) refusing to deal, or coercing, persuading, or inducing third parties to refuse to deal with another person."

<sup>13</sup> General Statutes § 35-29 provides: HN7 [↑] "Every lease, sale or contract for the furnishing of services or for the sale of commodities, or for the fixing of prices charged therefor, or for the giving or selling of a discount or rebate therefrom, on the condition or understanding that the lessee or purchaser shall not deal in the services or the commodities of a competitor or competitors of the lessor or seller, shall be unlawful where the effect of such lease or sale or contract for sale or such condition or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any part of trade or commerce and where such goods or services are for the use, consumption or resale in this state."

HN8 [↑] Under § 35-29, a "tying arrangement is an agreement by a party to sell one product but only on the condition that the buyer also purchase a different (tied) product, or at least agree that he will not purchase that product from any other supplier." State v. Hossan-Maxwell, Inc., 181 Conn. 655, 659, 436 A.2d 284 (1980).

under § 35-31 (b). The trial court relied on this court's decision in Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., 169 Conn. 344, 359, 363 A.2d 170 (1975),<sup>14</sup> [***19] which explained § 35-31 (b) as a narrower version of the similar doctrine providing immunity from federal antitrust liability first articulated in Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 350-51. The trial court found the requisite state action in the statutory scheme that required the municipalities to provide a safe water supply, particularly General Statutes § 25-33c.<sup>15</sup> The court concluded that the city opted to be directed by the state statutes [*798] and regulations when it satisfied the statutory mandate by creating a municipal water system rather than contracting privately for water service. Accordingly, the trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, and this appeal followed.

On appeal, the plaintiffs claim that the trial court improperly granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment because: (1) a genuine issue of material fact exists as the trial court failed to consider the existence of the relevant wholesale water market and conducted its analysis in the context of the irrelevant, heavily regulated, retail market; and (2) under Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 344, the defendants [***20] are not entitled to state action immunity under § 35-31 (b) because their conduct was merely approved or acquiesced in by state regulatory agencies, and not "specifically directed or required" by state or federal statutes. The defendants contend otherwise, and they also claim that § 35-44b, as construed in Vacco v. Microsoft Corp., 260 Conn. 59, 793 A.2d 1048 (2002), now requires this court to apply the federal case law principles governing state action immunity that have emerged following Parker, which provide for immunity if the municipalities' alleged anticompetitive conduct is a "foreseeable result" of state legislation.

Before we turn to the parties' specific claims, we set forth the proper standard of review. We will engage in plenary review of all issues raised in this appeal, particularly because HN10[↑] the extent to which anticompetitive conduct is "specifically directed or required" by the government is a mixed question of fact and law . . . ." (Citations omitted.) Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, 235 Conn. 1, 26, [**974] 664 A.2d 719 (1995); id., 25-26 (declining to review transit district's § 35-31 [b] [***21] state action defense to antitrust action because it was not raised in trial court and record was [*799] insufficient for plain error review); see Bortner v. Woodbridge, 250 Conn. 241, 258, 736 A.2d 104 (1999) ("mixed questions of fact and law [are] subject to plenary review on appeal"); see also, e.g., Craig v. Stafford Construction, Inc., 271 Conn. 78, 83, 856 A.2d 372 (2004) (trial court's grant of summary judgment motion); Barrett v. Montesano, 269 Conn. 787, 792, 849 A.2d 839 (2004) (statutory interpretation).

I

WHETHER § 35-44b INCORPORATES THE FEDERAL STATE ACTION DOCTRINE OF PARKER INTO THE ANTITRUST IMMUNITY PROVIDED BY § 35-31 (b)

We first must determine the correct legal standards to apply to the facts pleaded in the complaint, which entails an examination of the interplay, if any, between federal case law, beginning with Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 341, governing state action immunity, and the statutory state action immunity standard set forth by § 35-31 (b). Indeed, the defendants argue in support of the application of the federal standards that have evolved from the Supreme [***22] Court's seminal decision in Parker, as an alternate ground for affirming the trial court's judgment.<sup>16</sup> They contend that § 35-44b requires us to construe and apply § 35-31 (b) in accordance with the federal case

<sup>14</sup> The trial court also relied on a pair of state and federal trial court decisions applying § 35-31 (b), both of which were authored by Judge Covello. See generally Wheelabrator Environmental Systems, Inc. v. Galante, 136 F. Supp. 2d 21, 2000 WL 863029 (D. Conn. 2001); Professional Ambulance Service, Inc. v. Blackstone, 35 Conn. Sup. 136, 400 A.2d 1031 (1978).

<sup>15</sup> General Statutes § 25-33c provides: HN9[↑] "The General Assembly finds that an adequate supply of potable water for domestic, commercial and industrial use is vital to the health and well-being of the people of the state. Readily available water for use in public water systems is limited and should be developed with a minimum of loss and waste. In order to maximize efficient and effective development of the state's public water supply systems and to promote public health, safety and welfare, the Department of Public Health shall administer a procedure to coordinate the planning of public water supply systems."

law following Parker, rather than under the more restrictive interpretations given it by Connecticut case law and applied by the trial court.

[*800] The defendants' arguments with respect to § 35-44b present an issue of statutory [***23] construction. "It is well settled that HN12<sup>16</sup> in construing statutes, our fundamental objective is to ascertain and give effect to the apparent intent of the legislature." (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Manifold v. Ragaglia, 272 Conn. 410, 419, 862 A.2d 292 (2004). "We seek to determine, in a reasoned manner, the meaning of the statutory language as applied to the facts of [the] case, including the question of whether the language actually does apply. In seeking to determine that meaning, we look to the words of the statute itself, to the legislative history and circumstances surrounding its enactment, to the legislative policy it was designed to implement, and to its relationship to existing legislation and common law principles governing the same general subject matter." (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Jagger v. Mohawk Mountain Ski Area, Inc., 269 Conn. 672, 679, 849 A.2d 813 (2004). HN13<sup>17</sup> "The meaning of a statute shall, in the first instance, be ascertained from the text of the statute itself and its relationship to other statutes. If, after examining such text and considering such relationship, the meaning of such text is plain and unambiguous [***24] and does not yield absurd or unworkable results, extratextual evidence of the meaning of the statute shall not be considered." General Statutes § 1-2z.

[**975] Section 35-44b, the statute at issue, provides: "It is the intent of the General Assembly that in construing sections 35-24 to 35-46, inclusive, the courts of this state shall be guided by interpretations given by the federal courts to federal antitrust statutes." We now turn to a review of the two potentially conflicting state and federal legal landscapes.

A

Federal Antitrust Immunity under Parker

In 1943, the United States Supreme Court decided Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 341. In Parker, a producer [*801] and packer of raisins had brought an action to enjoin enforcement by the state of California's department of agriculture of a uniform state marketing program that had been promulgated pursuant to state statute. Id., 344-46. The raisin producer claimed that this program violated the federal constitution's Commerce Clause and the Sherman Act, the federal antitrust statute.<sup>17</sup> Id., 348-49. Addressing the Sherman Act claims, the Supreme Court assumed without [***25] deciding that the marketing act would violate the antitrust statutes. Id., 350. Noting federalism concerns, however, the court concluded that the marketing program "derived its authority and its efficacy from the legislative command of the state and was not intended to operate or become effective without that command," and that the Sherman Act "gives no hint that it was intended to restrain state action or official action directed by a state." Id., 350-51. The court then limited its holding, stating that a state could not give individuals Sherman Act immunity "by authorizing them to violate it, or by declaring that their action is lawful . . ." Id., 351-52. (Citations omitted.) Ultimately, the court concluded that "the state in adopting and enforcing the [marketing] program made no contract or agreement and entered into no conspiracy in restraint of trade or to establish monopoly but, as sovereign, imposed the restraint as an act of government which the Sherman Act did not undertake to prohibit." Id., 352.

<sup>16</sup> The trial court, in discussing Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 341, stated that it "is interesting to note that this doctrine has evolved through the years; under federal antitrust laws, the defendants' activities would clearly be exempt from liability." Accordingly, it is appropriate for us to consider the defendants' proposed alternate ground for affirmance. See, e.g., New Haven v. Bonner, 272 Conn. 489, 497, 863 A.2d 680 (2005) HN11<sup>18</sup> (declining to consider alternate ground for affirmance that was not raised before trial court).

<sup>17</sup> The Sherman Act provides in relevant part: HN14<sup>19</sup> "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal. . ." 15 U.S.C. § 1.

[***26] With respect to the application of state action immunity to municipalities, subsequent decisions of the Supreme Court HN15 have held that "Parker immunity does not apply directly to local governments . . . a municipality's restriction of competition may sometimes be [**802] an authorized implementation of state policy, and have accorded Parker immunity where that is the case." (Citations omitted.) *Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc.*, 499 U.S. 365, 370, 111 S. Ct. 1344, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382 \(1991\). A municipality that desires Parker immunity must show that, under the state statutory scheme, it has both "authority to regulate" and "authority to suppress competition." *Electrical Inspectors, Inc. v. East Hills*, 320 F.3d 110, 118 \(2d Cir. 2002\), cert. denied sub nom. *Islandia v. Electrical Inspectors, Inc.*, 540 U.S. 982, 124 S. Ct. 467, 157 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2003), quoting *Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc.*, supra, 372. The court's inquiry into the municipality's statutory authority to regulate the field in question has been described as "not . . . exacting" because whether an ordinance [***27] is "actually authorized by state statute suggests that as long as the local enactment is within a broad view of the authority granted [**976] by the state, whether it is actually violative of that statute is a question for state authorities, not one of federal antitrust law." *Electrical Inspectors, Inc. v. East Hills*, supra, 118-19. Moreover, with respect to the municipality's "authority to suppress competition," despite the requirement of a "clear articulation of a state policy to authorize anticompetitive conduct," the statutory authorization need not be "explicit"; the requirement is met "if suppression of competition is the "foreseeable result" of what the statute authorizes." Id., 119, quoting *Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc.*, supra, 372-73, and *Hallie v. Eau Claire*, 471 U.S. 34, 42, 105 S. Ct. 1713, 85 L. Ed. 2d 24 \(1985\).<sup>18</sup>

[***28] [*803] B

State Action Immunity under § 35-31 \(b\)

HN16 Connecticut has, however, its own statutory version of state action immunity in the form of § 35-31 \(b\). Section 35-31 \(b\) provides: "Nothing contained in this chapter shall apply to those activities of any person when said activity is specifically directed or required by a statute of this state, or of the United States." This statute was first explained by this court in *Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co.*, supra, 169 Conn. 353-54, wherein the plaintiff brought an action against the telephone company, claiming antitrust violations resulting from the telephone company's practices with respect to answering machines and message-taking devices. Specifically, the plaintiff challenged the requirement that individuals obtaining such services from sources other than the telephone company were required to purchase or lease "protective link apparatus from the [telephone company] at a monthly charge fixed by the [telephone company]." Id., 353. In Mazzola, this court addressed the telephone company's argument that § 35-31 \(b\) rendered it immune from antitrust liability because its activities had [***29] been approved by the public utilities commission in accordance with the rate-setting procedure prescribed by General Statutes § 16-19. Id., 357-58.

The court began the decision in Mazzola by reviewing the origins of the Connecticut antitrust act, noting that [*804] "enacted in 1971, HN17 the act incorporates, in modified form, and with notable exceptions, various provisions of such federal antitrust laws as, for example, the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, the Antitrust Civil Process Act, and of such state antitrust laws as the provisions embodied in the proposed Uniform State Antitrust Act. . . . Under these circumstances, reference to opinions of courts in other jurisdictions, federal and state, on [**977] pertinent antitrust law issues, where appropriate, are an aid to our interpretation of certain questions <sup>18</sup> Indeed, we note that the defendants cite multiple cases wherein municipal water and sewer companies have been held immune from federal antitrust liability under the Parker doctrine. See, e.g., *Hallie v. Eau Claire*, supra, 471 U.S. 42 (Stating that "it is sufficient that the statutes authorized the city to provide sewage services and also to determine the areas to be served. We think it is clear that anticompetitive effects logically would result from this broad authority to regulate."); *McCallum v. Athens*, 976 F.2d 649, 655 \(11th Cir. 1992\) (concluding that municipal waterworks is immune from antitrust liability in action brought by retail customers because statutes "unequivocally revealed that [state legislature] contemplated that its municipalities might engage in anticompetitive conduct"); *Kern-Tulare Water District v. Bakersfield*, 828 F.2d 514, 519-20 \(9th Cir. 1987\) (concluding that city's refusal to consent to water district's transfer of surplus water to other utilities was "foreseeable within the [statutory] authority of the city to contract for, acquire and hold water rights, to furnish itself and its inhabitants with water, and to sell, lease, exchange, or transfer surplus water"), cert. denied, *486 U.S. 1015, 108 S. Ct. 1752, 100 L. Ed. 2d 214 \(1988\)*.

arising under the present Connecticut statute." (Citations omitted.) *Id.*, 347-48. After first concluding that the Superior Court, rather than the public utilities commission that regulated the telephone company, had primary jurisdiction over the antitrust claims in the case; *id.*, 349-52; the court turned to the telephone company's \*\*\*30 state action arguments premised on § 35-31 \(b\). Contrasting § 35-31 \(b\) with other statutory antitrust exceptions, the court noted that § 35-31 \(b\) "has no parallel in the federal antitrust statutes," and that "in enacting this provision the Connecticut legislature also did not choose to follow the example set by several other states of specifically and unqualifiedly exempting from antitrust liability the activities of industries and other organizations subject to the supervision of the state regulatory agency equivalent to our public utilities commission." *Id.*, 359. This court stated that HN18↑ "the exception authorized by § 35-31 \(b\) represents a narrowly drawn version of the doctrine of 'state action' immunity from antitrust liability articulated by the United States Supreme Court in Parker v. Brown, supra, [317 U.S. 341 at 350 at 350-51, 87 L. Ed. 315. The court in that case carved out an exemption from Sherman Act liability for activities 'commanded' or 'directed' by a state legislature. . . . Section 35-31 \(b\) limits that holding by purporting to immunize only activities which are 'specifically' required or directed by state or federal statutes. \*\*\*31" (Citation omitted.) *Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 359*. After reviewing the facts of Parker, this court stated that the "Parker doctrine draws a firm line, in short, between activities actually commanded by the state, which are immune from antitrust liability and action merely approved or tolerated." *Id.*, 361.

The court then reviewed the public utility rate-setting process of § 16-19, and concluded that "under these circumstances, the role that is statutorily assigned to the [public utilities commission] in rendering effective tariffs proposed by companies such as the defendant amounts to little more than acquiescence in a program originated by the defendant. In no sense, then, can activities of the defendant such as the kind of activities challenged by the plaintiff, purportedly authorized by a tariff filed with and approved by the [public utilities commission], be characterized as 'compelled by direction of the state acting as a sovereign' under the Parker doctrine as it has been judicially interpreted. . . . Nor can such activities consequently be comprehended within the more stringent standards \*\*\*32 applicable to exemptions from antitrust liability established by [\[§ 35-31 \(b\)\]](#)." (Citation omitted; emphasis added.) *Id.*, 365-66.

This court next mentioned § 35-31 \(b\) immunity in the 1995 decision in *Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, supra, 235 Conn. 23-27*. Although this court concluded that the issue was not reviewable because it had not been properly raised as a special defense at trial, and the record was not plain error, the court nevertheless briefly discussed in dicta the proper standards for that inquiry. *Id.*, 23-25. The court cited Mazzola, acknowledging that it had interpreted § 35-31 \(b\) as more stringent than the federal law, and stated that HN19↑ under the statute, "in order to be shielded by qualified state action immunity, the defendant must show that its anti-competitive conduct was 'specifically' [\[\*806\]](#) directed or required' by the government \*\*978 . . . ." (Citation omitted.) *Id.*, 25.

C

Whether § 35-44b Requires Incorporation of the Federal Immunity Standards into a § 35-31 \(b\) Analysis

This court decided Westport Tax Service, Inc., in 1995, three years after the enactment of \*\*\*33 § 35-44b, which was cited therein in further support of the proposition that, because HN20↑ "the legislative history of the act clearly establishes that it was intentionally patterned after the antitrust law of the federal government. . . . Our construction of the Connecticut Anti-Trust Act is aided by reference to judicial opinions interpreting the federal antitrust statutes. . . . Accordingly, we follow federal precedent when we interpret the act unless the text of our antitrust statutes, or other pertinent state law, requires us to interpret it differently." (Citations omitted; emphasis added; internal quotation marks omitted.) *Id.*, 15-16; see also *id.*, 15 n.17 ("we note that in 1992, the legislature explicitly incorporated into law its intent that the judiciary be guided by interpretations of federal antitrust statutes when it enacted . . . § 35-44b"). The text of § 35-44b provides: "It is the intent of the General Assembly that in construing sections 35-24 to 35-46, inclusive, the courts of this state shall be guided by interpretations given by the federal courts to federal antitrust statutes."

This court explained § 35-44b in detail in Vacco v. Microsoft Corp., supra, 260 Conn. 60-61, [***34] wherein the plaintiff brought an action under the Connecticut Antitrust Act against the defendant, Microsoft Corporation. We concluded that the plaintiff, as an end user licensee of the operating system software manufactured by the defendant, could not maintain a state antitrust action [*807] under General Statutes § 35-35<sup>19</sup> because he was not the direct purchaser of the software. Id., 62-64. In so concluding, we noted that § 35-35 was modeled after the relevant section of the federal Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15,<sup>20</sup> and that the federal courts have interpreted that statute "as precluding an indirect purchaser of goods or services from bringing a private action against the seller who engages in anticompetitive practices in the sale of those goods or services." Id., 66; see also id., 69 (discussing Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, [431 U.S. 720, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 \[1977\]](#), which "held that an indirect purchaser could not bring an antitrust action and offensively use the pass on theory to recover under . . . the Clayton Act"). We then relied on the legislative history of [***35] the Antitrust Act, and specifically the history and text of § 35-44b, which "make explicit [the legislature's] intent that the judiciary shall interpret the [**979] Antitrust Act in accordance with the federal courts' interpretation of federal antitrust law." Vacco v. Microsoft Corp., supra, 72-73. We rejected the plaintiff's claim that the adoption of the indirect purchaser rule would render superfluous the text of § 35-35, because that statute, unlike the parallel provision of the federal Clayton Act, explicitly provides "consumers" with a right of action under the Antitrust Act. Id., 74-76. We noted that the federal precedent with respect to indirect purchasers [*808] remained persuasive as applied to the plaintiff in Vacco because of other well established federal case law allowing consumers to bring claims under the Clayton Act. Id., 76, citing Reiter v. Sonotone Corp., 442 U.S. 330, 338-42, 99 S. Ct. 2326, 60 L. Ed. 2d 931 \(1979\). We then concluded that "allowing only those consumers who purchase directly from the antitrust defendant to bring suit under our state antitrust law ensures that the Antitrust Act remains harmonious with federal antitrust statutes." [***36] "<sup>21</sup> Vacco v. Microsoft Corp., supra, 76-77.

[***37] We conclude that § 35-44b does not require us to incorporate the federal case law defining state action immunity into our construction of § 35-31 \(b\). The applicability of § 35-44b to the facts and legal landscape of the present case is questionable, at best. First and foremost, state action immunity under the Connecticut Antitrust Act is based on a standard set forth in a specific statutory provision, namely, § 35-31 \(b\), while that same immunity under federal law has its origins in case law construing the more generalized provision of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1. See, e.g., Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 348-49; Electrical Inspectors, Inc. v. East Hills, supra, 320 F.3d 118; see footnote 17 of this opinion for the text of the Sherman Act. Indeed, we have recognized that § 35-31 \(b\) "has no parallel in the federal antitrust statutes." <sup>22</sup> [***40] Mazzola v. Southern New England

<sup>19</sup> General Statutes § 35-35 provides: HN21 "The state, or any person, including, but not limited to, a consumer, injured in its business or property by any violation of the provisions of this chapter shall recover treble damages, together with a reasonable attorney's fee and costs."

<sup>20</sup> The relevant provision of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, provides in relevant part: HN22 "(a) Amount of recovery; prejudgment interest

"Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in any district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee. . . ."

<sup>21</sup> In so concluding, we also noted the extensive legislative history behind the failure of numerous "Illinois Brick repealer bills," which attempted to nullify at the state level the United States Supreme Court holding in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, supra, 431 U.S. 735; Vacco v. Microsoft Corp., supra, 260 Conn. 77-82, 77 n.22; as well as the "the inferential value of failed attempts to amend existing laws with respect to the intent of the legislature to acquiesce in prevailing judicial interpretations of such laws." (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Id., 79.

<sup>22</sup> Discussed at oral argument before this court, another example of a federal-state antitrust distinction is Congress' express prohibition on the recovery of damages from a municipality under the Clayton Act, an enactment that has no parallel in the state statutory scheme. See 15 U.S.C. § 35 \(a\) ("no damages, interest on damages, costs, or attorney's fees may be recovered under Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 359. It is well settled that HN23 [↑] "where statutes contain specific and general references covering the same subject matter, the specific references prevail over the general." Galvin v. Freedom of Information Commission, 201 Conn. 448, 456, 518 A.2d 64 \(1986\). [***38] Moreover, although there is legislative history supporting the defendants' argument that § 35-44b was intended to "create one, national body of law,"<sup>23</sup> [***41] HN24 [↑] neither that history [**980] nor the language of the statute as enacted requires: (1) the repeal of antitrust statutes unique to our state, without a parallel provision in the federal scheme; or (2) the overruling of state case law interpreting those statutes that are specific to Connecticut.<sup>24</sup> [***42] Accordingly, we must conclude that § 35-44b [*810] merely gave legislative imprimatur to what this court had been doing long before its enactment, namely, looking to case law construing relevant federal statutes as persuasive authority. See, e.g., Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, supra, 235 Conn. 15, quoting State v. Hossan-Maxwell, Inc., 181 Conn. 655, 660, 436 A.2d 284 \(1980\) ("our construction of the Connecticut Antitrust Act is aided by reference to judicial opinions interpreting the federal antitrust statutes" [internal quotation marks omitted]); see Elida, Inc. v. Harmar Realty Corp., 177 Conn. 218, 226-27, 413 A.2d 1226 \(1979\); Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 348. [***39] Indeed, in Westport Taxi Service, Inc., a case decided after the enactment of § 35-44b, and citing that statute, this court emphasized that "we follow federal precedent when we interpret the act unless the text of our antitrust statutes, or other pertinent state law, requires us to interpret it differently." Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, supra, 15-16; see also id., 39-45 [**981] (concluding that interpretation of text of Connecticut Antitrust Act as precluding awards of prejudgment interest is section 4, 4A, or 4C of the Clayton Act [15 U.S.C. §§ 15, 15a, or 15c] from any local government, or official or employee thereof acting in an official capacity").

<sup>23</sup> We note that the legislative history of § 35-44b indicates that the legislature's purpose in enacting that statute was to "mirror what Connecticut has done with unfair trade practices. Under the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act . . . Connecticut looks to Federal Unfair Trade Practices Act, jurisprudence. [Section 35-44b] would attempt to do the same thing with antitrust law. The goal being to have a single antitrust jurisprudence in the United States. This is vital if corporations are going to be able to make critical decisions about research and development projects, that they may undertake."

"[This is like] corporate ventures in general, where antitrust laws may pose an obstacle. This would allow them to look to a single case law jurisprudence, in order to know whether they're in compliance with our laws or not. Currently, a corporation in Connecticut or elsewhere, may have to look to [fifty] different sets of jurisprudence. This would move towards a national jurisprudence, and I believe it will strongly enhance the international competitiveness of Connecticut, and of American manufacturing and research companies, wherever they may be." 35 H.R. Proc., Pt. 7, 1992 Sess., pp. 2386-87, remarks of Representative Thomas Moukawsher; see also Conn. Joint Standing Committee Hearings, Commerce and Exportation, Pt. 2, 1992 Sess., p. 735, testimony of Joseph Brennan, vice president of legislative affairs for Connecticut Business and Industry Association ("The Connecticut Antitrust Act, however, is inconsistent in its language and its application to federal antitrust law. The possibility of multiple enforcement by agencies applying different standards can create serious problems for businesses engaged in interstate commerce.").

<sup>24</sup> A brief review of the legislation and case law of other states demonstrates that had the legislature desired the wholesale incorporation of federal law into the state scheme, it could have done so. See Duck Tours Seafari, Inc. v. Key West, 875 So. 2d 650, 653 \(Fla. App. 2004\) ("Under Florida law, 'Any activity or conduct . . . exempt from the provisions of the antitrust laws of the United States is exempt from the provisions of this chapter [542].'" § 542.20, Fla. Stat. (1995). Thus, the doctrine of state action immunity which has developed under federal antitrust law is also an available defense to a suit against a municipality for a violation of Florida's antitrust laws."), review denied, Docket No. SC04-1382, 890 So. 2d 1114, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 2183 \(November 22, 2004\); see also Dill v. Board of County Commissioners, 928 P.2d 809, 815-16 \(Colo. App. 1996\) ("any person exempt or immune under federal antitrust law is exempt from the Colorado Antitrust Act of 1992"). Moreover, statutes such as § 35-44b do not necessarily counsel blind adherence to all things federal. See Fine Airport Parking, Inc. v. Tulsa, 2003 OK 27, 71 P.3d 5, 10-11 \(Okla. 2003\) (acknowledging statute requiring state antitrust law to "be interpreted and applied consistent with federal antitrust law," but stating that "the principles of federalism supporting the Parker doctrine are meaningless in an analysis of municipal liability under [state antitrust statutes]" because "the state is the sovereign and the municipality is a political subdivision of the state").

consistent [*811] with relevant federal precedent). Accordingly, § 35-44b simply is inapplicable in the present case, which concerns a state antitrust statute without federal parallel.<sup>25</sup>

[***43] [*812] Moreover, the HN27↑ "the General Assembly is always presumed to know all the existing statutes and the effect that its action or non-action will have upon any one [**982] of them"; (internal quotation marks omitted) Hatt v. Burlington Coat Factory, 263 Conn. 279, 310, 819 A.2d 260 \(2003\); as well as "the interpretation which the courts have placed upon one of its legislative enactments and of the effect that its own nonaction, thereafter may have." (Internal quotation marks omitted.) State v. Ramos, 271 Conn. 785, 797, 860 A.2d 249 \(2004\); id. ("the legislature's failure to act upon our interpretation of [General Statutes] § 29-38 in State v. Scully, [\[195 Conn. 668, 678, 490 A.2d 984 \(1985\)\]](#), suggests that the legislature agrees with it"). Accordingly, we will not torture the language of § 35-44b to reach the results, disfavored in our jurisprudence, of overruling past decisions construing § 35-31 \(b\), or impliedly repealing that same statute.<sup>26</sup> See, e.g., Waterbury v. Washington, 260 Conn. 506, 538, 800 A.2d 1102 \(2002\) HN28↑ ("The doctrine of stare decisis counsels that a court

<sup>25</sup> The concurring opinion concludes that "because § 35-31 \(b\) is more specific than § 35-44b, its terms should prevail in this case. Thus, there is no need to go beyond the plain and unambiguous language of the statute." The concurrence further states that it "sees no need" for much of the analysis herein, including our "lengthy" explanation of how federal antitrust state action immunity relates to Connecticut's antitrust state action immunity. We take this opportunity to express briefly our respectful disagreement with much of the concurrence's analysis.

We first note that the concurring opinion, while professing to follow strictly § 1-2z, in fact departs from the analysis directed by that statute by invoking the canon of statutory construction that provides, "where statutes contain specific and general references covering the same subject matter, the specific references prevail over the general." Galvin v. Freedom of Information Commission, supra, 201 Conn. 456. If the statutes at issue were in fact as plain and unambiguous as the concurrence states, resort to HN25↑ this canon, which is itself a form of "extratextual evidence of the meaning of the statute"; General Statutes § 1-2z, simply would be unnecessary. Moreover, HN26↑ while canons certainly do have their place in the construction of statutes, it strikes us as unwise to elevate them over all other forms of "extratextual evidence" because, for almost every maxim found in the "grab bag" of canons, an equal and opposite proposition may be found. We have stated: "Although the so-called canons of statutory construction may at times serve as useful tools in deciphering legislative meaning, to rely on any one of them as a compelling factor in the interpretive process is problematic, because as Professor Karl Llewellyn persuasively has demonstrated, 'there are two opposing canons on almost every point.' K. Llewellyn, 'Remarks on the Theory of Appellate Decision and the Rules or Canons About How Statutes Are to Be Construed,' 3 Vand. L. Rev. 395, 401 (1950). The so-called 'canons' are not that, at least in the sense that any one of them reliably can be determined to apply or not to apply in any given case. They are, instead, merely guides drawn from experience, to be employed or not to be employed carefully and judiciously, depending on the circumstances. See F. Frankfurter, 'Some Reflections on the Reading of Statutes,' 47 Colum. L. Rev. 527, 544-45 (1947); see also United Illuminating Co. v. New Haven, 240 Conn. 422, 455, 692 A.2d 742 \(1997\). 'To permit them to displace the conclusions that careful interpretation yields . . . would be a disservice to the legislative process, as well as to the judicial exercise of interpreting legislative language based upon the premise that the legislature intends to enact reasonable public policies.' United Illuminating Co. v. New Haven, supra, 455. Burke v. Fleet National Bank, 252 Conn. 1, 23-24, 742 A.2d 293 \(1999\).

We also disagree with the analysis contained in footnote 3 of the concurring opinion, namely, that "federal antitrust law pertaining to state action immunity is more lenient than § 35-31 \(b\), but is just as specific. The reason that we should not follow federal law in this case is that the provisions of § 35-31 \(b\) are more specific than the provisions of § 35-44b and, therefore, to the extent that there is a patent inconsistency between the plain language of § 35-31 \(b\) and the federal law, the provisions of § 35-44b requiring us to follow federal law do not apply." We do not perceive the resolution of this case as turning on whether § 35-31 \(b\) is more specific than § 35-44b, because the statutes fundamentally are different. Section 35-31 \(b\) is a substantive rule of law pertaining directly to the parties' conduct while, in contrast, § 35-44b evinces the legislature's intent with respect to the interpretation of substantive antitrust statutes like § 35-31 \(b\). The concurrence's analysis misstates the central issue herein, which is the applicability of § 35-44b, and to resolve that question, we necessarily must compare § 35-31 \(b\) and 15 U.S.C. § 1, to ascertain the relevant similarities and differences between the state and federal enactments.

<sup>26</sup> We also note that adoption of the federal standard would diminish the strict construction that we give to the exceptions under § 35-31, including § 35-31 \(b\). Cheryl Terry Enterprises, Ltd. v. Hartford, 270 Conn. 619, 628, 854 A.2d 1066 \(2004\), citing Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 355.

should [***44] not overrule its earlier decisions unless the most cogent reasons and inescapable logic require it. . . . In assessing the force [*813] of stare decisis, our case law has emphasized that we should be especially cautious about overturning a case that concerns statutory construction." [Citation omitted; internal quotation marks omitted.]; Nash v. Yap, 247 Conn. 638, 648, 726 A.2d 92 (1999) HN29↑ ("implied repeal of a statute is not favored and will not be presumed where, as here, the old and new statutes can coexist peaceably"). We, therefore, reaffirm the continuing vitality of Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 365-66, as the controlling interpretation of a state antitrust statute without a federal parallel, and we decline to consider the evolved state action doctrine of Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 341, as either mandatory or persuasive in the construction and application of § 35-31 (b).

[***45] II

WHETHER THE TRIAL COURT PROPERLY CONCLUDED THAT THE STATUTORY SCHEME "SPECIFICALLY DIRECTED OR REQUIRED" THE DEFENDANTS' ACTIVITIES

Having concluded that § 35-31 (b), as explained by Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 361, provides the governing standard to apply in the present case, we now consider whether the trial court applied it properly to the facts pleaded by the plaintiffs when viewed in light of the statutes and regulations governing the activities of municipal water companies. The plaintiffs claim that the defendants are not entitled to immunity under § 35-31 (b) because their conduct with respect to the wholesale water market was not "specifically directed or required" as: (1) they voluntarily subjected themselves to the comprehensive statutory and regulatory scheme governing water companies; (2) regulatory approval or acceptance of water supply contracts and plans by state agencies [*814] that are not charged with antitrust enforcement does not constitute the required specific statutory command or direction; and (3) the statutory mandate of a "safe and adequate supply of water" under § 25-33c does not satisfy the specificity [***46] requirement of § 35-31 (b). The defendants, citing the plethora of statutes and regulations, including § 25-33c, that govern the activities of water companies, contend [**983] in response that their allegedly anticompetitive actions were required by the "totality of [that] mandate . . ." We agree with the plaintiffs.

A

Definition of the Relevant Market

We note at the outset that HN30↑ proper analysis in an antitrust case first requires determination of the "relevant market . . ." AD/SAT v. Associated Press, 181 F.3d 216, 225 (2d Cir. 1999); id. ("as is frequently the case in antitrust litigation, the court's definition of the relevant market was dispositive"); accord Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, supra, 235 Conn. 16 ("monopoly power is power to fix or control prices or to exclude or control competition in the relevant market" [internal quotation marks omitted]). "The relevant market for purposes of antitrust litigation is the 'area of effective competition' within which the defendant operates." AD/SAT v. Associated Press, supra, 227. Market definition generally "is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry [***47] . . ." Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 199 (2d Cir. 2001); see also Hayden Publishing Co. v. Cox Broadcasting Corp., 730 F.2d 64, 70 (2d Cir. 1984) ("in our view, there were clearly genuine issues of fact concerning the definition of the relevant market, thus precluding even partial summary judgment").

The plaintiffs contend, both in their brief and at oral argument before this court, that the trial court improperly conducted its state action analysis in a manner that [*815] implicitly accepted the defendants' argument that, as a factual proposition, the relevant wholesale water market does not exist. The plaintiffs argue that, at the very least, a genuine issue of material fact with respect to the relevant market exists, thereby precluding summary judgment. Our review of the trial court's memorandum of decision shows that the court acknowledged the plaintiffs' claim with respect to the relevant market, but neither ruled on the existence of a distinction between the retail and wholesale markets, nor explained how any such distinction affected its analysis.

Having reviewed the pleadings and factual record in this case in the context of the relevant [***48] statutes, we conclude that there is, at the very least, a genuine issue of material fact as to the existence of a wholesale water market in southeastern Connecticut.<sup>27</sup> [***50] The plaintiffs have pleaded their intention to sell water from the pond to other water utilities, including the defendants, in the New London area for subsequent distribution. Moreover, the difference between the wholesale and retail markets was explained by Schacht in an affidavit submitted to the trial court in connection with the defendants' motion for [**984] summary judgment. In that affidavit, Schacht stated that retail customers are individuals or [*816] businesses that purchase water from individual utility companies through "service connections" to water mains. Wholesale water customers, by contrast, are utility companies themselves, which purchase water in bulk for resale to retail customers. Schacht noted that the retail relationships are compulsory and not subject to competitive market factors because the department of public health designates exclusive service areas, wherein one utility is assigned responsibility for providing retail water service. See also HN31[↑] General Statutes § 25-33d \(c\) (defining [***49] "exclusive service area" as "an area where public water is supplied by one system"). Schacht averred that, in contrast, the wholesale market is voluntary and independent of the exclusive service area system. Accordingly, viewing the relevant market in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs; see, e.g., Zhang v. Omnipoint Communications Enterprises, Inc., 272 Conn. 627, 633, 866 A.2d 588 (2005); we conclude that our analysis of the relevant statutes and regulations must take place in the context of the wholesale water market.<sup>28</sup>

B

The Statutory Scheme Relevant to the Defendants' Activities

Municipalities and other entities in the water business, especially at the retail level, unquestionably are subject to a vast array of statutes and regulations. Nevertheless, HN35[↑] the "mere pervasiveness of a regulatory scheme does not immunize an industry from antitrust liability for conduct that is voluntarily initiated." MCI Communications Corp. v. American Telephone & Telegraph [*817] Co., 708 F.2d 1081, 1103 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 891, 104 S. Ct. 234, 78 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1983); id. ("although the [Federal Communications Commission] has authority to compel interconnection under 47 U.S.C. § 1201\(a\) of [***51] the [Federal Communications] Act, the initial decision whether to interconnect rests with the utility, and the record shows that the [Federal Communications Commission] did not control or approve of [the defendant's] actions here"). Accordingly, we must review the bevy of statutes and regulations produced by the defendants in search of the specific direction or requirement that they argue exists.<sup>29</sup>

HN36[↑] Regulation of water companies begins at their inception. Water companies may not be formed without a special act of the General Assembly after investigation and a report by the department of environmental protection, the department of public health and [***52] the department of public utility control into, inter alia, the proposed company's financial solvency, its water supply system adequacy and potability, and "the effect on water supplies of other systems . . . ." General Statutes § 2-20a; see also General Statutes § 7-234 (municipalities "may acquire, construct and operate a municipal water supply system where [1] there is no existing private waterworks system, [2] [**985] the owner or owners of a private waterworks system are willing to sell or transfer all or part of such system to the municipality, or [3] a public regional waterworks system within said town, city or borough or district is willing to sell or transfer all or part of the system to the municipality").<sup>30</sup>

<sup>27</sup> We note that further explication on this point by the trial court would have greatly aided our review of the market definition issue, and that the better practice would have been for the plaintiffs, who as the HN32[↑] appellants bear responsibility for providing an adequate record for review, to move for an articulation pursuant to Practice Book § 66-5. Nevertheless, the plaintiffs' claim remains reviewable because: (1) the underlying facts are undisputed in light of the trial court's decision to treat the defendants' summary judgment motion as one of judgment on the pleadings; see footnote 5 of this opinion; (2) HN33[↑] whether the trial court properly granted a motion for summary judgment is a question of law subject to de novo review; and (3) the relevant documents are part of the record on appeal. See Ammirata v. Zoning Board of Appeals, 264 Conn. 737, 744-45, 745 n.10, 826 A.2d 170 (2003) (res judicata and collateral estoppel claims); Niehaus v. Cowles Business Media, Inc., 263 Conn. 178, 185, 819 A.2d 765 (2003) (whether agreement was clear and unambiguous).

<sup>28</sup> We note that the applicable department of public health regulations also contemplate a wholesale market, as HN34[↑] the definition of "available water" includes water supplied by contract, as well as that obtained through "active sources . . . ." Regs., Conn. State Agencies § 25-32d-1a \(4\). To be "available," however, the contract must not be "subject to cancellation or suspension . . ." Id.

<sup>29</sup> We have reviewed the myriad of statutes and regulations cited by the defendants in the synopsis contained in their appendix, as well as those actually discussed in their brief. We do not, however, discuss all of them in this opinion because many are, despite their pervasive verbosity, nevertheless tangential or irrelevant to the issues discussed herein.

[***53] [*818] The extensive regulatory scheme is in furtherance of the legislative finding and general statement of policy articulated in § 25-33c, which was mentioned by the trial court,<sup>31</sup> and provides: HN37 "The General Assembly finds that an adequate supply of potable water for domestic, commercial and industrial use is vital to the health and well-being of the people of the state. Readily available water for use in public water systems is limited and should be developed with a minimum of loss and waste. In order to maximize efficient and effective development of the state's public water supply systems and to promote public health, safety and welfare, the Department of Public Health shall administer a procedure to coordinate the planning of public water supply systems."<sup>32</sup> (Emphasis [**986] added.) General Statutes § 25-33c. [*819] Indeed, the regulatory scheme envisioned by the legislature is not toothless, as General Statutes § 25-32e gives the department of public health the authority to impose civil penalties upon water companies for violations of the water supply statutes and regulations promulgated thereto, as well as "any regulation in the Public [***54] Health Code relating to the purity and adequacy of water supplies or to the testing of water supplies or any report of such testing . . ." General Statutes § 25-32e \(a\).

<sup>30</sup> We note that both the plaintiffs and the defendants engage in extensive discussions of the special act through which the General Assembly established the Southeastern Connecticut Water Authority in 1967. See Special Acts 1967, No. 381. The plaintiffs rely on language in the special act that expressly mentions the authority of the Southeastern Connecticut Water Authority to obtain and sell water at wholesale to water utilities. See Special Acts 1967, No. 381, § 14 (h). The defendants, in contrast, rely on the Southeastern Connecticut Water Authority's eminent domain power, which it received despite concerns of investor-owned water utilities that were expressed in committee hearings. See Special Acts 1967, No. 381, § 14 (c). We conclude that, although this special act supports the plaintiffs' contentions with respect to the distinction between wholesale and retail water markets; see part II A of this opinion; it is otherwise tangential to the present case because it does not provide water companies or municipalities with any relevant powers.

<sup>31</sup> We note that the trial court's decision in the present case cited and quoted only § 25-33c in discussing the statutory and regulatory scheme, but acknowledged that the defendants provided it with a comprehensive synopsis of the entire scheme.

<sup>32</sup> Accordingly, the legislature also gives the department of public health jurisdiction over "all matters concerning the purity and adequacy of any water supply source used by any municipality, public institution or water company for obtaining water, the safety of any distributing plant and system for public health purposes, the adequacy of methods used to assure water purity, and such other matters relating to the construction and operation of such distributing plant and system as may affect public health." General Statutes § 25-32 \(a\).

By way of illustration, the defendants cite several examples of the department of public health's extensive jurisdiction over water companies and their properties, such as the requirement of a written permit for the transfer, lease, assignment or change in the use of watershed lands. See General Statutes § 25-32 \(b\), \(c\), \(d\) and \(e\). Moreover, a water company may not agree to sell water reserves in excess of what it needs to provide adequate services without a permit to do so from the department of public health. General Statutes § 22a-358. Similarly, a water company may not abandon a water supply source without approval of the department of public health, which shall not be granted if that source would be necessary in an emergency or "the proposed abandonment would impair the ability of such company to provide a pure, adequate and reliable water supply for present and projected future customers," for fifty years from the date of application. General Statutes § 25-33k \(c\) \(2\).

Indeed, a water company desiring to sell even a potential or abandoned source of water must notify the department of public health, which shall order that company to notify "other water companies that may reasonably be expected to utilize the source, potential source or abandoned source of its intention and the price at which it intends to sell such source. . ." General Statutes § 25-33 \(a\). That statute also prescribes a procedure for other water companies to buy that source, and empowers the department of public health to determine who may buy the source if it is desired by multiple water companies. General Statutes § 25-33l \(b\).

[***55] The defendants point out correctly that HN38↑ the statutes and regulations do envision a significant degree of cooperation, and indeed, regional coordination of water companies. For example, water utility coordinating committees are required to "prepare a coordinated water system plan in the public water supply management area" that "shall promote cooperation among public water systems," and to submit that plan to the department of public health. General Statutes § 25-33h \(a\).<sup>33</sup> Indeed, part of this cooperation is avoiding duplication [\*820] of service, as directed by General Statutes § 16-262m, which prescribes requirements that must be met before a water company constructs a new water supply system or expands an existing one. To obtain the requisite "certificate of public convenience and necessity for [such] construction or expansion" from the department of public utility control and the department of public health, the departments first must determine that "(1) no feasible interconnection with an existing system is available to the applicant, (2) the applicant will complete the construction or expansion in accordance with engineering [\*\*\*56] standards established by regulation by the Department of Public Utility Control for water supply systems, (3) the applicant has the financial, managerial and technical resources to operate the proposed water supply system in a reliable and efficient manner and to provide continuous adequate service to consumers served by the system, (4) the proposed construction or expansion will not result in a duplication of water service in the applicable service area and (5) the applicant meets all federal and state standards for water supply systems . . ." (Emphasis added.) General Statutes § 16-262m \(b\).

[***57] The statutes also envision extensive planning in conjunction with that coordination. Under General Statutes § 25-32d \(a\),<sup>34</sup> water companies are required to submit [\*821] [\*\*987] a water supply plan to the department of public health for approval "with the concurrence of the Commissioner of Environmental Protection."<sup>35</sup> [\*\*\*59] A water supply plan is required to "evaluate the water supply needs in the service area of the water company submitting the plan and propose a strategy to meet such needs. . ." General Statutes § 25-32d \(b\). The plan must "include: (1) A description of existing water supply systems; (2) an analysis of future water supply demands; (3) an assessment of alternative water supply sources which may include sources receiving sewage and sources located on state land; (4) contingency procedures for public drinking water supply emergencies, including emergencies concerning the contamination of water, the failure of a water supply system or the shortage of water; (5) a recommendation for new water system development; (6) a forecast of any future land sales, an identification which includes the acreage and location of any land proposed [\*\*\*58] to be sold, sources of public water supply to be abandoned and any land owned by the company which it has designated, or plans to designate, as class III land; (7) provisions for strategic groundwater monitoring; (8) an analysis of the impact of water conservation practices and a strategy for implementing supply and demand management measures; and (9) on and after January 1, 2004, an evaluation of source water protection measures for all sources of the water supply, based on the identification of critical lands to be protected and incompatible land use activities with the [*822] potential to contaminate a public drinking water source."<sup>36</sup> General Statutes § 25-32d \(b\).

<sup>33</sup> General Statutes § 25-33h \(a\) provides: "Each water utility coordinating committee shall prepare a coordinated water system plan in the public water supply management area. Such plan shall be submitted to the Commissioner of Public Health for his approval not more than two years after the first meeting of the committee. The plan shall promote cooperation among public water systems and include, but not be limited to, provisions for (1) integration of public water systems, consistent with the protection and enhancement of public health and well-being; (2) integration of water company plans; (3) exclusive service areas; (4) joint management or ownership of services; (5) satellite management services; (6) interconnections between public water systems; (7) integration of land use and water system plans; (8) minimum design standards; (9) water conservation; (10) the impact on other uses of water resources; and (11) acquisition of land surrounding wells proposed to be located in stratified drifts."

<sup>34</sup> General Statutes § 25-32d \(e\) directs notice and the content thereof to municipalities when water companies submit a plan or revised plan that "involves a forecast of land sales, abandonment of any water supply source, sale of any lands, or land reclassification . . .".

<sup>35</sup> General Statutes § 25-32d \(d\) requires the department of public health to adopt implementing regulations, "in consultation with" the department of environmental protection and the public utilities control authority, and that "such regulations shall include a method for calculating safe yield, the contents of emergency contingency plans and water conservation plans, the contents of an evaluation of source water protection measures, a process for approval, modification or rejection of plans submitted pursuant to this section, a schedule for submission of the plans and a mechanism for determining the completeness of the plan. . .".

[***60] Similar planning occurs on the level of the water utility coordinating committees, who are required to conduct preliminary assessments, in consultation with the department of environmental protection and the department of public health, of water supply conditions and problems in their areas. See General Statutes § 25-33g \(a\). As part of this process, the water utility coordinating committees "shall establish preliminary exclusive service area boundaries, [**988] based on the final assessment, for each public water system within the management area, and may change such boundaries. . . . If there is no agreement by the committee on such boundaries, or on a change to such boundaries, the committee shall consult with the Department of Public Utility Control. If there is no agreement by the committee after such consultation, the Commissioner of Public Health shall establish or may change such exclusive service area boundaries taking into consideration any [*823] water company rights established by statute, special act or administrative decisions. In establishing such boundaries the commissioner shall maintain existing service areas and consider the orderly and efficient development [***61] of public water supplies. In considering any change to exclusive service area boundaries, the commissioner shall maintain existing service areas, consider established exclusive service areas, and consider the orderly and efficient development of public water supplies." General Statutes § 25-33g \(b\).

Indeed, "each water utility coordinating committee shall prepare a coordinated water system plan in the public water supply management area. Such plan shall be submitted to the Commissioner of Public Health for his approval not more than two years after the first meeting of the committee. The plan shall promote cooperation among public water systems and include, but not be limited to, provisions for (1) integration of public water systems, consistent with the protection and enhancement of public health and well-being; (2) integration of water company plans; (3) exclusive service areas; (4) joint management or ownership of services; (5) satellite management services; (6) interconnections between public water systems; (7) integration of land use and water system plans; (8) minimum design standards; (9) water conservation; (10) the impact on other uses of water resources; [***62] and (11) acquisition of land surrounding wells proposed to be located in stratified drifts."<sup>37</sup> General Statutes § 25-33h \(a\).

<sup>36</sup> Agency regulations implementing § 25-32d prescribe a process for the submission, completion and approval of the plan. Section 25-32d-5 \(c\) \(1\) of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies provides a timeline for the process by which the department of public health consults with the department of environmental protection and the department of public utility control. Section 25-32d-5 \(c\) \(3\) of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies requires the commissioner to approve, reject, or approve the plan "with conditions" within sixty days of department of environmental protection or department of public utility control comment, or if there has been no such comment, "in no case more than one hundred and fifty days after written notice that the plan has been deemed complete . . . ."

Section 25-32d-5 \(c\) \(2\) of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies provides factors for the department of public health to consider "in making a decision to approve, modify or reject a plan," including "(A) the ability of the company to provide a pure, adequate and reliable water supply for present and projected future customers;

"(B) adequate provision for the protection of the quality of future and existing sources;

"(C) comments from state agencies; and

"(D) consistency with state regulations and statutes."

<sup>37</sup> General Statutes § 25-33h \(b\) prescribes a procedure for the adoption of the plan, and requires that the committee seek comments from, inter alia, the department of public health, on "the availability of pure and adequate water supplies, potential conflicts over the use of such supplies, and consistency with the goals of sections 25-33c to 25-33j, inclusive."

Section 25-33h-1 \(d\) of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies prescribes the contents of the coordinated water supply plans promulgated pursuant to General Statutes § 25-33h. It requires that "the coordinated water system plan shall include, but not be limited to, the following:

[***63] [*824] [**989] Moreover, the department of public health permits may only be issued in accordance with the coordinated plans adopted pursuant to § 25-33h; see General Statutes § 25-33i \(a\); "no public water supply system may be approved within a public water supply management area after the Commissioner of Public Health has convened a water utility coordinating committee unless (1) an existing public water supply system is unable to provide water service or (2) the committee recommends such approval." General Statutes § 25-33i \(b\).

C

Application of § 35-31 \(b\) to the Water Company and Supply Statutes

The defendants argue that these statutes and regulations "seek to promote the cooperation and interconnection [*825] of water companies, and, by contrast, do not seek to promote the creation of new, independent owners of water sources." They claim that "it is simply inaccurate to state as do the plaintiffs that there exists in Connecticut a wholly unregulated wholesale market for water. The comprehensive scheme of regulation in place in Connecticut regulates all activities of Connecticut water companies and it is at the very least reasonably foreseeable [***64] that 'virtual monopolies' might result in some areas with regard to the purchase and sale of bulk water. The creation of exclusive service areas requires and entails marshalling, allocation, and protection of water sources, including interconnection, hence [it] regulates all aspects of the defendants' operations."

We note, at the outset, that we need not determine whether a monopoly is the "reasonably foreseeable" result of this statutory scheme. That inquiry would have its basis in the broader state action standards found under federal case law following Parker, and is, therefore, incompatible with the narrower analysis demanded by § 35-31 \(b\). See part I A of this opinion. As discussed previously in part I C of this opinion, this court's decision in Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 344, remains the controlling construction of § 35-31 \(b\). Case law following Mazzola that applied § 35-31 \(b\) demonstrates that the Connecticut immunity statute, which

"(1) The individual water system plan of each public water system within a public water supply management area, required to file such plan pursuant to section 25-32d of the Connecticut General Statutes; and

"(2) An areawide supplement that shall address areawide water system concerns pertaining to the public water supply management area which are not otherwise included in each water company's individual water system plan. The areawide supplement consists of a water supply assessment, exclusive service area boundaries, integrated report, and executive summary. The areawide supplement shall include at least the following:

"(A) Water Supply Assessment

"A water supply assessment shall be developed to evaluate water supply conditions and problems within the public water supply management area. The [water utility coordinating committee] shall prepare a preliminary and then a final water supply assessment. The water supply assessment shall be a factual and concise report including at least the following topics as they relate to public water systems in the public water supply management area:

"(i) Description of existing water systems, including

"(aa) History of water quality, reliability, service, and supply adequacy;

"(bb) General fire fighting capability of the utilities; and

"(cc) Identification of major facilities which need to be expanded, altered, or replaced.

"(ii) Availability and adequacy of any future water source(s).

"(iii) Existing service area boundaries and public water system limits established by statute, special act or administrative decision, including a map of established boundaries, and identification of systems without boundaries.

"(iv) Present and projected growth rates, including population data, land use patterns and trends, and identification of lands available for development.

"(v) Status of water system planning, land use planning and coordination between public water systems. . . ." Regs., Conn. State Agencies § 25-33h-1 \(d\).

requires that the challenged activities be "specifically directed or required by a statute," demands a more exacting analysis. Put differently, the cases demonstrate that [***65] § 35-31 (b) immunity from antitrust liability will attach only if the statute under which protection is sought speaks directly to the challenged conduct. HN39↑ Generalized statements of policy or implications from the sheer pervasiveness of a regulatory scheme as a whole, therefore, simply do not have the requisite specificity under § 35-31 (b).<sup>38</sup> [*826] Indeed, [**990] this is consistent with the ordinary meaning of the word "specific" used in the statute. The American Heritage College Dictionary (4th Ed. 2002) defines "specific" in relevant part as: "1. Explicitly set forth; definite. . . . 4a. Intended for, applying to, or acting on a particular thing . . ." Accordingly, we emphasize that mere approval or acquiescence by a regulatory agency will not cloak an entity with antitrust immunity pursuant to § 35-31 (b). See Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 357-58.

[***66] Apart from this court's leading decision in Mazzola, the case law applying § 35-31 (b) is entirely contained in state and federal trial court decisions.<sup>39</sup> In Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 353, which was discussed in part I B of this opinion, the plaintiff brought an action against the telephone company, claiming antitrust violations resulting from the company's practices with respect to answering machines and message-taking devices, specifically the requirement that individuals obtaining such services from sources other than the telephone company were required to purchase or lease linking apparatus from the company. This court concluded that the telephone company was not immune from antitrust liability under § 35-31 (b), rejecting its argument that its activities had [*827] been approved by the public utilities commission in accordance with the rate-setting procedure prescribed by § 16-19. Id., 357-58. The court concluded that § 35-31 (b) "has no parallel in the federal antitrust statutes," and that "in enacting this provision the Connecticut legislature also did not choose to follow the example set by several [***67] other states of specifically and unqualifiedly exempting from antitrust liability the activities of industries and other organizations subject to the supervision of the state regulatory agency equivalent to our public utilities commission." Id., 359. This court emphasized that § 35-31 (b) was narrower than the holding of Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 350-51, and concluded that the telephone company's activities satisfied neither standard because under the public utility rate-setting process of § 16-19, "the role that is statutorily assigned to the [public utility commission] in rendering effective tariffs proposed by companies such as the defendant amounts to little more than acquiescence in a program originated by the defendant. In no sense, then, can activities of the defendant such as the kind of activities challenged by the plaintiff, purportedly authorized by a tariff filed with and approved by the [public utility commission], be characterized as 'compelled by direction of the state acting as a sovereign' under the Parker doctrine as it has been judicially interpreted." Id., 365-66.

[***68] In Professional Ambulance Service, Inc. v. Blackstone, 35 Conn. Sup. 136, 137, 400 A.2d 1031 (1978), the plaintiff was a private ambulance company who, along with two other private ambulance companies, previously had been dispatched by the [**991] East Hartford police department on a rotating basis to provide emergency medical services to the town. The defendant mayor of East Hartford subsequently notified the plaintiff that the state office of emergency medical services and the North Central Emergency Medical Services Council had [*828] designated another ambulance company, the Ambulance Service of Manchester, Inc., as the "'R-2 service company for East Hartford,'" which meant that only it could provide emergency ambulance service in the town. Id., 138. The mayor then issued to the police department a directive to that effect, and the police thereafter notified only Ambulance Service of Manchester, Inc., when ambulance service was needed. Id. The town also "passed an ordinance prohibiting ambulance companies from advertising their services as 'emergency services' or 'emergency personnel.'

---

<sup>38</sup> The defendants rely heavily on the phrase "totality of the mandate," as coined by Judge Covello in Professional Ambulance Service, Inc. v. Blackstone, 35 Conn. Sup. 136, 143, 400 A.2d 1031 (1978), in support of their argument that the water supply statutes, in sum, "specifically commanded or directed" their conduct. We emphasize, however, that § 35-31 (b) immunity requires a statute that addresses the challenged conduct directly and explicitly, and accordingly, is not triggered by implication alone.

<sup>39</sup> HN40↑ Trial court opinions are, "although entitled to serious consideration . . . not binding authority in this court." Commission on Hospitals & Health Care v. Lakoff, 214 Conn. 321, 333, 572 A.2d 316 (1990). Nevertheless, the trial court cases discussed herein provide particularly cogent illustrations of the correct application of § 35-31 (b), and their inclusion is warranted because that issue has been addressed only once on the appellate level, by this court's decision in Mazzola.

As a result, the plaintiff . . . noted a significant reduction in the number [***69] of its calls for emergency ambulance services with a corresponding loss in revenues." Id. The plaintiff then brought a state antitrust action, claiming that "the designation of Ambulance Service of Manchester, Inc., as the single R2 responder for the East Hartford primary service area and the prohibition against advertising have had the effect of creating a monopoly and are in violation of these antitrust statutes." Id., 140.

The court, Covello, J., relied on Mazzola, and concluded that, "the parties sought to be enjoined from alleged antitrust activities are not the officers of a private company regulated by a state agency, but are the officials of the state and municipal agencies themselves, pursuing emergency medical service functions directed by the statutes." Id., 142. The court stated that the ambulance service regulations at issue were promulgated pursuant to the "totality of the mandate set out" in the emergency medical services statutes. Id., 143. It concluded that the mayor's activities "represent the product of specifically directed state action," namely, regulations restricting ambulance advertising and ambulance primary service [***70] areas.<sup>40</sup> Id.

[***71] [*829] We next consider the more recent federal District Court decision, also authored by Judge Covello, in Wheelabrator Environmental Systems, Inc. v. Galante, 136 F. Supp. 2d 21, 2000 WL 863029 (D. Conn. [*992] 2001). The plaintiff and the defendants in that case were waste management companies, and the plaintiff had entered into an agreement with the Housatonic Resources Recovery Authority (recovery authority), an organization with eleven member municipalities that had "joined together to arrange for the orderly disposal of municipal solid waste . . . in accordance with state and regional solid waste plans." *136 F. Supp. 2d 21, Id. at *1*. The defendants provided waste management services to some of the recovery authority municipalities by processing the waste and delivering it to the plaintiff's facilities to be burned and to generate electricity. *136 F. Supp. 2d 21, Id. at *2*. The plaintiff brought a breach of contract action against the defendants, claiming that they failed to deliver waste to the plaintiff's management facility as was required by their contract. Id. The defendants counterclaimed against the plaintiff, arguing that it violated the Connecticut Antitrust [***72] Act and the [*830] federal Sherman Act in its attempts to preserve its monopoly over trash disposal services in the recovery authority market. *136 F. Supp. 2d 21, Id. at *3*.

In addressing the plaintiff's argument that the state antitrust counterclaims should be dismissed under § 35-31 (b), the court relied on Mazzola and Professional Ambulance Service, Inc.<sup>41</sup> *136 F. Supp. 2d 21, Id. at *6*. The court noted that the "allegedly anticompetitive conduct . . . arises solely from the [plaintiff's] waste agreement with the [recovery authority]." Id. It found the "specific authorization" required under the statute in "the totality of the mandate" of the waste management statutes that: (1) required municipalities to "make provisions for the safe and <sup>40</sup> The trial court in Professional Ambulance Service, Inc. v. Blackstone, supra, 35 Conn. Sup. 138-39, stated that the mayor's actions were "the product of the implementation of a series of state regulations promulgated by the Connecticut department of health in furtherance of the emergency medical services program authorized by General Statutes § 19-73u et seq. [now General Statutes § 19a-175 et seq.]. [General Statutes § 19-73ee [now General Statutes § 19a-183] authorizes the establishment of a series of regional emergency medical service councils. The council for the geographic area which includes East Hartford is known as the North Central Emergency Medical Services Council. . . .

"Among their other duties, those councils are required by state regulation to designate so-called 'Primary Service Areas' for the various communities within their region. A primary service area . . . is simply a defined or known geographic area. [Sections] 19-73w-404 (B) and 19-73w-400 (D) [of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies] both require that within each primary service area there shall be only one firm assigned for a given category of service."

The court also noted § 19-73w-307 of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies, which provided: "'Ambulance services shall not advertise emergency medical services or emergency personnel for any political subdivision which has designated a phone number to be used to obtain EMS [Emergency Medical Service]. . . .' " Professional Ambulance Service, Inc. v. Blackstone, supra, 35 Conn. Sup. 140 n.5.

<sup>41</sup> The court dismissed the Sherman Act counterclaims after conducting a separate analysis pursuant to Parker v. Brown, supra, 317 U.S. 341, and its progeny. Wheelabrator Environmental Systems, Inc. v. Galante, supra, 136 F. Supp. 2d 21, 2000 WL 863029, at *8.

sanitary disposal of all solid wastes which are generated within [their] boundaries"; General Statutes § 22a-220 \(a\); and (2) authorized the municipalities to enter into long-term contracts for waste management. General Statutes § 7-273bb \(b\); <sup>42</sup> \*\*\*74 see also General Statutes § 22a-221 \(a\) ("the state, any municipality or any municipal or regional authority may make contracts for the exercise of its corporate \*\*\*73 or municipal powers with respect to the collection, transportation, separation, [\[\*831\]](#) volume reduction, processing, storage and disposal of its solid wastes for a period not exceeding thirty years and may pledge its full faith and credit for the payment of obligations under such contracts"). <sup>43</sup>

[\[\*\*\*75\]](#) [\[\*\*993\]](#) We conclude that the present case is readily distinguishable from Professional Ambulance Service, Inc., and Wheelabrator Environmental Systems, Inc., because, in those cases, the applicable statutes and regulations spoke directly to all of the challenged conduct. In Professional Ambulance Service, Inc., the applicable regulations gave the town no choice except to designate one emergency ambulance service provider, and the advertising ordinance was authorized by a regulation directly on point. Similarly, in Wheelabrator Environmental Systems, Inc., it was the very existence of the waste manager's contract with the municipality that was the sole challenged conduct, which was plainly and specifically authorized by statute.

In contrast, the plaintiffs in the present case have alleged sufficient facts, viewed in the context of the [\[\*832\]](#) statutory and regulatory scheme, to render improper the trial court's grant of the defendants' summary judgment motion. Although the statutes plainly envision retail monopolies through the designation of exclusive service areas, and some of the defendants' conduct was in fact mandated, namely, the inclusion of the pond in their water supply [\[\*\*\*76\]](#) plans; see General Statutes § 25-32d \(b\) \(3\); Regs., Conn. State Agencies § 25-33h-1 \(d\) \(2\) \(A\) \(ii\); the remainder of the facts allege anticompetitive conduct well beyond the pale of the statutes, and therefore, not immune under § 35-31 \(b\). Our reading of the statutes, which are quite comprehensive, reveals no mention of, for example: (1) authorization for contract clauses requiring water company parties to "use their best efforts to deter the construction and operation of new independent water systems"; and (2) manipulation of water supply figures in order to avert the declaration of a supply emergency, thus opening a previously closed market for additional water sources. Accordingly, action by state regulatory authorities in this case was limited to acquiescence to the defendants' anticompetitive activities with respect to the relevant wholesale water market, which like the telephone rate approval process considered in Mazzola v. Southern New England Telephone Co., supra, 169 Conn. 344, does not supply the state direction required for immunity under § 35-31 \(b\).

<sup>42</sup> General Statutes § 7-273bb \(b\) gives powers to municipal and regional resource recovery authorities and provides: "It is the intention of this chapter that the authorities shall be granted all powers necessary to fulfill the purposes of this chapter and to carry out their assigned responsibilities and that the provisions of this chapter are to be construed liberally in furtherance of this intention." See also General Statutes § 7-273bb \(a\) \(12\) (recovery authority may "do all things necessary for the performance of its duties, the fulfillment of its obligations, the conduct of its operations, the maintenance of its working relationships with the state, other municipalities, regions and persons, and the conduct of a comprehensive program for solid waste disposal and resources recovery, and for solid waste management services, in accordance with the provisions of the state or local solid waste management plan, applicable statutes and regulations and the requirements of this chapter").

<sup>43</sup> In contrast, we note Interstate Aviation, Inc. v. Meriden, Superior Court, judicial district of New Haven at Meriden, Docket No. CV92-0240874S (May 26, 1995), wherein the plaintiff unsuccessfully bid on the opportunity to operate a municipal airport. The plaintiff brought an action against the city and the successful bidder, claiming violations of municipal competitive bidding laws and antitrust statutes. With respect to the antitrust claims, the city claimed immunity pursuant to § 35-31 \(b\), and moved for summary judgment. The trial court denied the motion for summary judgment, relying on Mazzola and concluding that the statute, General Statutes § 13b-43, provided only that "any municipality . . . may establish, maintain and operate an airport at any location within the state approved by the commissioner and by the municipality or municipalities within which such airport is to be established, and may take any land or interest therein necessary for such establishment at such location upon paying just compensation to the owner of such land or interest therein. . . ." The court stated that the HN41 ↑ "use of the term 'may' does not support the notion that such action is specifically directed or required by statute," and also that because the enabling legislation provided for acquisition of competitors, but only "in exchange for payment, it 'very clearly negates any defense claim of entitlement to impunity or immunity.'" Interstate Aviation, Inc. v. Meriden, supra.

The judgment is reversed and the case is remanded to the trial [***77] court with direction to deny the defendants' motion for summary judgment and for further proceedings according to law.

In this opinion BORDEN, PALMER and VERTEFEUILLE, Js., concurred.

Concur by: SULLIVAN

Concur

---

SULLIVAN, C. J., concurring. I agree with the result reached by the majority, but disagree with its method [*833] of statutory analysis. This case requires us to resolve an apparent inconsistency in the antitrust statutes. While [**994] General Statutes § 35-31 \(b\)<sup>1</sup> provides that the antitrust provisions of chapter 624 do not apply to activities that are "specifically directed or required by a statute of this state, or of the United States," General Statutes § 35-44b<sup>2</sup> provides that, in interpreting the antitrust provisions, "the courts of this state shall be guided by interpretations given by the federal courts to federal antitrust statutes." As the defendants, the city of New London, the town of Waterford and their respective water pollution control authorities, point out, federal courts have concluded that the state action exemption applies to municipal activities that are the "'foreseeable result' of what the statute authorizes." Electrical Inspectors, Inc. v. East Hills, 320 F.3d 110, 119 (2d Cir. 2003). [***78] The statutory authorization need not be explicit. See id.

The defendants argue, in effect, that the plain and unambiguous language of both statutes cannot be given effect and, therefore, federal state action immunity standards should be read into § 35-31 \(b\), contrary to the plain language of that statute. The apparent inconsistency between these statutes can be reconciled, however, by application of the principle that "where statutes contain specific and general references [***79] covering the same subject matter, the specific references prevail over the general."<sup>3</sup> Galvin v. Freedom of Information [**995] [*834]

---

<sup>1</sup> General Statutes § 35-31 \(b\) provides: "Nothing contained in this chapter shall apply to those activities of any person when said activity is specifically directed or required by a statute of this state, or of the United States."

<sup>2</sup> General Statutes § 35-44b provides: "It is the intent of the General Assembly that in construing sections 35-24 to 35-46, inclusive, the courts of this state shall be guided by interpretations given by the federal courts to federal antitrust statutes."

<sup>3</sup> The majority applies this principle to conclude that § 35-31 \(b\) should apply over the more general provisions of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, as construed by the federal courts. I disagree. Federal antitrust law pertaining to state action immunity is more lenient than § 35-31 \(b\), but is just as specific. The reason that we should not follow federal law in this case is that the provisions of § 35-31 \(b\) are more specific than the provisions of § 35-44b and, therefore, to the extent that there is a patent inconsistency between the plain language of § 35-31 \(b\) and the federal law, the provisions of § 35-44b requiring us to follow federal law do not apply. I recognize that § 35-44b requires us, as a threshold matter, to compare the plain language of § 35-31 \(b\) with the relevant federal law to determine whether such an inconsistency exists in the first instance. Once it has been determined that such an inconsistency exists, however, we are no longer bound by § 35-44b in construing the meaning of § 35-31 \(b\).

The majority argues that my analysis is internally inconsistent because the canon of statutory construction providing that specific statutes prevail over more general statutes is, itself, a form of "extratextual evidence . . . ." I disagree. I believe that "we may apply the ordinary canons of judicial construction in seeking the plain meaning" of the statutory scheme. (Emphasis added.) State v. Courchesne, 262 Conn. 537, 634, 816 A.2d 562 (2003) (Zarella, J., dissenting, joined by Sullivan, C. J.). Thus, this canon informs us, before we ever look to federal law, that if there is an inconsistency between federal law and § 35-31 \(b\), § 35-31 \(b\) prevails over § 35-44b.

Finally, the majority argues that the canon providing that the specific prevails over the general does not apply because § 35-31 \(b\) and § 35-44b are fundamentally different. At the heart of the majority's analysis, however, is its recognition that the general rule that we follow federal precedent when interpreting the Connecticut Antitrust Act does not apply when the specific text of our Commission, 201 Conn. 448, 456, 518 A.2d 64 (1986). Because § 35-31 (b) is more specific than § 35-44b, its terms should prevail in this case. Thus, there is no need to go beyond the plain and unambiguous language of the statute. See General Statutes § 1-2z ("The meaning of a statute shall, in the first instance, be ascertained from the text of the statute itself and its relationship to other statutes. If, after examining such text and considering such relationship, the meaning of such text is plain and unambiguous and does not yield absurd or unworkable results, extratextual [*835] evidence of the meaning of the statute shall not be considered."). Accordingly, I believe that the statutory analysis should begin and end with the application of § 1-2z. I see no need for the majority's lengthy "examination of the interplay . . . between federal case law . . . governing state action immunity, and the statutory state action immunity standard set forth by § 35-31 (b)" or its application of the standards set forth in Manifold v. Ragaglia, 272 Conn. 410, 419, 862 A.2d 292 (2004) [***80] (this court's "fundamental objective is to ascertain and give effect to the apparent intent of the legislature" [emphasis added; internal quotation marks omitted]) and Jagger v. Mohawk Mountain Ski Area, Inc., 269 Conn. 672, 679, 849 A.2d 813 (2004) (court looks to "words of the statute itself, to the legislative history and circumstances surrounding its enactment, to the legislative policy it was designed to implement, and to its relationship to existing legislation and common law principles governing the same general subject matter" [internal quotation marks omitted]).

[***81]

---

End of Document

---

antitrust statutes requires us to do otherwise. See Westport Taxi Service, Inc. v. Westport Transit District, 235 Conn. 1, 15-16, 664 A.2d 719 (1995). This is an application of the very canon that the majority purports to reject. Thus, my disagreement with the majority is not with its general approach to the issue or its conclusion, but with its apparent unwillingness to state simply and explicitly that, because the language of § 35-31 (b) is plain and unambiguous, we are bound by that language and, because § 35-31 (b) is more specific than § 35-44b, we are not bound by § 35-44b.

Bradburn Parent Teacher Store, Inc. v. 3M

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania

June 9, 2005, Decided

CIVIL ACTION NO. 02-7676

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11375 *; 2005-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,921

BRADBURN PARENT TEACHER STORE, INC., On Behalf of Itself and Others Similarly Situated v. 3M
(MINNESOTA MINING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY)

Subsequent History: Motion granted by *Bradburn Parent Teacher Store, Inc. v. 3M, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15815 \(E.D. Pa., Aug. 2, 2005\)*

Prior History: *Bradburn Parent Teacher Store, Inc. v. 3M, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5315 \(E.D. Pa., Mar. 30, 2005\)*

Core Terms

---

prices, monopoly power, collateral estoppel, exclusionary, power to control, predatory, tape, reconsideration motion, time period, argues, relevant market, harmed, transparent, willfully, period of time, jury's verdict, preclusion, invisible, possessed, interlocutory appeal, power to exclude, clear error, competitors, antitrust

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > Altering & Amending Judgments

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Relief From Judgments > Grounds for Relief from Final Judgment, Order or Proceeding > Newly Discovered Evidence

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > Clearly Erroneous Review

HN1[] Relief From Judgments, Altering & Amending Judgments

The purpose of a motion for reconsideration is to correct manifest errors of law or fact or to present newly discovered evidence. A motion for reconsideration will only be granted if the moving party establishes: (1) the existence of newly available evidence; (2) an intervening change in the controlling law; or (3) a need to correct a clear error of law or prevent manifest injustice. Reconsideration of a previous order is an extraordinary remedy to be employed sparingly in the interests of finality and conservation of judicial resources.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Federal Common Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN2 [down] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

Courts apply federal common law principles of issue preclusion when determining the preclusive effect of a prior federal action.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN3 [down] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

Under the doctrine of issue preclusion, once an issue is actually and necessarily determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, that determination is conclusive in subsequent suits based on a different cause of action involving a party to the prior litigation. The doctrine of issue preclusion is derived from the simple principle that later courts should honor the first actual decision of a matter that has been actually litigated. Collateral estoppel has the dual purpose of protecting litigants from the burden of relitigating an identical issue with the same party or his privy and of promoting judicial economy by preventing needless litigation.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN4 [down] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

A litigant who was not a party to a prior judgment may nevertheless use that judgment "offensively" to prevent a defendant from relitigating issues resolved in the earlier proceeding. This form of issue preclusion is also known as offensive non-mutual collateral estoppel.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Judicial Officers > Judges > Discretionary Powers

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN5 [down] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

A party seeking estoppel must show that the following four elements are satisfied: (1) the issue sought to be precluded is the same as that involved in the prior action; (2) that issue was actually litigated; (3) that issue was determined by a final and valid judgment; and (4) the determination was essential to the prior judgment. In addition, the application of offensive non-mutual collateral estoppel is subject to an overriding fairness determination by a trial judge. A trial court has broad discretion to determine when collateral estoppel should be applied.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Verdicts > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jury Trials > Verdicts > General Verdicts

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN6 [down arrow] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

Collateral estoppel is properly applied to factual inferences drawn from a general jury verdict when such findings are necessarily implied by the prior verdict. Inferences are necessarily implied by a prior verdict if they are as a practical matter necessary to support that verdict, and a rational jury thus must have made such findings. In determining whether or not an implicit factual finding was necessary for a prior verdict, courts may consider the reasonableness of various interpretations of the evidence.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN7 [down arrow] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has explained that, while monopoly power is broadly defined as the power to control prices or exclude competition, more precisely, a firm is a monopolist if it can profitably raise prices substantially above the competitive level.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN8 [down arrow] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The goal of a monopolist who has attained the power to control prices is not to drive the price of its product up as high as possible, but rather to increase the price of its product to the point at which it will maximize its profit.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

HN9 [down arrow] Market Definition, Relevant Market

The ability of consumers to restrain a company from raising prices above the competitive level by decreasing their demand for the monopolist's product is well-recognized, and generally taken into account in the relevant market definition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN10 [blue] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition not competitors. To establish unlawful maintenance of a monopoly under § 2 of the Sherman Act, proof of predatory or exclusionary practices in themselves are not sufficient. There must be proof that competition, not merely competitors, has been harmed. A finding of no anticompetitive market effect would not suffice to dispose of a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, because injury to competition is presumed to follow from the conduct proscribed by § 2. Harm to competition itself is a sine qua non for a § 2 violation.

Counsel: [*1] For BRADBURN PARENT/TEACHER STORE, INC., ON BEHALF OF ITSELF AND OTHERS SIMILARLY SITUATED, Plaintiff: CHARLES M. JONES, JONES OSTEEN JONES & ARNOLD, HINESVILLE, GA; GREGORY BARUCH, BERRY & LEFTWICH, WASHINGTON, DC; J. DANIEL LEFTWICH, ROBERT STEPHEN BERRY, BERRY & LEFTWICH, WASHINGTON, DC.

For PUBlix SUPER MARKETS, INC., Plaintiff: ANTHONY J. BOLOGNESE, BOLOGNESE & ASSOCIATES, LLC, PHILADELPHIA, PA; PAUL E SLATER, CHICAGO, IL.

For 3M (MINNESOTA, MINING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY), Defendant: BRENT N. RUSHFORTH, KIT A. PIERSON, PAUL ALEXANDER, HELLER, EHRMAN, LLP, WASHINGTON, DC; DAVID W. ENGSTROM, ELEANOR ILLOWAY, JOHN G. HARKINS, JR., HARKINS CUNNINGHAM, PHILADELPHIA, PA; MARTINA M. STEWART, HELLER EHRMAN LLP, WASHINGTON, DC.

For HENKEL CORPORATION, Movant: ELIZABETH S. CAMPBELL, MURRAY S. LEVIN, PEPPER HAMILTON LLP, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

For MEIJER DISTRIBUTION, INC., MEIJER, INC., Movants: BRENT W. LANDAU, DANIEL A. SMALL, COHEN, MILSTEIN, HAUSFELD AND TOLL, PLLC, WASHINGTON, DC; IRA NEIL RICHARDS, TRUJILLO RODRIQUEZ & RICHARDS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

For HENKEL CONSUMER ADHESIVES, INC., Movant: MURRAY S. LEVIN, PEPPER HAMILTON L.L.P., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Judges: John [*2] R. Padova, J.

Opinion by: John R. Padova

Opinion

---

MEMORANDUM

Padova, J.

Plaintiff, Bradburn Parent Teacher Store, Inc. ("Bradburn"), has brought this antitrust class action against Defendant 3M for damages arising out of 3M's anti-competitive conduct during the time period from October 2, 1998 through the present. Presently before the Court is 3M's Motion for Reconsideration of the Court's March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order finding certain material facts to be without substantial controversy and established upon the trial of this action or, in the alternative, Motion for Certification of Interlocutory Appeal. For the reasons that follow, said Motion is granted in part and denied in part.

I. BACKGROUND

The conduct of 3M which forms the basis of this class action lawsuit was the subject of a prior lawsuit in this Court, Le Page's, Inc. v. 3M, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3087, Civ. A. No. 97-3983 \(E.D. Pa.\). In that suit, LePage's, Inc., a competing supplier of transparent tape, sued 3M alleging, inter alia, unlawful maintenance of monopoly power in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. After a nine-week trial, the jury found in favor of LePage's on its unlawful [*3] maintenance of monopoly power claim. The jury awarded damages in the amount of $ 22,828,899.00, which were subsequently trebled to $ 68,486,697.00. See Le Page's, Inc. v. 3M, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3087, Civ. A. No. 97-3983, 2000 WL 280350 \(E.D. Pa. Mar. 14, 2000\). 3M filed a Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law, which this Court denied on March 14, 2000. See id. 3M, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3087 thereafter appealed this Court's denial of its Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law to the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit ("Third Circuit"). A Third Circuit panel initially reversed this Court's Order upholding the jury's verdict and directed the Court to enter judgment for 3M on LePage's' unlawful maintenance of monopoly power claim. LePage's, Inc. v. 3M, 277 F.3d 365 \(3d Cir. 2002\) ("LePage's I"). Upon rehearing en banc, the Third Circuit vacated the panel decision and reinstated the original jury verdict against 3M. LePage's, Inc. v. 3M, 324 F.3d 141 \(3d Cir. 2003\) ("LePage's II"), cert. denied 542 U.S. 953, 159 L. Ed. 2d 835, 124 S. Ct. 2932 (2004).

The Complaint in the instant litigation alleges one count of monopolization in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act [*4]. The Complaint asserts that 3M unlawfully maintained monopoly power in the transparent tape market through its bundled rebate programs<sup>1</sup> [*6] and through exclusive dealing arrangements with various retailers. The Complaint further alleges that, as a result of 3M's conduct, Bradburn and other class members<sup>2</sup> have "suffered antitrust injury." (Compl. P 27). The damages period in this case runs from October 2, 1998 to the present. (Id. P 2). Bradburn filed a Motion for Partial Summary Judgment on the basis that several issues had been fully and fairly litigated in the LePage's case so that collateral estoppel now applied. By Memorandum and Order dated March 30, 2005, the Court denied Bradburn's Motion, but held that collateral estoppel nonetheless applied to establish the following facts upon the trial of the instant action:

1. For the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999, the relevant market in this matter is the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States;
2. For the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999, 3M possessed monopoly power in the relevant market, including the power to control prices and exclude [*5] competition in the relevant market;
3. For the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999, 3M willfully maintained such monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; and
4. For the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999, 3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct harmed competition.

(03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 41.) In the instant Motion, 3M moves the Court to reconsider its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order with regard to all issues which the Court deemed established for purposes of the trial of this action, with the exception of its determination that, for the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999, the relevant market in this matter is the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States. In the alternative, 3M has moved the Court to certify this matter for interlocutory appeal.

<sup>1</sup> As described at length in the LePage's litigation, 3M's bundled rebate programs provided purchasers with significant discounts on 3M's products. However, the availability and size of the rebates were dependant upon purchasers buying products from 3M from multiple product lines. See LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 154-55.

<sup>2</sup> On August 18, 2004, the Court certified as a class "all persons who directly purchased invisible or transparent tape from 3M between October 2, 1998 and the present, who have not purchased, for resale under the class member's own label, any 'private label' invisible or transparent tape from 3M or any of 3M's competitors at any time from October 2, 1988 to the present." (August 18, 2004 Memorandum and Order.)

II. LEGAL STANDARD

HN1 [↑] "The purpose of a motion for reconsideration is to correct manifest errors of law or fact or to present newly discovered evidence." Harsco Corp. v. Zlotnicki, 779 F.2d 906, 909 (3d Cir. 1985). A motion for reconsideration will only be granted if the moving party establishes: (1) the existence of newly available evidence; (2) an intervening change in the controlling law; or (3) a need to correct a clear error of law or prevent manifest injustice. Pub. Interest Research Group of N.J. v. Magnesium Elektron, 123 F.3d 111, 116-17 (3d Cir. 1997). Reconsideration of a previous order is an extraordinary remedy to be employed sparingly [*7] in the interests of finality and conservation of judicial resources. Moyer v. Italwork s.a.s., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7912, Civ. A. No. 95-2264, 1997 WL 312178, at *3 (E.D. Pa. June 3, 1997). Plaintiff does not allege the existence of newly available evidence or an intervening change in the controlling law. Rather, Plaintiff argues that the Court made clear errors of law when it applied collateral estoppel to deem certain issues established for the purposes of this trial.

III. DISCUSSION

HN2 [↑] Courts apply federal common law principles of issue preclusion when determining the preclusive effect of a prior federal action. Burlington N. R.R. v. Hyundai Merch. Marine Co., 63 F.3d 1227, 1231 (3d Cir. 1995).<sup>3</sup> HN3 [↑] Under the doctrine of issue preclusion, "once an issue is actually and necessarily determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, that determination is conclusive in subsequent suits based on a different cause of action involving a party to the prior litigation." Montana v. United States, 440 U.S. 147, 153, 59 L. Ed. 2d 210, 99 S. Ct. 970 (1979). The doctrine of issue preclusion is derived from "the simple principle that later courts should honor the first actual decision of [*8] a matter that has been actually litigated." Burlington, 63 F.3d at 1231 (citation omitted). Collateral estoppel "has the dual purpose of protecting litigants from the burden of relitigating an identical issue with the same party or his privy and of promoting judicial economy by preventing needless litigation." Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 326, 58 L. Ed. 2d 552, 99 S. Ct. 645 (1979).

Here, Bradburn, which was not a party to the LePage's litigation, sought to use issue preclusion offensively against 3M, which was a party to LePage's. It is well-settled that HN4 [↑] "a litigant who was not a party to a prior judgment may nevertheless use that judgment 'offensively' to prevent a defendant from [*9] relitigating issues resolved in the earlier proceeding." Parklane, 439 U.S. at 326. This form of issue preclusion is also known as offensive non-mutual collateral estoppel.<sup>4</sup> Burlington, 63 F.3d at 1232.

HN5 [↑] The party seeking estoppel must show that the following four elements are satisfied: "(1) the issue sought to be precluded [is] the same as that involved in the prior action; (2) that issue [was] actually litigated; (3) that issue [was] determined by a final and valid judgment; and (4) the determination [was] essential to the prior judgment." AMTRAK v. Pa. PUC, 342 F.3d 242, 252 (3d Cir. 2003) [*10] (quoting AMTRAK v. Pa. PUC, 288 F.3d 519, 525 (3d Cir. 2002)). In addition, the application of offensive non-mutual collateral estoppel is "subject to an overriding fairness determination by the trial judge." Burlington, 63 F.3d at 1232. The trial court has "broad discretion to determine when [collateral estoppel] should be applied." Parklane, 439 U.S. at 331, 99 S. Ct. at 651.

A. Power to Control Prices and Exclude Competition

3M argues that the Court made a clear error of law when it found pursuant to Rule 56(d) that "3M possessed . . . the power to control prices and exclude competition in the relevant market." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 41.) 3M does not argue that the jury in LePage's did not determine that 3M had the power to exclude competition. Rather, 3M contends that it would be improper to also infer from the jury's verdict in LePage's that 3M had the power to control prices, because 3M presented evidence at trial that the market was dominated by customers much larger than 3M, who were in a position to retaliate on a broad range of product purchases if 3M were to charge supra-competitive [*11] prices for transparent or invisible tape. 3M argues that a rational jury in LePage's could, therefore, have found that although 3M had the ability to exclude competition, it did not have the power to control prices.

<sup>3</sup>Throughout this opinion the Court will use the phrase "issue preclusion" and "collateral estoppel" interchangeably. See Witkowski v. Welch, 173 F.3d 192, 198 (3d Cir. 1999) (noting that the doctrine of collateral estoppel is now commonly referred to as issue preclusion).

<sup>4</sup>For the sake of simplicity, the Court will refer to the doctrine of offensive non-mutual collateral estoppel as "collateral estoppel" and "offensive collateral estoppel" when addressing the legal rule which governs the preclusive effect of a prior judgment in this case. See Raytech Corp. v. White, 54 F.3d 187, 190 n.5 (3d Cir. 1995).

HN6↑ Collateral estoppel is properly applied to factual inferences drawn from a general jury verdict when such findings are necessarily implied by the prior verdict. Ag. Servs. of Am., Inc. v. Nielsen, 231 F.3d 726, 731 (10th Cir. 2000) (citing Butler v. Pollard, 800 F.2d 223, 225 (10th Cir. 1986); Chew v. Gates, 27 F.3d 1432, 1438 (9th Cir. 1994); see also Ohio-Sealy Mattress Mfg. Co. v. Sealy, Inc., 585 F.2d 821, 844 (7th Cir. 1978)). Inferences are necessarily implied by a prior verdict if they are as a practical matter necessary to support that verdict, and a rational jury thus must have made such findings. Chew, 27 F.3d at 1438; In re Nangle, 274 F.3d 481, 483 (8th Cir. 2001); Hoult v. Hoult, 157 F.3d 29, 31-32 (1st Cir. 1998). In determining whether or not an implicit factual finding was necessary for a prior verdict, courts may consider the [*12] reasonableness of various interpretations of the evidence. 18 Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 4420, at 523 (2d ed. 2002).

In its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order, the Court found that 3M's power to control prices was essential to the jury's verdict in LePage's because the jury had determined that 3M had the power to exclude competition, and "the ability to exclude competition necessarily results in the ability to control prices." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 23.) The Court reasoned that "Once a monopolist achieves its goal by excluding potential competitors, it can then increase the price of its product to the point at which it will maximize its profit." LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 164. Indeed, "the more competition a company faces, the less it can control prices because competitors will undercut its prices to secure market share. Conversely, a company that can exclude competition can sustain its ability to control prices." PepsiCo, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., 315 F.3d 101, 107-08 (2d Cir. 2002) (citations omitted); see also LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 164 (exclusion of competitors allows [*13] companies to increase price of products); Barr Labs., Inc. v. Abbott Labs., 978 F.2d 98, 114 (3d Cir. 1992) (competition "would have prevented [defendant] from raising prices for any lengthy period of time"); Columbia Metal Culvert Co. v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp., 579 F.2d 20, 26 (3d Cir. 1978) (ongoing competition "guards against the ability of the dominant entity to increase prices"); see generally 2A Phillip E. Areeda, et al., Areeda & Hovenkamp's Antitrust Law, P 501, at 85-86 (2002).

(Id. at 24.) HN7↑ The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has further explained that, while monopoly power is broadly defined as the power to control prices or exclude competition, "more precisely, a firm is a monopolist if it can profitably raise prices substantially above the competitive level." United States v. Microsoft Corp., 346 U.S. App. D.C. 330, 253 F.3d 34, 51 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (citing 2A Phillip E. Areeda et al., Antitrust Law P 501, at 85 (1995)).

Contrary to 3M's assertion, the mere fact that 3M's larger customers could have retaliated had 3M raised prices beyond their [*14] existing levels did not permit the jury in LePage's to find that 3M did not have the power to control prices. It is well-established that HN8↑ the goal of a monopolist who has attained the power to control prices is not to drive the price of its product up as high as possible, but rather to "increase the price of its product to the point at which it will maximize its profit." LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 164. HN9↑ The ability of consumers to restrain a company from raising prices above the competitive level by decreasing their demand for the monopolist's product is well-recognized, and generally taken into account in the relevant market definition. See Microsoft, 253 F.3d at 52.

While 3M's point of profit maximization for invisible and transparent tape may have been lower than usual due to the potential retaliation by its larger customers across 3M's product line, the potential for decreases in demand for 3M's products as a result of an increase in tape prices does not establish that 3M might not have had the power to control prices. Rather, the fact that 3M could have faced declining demand across its product range had it exercised its power to raise tape [*15] prices merely establishes that the tape price at which 3M maximized its profit was the price which it was actually charging, and that any further price increase would have been unprofitable. See LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 164. Accordingly, the evidence 3M presented in the LePage's trial to suggest that some of its customers might have retaliated by refusing to buy 3M products had 3M raised the price for invisible and transparent tape is has no impact on the Courts determination that the power to exclude competition in this case necessarily results in the power to control prices. The Court thus correctly concluded in its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order that the jury in LePage's necessarily determined that 3M possessed both the power to exclude competition and control prices.

3M further argues that a finding that it is established for the purposes of the trial of this action that 3M had the power to control prices creates an unfair risk that the jury in this case will either consider itself constrained to find that 3M did in fact control prices, or speculate that the LePage's jury might have made such a finding. However, a finding that 3M had the power [*16] to control prices does not establish that 3M in fact exercised that power to the detriment of Bradburn, and Bradburn retains the burden of proving this allegation at trial. Moreover, as the Court noted in its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order, 3M's fears of juror confusion can and will be fully addressed through appropriate jury instructions. Accordingly, the Court finds that it correctly concluded in its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order that the application of collateral estoppel to the issue of 3M's power to exclude competition and control prices is fair to 3M. 3M's Motion for Reconsideration is, therefore, denied in this respect.

B. Maintenance of Monopoly Power

3M also argues that the Court made a clear error of law when found pursuant do Rule 56(d) that "3M willfully maintained . . . monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 41.) 3M contends that this finding improperly suggests that 3M had unlawfully acquired a monopoly or would have lost its monopoly position absent the conduct challenged in LePage's as predatory or exclusionary. However, the statement that 3M willfully maintained monopoly power in no way suggests [*17] that 3M willfully acquired monopoly power or would have lost such power absent the conduct challenged in LePage's. 3M therefore remains free to argue that it would have acquired and continued to possess its monopoly position even if 3M had not engaged in predatory or exclusionary conduct. (See id.)

3M further contends that it would be unduly prejudicial to apply collateral estoppel to a determination that 3M willfully maintained monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct without being able to tell the jury specifically which of 3M's practices were predatory or exclusionary.<sup>5</sup> 3M argues that this holding will prevent a jury in the instant case from fully exploring the rational nexus between the actual conduct found to be unlawful in LePage's and the claim of injury to Bradburn. However, the Court's March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order in fact has the opposite effect. As noted in the March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order, "even for the period from June 11, 1993 through October 13, 1999, Bradburn will still be required to offer proof that 3M's antitrust violations caused Bradburn injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent." (Id. at 41.) Thus, [*18] it remains for the jury in this case to determine not only which of the five practices challenged in LePage's were in fact predatory or exclusionary, but also whether a rational nexus exists between this unlawful conduct and any injury to Bradburn. Accordingly, the Court finds that it correctly concluded in its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order that the

<sup>5</sup> In its Motion for Partial Summary Judgment Bradburn had asked the Court to establish through the application of collateral estoppel that 3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct during the relevant period included:

- a) 3M's rebate programs, such as Executive Growth Fund, Partnership Growth Fund, Brand Mix Program;
- b) 3M's Market Development Fund, and other payments to customers conditioned on customers achieving certain sales goals or growth targets;
- c) 3M's efforts to control, or reduce, or eliminate private label tape;
- d) 3M's efforts to switch customers to 3M's more expensive branded tape; and
- e) 3M's efforts to raise the price consumers pay for Scotch tape.

The Court, however, declined to apply collateral estoppel to this issue because the jury in LePage's could have "based its finding of predatory or exclusionary conduct on any one of the five examples alone," and thus "none of the five alleged predatory or exclusionary practices were essential to the judgment in LePage's." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 27.)

application of collateral estoppel to the issue of 3M's unlawful maintenance of monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary practices is fair to 3M. 3M's Motion for Reconsideration is, therefore, denied in this respect.

[*19] C. Harm to Competition

3M further argues that the Court made a clear error of law when it found pursuant to Rule 56\(d\) that "3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct harmed competition." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order.) 3M argues that the LePage's jury was never instructed that it was required to find harm to competition; that although the jury found that plaintiff in LePage's had been harmed, there was evidence that competition in general was benefitted; and that a finding of harm to competition in any event was not essential to the jury's verdict.

It is well-established that HN10 [↑] "the antitrust laws . . . were enacted for the protection of competition not competitors." Angelico v. Lehigh Valley Hosp., Inc., 184 F.3d 268, 275 n.1 (3d Cir. 1999) (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 488, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977)). To establish unlawful maintenance of a monopoly under section 2 of the Sherman Act, therefore, proof of "predatory or exclusionary practices in themselves are not sufficient. There must be proof that competition, not merely competitors, has been harmed." United States v. Dentsply Int'l, Inc., 399 F.3d 181, 187 (3d Cir. 2005) [*20] (citing LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 162). Nonetheless, "a finding of no anticompetitive market effect would not suffice to dispose of [a] claim under section 2 of the Sherman Act," Angelico, 184 F.3d at 275 n.5 (citing Mahone v. Addicks Util. Dist., 836 F.2d 921, 939 (5th Cir. 1988)), because "injury to competition is presumed to follow from the conduct proscribed by section 2." Mahone, 836 F.2d at 939 (emphasis added). In other words, "harm[] to competition itself [is] a sine qua non for a § 2 violation." LePage's II, 324 F.3d at 162.

Thus, even though the Court in LePage's properly noted that harm to competition was not an element of a section 2 claim and did not instruct the jury that it was required to find harm to competition, such finding was necessarily implied by the jury's determination that 3M had unlawfully maintained monopoly power in violation of section 2. Accordingly, in reviewing the jury's verdict in LePage's, the Third Circuit explicitly stated that "3M's exclusionary conduct not only impeded [plaintiff's] ability to compete, but also it harmed competition itself." [*21] Id. The Court thus finds that it correctly concluded in its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order that the application of collateral estoppel to the issue that 3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct harmed competition is appropriate and fair to 3M. 3M's Motion for Reconsideration is, therefore, denied in this respect.

D. Applicable Time Period

Finally, 3M argues that the Court made a clear error of law when it applied collateral estoppel to the jury's findings in LePage's for "the time period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999." (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 41.) 3M argues that, due to the general nature of the verdict rendered in LePage's, it impossible to discern the exact time period for which the jury in LePage's found that 3M possessed monopoly power, willfully maintained such power, and harmed competition. Accordingly, 3M contends that it was incorrect for the Court to apply collateral estoppel to the jury's findings in LePage's for the entire period from June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999.

The jury in LePage's returned a general verdict which contained no special interrogatories relating to the time period during which it found that 3M had [*22] engaged in unlawful conduct. Similarly, the jury charge did not instruct the jury to find that 3M had acted in violation of section 2 from June 11, 1993 until the present. Consequently, the Court agrees that although the jury in LePage's considered evidence for the period from June 11, 1993 until October 13, 1999, the date on which the jury rendered its verdict, it is not possible to infer from the jury's verdict that 3M had engaged in unlawful conduct throughout the entire June 11, 1993 to October 13, 1999 period of time. Collateral estoppel, therefore, can only be applied to establish that 3M engaged in unlawful behavior for some period of time between June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999. Accordingly, the Court reconsiders its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order with respect to the application of collateral estoppel for the period of time from June 11, 1993 through October 13, 1999, and finds that collateral estoppel is properly applied to establish only that, for some period of time between June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999, 3M possessed monopoly power, willfully maintained such power and harmed competition. 3M's Motion for Reconsideration is, therefore, granted in this respect. [*23]<sup>6</sup>

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, 3M's Motion for Reconsideration is granted in part and denied in part. As 3M's Motion for Reconsideration grants 3M substantial relief, the Court further concludes that it need not reach 3M's alternative Motion for Certification of Interlocutory Appeal. Should 3M desire certification of this matter for interlocutory appeal despite the Court's reconsideration of its March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order, 3M may renew its Motion within ten days of the date of this Memorandum and Order.

An appropriate Order follows.

ORDER

AND NOW, this 9th day of June, 2005, upon consideration of Defendant 3M's Motion for Reconsideration of March 30, 2005 Order (Doc. No. 215), all documents [*24] submitted in response thereto, and the Argument held on May 9, 2005, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that said Motion is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART, and the Court's March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order (Doc. No. 211) IS HEREBY AMENDED to read as follows:

1. For the time period from June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999, the relevant market in this matter is the market for invisible and transparent tape for home and office use in the United States;
2. For some period of time between June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999, 3M possessed monopoly power in the relevant market, including the power to control prices and exclude competition in the relevant market;
3. For some period of time between June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999, 3M willfully maintained such monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; and
4. For some period of time between June 11, 1993 and October 13, 1999, 3M's predatory or exclusionary conduct harmed competition.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that 3M's alternative Motion for Certification of Interlocutory Appeal (Doc. No. 215) is DISMISSED AS MOOT WITHOUT PREJUDICE to renew said Motion within ten days of the date [*25] of this Order.

BY THE COURT:

/s/ John R. Padova, J.

---

End of Document

---

<sup>6</sup>The Court notes that this amendment to the March 30, 2005 Memorandum and Order has no impact on this Court's determination that the application of collateral estoppel in this case is fair to 3M and will serve judicial economy. See (03/30/2005 Memorandum and Order at 27-41.)

Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp. (In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig.)

United States District Court for the District of Maryland

June 10, 2005, Decided

MDL 1332, Civil No. JFM-05-1087

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11520 *; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,830

In Re: Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litigation; Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp.

Subsequent History: Motion granted by Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp. \(In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig.\), 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17988 \(D. Md., Aug. 19, 2005\)

Affirmed by Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 24101 \(4th Cir. Md., Oct. 15, 2007\)

Prior History: Peek v. Microsoft Corp. \(In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig.\), 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10935 \(D. Md., June 3, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

operating system, tolled, monopoly, markets, antitrust, Counts, anticompetitive, asserted claim, monopolization, word processing, spreadsheet, competitor, damages

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

HN1[ Private Actions, Standing]

Competitors and consumers in a given market are favored plaintiffs, and, just as certainly, the list of those presumptively disfavored is far longer. However, the U.S. Supreme Court has not established a litmus test for antitrust standing based upon a plaintiff's status. Rather, the Court has instead articulated a series of factors to be considered in deciding the standing question.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Tolling

HN2[ Private Actions, Remedies]

Under 15 U.S.C.S. § 16\(i\) the limitations period is tolled for every private right of action based in whole or in part on any matter complained of in an antitrust action brought by the United States.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Tolling

**HN3** Private Actions, Remedies

A party cannot be permitted to circumvent the purpose of 15 U.S.C.S. § 16\(i\) by simply joining tolled and untolled claims in the same complaint.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Tolling

**HN4** Private Actions, Remedies

The governing test for whether a claim is tolled under 15 U.S.C.S. § 16\(i\) is whether the matters complained of in the private action "bear a real relation" to a matter complained of in the government suit. The private plaintiff is not required to allege that the same means were used to achieve the same objectives of the same conspiracies by the same defendants, but simply must allege a significant, although incomplete, overlap of subject matter to toll the statute, even as to the differences. In general, consideration of the applicability of § 16\(i\) must be limited to a comparison of the two complaints on their face. Section 16\(i\) is not to be given a niggardly construction and must be read in light of Congress' belief that private antitrust litigation is one of the surest weapons for effective enforcement of the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Tolling

**HN5** Private Actions, Remedies

Limitations are not tolled under 15 U.S.C.S. § 16\(i\) when the government and subsequent private suits arose in distinct markets. That proposition is supported by cases which hold that differences between geographic and product markets in the government suits and private actions prevented tolling under § 16\(i\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Tolling

**HN6** Private Actions, Remedies

While 15 U.S.C.S. § 16\(i\) properly serves the purpose of permitting private plaintiffs to wait to bring private claims encompassed within a government enforcement action until that action has come to an end, it should not be construed to permit private plaintiffs to sit on their rights and assert claims so much broader than those asserted by the government that they open entirely new vistas of litigation.

Counsel: [*1] For Novell, Inc., Plaintiff: Jeffrey M Johnson, David L Engelhardt, Milton A Marquis, R Bruce Holcomb, Dickstein Shapiro Morin and Oshinsky LLP, Washington, DC; Max D Wheeler, Stanley J Preston, Snow Christensen and Martineau, Salt Lake City, UT.

For Microsoft Corporation, Defendant: David B Tulchin, Jennifer L Murray, Joseph J Reilly, Steven L Holley, Sullivan and Cromwell, New York, NY; James S Jardine, John W Mackay, Mark M Bettilyon, Mark W Pugsley, Ray Quinney and Nebeker, Salt Lake City, UT; Kit A Pierson, Heller Ehrman White and McAuliffe, Washington, DC; Robert A Rosenfeld, Heller Ehrman White McAuliffe LLP, San Francisco, CA; Thomas W Burt, Microsoft Corporation, Redmond, WA.

Judges: J. FREDERICK MOTZ, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: J. FREDERICK MOTZ

Opinion

---

Dear Counsel:

As I mentioned at the close of the hearing held on June 7, 2005, there is a series of motions pending in another proceeding in which I am involved to which I will have to turn my attention in the coming weeks. I expressed to you my concern that as a result, it might take me more time than I would like to rule upon Microsoft's motion to dismiss in this case. After the hearing, however, I concluded that [*2] close and difficult though the issues are, I am prepared to decide them now, particularly while your excellent arguments are still fresh in my mind.

It is neither in your interest nor in the public interest to delay resolution of your dispute any longer. Therefore, instead of postponing my rulings until my schedule would permit me to write a more extensive opinion, I have decided to issue my rulings now, setting forth my reasoning in this short memorandum to you. I hope you understand that the form and nature of the opinion does not mean that I have not considered the questions presented as thoroughly and carefully as I can. As I have previously done in these MDL proceedings, I am simply following my own adage of "writing for the parties, not for the ages."

Microsoft's motion is denied as to Counts I and VI but granted as to Counts II, III, IV, and V.

Counts I and VI

In Count I Novell alleges that Microsoft unlawfully "obtained and maintained its monopoly power in the Intel-compatible operating systems market by engaging in anticompetitive conduct" and that as a result Novell was damaged, specifically through lost sales of "office productivity applications" (including WordPerfect, [*3] a word processing program, and Quattro Pro, a spreadsheet program). Microsoft acknowledges that the claim asserted in Count I is not time-barred because the focus of the government case against Microsoft (during the pendency of which limitations of private rights of action were tolled under 15 U.S.C. § 16\(i\)) was upon Microsoft's monopoly in the operating system market. Count VI is based upon Microsoft's exclusionary agreements with OEMs, which allegedly were in unreasonable restraint of trade. Although Microsoft does not expressly concede the point, such agreements also were a subject of the government case. Thus, limitations has been tolled as to the claim asserted in Count VI.

In regard to Count I Microsoft makes two contentions, neither of which is meritorious. First, it argues that Novell no longer owns the claim asserted in that count because it transferred the claim to Caldera in connection with the sale of the DOS operating system, related technology, and claims relating "directly or indirectly" to it. The fallacy in this argument is that the claim asserted in Count I, while arising from Microsoft's monopoly in the operating system market, is for damage [*4] not to DOS or any other operating system but for damage to applications software. It is a far stretch to infer (and Microsoft has presented nothing to establish) that simply because DOS competed in the operating system market, such a claim was either a "direct" or "indirect" claim intended to be transferred from Novell to Caldera. Of course, Novell did also have claims against Microsoft for damage caused to DOS and related technology, but these claims (which were settled after Caldera sued Microsoft) are not part of the present action.

Microsoft next argues that Novell lacks antitrust standing as to Count I because the office productivity applications alleged to have been damaged did not compete in the operating system market. According to Microsoft, there is a black-letter rule that only competitors or consumers in a relevant market have standing to sue for harm caused by anti-competitive behavior in that market. Microsoft overstates the proposition. Certainly, HN1 [↑] competitors and consumers in a given market "are favored plaintiffs," and, just as certainly, "the list of those presumptively disfavored is far longer." SAS of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Puerto Rico Tel. Co., 48 F.3d 39, 45 \(1st Cir. 1995\). [*5] See also White v. Rockingham Radiologists, Ltd., 820 F.2d 98, 104 \(4th Cir. 1987\); Lucas v. Bechtel Corp., 800 F.2d 839, 845-46 \(9th Cir. 1986\). However, the Supreme Court has not established a litmus test for antitrust standing based upon a plaintiff's status. Rather, in Associated General Contractors v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 \(1983\), the Court -- while pointing out that the plaintiff whom it found not to have antitrust standing "was neither a consumer nor a competitor in the market in which trade was restrained," id. at 539 -- did not simply rely upon that fact but instead articulated a series of factors to be considered in deciding the standing question. Id. at 537-45.

In the present case the gravamen of the claim asserted in Count I is that Microsoft specifically targeted Novell for the purpose of maintaining its monopoly in the operating system market. According to Novell, WordPerfect and Quattro Pro, its popular office productivity applications, posed a threat to Microsoft's operating system monopoly because Novell had engineered them to exploit Novell's existing [*6] cross-platform technologies, such as OpenDoc and AppWare. Moreover, because these applications were being developed to run independently of any operating system, particularly Windows, and because the consumer demand for them was great, Microsoft saw the need to attack them. In support of this view, Novell, citing an internal Microsoft email, contends that "Microsoft recognized that it had to control the office productivity applications market to fend off that threat to its operating systems monopoly." The Microsoft email stated as follows:

If we own the key franchises' built on top of the operating system, we dramatically widen the "moat" that protects the operating system business. . . . We hope to make a lot of money off these franchises, but even more important is that they should protect our Windows royalty per PC. . . . And success in those businesses will help increase the opportunity for future pricing discretion.

E-mail from Jeff Raikes, Microsoft, to Warren Buffet (Aug. 17, 1997).

Novell also alleges that it was a company of particular concern to Microsoft. Paragraph 7 of the Complaint avers:

Bill Gates, Microsoft's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, [*7] targeted Novell's applications by name in documents recording Microsoft's anticompetitive schemes, in which he explained that the integration of browsing functions into Windows, coupled with Microsoft's refusal to publish certain of these functions, was a primary strategy for excluding Novell's applications from the markets. He candidly admitted that Microsoft's own products could not compete without the benefit of these anticompetitive acts.

Against this background, it is clear to me that Novell meets the various parts of the multi-factored test established by Associated General Contractors for antitrust standing. First, there is a direct causal connection between the anticompetitive acts Microsoft allegedly took against Novell's office productivity applications for the purpose of maintaining its operating systems monopoly and the damage claimed in Count I. Second, Microsoft allegedly targeted Novell specifically because it perceived Novell as an innovator in the industry. This targeting demonstrates that, at the least, Microsoft perceived Novell to be a competitor. See Reazin v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Kan., Inc., 899 F.2d 951, 962-63 \(10th Cir. 1990\). [*8] Third, destruction of a competitor's product for the purpose of maintaining a monopoly self-evidently is the type of harm for which the antitrust laws are intended to provide redress. Fourth, Novell's claim is direct and straightforward. Fifth, although there were other victims of other anticompetitive acts committed by Microsoft for the purpose of maintaining its monopoly in the operating system market, Novell is the only victim who could bring suit for the acts taken by Microsoft in regard to WordPerfect and Quattro Pro -- acts which ultimately had an enormous impact upon the shape of the applications software market.<sup>1</sup> Finally, no problem of speculative damages or complex apportionment of damages is presented because Novell is the only person with a claim for the damages it allegedly suffered in connection with WordPerfect and Quattro Pro between 1994 and 1996 when it sold those products to Corel.

[*9] 2. Counts II, III, IV, and V

HN2 Under 15 U.S.C. § 16\(i\) the limitations period is tolled for "every private right of action . . . based in whole or in part on any matter complained of" in an antitrust action brought by the United States. For the reasons I have just stated, I find that the claims asserted in Counts I and VI are tolled under this section. As Microsoft contends, however, the mere fact that limitations are tolled as to two counts in a complaint is not sufficient to toll all other counts in the complaint. Section 16\(i\) refers not to "complaints" but to "right[s] of action," and self-evidently HN3 a party cannot be permitted to circumvent the purpose of the statute by simply joining tolled and untolled claims in the same complaint

The broad principles governing the tolling issue may be briefly stated. HN4 The governing test is whether the matters complained of in the private action "bear a real relation" to a matter complained of in the government suit. Leh v. Gen. Petroleum Corp., 382 U.S. 54, 59, 15 L. Ed. 2d 134, 86 S. Ct. 203 \(1965\). "The private plaintiff is not required to allege that the same means were used to achieve the same objectives of the same conspiracies [*10] by the same defendants," id. at 59, but simply must allege "a significant, although incomplete, overlap of subject matter" to toll the statute, "even as to the differences." Morton's Market, Inc. v. Gustafson's Dairy, Inc., 198 F.3d 823, 830 \(11th Cir. 1999\). "In general, consideration of the applicability of . . . [section 16(i)] must be limited to a comparison of the two complaints on their face." Leh, 382 U.S. at 65; Greyhound Corp. v. Mt. Hood Stages, Inc., 437 U.S. 322, 331, 57 L. Ed. 2d 239, 98 S. Ct. 2370 \(1978\).<sup>2</sup> Section 16\(i\) is not to be given a "niggardly construction" and must be "read in light of Congress' belief that private antitrust litigation is one of the surest weapons for effective enforcement of the antitrust laws." Leh, 382 U.S. at 59 (quoting Minn. Mining & Mfg. Co. v. N.J. Wood Finishing Co., 381 U.S. 311, 318, 14 L. Ed. 2d 405, 85 S. Ct. 1473 \(1965\)).

[*11] In its complaint in this action, Novell refers frequently to allegations and findings made in the government case against Microsoft. These reference are incorporated by reference into counts II through V. Those counts, however, assert claims for monopolization and attempted monopolization in the word processing and spreadsheet applications markets: claims that were never asserted by the government. While there was a single conclusory averment in the government's complaint that Microsoft engaged in anticompetitive activities both to protect its operating system monopoly and "to extend . . . [that] monopoly into other software markets," Gvt. Compl., at P 5, the only markets defined and focused upon in the government complaint were the operating system and browser markets. Word processing and spreadsheet programs are specifically mentioned only once in the government

<sup>1</sup> It would seem that an implication of Microsoft's contention that Novell lacks antitrust standing as to the claim asserted in Count I is that Sun and Netscape also lacked antitrust standing to the extent that they were not direct competitors in the operating system market, i.e., owners of alternative operating systems, but rather developers of middleware products that threatened to render Microsoft's operating system obsolete. Even if that is not so, however, I am satisfied that for the reasons I have stated, Novell may (just as Netscape and Sun did) assert antitrust claims for harm allegedly caused to its non-operating system products as a result of Microsoft's anticompetitive behavior designed to protect its Windows monopoly.

<sup>2</sup> As Novell notes, several courts have glimpsed at the record in the government suit in order to evaluate the comparability of the government and private actions. See, e.g., Morton's Market, 198 F.3d at 830-32. That approach, however, does not provide any greater support for Novell than does a simple comparison of its complaint and the complaint in the United States' action against Microsoft. The record in the government suit confirms that while an occasional expert may have referred to abuses that occurred in related software markets, those references did not result in any charge of monopolization or attempted monopolization in the office productivity applications market. Indeed, the greatest difference between the complaint in the government action and the ultimate resolution of the case was that whereas the complaint alleged anticompetitive behavior both in the operating system market and in a browser market, the Court of Appeals ultimately found that the evidence did not substantiate the existence of the latter market. United States v. Microsoft, 346 U.S. App. D.C. 330, 253 F.3d 34, 81-81 \(D.C. Cir. 2001\).

complaint, and only in the section describing the operating system market and only as applications that are "controlled" and "directed" by operating systems. Id. at P 54.

Novell accepts, as of course it must, that operating systems and office productivity applications are distinct products and are in [*12] separate markets. It also accepts as "unremarkable" the bright-line rule stated by Professor Areeda that HN5[↑] limitations are not tolled when "the government and subsequent private suits . . . arose in distinct markets." 2 Philip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 321a, at 241 (2d ed. 2000). That proposition is supported by such cases as In re Coordinated Pretrial Proceedings in Petroleum Products Antitrust Litigation, 782 F. Supp. 481 (C.D. Cal. 1991), and Charley's Tour and Transportation, Inc. v. Interisland Resorts, Ltd., 618 F. Supp. 84 (D. Haw. 1985), which held, respectively, that differences between geographic and product markets in the government suits and private actions prevented tolling under Section 16(i). Novell argues, however, that because the operating system and applications markets are closely, indeed symbiotically related, this bright-line rule should not apply. Cf. In re Arizona Dairy Prods. Litig., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22199, No. CIV 74-569A (D. Ariz. Nov. 5, 1984)(finding claim for private action for price-fixing conspiracy in retail milk market tolled based on government suit for price-fixing conspiracy in wholesale milk market); In re Antibiotic Antitrust Actions, 333 F. Supp. 317, 320-21 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) [*13] (finding claim for damage suffered in a foreign market for agricultural consumption tolled by government suit for conduct in domestic market relating to human consumption). I am not persuaded. The nature of the relationship between the markets is important to an understanding of the dynamics of the industry, and it is central to my earlier holding that Novell has antitrust standing for harm allegedly caused to WordPerfect and Quattro Pro by Microsoft's maintenance of its Windows monopoly. However, the government case focused solely upon the operating system market (and an asserted browser market, ultimately found by the Court of Appeals to be unsubstantiated by the evidence), and Novell has provided no adequate explanation for not applying the bright-line rule recited by Professor Areeda in this case.

Undoubtedly, if the government had pursued additional charges of monopolization and attempted monopolization in the word processing and spreadsheet markets, there would have been some overlap in evidence concerning the conduct in which Microsoft engaged. However, the government deliberately chose not to lodge any such charges,<sup>3</sup> and in my judgment the existence of such a potential overlap [*14] does not justify tolling under Section 16(i). HN6[↑] While Section 16(i) properly serves the purpose of permitting private plaintiffs to wait to bring private claims encompassed within a government enforcement action until that action has come to an end, it should not be construed to permit private plaintiffs to sit on their rights and assert claims so much broader than those asserted by the government that they open entirely new vistas of litigation. If Novell wanted to assert claims for monopolization and attempted monopolization in the word processing and spreadsheet markets, it should have done so long ago. Its inaction entitles Microsoft to the comfort of repose. Cf. Greyhound Corp. v. Mt. Hood Stages, Inc., 437 U.S. 322, 334, 57 L. Ed. 2d 239, 98 S. Ct. 2370 (1978)(citing Dungan v. Morgan Drive-Away, Inc., 570 F.2d 867, 869 (1978) for the proposition that the limitations statute is one of "repose").

[*15] Despite the informal nature of this letter, it should be flagged as an opinion and docketed as an order.

Very truly yours,

June 10, 2005

J. Frederick Motz

United States District Judge

<sup>3</sup>That such a charge could have been asserted certainly was not unknown. State Attorney Generals originally included a claim for harm for a market for office productivity applications in the complaint they filed. (See Complaint filed in New York v. Microsoft Corp. PP 88-95, 98, 117-19, No. 98-1233 (D.D.C. filed May 18, 1998)). Of course, the filing of this claim did not toll limitations because section 16(i) applies only to actions brought by the United States. In any event, within two months the Attorney Generals abandoned that claim when filing an amended complaint. (See First Amended Complaint filed in New York v. Microsoft Corp., No. 98-1233 (D.D.C. filed July 17, 1998)).

---

End of Document

J.B.D.L. Corp. v. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs., Inc.

United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Western Division

June 13, 2005, Decided ; June 13, 2005, Filed

Case No. 1:01-cv-704, Case No. 1:03-cv-781

Reporter

2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11676 *; 2005 WL 1396940

J.B.D.L. Corp., d/b/a Beckett Apothecary, et al., Plaintiffs, vs. Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, Inc., et al., Defendants. CVS Meridian, Inc. and Rite Aid Corp., Plaintiffs, vs. Wyeth, Defendant.

Subsequent History: Affirmed by J.B.D.L. Corp. v. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs., Inc., 485 F.3d 880, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 11003 \(6th Cir.\), 2007 FED App. 168P \(6th Cir. Ohio, May 10, 2007\)

Prior History: J.B.D.L. Corp. v. Wyeth-Ayerst Labs., Inc., 225 F.R.D. 208, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26082 \(S.D. Ohio, May 12, 2003\)

Ferrell v. Wyeth-Ayerst, Labs., Inc., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15127 \(S.D. Ohio, June 30, 2004\)

Disposition: [*1]

Core Terms

---

contracts, products, competitors, rebates, formulary, pricing, market share, estrogen, Plaintiffs', antitrust, increased price, manufacturers, sales, pharmaceutical, discounts, pharmacy, retail, relevant market, prescription, conjugated, purchases, summary judgment, district court, marketing, placement, purposes, anti-competitive, generic, summary judgment motion, exclusionary

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery > Methods of Discovery > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > Discovery Materials

HN1 [] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

The standards for summary judgment are well established. Summary judgment is proper if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

**HN2** Summary Judgment, Opposing Materials

The party opposing a properly supported summary judgment motion may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading, but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. The court is not duty bound to search the entire record in an effort to establish a lack of material facts. Rather, the burden is on the non-moving party to present affirmative evidence to defeat a properly supported motion for summary judgment, and to designate specific facts in dispute.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

**HN3** Burdens of Proof, Movant Persuasion & Proof

The non-moving party upon a motion for summary judgment must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

**HN4** Summary Judgment, Evidentiary Considerations

The court upon a motion for summary judgment construes the evidence presented in the light most favorable to the non-movant and draws all justifiable inferences in the non-movant's favor. The court's function is not to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter, but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial. The court must assess whether there is the need for trial -- whether, in other words, there are any genuine factual issues that properly can be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party. If the evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, the court may grant judgment.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Scintilla Rule

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN5 Summary Judgment, Evidentiary Considerations

Upon a motion for summary judgment, the mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff. The judge's inquiry, therefore, unavoidably asks whether reasonable jurors could find by a preponderance of the evidence that the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict. Hence the "mere possibility" of a factual dispute will not suffice.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN6 Summary Judgment, Evidentiary Considerations

Summary judgment is not appropriate simply because the weight of the evidence favors the moving party. The issue of material fact required to entitle a party to proceed to trial is not required to be resolved conclusively in favor of the party asserting its existence; rather, all that is required is that sufficient evidence supporting the claimed factual dispute be shown to require a jury or judge to resolve the parties' differing versions of the truth at trial.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN7 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Although summary judgment must be used with extreme caution since it operates to deny a litigant his day in court, the United States Supreme Court has stated that the summary judgment procedure is properly regarded not as a disfavored procedural shortcut, but rather as an integral part of the Federal Rules as a whole, which are designed to secure the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Sherman Act

HN8 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, prohibits contracts or agreements that unreasonably restrain trade or commerce. The contracts at issue in this case are evaluated under the "rule of reason" test. This analysis must take into account a variety of factors, including specific information about the relevant business, its condition before and after the restraint was imposed, and the restraint's history, nature, and effect. The first, and critical, step in any rule of reason analysis is that the plaintiff must prove that the challenged action has had an actual adverse effect on competition as a whole in the relevant market. Under the rule-of-reason analysis, the antitrust plaintiff must show, inter alia, an adverse effect on competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN9 [down] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Exclusivity provisions in contracts can serve useful, pro-competitive purposes. It is only when such provisions cross the line into the arena of exclusive dealing that substantially and negatively affects market competition, that the antitrust statutes, including the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, come into play.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN10 [down] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Exclusive dealer contracts did not violate the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, where the defendant's actions do not foreclose competitors from gaining a foothold in the market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Monopoly Power

HN11 [down] Sherman Act, Claims

A claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, requires proof of two elements: (1) the possession of monopoly power in a relevant market; and (2) the willful acquisition, maintenance, or use of that power by anti-competitive or exclusionary means as opposed to growth or development resulting from a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN12 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

"Monopoly power" for purposes of 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 can be something greater than market power under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Pricing

HN13 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The United States Supreme Court has acknowledged the viability of 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 claims brought by a competitor that go beyond allegations of predatory pricing.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Monopoly Power

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Unlawful exclusionary conduct for purposes of Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, liability has been described as acts that are reasonably capable of creating, enlarging or prolonging monopoly power by impairing the opportunities of rivals and that either do not benefit consumers at all, are unnecessary for the particular consumer benefits that the acts produce, or produce harms disproportionate to the resulting benefits. To this end, it must be kept in mind that when considering an allegation of exclusionary or anti-competitive conduct, the antitrust laws are intended to protect competition, not a competitor.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN15 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Exclusionary conduct that uses above-cost price discounting is actionable under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN16 [blue icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Under the best of circumstances, applying the requirements of section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, can be difficult because the means of illicit exclusion, like the means of legitimate competition, are myriad. Mistaken inferences and the resulting false condemnations are especially costly, because they chill the very conduct the antitrust laws are designed to protect.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN17 [ ] Private Actions, Remedies

A private plaintiff may not recover damages under the antitrust laws merely by showing an injury causally linked to an illegal presence in the market. Antitrust laws are intended to prevent injuries to competition, and thus provide a remedy only for those losses that stem from the competition-reducing aspects of a defendant's conduct. There must be a distinct causal link between that challenged conduct, and the harm which Plaintiffs allege they have suffered. The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has been zealous in ensuring that this element of an antitrust claim is satisfied.

Counsel: For JBDL Corporation, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated doing business as Beckett Apothecary, Plaintiff: Jay S Cohen, Eugene A Spector, Spector Roseman & Kodroff PC, Philadelphia, PA; John Charles Murdock, Theresa L. Groh, Murdock Goldenberg Schneider & Groh LPA, Cincinnati, OH; Kendall S Zylstra, Schiffriin & Barroway LLP, Radnor, PA; Ruthanne Gordon, David F Sorensen, Eric L Cramer, H Laddie Montague, Peter Kohn, Berger & Montague PC, Philadelphia, PA; Andrew Kelly, Stuart Des Roches, Odom & Des Roches, LLC, New Orleans, LA.

For McHugh Pharmacy Wynnewood Inc, Plaintiff: John Charles Murdock, Theresa L. Groh, Murdock Goldenberg Schneider & Groh LPA, Cincinnati, OH; Kendall S Zylstra, Schiffriin & Barroway LLP, Radnor, PA; Krishna Narine, Schiffriin & Barroway LLP, Bala Cynwyd, PA; Andrew Kelly, Stuart Des Roches, Odom & Des Roches, LLC, New Orleans, LA; David F Sorensen, Peter Kohn, Berger & Montague PC, Philadelphia, PA.

For CVS Meridian, Inc., Rite Aid Corporation, Plaintiffs: Wilbert [*2] Benjamin Markovits, Markovits & Greiwe, Cincinnati, OH; Andrew Kelly, Stuart Des Roches, Odom & Des Roches, LLC, New Orleans, LA; David F Sorensen, Peter Kohn, Berger & Montague PC, Philadelphia, PA; Gordon A Einhorn, Steve D Shadowen, Hangley Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Theresa L. Groh, Murdock Goldenberg Schneider & Groh LPA, Cincinnati, OH.

For Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories Inc, Defendant: Grant Spencer Cowan, James Ralph Adams, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Cincinnati, OH; Mark R Merley, David S Eggert, Matthew D Meisner, Son B Nguyen, William J Baer, Arnold & Porter LLP, Washington, DC; Asim Varma, Douglas L Wald, Arnold & Porter, Washington, DC; Brian D Werner, Brooke B Ward, Dan K Webb, Peggy M Balesteri, W Gordon Dobie, Winston & Strawn, Chicago, IL.

For American Home Products Corporation, Defendant: Grant Spencer Cowan, James Ralph Adams, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Cincinnati, OH; Mark R Merley, Arnold & Porter, Washington, DC.

Judges: Sandra S. Beckwith, Chief Judge, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Sandra S. Beckwith

Opinion

---

ORDER

I. Introduction

Plaintiff J.B.D.L. Corp., for itself and a class of direct purchasers, alleges that Defendants Wyeth and Wyeth [*3] Pharmaceuticals (collectively "Wyeth"), violated the Sherman Act. Plaintiffs CVS Meridian and Rite Aid Corporation opted out of the J.B.D.L. class, and filed a separate Sherman Act complaint. All Plaintiffs contend that they were forced to pay a supracompetitive price for Wyeth's drug Premarin because Wyeth engaged in anti-competitive and exclusionary conduct towards one of its rivals, Duramed.

The Court has studied the extensive briefs filed by all parties in connection with Wyeth's motion for summary judgment. The Court finds that oral argument would not aid the Court in resolving the motion. The Court will grant Wyeth's motion and enter judgment in favor of Wyeth.

II. Factual Background

Wyeth manufactures Premarin. Premarin is Wyeth's trade name for its conjugated estrogen product approved for several therapeutic purposes: for treatment of vasomotor symptoms associated with menopause; treatment of vulval and vaginal atrophy; and to prevent osteoporosis, along with more specialized uses for more rare medical conditions. See Carlton Deposition, Table 1 (Doc. 135, Appendix C-1). Wyeth has manufactured and sold Premarin since 1942. No one disputes the fact that Premarin is [*4] the largest selling estrogen replacement drug (and one of the largest selling prescription medications) in the United States.

Premarin is an estrogen replacement drug. Estrogen replacement therapy (ERT) is typically prescribed for women without a uterus (as after a hysterectomy). Wyeth also manufactures products for use in hormone replacement therapy, which involves a combination of estrogen and progestin. Hormone replacement therapy (HRT) is typically prescribed for women with intact uteruses. The two categories of therapy are related but are distinct. Premarin can be used in combination with progestin in HRT. Wyeth's products PremPro and Premphase combine estrogen and progestin into one dose.

For all of the relevant time periods, several other ERT products were available in the market. None, however, were "conjugated" estrogen products, as is Premarin. There are no generic equivalents of Premarin approved by the FDA.

Duramed<sup>1</sup> manufactures Cenestin, its trade name for a newer conjugated estrogen product. Duramed obtained FDA approval to market Cenestin as a branded pharmaceutical in March 1999. Duramed had originally attempted to gain FDA approval of Cenestin as a [*5] generic equivalent to Premarin, but was not successful. It is important to note that Premarin and Cenestin are not therapeutic equivalents. See, e.g., Wyeth's Exhibit B-3, an FDA "Question and Answer" sheet about Cenestin. Cenestin, unlike Premarin, is not approved for long-term use, and thus cannot be prescribed for the prevention of osteoporosis.

Wyeth kept itself well informed of Duramed's efforts to secure FDA approval for Cenestin. Indeed, much of Plaintiffs' recitation of facts in opposition to Wyeth's motion for summary judgment is devoted to a review of Wyeth's documentation of the progress of its rival through the FDA process, and Wyeth's plans to address the impact of Cenestin's entry into the marketplace. Plaintiffs repeatedly refer to Wyeth's "Premarin Preemptive Plan", dated February 11, 1999 (Class Plaintiffs Exhibit P96, Doc. 143), as the key component of Wyeth's anti-competitive [*6] conduct.

The "Plan" was a multi-faceted market strategy to maintain Premarin's dominant market share. One of its stated objectives was to hold "Cenestin to less than two percent of prescription market share in 1999, approximately $ 20 million in assumed sales." (Id. at WYE 132253). One part of the Plan was a demonstration for retail pharmacies on the advantageous pricing of Premarin vs. Cenestin, which Wyeth estimated would be priced below the average wholesale price (AWP) of Premarin. The demonstration showed that a pharmacy filling an ERT prescription would increase its net revenue by filling the prescription with the more expensive Premarin. Another part of the Plan was to advertise and promote Premarin's clinical differences - primarily its long-term use approval - and its longer track record. And yet another part of the "Plan" presented a strategy of limiting Duramed's "contracting opportunities" with third party payors, with whom Wyeth had in place various contracts. The "value" of these contracts to the third party payors is in the rebates Wyeth was paying for sales of various Wyeth products.

---

<sup>1</sup> Duramed Pharmaceuticals was purchased by Barr Laboratories in 2001. The company will be referred to as "Duramed" in this Order.

Wyeth kept a close eye on its market competitors. While Plaintiffs suggest this [*7] is part of Wyeth's anti-competitive scheming, such conduct appears to be a rational part of any market seller's business planning. See, for example, Class Plaintiffs Exhibit 97 (Doc. 143), a Wyeth "Premarin Family Business Brief" from June 21, 1999, that summarizes "Competitive Activity" from Duramed's Cenestin, but also from EVISTA, Lilly's Raloxifene, and a potential new entrant called "Activelle." In fact Wyeth appears to be closely tracking the effects of the March 1998 launch of EVISTA on its product sales; see WYE 089614 and 089621 (Class Plaintiffs Exhibit 97), showing that Premarin prescriptions actually declined (as a share of Wyeth family product sales) after EVISTA's market entry.

A. Wyeth's PBM Contracts: The record in this case fairly establishes that rebate and "access" contracts between pharmaceutical manufacturers and third party payors are a widespread industry practice. See, e.g., deposition testimony of Dr. White, chief clinical officer of HealthNet, at pp. 180-82 (Wyeth's Exhibit E-21, Doc. 135); Dept. of Health & Human Services, "Report to the President - Prescription Drug Coverage, Spending, Utilization, and Prices" (April 2000) (excerpts at Exh. B-9, Doc. [*8] 135). The "third party payors" include not only traditional HMOs or insurers, but "pharmacy benefit managers" (PBMs). In overly simplistic terms, the rise of managed care, coupled with an increasing concern among employers and insurers with rising health care costs, created the pharmacy benefit manager and the drug formulary. (Some insurers manage plan pharmacy benefits internally, while others use an independent entity. For ease of reference, the Court will refer to both of these types of arrangements simply as "PBMs".)

The Plaintiffs generally contend that Wyeth's rebate/formulary contracts with many large PBMs permitted Wyeth to illegally maintain its monopoly in the ERT market, and to raise its prices after Cenestin's entry into the marketplace. Plaintiffs and their experts argue that the synergistic effects of Wyeth's "sole conjugated estrogen" clauses together with Wyeth's formulas for rebates to PBMs, effectively foreclosed competition from Duramed's Cenestin.

The PBM is not involved in the actual sales transaction for the pharmaceuticals it "manages." Rather, the PBM negotiates both with the pharmaceutical manufacturers and the pharmacies that actually fill the prescriptions [*9] (many of the direct purchasers here). Manufacturers contract with a PBM for favorable formulary placement, or exclusive formulary listing in a given therapeutic drug classification. Manufacturers pay for these placements with rebates and other incentive payments.

The PBM also negotiates contracts with the pharmacies that actually buy the drugs and fill the plan members' prescriptions. These contracts are price contracts. Dr. White, of HealthNet, discussed this aspect of PBM contracts. She testified that, generally, the PBM-pharmacy contracts specify a reimbursement rate composed of the drug cost and a dispensing fee. For branded drugs, the cost is generally based on the average wholesale price of the drug less a negotiated discount. Dispensing fees also vary depending on the pharmacy and geographic location. Under the type of contract terms Dr. White describes, if the average wholesale price of a drug should go up, the pharmacy's reimbursement from the PBM would also go up.

Wyeth submitted copies of its PBM contracts (Doc. 135, Exhibits H-1 through H-95). One of these contracts that the Plaintiffs analyze is with PCS Health Services, and is dated June 1996. (Plaintiffs Exhibit 92, [*10] Doc. 143) The term of this contract is thirty months, but Section 6.2.3 permits either party, with or without cause, to terminate with sixty days written notice. The contract obligates PCS to disclose to its plan sponsors all amounts Wyeth pays PCS (in rebates and other similar types of payments), while the actual distribution of those amounts is left to PCS and its plan sponsors.

Exhibit A lists the Wyeth products that are included in the PCS "Core Formulary." These include the various available dosages of Premarin. Section II states that all rebates paid under the agreement are contingent on Premarin being listed as the Core Formulary's "exclusive conjugated estrogen." The parties agreed that, in the event of a generic competitor's market entry, PCS would "consult" with Wyeth prior to placement of the generic on the formulary. (The contract also provides an "out" for both parties in the event that PCS and Wyeth could not agree on how to properly address a generic entry.)

The contract provides for "access" rebates and "market share" rebates, based on the number of prescriptions filled by PCS plan members for various Wyeth products, including Premarin. The market share rebate is [*11] defined for the "Estrogen and Estrogen/Progestin" therapeutic class as the "Premarin family" (Premarin, Prempro and Premphase tablets.) Other products for which Wyeth paid rebates include several oral contraceptives; an antidepressant (Effexor); the NSAIDs Lodine and Oruvail; an antibiotic (Suprax); a calcium channel blocker (Verelan); and a beta-blocker (Ziac).

B. Wyeth's "Sole CE" Contract Clauses.

Wyeth attempted to include "sole conjugated estrogen" clauses, like the one in the PCS contract discussed above, in most of its PBM contracts. (Prior to Cenestin's approval by the FDA, Premarin was the only "conjugated estrogen" product on the market.) Wyeth's index of its PBM contracts indicates that, as of 1/1/2000, 31 out of 74 contracts contained a "sole conjugated estrogen" clause. (See Doc. 135, Exhibit H-13) By 1/1/2002, the clause was in 23 out of 60 contracts. (Of course, these numbers do not reflect the size of the PBMs and the "number of lives" each PBM represented.)

Plaintiffs recite a number of examples of Wyeth relying on its "sole CE" clause to "force" various PBMs to refuse a place for Cenestin on their formularies. Plaintiffs Exhibit 116 is an internal Wyeth [*12] memo titled "October 1999 Highlights," summarizing news and developments in many areas of Wyeth's business, including Premarin sales and marketing. Plaintiffs quote from page 3, which states in pertinent part: "A signed agreement with Duramed, which had added Cenestin to the Express Scripts formulary, was reversed by quick, concerted action between national account sales and CD&A.<sup>2</sup> To date, no known managed care accounts have Cenestin on formulary." The document goes on to note the creation of a "Premarin 2000 task force assigned to develop a strategy to counter the threat of an AB-rated generic conjugated estrogen anticipated in 2001."

Class Plaintiffs review Wyeth's negotiations concerning the contracts with several large PBMs (Prescription Solutions, Medco, Wellpoint, Advance PCS, Integrated Pharmaceutical Services, Aetna) and with Kaiser, a managed care organization that purchased directly from Wyeth for its members. (See Doc. 143, [*13] pp. 37 to 51). In each case, Plaintiffs claim that the presence of a "sole CE" clause in the Wyeth contract gave Wyeth the leverage to "threaten" these PBMs with contract cancellation, and the attendant loss of Wyeth rebates, if the PBM added Cenestin to its formulary.

C. Wyeth's Price Increases for Premarin.

Wyeth does not dispute the fact that, after Cenestin was approved by the FDA in March 1999, Wyeth raised its prices for Premarin in a series of price increases. According to Class Plaintiffs' expert Dr. Leitzinger, "For the years 1999, 2000 and 2001, Wyeth increased Premarin's price twice annually for total annual increases of 11.8%, 12.4% and 16.8%, respectively. These price increases were not the result of any increase in Premarin costs. Nor did they reflect a response by Wyeth to price increases initiated by other ERT sellers." Leitzinger Report at p. 13 (Doc. 135, Exhibit C-7). Leitzinger also claims that for 1996-1998, Wyeth's "average rate of price increase" for Premarin was 7.58%. (Leitzinger Report at p. 47) Leitzinger, Keith Leffler (expert for CVS/Rite Aid) and Stephen Schondelmeyer (an economic pharmaceutical expert for both the Class and CVS/RiteAid) all opine [*14] that Wyeth's price increases were possible only because Wyeth successfully foreclosed Cenestin from the ERT market through the use of its illegal PBM contracts.

Wyeth uses a longer view for purposes of evaluating its Premarin pricing. Wyeth's expert Christopher James submits a table (James Exhibit 2) calculating the annual growth rate in Premarin Average Price (for the most widely prescribed 0.625 mg dose) from 1989 to 2003. James calculates the increase from 1989 to 1990 at almost 20%, while the lowest increase for that period (1992 to 1993) was only 4%. Viewed in this longer-term fashion, Wyeth contends that its post-1998 price increases are not out of the ordinary.

D. Wyeth's Market Share

As initially noted above, Premarin has been on the market since 1942 and has had a majority market share for decades. In 1998, Premarin's overall ERT market share was 75.3%. Based on IMS data (a national source cited by all parties that provides statistical information on drug costs and utilization), Premarin's share of the oral ERT market declined in the period 1998 to 2003. In 1999, Premarin's share was 73.9%; by June 2003, its share was 68.6%. The fastest growing drug in the oral ERT [*15] market during that same time was estradiol, which grew its share from 9.4% in 1998 to 18.5% by June 2003. (See Exhibit B-11, Doc. 135).

---

<sup>2</sup> "National account sales" and "CD&A" are both internal Wyeth departments.

E. The Women's Health Initiative Study

In June 2002, the Womens' Health Initiative study released preliminary results of its long-term HRT study. (See generally, the WHI website at <http://www.nhlbi.nih.gov/whi>.) The WHI announced its intention to prematurely stop its study of the long-term use of HRT. The WHI found that the overall risks of HRT outweighed the benefits. WHI found that HRT increased the risk of breast cancer, heart disease, stroke, and blood clots. This announcement negatively impacted sales of both HRT and ERT products (although the estrogen-only WHI study continued after June 2002). The Court agrees with Dr. Leitzinger and Dr. James, who both believe that the WHI announcement impacted the ERT market in such a major way that market behavior after that date cannot be relied on for purposes of analyzing liability or damages in this case.

III. Procedural Background of This Litigation.

In September 2000, approximately fifteen months after Cenestin was first commercially available on the market, Duramed sued Wyeth in this [*16] district, alleging that Wyeth's contracts with PBMs violated the antitrust statutes.<sup>3</sup> This Court denied Wyeth's initial motion to dismiss Duramed's complaint, but that case settled prior to any dispositive rulings or a trial on the merits.

J.B.D.L.'s complaint in this case, filed in October 2001, alleged that Wyeth's contracts and its post-1998 price increases violated Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act.<sup>4</sup> This Court certified a direct purchaser class under F.R.C.P. 23 (Doc. 54, Order of May 12, 2003). The class, represented by J.B.D.L., includes both wholesalers and retail pharmacies who purchase directly from Wyeth. The class does not include the insurers, managed care organizations and pharmacy benefit managers who entered into the challenged rebate contracts with Wyeth.

[*17] Plaintiffs CVS and RiteAid, two retail pharmacies, opted out of the J.B.D.L. class and filed a separate Sherman Act complaint; their action has been consolidated with the Class Plaintiffs' action. After extensive discovery, Wyeth moved for summary judgment against Class Plaintiffs and CVS/RiteAid (Doc. 135). Class Plaintiffs (Doc. 143) and CVS/RiteAid (Doc. 144) filed lengthy opposition briefs, to which Wyeth replied (Doc. 155). Class Plaintiffs and CVS/RiteAid have sought leave to file sur-replies (Doc. 159 and 160), which Wyeth opposes (Doc. 164). Wyeth's motion has been exhaustively briefed and is ripe for decision.

ANALYSIS

I. Summary Judgment Standards

HN1 The standards for summary judgment are well established. Summary judgment is proper "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56(c). HN2 The party opposing a properly supported summary judgment motion "may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials [*18] of his pleading, but ... must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986) (quoting First Nat'l Bank of Arizona v. Cities Serv. Co., 391 U.S. 253, 20 L. Ed. 2d 569, 88 S. Ct. 1575 (1968)). The Court is not duty bound to search the entire record in an effort to establish a lack of material facts. Guarino v. Brookfield Township Trs., 980 F.2d 399, 404 (6th Cir. 1992); InterRoyal Corp. v. Sponseller, 889 F.2d

---

<sup>3</sup> See Case No. 1:00-cv-735.

<sup>4</sup> Case No. 1:01-cv-745, McHugh Pharmacy Wynnewood, Inc. V. Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, Inc., was consolidated with this case, and the J.B.D.L. complaint is the operative complaint for both actions.

108, 111 \(6th Cir. 1989\), cert. den., Superior Roll Forming Co. v. InterRoyal Corp., 494 U.S. 1091, 108 L. Ed. 2d 967, 110 S. Ct. 1839 (1990). Rather, the burden is on the non-moving party to "present affirmative evidence to defeat a properly supported motion for summary judgment...", Street v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 886 F.2d 1472, 1479-80 (6th Cir. 1989), and to designate specific facts in dispute. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. HN3[<sup>18</sup>] The non-moving party "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts." Matsushita Electric Industries Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986). HN4[<sup>19</sup>] The court [*19] construes the evidence presented in the light most favorable to the non-movant and draws all justifiable inferences in the non-movant's favor. United States v. Diebold Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655, 8 L. Ed. 2d 176, 82 S. Ct. 993 (1962).

The court's function is not to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter, but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249. The court must assess "whether there is the need for trial -- whether, in other words, there are any genuine factual issues that properly can be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party." Id. at 250. "If the evidence is merely colorable, . . . , or is not significantly probative, . . . , the court may grant judgment." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249-50 (citations omitted). The Supreme Court has held:

HN5[<sup>20</sup>] The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff. The judge's inquiry, therefore, unavoidably asks whether reasonable jurors could find by a preponderance [*20] of the evidence that the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict...

Id. at 252. Hence the "mere possibility" of a factual dispute will not suffice. Mitchell v. Toledo Hospital, 964 F.2d 577, 582 (6th Cir. 1992), quoting Gregg v. Allen-Bradley Co., 801 F.2d 859, 863 (6th Cir. 1986).

HN6[<sup>21</sup>] Summary judgment is not appropriate simply because the weight of the evidence favors the moving party. Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting Systems, Inc., 368 U.S. 464, 472, 7 L. Ed. 2d 458, 82 S. Ct. 486 (1962). The issue of material fact required "to entitle a party to proceed to trial is not required to be resolved conclusively in favor of the party asserting its existence; rather, all that is required is that sufficient evidence supporting the claimed factual dispute be shown to require a jury or judge to resolve the parties' differing versions of the truth at trial." Cities Serv. Co., supra, 391 U.S. at 288-89.

HN7[<sup>22</sup>] Although summary judgment must be used with extreme caution since it operates to deny a litigant his day in court, Smith v. Hudson, 600 F.2d 60, 63 (6th Cir. 1979), cert. dismissed, 444 U.S. 986, 100 S. Ct. 495, 62 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1979), the [*21] United States Supreme Court has stated that the "summary judgment procedure is properly regarded not as a disfavored procedural shortcut, but rather as an integral part of the Federal Rules as a whole, which are designed to 'secure the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action.'" Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 327, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986) (citations omitted).

II. Antitrust Analysis

A. Class Plaintiffs' Claim Under Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

Class Plaintiffs (but not CVS/RiteAid) assert that Wyeth's PBM contracts are illegal "exclusive dealing" contracts that substantially foreclosed competition in the relevant market, and thus violate Section 1. Wyeth seeks summary judgment on this claim, arguing that its conduct does not violate Section 1 as a matter of law.

Wyeth argues that its PBM contracts are not "exclusive dealing" contracts because those contracts do not forbid placement of alternate ERT products on the formularies of the contracting PBMs. Nor do the contracts forbid PBMs from purchasing or reimbursing their members' purchases of competing ERT products, including Cenestin. Wyeth describes its contracts as "mere preferential treatment [*22] of one product over another" rather than exclusive dealing.

Wyeth also argues that its PBM contracts did not substantially foreclose competition in the relevant ERT market. Wyeth argues that the contracts' short termination notice provisions (30 to 60 days) prevent the contracts from being characterized as illegal exclusive dealings as a matter of law. Wyeth also attacks the market foreclosure rates calculated by Plaintiffs' experts as fatally flawed, as they fail to properly account for Cenestin's availability on many of the "open" PBM formularies and in the non-PBM cash market. Wyeth claims that once properly reduced, the rates are simply too low to create a triable issue concerning an "unreasonable" foreclosure rate.

HN8 [Section 1] prohibits contracts or agreements that unreasonably restrain trade or commerce. The contracts at issue in this case are evaluated under the "rule of reason" test. See generally, State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 10, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199, 118 S. Ct. 275 (1997). This analysis must take into account a variety of factors, "including specific information about the relevant business, its condition before and after the restraint was imposed, and the restraint's history, nature, [*23] and effect." Id. at 10. The first, and critical, step in any rule of reason analysis is that the plaintiff must prove that "the challenged action has had an actual adverse effect on competition as a whole in the relevant market." K.M.B. Warehouse Distributors, Inc. v. Walker Mfg. Co., 61 F.3d 123, 127 (2d Cir. 1995) (citation omitted). See also, PSI Repair Services, Inc. v. Honeywell, Inc., 104 F.3d 811, 815 n. 12 (6th Cir. 1997) ["Under the rule-of-reason analysis, the antitrust plaintiff must show, inter alia, an adverse effect on competition."]

The key questions at this juncture are (1) the appropriate definition of the relevant market, and (2) whether Wyeth's PBM contracts had an "actual adverse effect on competition as a whole" in that relevant market (or, in exclusive dealing parlance, whether the contracts substantially foreclosed competition in that market).

Relevant Market: Class Plaintiffs' expert Jeffrey Leitzinger defines the relevant product market as oral ERT products. According to Leitzinger, competing products to Premarin include Cenestin, Estratab/Menest (esterefied estrogens), Estrace/Gynodiol (micronized [*24] estradiol), Ogen/Ortho-Est (estropipate), and Estinyl (ethinyl estradiol), as well as generic versions of several of these drugs, including estradiol. (See Leitzinger Report at p. 6, n.4 and pp. 9-12.) The relevant geographical market is the United States. Wyeth's motion does not take a definitive position on the relevant market, but concedes that it is "at least" the market for oral ERT products.

The definition of the relevant market can be a complex and difficult issue. In this case, it may well be that the relevant market is broader than just the oral ERT therapeutic category. However, Plaintiffs have put forward an acceptable definition and the reasons for it, and Wyeth does not seriously challenge this definition. For purposes of ruling on Wyeth's motion, the Court will accept Plaintiffs' definition for purposes of analyzing Class Plaintiffs' claim.

Premarin's Market Power: The record establishes (and Wyeth does not dispute) that Premarin has always had a dominant share of the oral ERT market. But majority or dominant market share does not equal "market power." It must be shown that Wyeth's large market share translated to market power that enabled Wyeth to foreclose competition [*25] in that market.

Actual Market Foreclosure: The record in this case establishes that pharmaceutical manufacturers value advantageous formulary placement. It is beyond dispute that Wyeth and its competitors (both in the oral ERT market and in the pharmaceutical market generally) seek favorable formulary placement from PBMs, and are willing to pay large sums to obtain those placements. This favorable treatment can include favorable access (preferred brand status or formulary "tier" placement), favorable pricing (rebates to PBMs and lower co-pays to PBM members), or both. Wyeth's contract with PCS (discussed above) provided for rebates not only on Premarin, but a number of other drugs.

These formulary arrangements can be pro-competitive, as the CVS/RiteAid expert Keith Leffler admits. Rebates effectively lower the cost paid for the product by the plan sponsor. PBM rebates, when passed on to the plan sponsor, lower the sponsor's cost of providing the benefit.

It is undisputed that many of Wyeth's PBM rebate contracts also contained "sole conjugated estrogen" clauses, which in operation did not permit those PBMs to include Cenestin, approved as a "conjugated estrogen," on the formulary. [*26] If the PBM did so, it risked contract cancellation and loss of Wyeth rebates. But it is also quite clear that these clauses did not prevent PBMs from listing other oral ERT products (products that are not "conjugated estrogens") on their formularies. And, Wyeth submits evidence from Duramed's own documents that "open" formularies (during the period 1999 to June 2002, at least) were more prevalent than Class Plaintiffs wish to recognize. Under "open" formularies without the exclusivity clause, Premarin would not have a preferred status over Cenestin, and the co-pay for Cenestin and Premarin would be equal. Duramed itself analyzed its status with PCS, where (according to Duramed) Cenestin was available at the same copay level for at least 90% of PCS business, or over 45 million lives. Duramed notes that Cenestin's low market share at PCS (approximately 1%) was reflective of its national market conditions. Duramed concluded that "considering the fact that the overwhelming majority of PCS business is open, with no restrictions on Cenestin," low market share simply demonstrated the need to help drive formulary decisions by increased efforts with its field sales force. See, DUR [*27] 010716 (Exhibit G-4, Doc. 135). To similar effect is Duramed's 8/5/99 "Update" on Cenestin, where Duramed concludes it can take a "conservative approach with regards to managed care contracting, because over 70% of managed care lives are enrolled in open formularies, meaning the majority of scripts go through with no issues and because we provide a 30 day sample." (DUR 010916, Wyeth's Exh G-5) Duramed's calculations as of 12/15/00 for the number of "lives" covered by HMOs and PBMs with access to open formularies shows that HMO open lives were 73,359,394, 85% of the identified HMOs with a total of 113,078,707 covered lives. For thirteen PBMs, covering 222,000,000 lives, the open formulary lives were 137,800,000 or 62%. (DUR010961-966, Exhibit G-6, Doc. 135)

It has often been noted that HN9 exclusivity provisions in contracts can serve useful, pro-competitive purposes. See, e.g., Jefferson Parish Hospital Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 45, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 \(1989\) (O'Connor, J., concurring). It is only when such provisions cross the line into the arena of exclusive dealing that substantially and negatively affects market competition, that the antitrust statutes come into play.

In U.S. v. Microsoft, 346 U.S. App. D.C. 330, 253 F.3d 34 \(D.C. Cir 2001\), [*28] the Court of Appeals discussed the trial court's conclusion that Microsoft's "exclusive dealing" contracts with internet access and service providers ("IAPs") did not violate Section 1. Under the terms of Microsoft's contracts, Microsoft licensed its Internet Explorer browser and an IE "access kit" to hundreds of IAPs at no cost. Microsoft then entered into rebate contracts with, or made outright payments to, the ten "most important" IAPs (such as AOL) to promote IE and "exile" Microsoft's largest browser competitor, Netscape Navigator. "Under that agreement Microsoft puts the AOL icon in the OLS folder on the Windows desktop and AOL does not promote any non-Microsoft browser, nor provide software using any non-Microsoft browser except at the customer's request, and even then AOL will not supply more than 15% of its subscribers with a browser other than IE." Id. at 68.

The Microsoft district court, in analyzing the § 1 claim, concluded that "unless the evidence demonstrates that Microsoft's agreements excluded Netscape altogether from access to roughly forty percent of the browser market, the Court should decline to find such agreements in violation of § 1." [*29] This was true even though Microsoft had substantially excluded Netscape from "the most efficient channels for Navigator to achieve browser usage share," e.g., the internet access providers like AOL.

Similarly, in the recent Third Circuit case of United States v. Dentsply, 399 F.3d 181, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 3219 \(Feb. 24, 2005\), the district court found that Dentsply's HN10 exclusive dealer contracts did not violate Section 1, because Dentsply's actions had not foreclosed competitors from "gaining a foothold in the market." Id. at \*7 (quoting from U.S. v. Dentsply, 277 F.Supp.2d 387, 453 \(D. Del. 2003\)). This was so even though the challenged dealer contracts prohibited Dentsply's authorized dealers from selling any competitor's products.<sup>5</sup>

This Court agrees with the analysis of the district courts in both Microsoft and Dentsply. The Plaintiffs must establish that Wyeth's [*30] conduct substantially foreclosed actual competition in the relevant market, oral ERT products. While favorable PBM formulary placement is no doubt an effective method for sales of a drug, it is clearly not the only route Duramed had to sell its new product Cenestin. The Court cannot conclude that Wyeth's favorable or exclusive formulary placement for Premarin in many PBMs equates to actionable market foreclosure.

The parties disagree about the appropriate basis for calculation of a foreclosure rate. For instance, Leitzinger opines that 42% of Premarin sales in fourth quarter 1999 were through PBMs with "sole CE" clauses, which he concludes is substantial market foreclosure. (Leitzinger Report pp. 39-40) But, as Wyeth points out, Leitzinger fails to account for the fact that many PBMs would reimburse for a Cenestin prescription even though it was not a "favored" drug and listed on the PBM's formulary. The Duramed documents discussed above show that Cenestin did have access, even if it may not have had the best or most preferred formulary position vis-a-vis Premarin. Leitzinger also assumes that his calculated 42% foreclosure rate, based on 4th quarter 1999 data only a few months [*31] after Cenestin was actually available on the market, should hold for the entire time period at issue. This assumption is faulty, given the volume of information in the record about changing market conditions, including Duramed's activities to try to increase Cenestin's market share. His assumption also ignores the fact that most formularies have a "waiting period" during which new drugs are evaluated for addition to a PBM's formulary. Dr. White, of HealthNet, testified that a six-month period for review prior to placement is typical. Most importantly, however, Class Plaintiffs assume that because Cenestin could not gain full or complete access to all PBM formularies in the year it entered the market, that "competition in general" was harmed as a result. The fact that other oral ERT products were not only available but were simply not impacted by Wyeth's "sole CE" contract clauses, belies such an assumption.

---

<sup>5</sup> The district court rulings on Section 1 claims were not appealed in either Microsoft or Dentsply.

The Court need not resolve the dispute about the specific, appropriate foreclosure rate, because the Court finds that Class Plaintiffs have simply not established actual market foreclosure. The Court will therefore grant summary judgment to Wyeth on Class Plaintiffs' Section 1 [*32] claim.

B. Section 2 Monopolization Claim.

Class Plaintiffs and CVS/RiteAid allege that Wyeth violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act. HN11[] A claim under Section 2 requires proof of two elements: (1) the possession of monopoly power in a relevant market; and (2) the willful acquisition, maintenance, or use of that power by anti-competitive or exclusionary means as opposed to 'growth or development resulting from a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.' Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 595-96, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467, 105 S. Ct. 2847 (1985); Conwood Co. v. U.S. Tobacco Company, 290 F.3d 768, 782 (6th Cir. 2002). HN12[] "Monopoly power" for purposes of section 2 can be "something greater than market power under section 1." Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 481, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072 (1992).

Wyeth concedes its "monopoly power" solely for purposes of its summary judgment motion.<sup>6</sup> And, as noted above, Wyeth apparently concedes (at least for summary judgment purposes) that the relevant market is oral ERT products.

[*33] Wyeth argues that despite its conceded monopoly power, its PBM contracts are in fact pro-competitive and are a hallmark of competition in the pharmaceutical industry. Wyeth claims that its rebates formulas are just pricing systems, which are not actionable by the direct purchaser plaintiffs under Section 2, absent predatory pricing. Since Wyeth's prices are clearly not "predatory" (in the classic sense of below-cost pricing to squeeze out a competitor), Wyeth argues that Plaintiffs have no viable Section 2 claim.

Initially, the Court rejects Wyeth's somewhat simplistic argument that its lack of predatory pricing mandates dismissal of the Section 2 claims. Plaintiffs' essential allegation is that Wyeth's contracts (rebate structure plus sole CE clauses) prevented Cenestin from becoming a competitive threat, and thus allowed Wyeth to unlawfully raise its Premarin prices after Cenestin's introduction. Moreover, HN13[] the Supreme Court has acknowledged the viability of Section 2 claims brought by a competitor that go beyond allegations of predatory pricing. See, Aspen Highlands, supra, and Kodak, supra.<sup>7</sup> Thus it is not solely the Wyeth rebates [*34] that Plaintiffs attack.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>6</sup>The Court recognizes that absent Wyeth's concession on this point, a careful analysis of the existence of monopoly power is required. See generally, Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1018-1019 (6th Cir. 1999). The Court also acknowledges that its concession will not prohibit Wyeth from challenging plaintiffs' allegation of its monopoly power in the event of a trial in this case.

<sup>7</sup>The Supreme Court subsequently described Aspen Skiing as "at or near the outer boundary of § 2 liability." Verizon Communications v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 540 U.S. 398, 409, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823, 124 S. Ct. 872 (2004).

Wyeth relies heavily on *NWS Michigan v. General Wine & Liquor, 58 Fed. Appx. 127 \(6th Cir. 2003\)*, an unpublished decision which held that a liquor distributor lacked antitrust standing to sue its larger competitor when it failed to allege predatory pricing. The Court of Appeals held that "Whether or not General Wine's pricing mechanism violated state law, the prices themselves simply reflect the storage and transportation [*35] efficiencies available to General Wine by virtue of its privileged status." That privileged status was conferred by an explicit legislative "grandfather" clause, permitting General Wine to deal in a wider market than NWS was able to do, thus achieving economies of scale denied to NWS.

The facts of that case do not "fit" the facts here. Nor does the Court view the case as supporting the sweeping proposition which Wyeth ascribes to it (e.g., no "rebate" program can be challenged absent predatory pricing). Moreover, the Sixth Circuit has often instructed that Section 2 requires "a thorough analysis of each fact situation" in order to determine whether or not the monopolist's conduct is unreasonably anti-competitive and thus unlawful. See *Conwood, supra, 290 F.3d at 782* (quoting *Byars v. Bluff City News Co., 609 F.2d 843, 860 \(6th Cir. 1979\)*). The critical questions presented here are whether Plaintiffs have established a material factual dispute as to whether Wyeth willfully maintained its historic (and apparently legally obtained) monopoly power by unreasonable anti-competitive or exclusionary means, and if so whether the Plaintiffs suffered an antitrust [*36] injury as a result.

Unreasonable Anti-Competitive Conduct

Areeda & Hovenkamp describe HN14[] unlawful exclusionary conduct as acts that "are reasonably capable of creating, enlarging or prolonging monopoly power by impairing the opportunities of rivals" and that either "do not benefit consumers at all," are "unnecessary for the particular consumer benefits that the acts produce," or "produce harms disproportionate to the resulting benefits." **Antitrust Law** P 749, at 141 (Supp. 2003), as quoted in "Comment: LePage's v. 3M: An Antitrust Analysis of Loyalty Rebates", *79 N.Y.U.L. Rev. 1605 \(October 2004\)*.

And it must be kept in mind, when considering an allegation of exclusionary or anti-competitive conduct, that the antitrust laws are intended to protect competition, not a competitor. See, *Richter Concrete Corp. v. Hilltop Concrete Corp., 691 F.2d 818, 823 \(6th Cir. 1982\)* ["Anticompetitive conduct is conduct designed to destroy competition, not just to eliminate a competitor."] Plaintiffs and their experts repeatedly assert that Wyeth's "sole CE" clause - which impacted only one competitor, Duramed - together with Wyeth's rebates formulas harmed "competition" [*37] in general. But there is little, if any, analysis of the effects of the challenged conduct on overall competition in the oral ERT market.

Despite this lack, Plaintiffs repeatedly point to Wyeth's expressed desire (as reflected in its "Premarin Plan" and various marketing documents in the record) to limit Cenestin's market share. But undisputed evidence that a manufacturer desires or intends to maintain or increase its product's market share at the expense of a new competitor, does not by itself create a triable issue of whether Wyeth's chosen means to achieve that desire violated the Sherman Act. See, e.g., *Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 116, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427, 107 S. Ct. 484 \(1986\)* ["The kind of competition Monfort alleges here, competition for increased market share, is not actively forbidden by the antitrust laws."]

Plaintiffs urge this Court to follow the recent Third Circuit decision in *LePage's v. 3M, 324 F.3d 141 \(3d Cir. 2003\)*, and permit their Section 2 claims to proceed to trial. But LePage's is not controlling on this Court. And absent persuasive authority that the Sixth Circuit would follow LePage's and agree with its conclusions, this Court [*38] is not persuaded.

LePage's involved antitrust claims against 3M, the manufacturer of branded "Scotch" transparent tape, brought by LePage, 3M's competitor in the second-brand, or private label, transparent tape market. By 1992, LePage's had an <sup>8</sup> The CVS/RiteAid expert Keith Leffler admitted in his deposition that the "more significant thing" in his analysis was the market share rebate, rather than the "sole CE" clause. See Leffler Deposition at p. 163-164. The Court does not view this testimony as limiting the CVS/RiteAid claim to Wyeth's rebate clauses, as Wyeth suggests.

88% market share in the second-brand market, and 3M decided it would enter that market and compete with LePage's. 3M started offering rebate programs to various retailers, who could earn rebates on a variety of 3M products. Several specific types of rebates were offered. These included "bundled" rebates, and "tiered" rebates earned based on sales across six different 3M product lines, including lines in which LePage's did not compete. 3M also offered minimum purchase level agreements to two of the largest retail outlets for tape (Office Depot and Staples) for its branded Scotch tape relative to the second-brand or private label tape; if the retailer achieved a set "growth" factor for the second-brand sales, it could obtain higher rebates.

LePage's claimed that 3M's multi-tiered and bundled rebates "plus" the agreements with the largest retailers violated section 2, in that 3M was using its brand-name transparent (Scotch) tape monopoly to [*39] gain an unfair advantage in the second-brand, private label market, by restricting the availability of LePage's lower-priced second-brand tapes.

The case was submitted to a jury, which found for LePage's on both its monopolization and attempted monopolization claims under § 2 of the Sherman Act. It found in 3M's favor on LePage's claims under § 1 of the Sherman Act and § 3 of the Clayton Act. The district court denied 3M's motions for judgment as a matter of law and for a new trial on the Section 2 claim.

On appeal, a panel of the Third Circuit reversed the District Court's judgment on LePage's § 2 claim by a divided vote. LePage's Inc. v. 3M, 277 F.3d 365 \(3d Cir. 2002\). However, LePage's motion for rehearing en banc was granted, and the en banc court then affirmed the trial court's decision and the jury verdict. The en banc majority essentially concluded that HN15 exclusionary conduct that used above-cost price discounting was actionable under Section 2, and upheld a verdict against 3M of approximately $ 68 million.

The LePage's dissent criticized the result because it erred in favor of protecting LePage's, an inefficient competitor, rather than protecting [*40] overall competition. The jury punished 3M rather severely for engaging in above-cost, discount pricing coupled with some exclusive retail contracts, an arrangement that clearly permitted 3M to increase its market share and its profits, yet did not clearly harm competition or consumers. Nor, in reality, did 3M's conduct significantly harm LePage's secondary-brand market share (which declined from 88% to 67% in the years in which 3M's rebate programs were in effect). This latter conclusion is especially relevant, given the significant evidence in the record that LePage's market difficulties were caused by its own conduct and market decisions, and were not the result of 3M's challenged conduct.

The Third Circuit decision also leaves unclear (at least to this Court) the precise nature of 3M's violation of Section 2. The verdict imposed a heavy penalty on 3M without producing consistent guidance for what is permissible price competition in the retail market for a simple item like transparent tape. That marketplace appears far less complex than the current United States marketplace for pharmaceuticals.

In contrast to LePage's is the Eighth Circuit decision in Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 207 F.3d 1039 \(8th Cir. 2000\), [*41] which Wyeth advocates. There, a group of power boat manufacturers sued Brunswick, the leading supplier of inboard and stern drive engines that the plaintiffs bought and used in their boats. Plaintiffs alleged that Brunswick engaged in anticompetitive conduct because it (1) began a market share discount pricing program in 1984, under which list price discounts were given for purchases of specified percentages of engine purchases made from Brunswick. Additional long term discounts could be earned for signing a market share agreement for up to three years. Volume discounts based strictly on sales quantity were also used. When one of Brunswick's largest competitors introduced a new stern drive in 1985, Brunswick responded by purchasing two of the largest domestic boat builders (Bayliner and Sea Ray), thus vertically integrating its business.

The plaintiffs later filed suit, contending that the synergistic effect of the market share/volume discount programs, and Brunswick's willful vertical integration efforts, resulted in plaintiffs being charged supracompetitive prices for Brunswick engines, and also drove other engine manufacturers out of the market. Brunswick's summary judgment motion [*42] was denied, and after a ten week trial the jury awarded judgment for plaintiffs of over $ 44 million. After unsuccessful post-trial motions seeking to set aside the verdict, the final award against Brunswick was $ 142,165,931.12.

The Eighth Circuit reversed and remanded for entry of judgment in favor of Brunswick. Concerning plaintiffs Section 2 claim, the Circuit noted the strong line of authority that above cost discounting is not anticompetitive conduct as a matter of law and sound policy. See generally, Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 223, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578 \(1993\). While the Eighth Circuit rejected Brunswick's suggestion that above cost pricing is always per se lawful, it also rejected plaintiffs' argument that Brunswick's discounts "plus" - in that case Brunswick's vertical integration purchases along with several other instances of allegedly anticompetitive conduct - could together result in a violation of Section 2. The Court noted that the boat builders were not required to refrain from purchasing from competitors, and were free to walk away from Brunswick's discounts if they got a better offer. The Court rejected the plaintiffs' arguments [*43] that Brunswick's discounts created "golden handcuffs" that amounted to an impenetrable barrier to the entry of additional competitors.

The Supreme Court denied certiorari in both Concord Boat and in LePage's.

The Plaintiffs here urge that the scale is tipped in favor of their position, and the reasoning of LePage's, by two additional cases; U.S. v. Dentsply, supra, and Masimo v. Tyco Health Care Group, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26916 \(C.D. Cal. 2004\). Neither of these are of substantive assistance. U.S. v. Dentsply was an action by the Justice Department, seeking only injunctive relief against Dentsply's enforcement of its truly exclusive dealing clause in its purchase order contracts. Dentsply had historically sold its products through dealers, who in turn sell to dental laboratories that fabricate the final artificial teeth or dentures that dentists (and their patients) buy. Some of Dentsply's competitors also sold directly to the laboratories, but that outlet for sales was small. Dentsply had long "discouraged" its dealers from selling products of its competitors; but in 1993, it adopted an explicit contract provision that its authorized [*44] dealers "may not add further tooth lines to their product offering." (The relationship between Dentsply and its dealers was on a purchase-order basis, which the Third Circuit characterized as "essentially terminable at will.") The district court found that the challenged contract clause did not violate Section 2, but the Third Circuit reversed. Following LePage's, the Court found that the contract provision essentially foreclosed all competition from the market, finding that "the firm that ties up the key dealers rules the market." 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 3219 at \*20. The Court believes a key difference between Dentsply and the case at bar lies in the fact that Dentsply's contract clause barred all competition from the dealer network, which was how the overwhelming majority of dental products were sold into the market.

Masimo, a California district court opinion denying summary judgment on section 1 and 2 claims, involves a disparate mix of strategies adopted by the defendant, Tyco Corp., in its sales of pulse oximetry sensors and patient cables, sold to hospitals, health networks and other equipment manufacturers. The conduct included "loyalty discounts" [*45] to hospitals in exchange for agreements not to purchase more than 5 to 15% of their oximetry products from competitors; a few "sole source exclusive dealing arrangements" with hospital group purchasing organizations; offering "bundled rebates" to two of its customers which provided rebates when oximetry and non-oximetry products were purchased together; offering financing programs to hospitals that imposed penalties if the hospital switched to a competitor's oximetry products; and co-marketing contracts with original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) that required the OEMs that used Tyco's modules to also recommend that Tyco sensors be used, rather than those of Tyco's competitors, even when competitor sensors could have been used. The district court, relying on LePage's, found that a jury could find that the combined effect of all of Tyco's conduct resulted in actionable anticompetitive conduct, and denied Tyco's summary judgment motion. This Court of course is not bound to adopt the reasoning of the California district court, and is not inclined to do so given its heavy reliance on LePage's.

Conwood v. U.S. Tobacco, supra, a Sixth Circuit decision that is [*46] binding on this court and that Plaintiffs argue supports denial of Wyeth's motion, is distinguishable. There, U.S. Tobacco ("USTC") appealed a jury verdict in favor of Conwood on its antitrust claims; Conwood and U.S. Tobacco competed in the "moist snuff" market, with USTC the largest seller. The Sixth Circuit denied USTC's appeal from both the jury verdict and the trial court's denial of its summary judgment motion, noting that there was sufficient evidence of USTC's willful anticompetitive conduct to submit the case to the jury. USTC argued that Conwood's injury (undeniable loss of market share and profits in areas where the two companies were in direct competition) flowed only from USTC's exclusive selling agreements with retailers, which were entirely legal. But the evidence in that case of USTC's conduct included not only exclusive retail agreements, but also evidence that USTC intentionally removed Conwood's package racks from retail stores without permission of store managers, and destroyed or discarded the racks, then put Conwood product cans into USTC's own racks in an attempt to "bury" Conwood's products; trained its sales representatives to trick store representatives and [*47] clerks so that the Conwood racks and products could be moved or destroyed; and that USTC provided misleading and incorrect information about sales data for USTC and competitors' products, to encourage the retailers to stock more of USTC's products and less of the competitors products. No such tortious conduct is involved in the case before the Court.

Thus, this Court finds itself faced with somewhat imprecise and certainly conflicting standards by which to judge Plaintiffs allegations of Wyeth's monopolistic behavior. LePage's obviously favors letting a jury sort it out, using the same imprecise, conflicting Section 2 standards transformed into jury instructions. Concord Boat, on the other hand, illustrates the dangerous possibility of a tremendous waste of time and resources of all involved here in permitting a jury to "sort it out" when the appellate court may well find that there is no jury issue here.

Professor Elhauge has observed that there is a great deal of ambiguity and uncertainty in the current legal formulations of monopolization claims. He notes in particular the problem of submitting these sorts of claims to a jury: "And if the judges don't decide the issue, [*48] the same problem will infect jury verdicts, for the typical set of jury instructions . . . leaves it up to the jury to divine the metaphysical difference between acquiring or maintaining monopoly power through (1) willful, anticompetitive, or exclusionary means or purposes, and (2) business acumen, superior products, competition on the merits, or valid and legitimate business reasons. Without more guidance, different jurors are likely to use completely different normative understandings about what all these terms mean." E. Elhauge, "Defining Better Monopolization Standards", 56 Stan. L. Rev. 253, 266-267 \(Nov. 2003\).

The Supreme Court noted just last year that, HN16[<sup>1</sup>] "Under the best of circumstances, applying the requirements of Section 2 can be difficult because the means of illicit exclusion, like the means of legitimate competition, are myriad. . . . Mistaken inferences and the resulting false condemnations are especially costly, because they chill the very conduct the antitrust laws are designed to protect." Verizon Communications v. Law Offices of Curtis Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 414, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823, 124 S. Ct. 872 \(2004\) (internal citations omitted).

Based on the record before the Court, [*49] there is little doubt that Wyeth desired and intended to thwart Cenestin's market share growth with a vigorous multi-faced marketing campaign. Plaintiffs focus on one piece of that campaign, Wyeth's PBM contracts, and cry foul. But absent explicit, controlling appellate authority that Wyeth's conduct in executing those contracts, a practice that is widespread throughout the larger and unique pharmaceutical market in the U.S., runs afoul of the guiding principles of Section 2 liability, this Court believes that the approach adopted by the Eighth Circuit in Concord Boat is correct. Wyeth's pricing behavior "plus" - in this case the "plus" factor being the "sole CE" contract clause - did not violate Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Wyeth's motion for summary judgment against the Class Plaintiffs and CVS/RiteAid on the Section 2 claims is therefore granted.

Antitrust Injury

Even if the Court were convinced that Plaintiffs' Section 2 claims survive Wyeth's motion, Plaintiffs must also establish that they have suffered an "antitrust injury" in order to proceed. The Sixth Circuit again recently noted that "antitrust standing to sue is at the center of all antitrust law and policy. [*50] It is not a mere technicality. It is the glue that cements each suit with the purposes of the antitrust laws, and prevents abuses of those laws. . . . HN17[<sup>1</sup>] A private plaintiff may not recover damages under the antitrust laws merely by showing an 'injury causally linked to an illegal presence in the market.'" Worldwide Basketball & Sport Tours, Inc. v. NCAA, 388 F.3d 955, 964-65 (Gibbons, J. concurring) (internal citations omitted). Antitrust laws are intended to prevent injuries to competition, and thus provide a remedy only for those losses that stem from the competition-reducing aspects of a defendant's conduct. There must be a distinct causal link between that challenged conduct, and the harm which Plaintiffs allege they have suffered. The Sixth Circuit has been zealous in ensuring that this element of an antitrust claim is satisfied. See, e.g., Hodges v. WSM, Inc., 26 F.3d 36 \(6th Cir. 1994\); Valley Products v. Landmark, 128 F.3d 398 \(6th Cir. 1997\); and Indeck Energy Services v. Consumers Energy Co., 250 F.3d 972 \(6th Cir. 2000\).

In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litigation, 332 F.3d 896 (6th Cir. 2003) does not "lower the [*51] bar" of this requirement, as Plaintiffs suggest. Cardizem involved an interlocutory appeal from the district court's denial of the defendant's Rule 12 motion to dismiss for failure to allege antitrust injury. At issue there, as described by the Sixth Circuit, was a "plain vanilla horizontal agreement to restrain trade in the form of a multi-million dollar cash payment," paid by the defendant to a competitor in order to delay the competitor's introduction of a generic substitute for Cardizem. Id. at 914. After ruling that the agreement was per se illegal, the Sixth Circuit also held that the district court correctly denied the motion to dismiss. Here, the Rule 56 standards apply, not Rule 12. And Wyeth's PBM contracts are clearly not illegal per se.

Here, understanding the antitrust injury Plaintiffs allege requires a two-step analysis. First, Cenestin's lower market share from 1999-2002 was caused by Wyeth's PBM contracting practices. Second, once Wyeth "realized" that it was successful in keeping Cenestin at that lower market share, Wyeth willfully and illegally raised its price for Premarin.

Class Plaintiffs and CVS/RiteAid rely on their economic experts [*52] to establish the link between Wyeth's alleged exclusionary/anticompetitive conduct, and Wyeth's alleged supracompetitive price increases in the period 1999 to 2002. Leitzinger, Class Plaintiffs' expert, states that the increases were not tied to increases in Wyeth's costs to produce and market Premarin, nor to price increases in competitors' products. He therefore concludes (Leitzinger Report at pp. 40-45) that "By limiting Cenestin's development as a competitor and by restricting share growth by other oral ERT products, Wyeth maintained its hold on customers and avoided the need for any defensive pricing reactions. This enhanced Wyeth's market power relative to that it would have enjoyed had Cenestin's entry been unconstrained."

Leitzinger packs a series of assumptions into his conclusion. His primary assumption, of course, is that it was Wyeth's PBM contracts alone that "limited Cenestin's success," not Duramed's decisions or strategies for marketing its new product, nor any of the admitted clinical differences between Cenestin and Premarin, nor any other aspects of Wyeth's strategic planning for its ERT/HRT product line.

Concerning Duramed's marketing of Cenestin, Leitzinger relies [*53] entirely upon the opinion of another of Plaintiffs' experts, Stephen Schondelmeyer, that Duramed undertook a "substantial, concerted marketing effort." (See Schondelmeyer Report, Wyeth's Exh C-11 at P92) Schondelmeyer, in turn, relies heavily upon testimony from Duramed and Solvay, its marketing partner, who (unsurprisingly) blame Wyeth almost exclusively for Cenestin's failure to achieve the market share Duramed desired. While an expert may rely on another expert's opinion under Rule 702, neither Leitzinger nor Schondelmeyer offer any objective study to confirm this point. Worse, they ignore substantial evidence in the record that contradicts their assumption. They ignore the data discussed above concerning Duramed's unfettered access to "open" formularies, a fact Duramed used as a part of its own marketing strategy. They ignore the fact that a 1.25 mg. dosage of Cenestin was not approved by the FDA until March 2000, and was unavailable on the market until May 3, 2000. This is the most popular dosage level for Premarin. (See Wyeth's Exhibit B-5) PCS Health Systems told Duramed that primary resistance to listing Cenestin on formulary was Duramed's lack of this popular dose. (See Wyeth's [*54] Exhibit G-4, DUR010716)

Leitzinger also fails to note or take account of the undisputed clinical and therapeutic differences between Cenestin and Premarin. Those differences include Premarin's long history and track record of use, clinical studies, and long-term use for osteoporosis prevention. Wyeth used these differences in its "Premarin Strategy" advertising. And, PCS Health also told Duramed in June 2000 that Cenestin's lack of an osteoporosis indication would "likely result in a non-formulary status for 2001." (Wyeth's Exhibit G-4, DUR010717).

Plaintiffs' experts fail to address the fact that Premarin's nearest competitor in the oral ERT market, estradiol, actually doubled its market share from 1998 to 2003 (from 9.4% to 18.5%); Premarin's market share in the same period declined (from 75.3% to 68.6%). If "overall competition" was harmed by Wyeth's PBM contracts, this kind of growth in a competitor's market share should, at the least, be explained or distinguished.

Also of note is Duramed's report on United Health Care ("UHC"), a large insurer with 44 regional health plans that varied widely in the type of pharmacy benefit programs offered. In 2000, UHC agreed to allow Cenestin [*55] equal co-pay status with Premarin for a plan with 650,000 covered lives; the pilot program was designed to monitor market demand. Duramed notes that "unfortunately the results were less than favorable. The Cenestin market share fell far short of the targeted 5% UHC anticipated and needed to make the addition of Cenestin 'worthwhile.'" (Wyeth Exhibit G-4, DUR 010717). Indeed, Duramed's internal "review" of its managed care relations for July 2000 concludes that lack of physician demand for Cenestin was the first-listed cause of lower managed care access, "as monitored by competitive market share in unrestrictive open markets . . .". This admission significantly weakens Leitzinger's and Schondelmeyer's assumptions about Duramed's efficient, competitive marketing for Cenestin.

To similar effect is the fact that Cenestin's sales in the cash market segment, the Medicaid segment, and in the PBM-HMO segment, were all relatively stable throughout the period. If the PBM-HMO segment of the market is so critical, one would expect to see some variation between the three different segments. Plaintiffs' experts blame this on "spill over" or "threshold effect." (See, e.g., Schondelmeyer Report, [*56] P131-132) This argument is that physicians will not write prescriptions for their patients if the drug is not listed on the patients' PBM formularies, because it may cost more (through a higher co-pay) or because the physician might get a phone call from a pharmacy. But given the feedback Duramed was receiving noted above, an equally plausible explanation is that Duramed's marketing efforts were not succeeding as well as had been expected. Leitzinger does not address this possibility.

Keith Leffler, expert for CVS and RiteAid, relies on the same facts about Wyeth's PBM contracts to conclude that "Imposition and enforcement of such contractual provisions by a dominant seller with market power are clearly anticompetitive regardless of whether they are disguised as competitive responses or discounts." (Leffler Report at P42) But beyond this characterization of conduct, Leffler does not discuss or account for any of the other potential factors that could affect the marketplace success of a competing drug, or the specific factors that may have affected Cenestin's market share. He assumes, as does Leitzinger, that Wyeth's PBM contracts caused the Cenestin market share.

But, assuming for [*57] the moment that the cause-and-effect relationship between the PBM contracts and Cenestin's market presence is accepted, the Leitzinger and Leffler opinions on the second part of the antitrust injury analysis - that Wyeth's price increases were the result of its PBM contracts' unlawful exclusionary effects - are fatally flawed. Leffler quotes from an internal Wyeth document which states: "As market share leader in estrogen replacement therapy, Premarin . . . price increases should be aggressive to cover increasing costs and to maximize profits." (Leffler report P48, n. 72) From 1991 to 1998, Wyeth's average list price increase for Premarin was 6.7% per year. After 1998, the average price increase was 15.8% per year. Since Wyeth's costs were not increasing (at least at that rate), Leffler concludes that the price increases were implemented only to "maximize profits." But once again, profit maximization, even at the expense of a competitor, does not run afoul of the antitrust statutes.

But both experts opine that Wyeth "crossed the line" between legal profit maximization and illegal supracompetitive pricing. They both rely on economic theory to support this opinion. According to Leffler, [*58] basic economic theory teaches that "a seller's profit maximizing price decreases when it faces more competition." (Leffler Report, P47) Wyeth's price behavior doesn't fit the theory, so he concludes that it was Wyeth's monopolistic behavior that permitted it to raise its prices in the face of competition from Cenestin.

Leitzinger also relies on "basic economic theory" that a dominant seller will lower its product price in response to market entry of competitors. This economic theory, of course, in itself contains assumptions about the relevant market - in particular, cross-elastic products and equally efficient competitors. While the record is replete with references to the uniqueness of the pharmaceutical marketplace in the United States, both Leitzinger and Leffler assume without substantive discussion that these basic pricing theories apply largely across-the-board to this unique market. There is a significant body of evidence that brand name drug prices actually rise in response to generic competition. This pricing behavior is noted in Geneva v. Barr, 386 F.3d 485, 496-500 \(2d Cir. 2004\), and in In re Ciprofloxacin Hydrochloride Antitrust Lit., 363 F.Supp.2d 514, 521-22 \(E.D.N.Y. 2005\). [*59] The Cipro court cites a July 1998 Congressional Budget Office Study concluding that prices for brand-name drugs continue to rise faster than inflation even after generic competition begins.<sup>9</sup> Despite this, Leitzinger and Leffler simply assume that Wyeth's pricing "should have" followed their basic theory. This Court need not accept an expert's assumption that is supported only by the "ipse dixit" of the expert. See, e.g., General Electric v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136, 146, 139 L. Ed. 2d 508, 118 S. Ct. 512 \(1997\): "But nothing in either Daubert or the Federal Rules of Evidence requires a district court to admit opinion evidence which is connected to existing data only by the ipse dixit of the expert. A court may conclude that there is simply too great an analytical gap between the data and the opinion proffered."

Apart [*60] from economic theory, the factual support for their opinions cited by both Leitzinger and Leffler consists of Wyeth's Premarin price projections. Their primary source document (Plaintiffs Exhibit 171, WYE180544 - 180553) is entitled "Strategic Options Summary" and is dated July 8, 1999. Its author (Wyeth marketing employee Steve Strickland) describes it as a "summary of each of the three year financial options for the Premarin Franchise. Each summary contains detailed assumptions and the net effect on sales." The summary contains a base case, an "upside - preferred" case, and a "downside" case. Each of the three options contains net sales return projections based on levels and qualities of marketing investment; several assumptions about the demographics of oral ERT use; Wyeth's ability to launch additional products in the ERT/HRT market and the timing of those product entries; and assumptions about various potential competitors, only one of which is Cenestin. (There can be no doubt that manufacturers keep close watch on competitors, and that product pricing decisions are based in part upon competitive market conditions. This is as true for pharmaceuticals as it is for Scotch [*61] tape!)

From this document, Leitzinger and Leffler conclude that the alternate assumptions about Premarin price increases are directly linked to the alternate assumptions about Cenestin's market performance. Thus, they both conclude that once Wyeth "knew" that it was successful in limiting Cenestin's market share through its PBM contracts, it raised Premarin list price in line with the "best case" scenario of the 1999 marketing budget projections. This is a highly questionable leap of logic. There is nothing in the document stating that the alternate scenario price increases are tied to or dependent upon Wyeth's PBM contracts. Indeed, Leitzinger admitted that nothing in the document actually says what he believes it says, that the market share projections for Cenestin were tied to the stated price increase projections. Rather Leitzinger says he is inferring that "the difference in Cenestin's penetration was an important consideration distinguishing the pricing recommendations under the two cases." He also rejected the idea that any of the other critical assumptions contained in the document, such as quality and quantity of marketing, demographic changes, or introduction [*62] of new Wyeth products, could also affect Premarin pricing. (Leitzinger Deposition, p. 192) His refusal to recognize that distinct possibility, and his failure to attempt to control for the possibility that those other factors may have played an important role in Wyeth's price increases, makes his inference untenable.

The Court finds that Plaintiffs have not established a "but-for" causative link between Wyeth's PBM contracts and Wyeth's price increases. Therefore, Plaintiffs have not shown the existence of a triable issue of fact on whether they suffered an "antitrust injury." (The same fatal flaw exists for Plaintiffs' "but-for" damages model, which the Court need not discuss at length. Absent proof of a causative link between the alleged monopolistic conduct and the alleged supracompetitive price, the "but-for" Premarin prices offered by Leitzinger and Leffler are untenable.)

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Court will grant Wyeth's motion for summary judgment (Doc. 135) against Class Plaintiffs and intervenors CVS and Rite Aid. The motions for leave to file supplemental briefs are denied.

DATED: June 13, 2005

Sandra S. Beckwith, Chief Judge

United [*63] States District Court

<sup>9</sup>CBO, "How Increased Competition from Generic Drugs Has Affected Prices and Returns in the Pharmaceutical Industry" (July 1998). A portion of this report is contained in Wyeth's Exhibit B-10, Doc. 135.

---

End of Document

MacArthur v. San Juan County

United States District Court for the District of Utah, Central Division

June 13, 2005, Decided ; June 13, 2005, Filed

Civil No. 2:00-CV-584J

Reporter

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,869

DR. STEVEN MACARTHUR, et al., Plaintiffs, vs. SAN JUAN COUNTY, et al., Defendants.

Subsequent History: [**1] Later proceeding at MacArthur v. San Juan County, 416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, 416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43695 (D. Utah, 2005)

Prior History: *Macarthur v. San Juan County*, 309 F.3d 1216, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 20987 \(10th Cir. Utah, 2002\)

Core Terms

---

privileges, Plaintiffs', patients, proposed amended complaint, pretrial order, medical staff, pretrial conference, allegations, supervision, rights, facilities, staff privileges, clinic, staff, emergency room, anti trust law, deprivation, pretrial, fair dealing, cards, damages, pleaded, constitutional right, defamation, motion to dismiss, summary judgment, antitrust, member of the board, parties, cause of action

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN1 [down arrow] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

At a pretrial conference, consideration may be given, and the court may take appropriate action, with respect to the formulation and simplification of the issues, including the elimination of frivolous claims or defenses. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\).

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN2 [down arrow] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

The reference in Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\) to "formulation" is intended to clarify and confirm the court's power to identify the litigable issues. It has been added in the hope of promoting efficiency and conserving judicial resources by identifying the real issues prior to trial, thereby saving time and expense for everyone. The notion is emphasized by expressly authorizing the elimination of frivolous claims or defenses at a pretrial conference. There is no reason to require that this await a formal motion for summary judgment. Nor is there any reason for the court to wait for the parties to initiate the process called for in Rule 16\(c\)\(1\). Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, advisory committee's notes. The court at the pretrial conference, thus, is directed to define the issues, facts, and theories actually in contention, which means that extraneous issues should be weeded out.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L<sup>A</sup> 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN3 [] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

As a case takes shape and the court struggles to narrow and pinpoint the issues, the parties have an unflagging obligation to spell out squarely and distinctly those claims they desire to advance at the trial proper. Good-faith compliance with Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 plays an important role in this process. Rule 16\(c\)\(1\) places upon counsel a substantial responsibility for assisting the court in identifying the factual issues worthy of trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16, advisory committee's notes. Attorneys at a pre-trial conference must make a full and fair disclosure of their views as to what the real issues of the trial will be. D. Utah Civ. R. 7-l(d).

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN4 [] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\) confirms the court's power to identify the litigable issues and to eliminate frivolous claims or defenses without awaiting the making of a summary judgment or other motion by the parties. But at the same time, counsel bear a substantial responsibility in formulating the triable issues in that they must identify these issues for the court or they waive the right to have them tried.

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN5 [] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

See D. Utah Civ. R. 16(c).

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN6 [] Conferences, Pretrial Conferences

Local rules of the United States District Court for the District of Utah anticipate that trial counsel will be fully prepared to participate in the pretrial examination of the issues contemplated by Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN7 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A grievance involving a governmental unit is still a grievance, but a grievance may or may not be a claim upon which relief can be granted in a judicial proceeding. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\).

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

HN8 [blue download icon] Local Governments, Administrative Boards

San Juan County is organized as a political subdivision of the State of Utah under the Utah Constitution and Utah Code Ann. § 17-50-101 et seq. (2001). The San Juan Health Services District (SJHSD) is organized as a special service district under the Utah Code Ann. § 17A-2-1301 et seq. (2004), and is funded in part through tax revenues. San Juan County appoints the members of the SJHSD governance board. Utah Code Ann. § 17A-2-1326 (2001).

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN9 [blue download icon] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Generally, a pleading must contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\)\(2\). Accordingly, a pleading must give fair notice and state the elements of the claim plainly and succinctly. To give such notice, a pleading must set forth specific facts as the basis for the plaintiffs' claims, not merely legal conclusions. Without specific facts, claims are little more than conclusory allegations, which are insufficient to state a claim for relief.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Pretrial Conferences

HN10 [blue download icon] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

The parties may test the legal sufficiency of claims by motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) or 56, and Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 empowers district courts to weed out frivolous claims. There is no reason to require that the elimination of frivolous claims await a formal motion for summary judgment, Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\), advisory committee's notes, and it certainly is not inconsistent with the general purpose of Rule 16 to use this rule to determine whether there are any issues remaining in the case that justify proceeding to a full trial on the merits.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > General Overview

HN11 [blue download icon] Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations, Claims

In order to state a civil Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq., claim, a plaintiff must allege that he or she suffered (1) an injury to his or her business or property because the defendant(s), (2) while involved in one or more enumerated relationships with an "enterprise," (3) engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity or collected an unlawful debt. 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-1968.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > General Overview

HN12 [blue download icon] Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations, Claims

Among the essential elements required to establish civil liability under the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq., statute, plaintiffs must show that the defendants have conducted the affairs of an identifiable "enterprise" through a "pattern of racketeering activity," that is, that the defendants have committed a continuous series of related criminal acts in violation of one or more of the statutes listed in 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961\(1\). 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962. Defendants need not engage in the stereotypical mobster behavior to come within the bounds of civil RICO, but they must nevertheless be shown to have participated in continuing criminal violations constituting an identifiable "pattern of racketeering activity." The various acts of racketeering activity described in the statute are often referred to as "predicate acts" because they form the basis for liability under RICO.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > General Overview

**HN13** [ ] Claims, Fraud

See 18 U.S.C.S. § 1341.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > Elements

**HN14** [ ] Mail Fraud, Elements

In order to prove the offense defined in 18 U.S.C.S. § 1341 in a criminal proceeding, the government must prove the following essential elements: (1) that the defendant knowingly devised or knowingly participated in a scheme or artifice for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises; (2) that the pretenses, representations or promises were material, that is, they would reasonably influence a person to part with money or property; (3) that the defendant did so with the intent to defraud; and (4) that in advancing, or furthering, or carrying out this scheme to obtain money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, the defendant used the mail, or any private or commercial interstate carrier, or caused the same to be used by someone else.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

**HN15** [ ] Claims, Fraud

To establish mail fraud as a predicate act of racketeering activity for the purposes of a civil Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq., claim, plaintiffs must plead and prove facts establishing each of these essential elements as to each occurrence, as to each predicate act alleged as part of the requisite "pattern of racketeering activity." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) requires that allegations of mail fraud be pleaded with particularity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > Elements

**HN16** [ ] Claims, Fraud

Mail fraud is not committed simply by sending false statements through the mail; the mails must have been used to further a scheme to defraud or obtain money or property through false pretenses.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > Elements

HN17 [ ] Claims, Fraud

The essential elements of mail fraud are a scheme or artifice to defraud, namely, to obtain money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, and the use of the mails in furtherance of the scheme.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Obstruction of Administration of Justice > Witness Tampering > Elements

HN18 [ ] Witness Tampering, Elements

The language of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1512 prohibits specific conduct, including physical force, threats of physical force, or intimidation, threatening, "corrupt" or "misleading" persuasion or harassment, that is intended to "influence, delay or prevent" a witness from attending or testifying in an official proceeding, or intended to cause testimony, records, documents, or other objects to be withheld, concealed, altered or destroyed in order to impair their availability for use in an official proceeding. 18 U.S.C.S. § 1512\(a\), \(b\), \(c\), \(d\). Section 1512 prohibits only the coercive conduct specifically described in its subsections; the legislative history reflects Congress' rejection of broadly inclusive language in favor of the specific conduct narrowly described in the final version of the statute.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Obstruction of Administration of Justice > Witness Tampering > Elements

HN19 [ ] Witness Tampering, Elements

Prospective fact witnesses may indeed feel fearful, anxious or apprehensive about how their testimony may be responded to by those against whom it may be offered. In some cases, potential witnesses may fear for their very lives, and with good reason. Federal law affords such witnesses some degree of protection. 18 U.S.C.S. § 1513 (retaliation against witness); 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 3521-3528 (federal witness protection program). But fear, anxiety and apprehension on the part of a prospective witness as to a future loss of employment, denial of services, or other adverse personal consequences do not equate with the culpable criminal conduct on the part of a defendant that violates 18 U.S.C.S. § 1512. A defendant must do something--use physical force, threats of physical force, or intimidation, threatening, corrupt or misleading persuasion or harassment--that is intended to "influence, delay or prevent" a witness from attending or testifying in an official proceeding, or intended to cause testimony, records, documents, or other objects to be withheld, concealed, altered or destroyed in order to impair their availability for use in an official proceeding, in order to run afoul of the witness tampering statute. 18 U.S.C.S. § 1512\(a\)-\(d\).

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Obstruction of Administration of Justice > Witness Tampering > Elements

HN20 [ ] Witness Tampering, Elements

The provisions of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1512 address specific affirmative, coercive, or misleading conduct intended to inhibit or influence future witness testimony or the availability of evidence yet to be offered in a pending or future federal proceeding.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Obstruction of Administration of Justice > Witness Tampering > Elements

**HN21** [blue download icon] Witness Tampering, Elements

The provisions of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1513 prohibit violent retaliation, for example, killing, attempting to kill, causing bodily injury, or damaging tangible property, against any person for attending or furnishing testimony or evidence in a federal proceeding or providing information to a law enforcement officer relating to the commission or possible commission of a federal offense. 18 U.S.C.S. § 1513\(a\), \(b\).

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Extortion > Hobbs Act > Elements

**HN22** [blue download icon] Hobbs Act, Elements

The Anti-Racketeering Act of 1934, 18 U.S.C.S. § 1951, makes it a federal offense to commit robbery or extortion that in any way or degree obstructs commerce. To prove guilt, the government must prove that a defendant committed extortion or robbery, and that such conduct interfered with interstate commerce.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Extortion > Hobbs Act > Elements

**HN23** [blue download icon] Hobbs Act, Elements

The Hobbs Act's definition of "extortion" as the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right, 18 U.S.C.S. § 1951\(b\)\(2\), is read to require that a person must "obtain" property from another party to commit extortion, that is, that there must be not only the deprivation but also the acquisition of property.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > General Overview

**HN24** [blue download icon] Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations, Claims

A private civil action under the federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq., statute remains available as a means for those persons who have been injured in their business or property by reason of a violation of RICO's criminal provisions to seek legal and equitable remedies for their injuries from those whose ongoing criminal conduct has caused them harm. 18 U.S.C.S. § 1964. However, civil RICO liability does not serve merely as a device to multiply the money damages available to parties embroiled in more commonplace civil litigation, or as a means to vilify civil litigants by labeling them as "racketeers," gangsters, extortionists and criminals.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

**HN25** [blue download icon] Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations, Claims

Where a plaintiff's complaint fails to allege specific facts stating the elements essential to her federal claim under the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq., dismissal with prejudice is warranted.

Civil Rights Law > Criminal Interference With Civil Rights > Access to Clinics

Healthcare Law > ... > Reproductive Services > Reproductive Technology > Access to Services

HN26 [blue icon] Criminal Interference With Civil Rights, Access to Clinics

The Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994, 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 241, 248, addresses the conduct of anyone who by force or threat of force or by physical obstruction, intentionally injures, intimidates or interferes with or attempts to injure, intimidate or interfere with any person because that person is or has been, or in order to intimidate such person or any other person or any class of persons from, obtaining or providing reproductive health services, or that person is exercising or seeking to exercise the First Amendment right of religious freedom at a place of religious worship. Though it is primarily a criminal statute, 18 U.S.C.S. § 248\(c\)\(1\) provides that any person aggrieved by reason of the conduct prohibited by § 248\(a\) may commence a civil action seeking temporary, preliminary or permanent injunctive relief and compensatory and punitive damages, as well as the costs of suit and reasonable fees for attorneys and expert witnesses, or as an alternative to compensatory damages, an award of statutory damages in the amount of $ 5,000 per violation. 18 U.S.C.S. § 248\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(b\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN27 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Title IV, § 412 of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 11101-11152, specifically 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112, does set standards for professional review actions affecting a health practitioner's practice privileges, but it does so in the context of a statutory scheme that shields the review participants from civil liability arising from the review action if that action satisfies 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112's procedural criteria. 42 U.S.C.S. § 11111.

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN28 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112\(a\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN29 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 11111\(1\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN30 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

The Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1101-1112, specifically 42 U.S.C.S. § 1111 makes an express exception as to liability under any law of the United States or any state relating to the civil rights of any person or persons, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the Civil Rights Acts, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 et seq., and for actions by the Attorney General under the federal antitrust laws.

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

**HN31** [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

The Health Care Quality Improvement Act (HCQIA), 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1101-1112, does not create a private civil cause of action in favor of plaintiffs whose staff privileges at a medical facility have been adversely affected by a professional or peer review action. Therefore, in the context of a grievance by a health care professional whose staff privileges have been limited or denied by a peer review process, the question posed by the HCQIA is not whether the participants in the review process are liable under the HCQIA, but whether the HCQIA operates to immunize those participants from private civil liability based upon other legal theories.

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Failures & Refusals to Treat > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

**HN32** [blue icon] Failures & Refusals to Treat, Patient Anti-Dumping Act

The Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd, places obligations of screening and stabilization upon hospitals and emergency rooms that receive patients suffering from an "emergency medical condition." Among other provisions, EMTALA requires the emergency departments of hospitals participating in the federal Medicare program to provide appropriate medical screening and stabilizing treatment for all persons who present themselves at the emergency room and request care.

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Failures & Refusals to Treat > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

**HN33** [blue icon] Failures & Refusals to Treat, Patient Anti-Dumping Act

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(a\), \(b\).

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Failures & Refusals to Treat > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Emergency Care Negligence > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

**HN34** [blue icon] Failures & Refusals to Treat, Patient Anti-Dumping Act

The Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(c\), sets standards governing the transfer of emergency room patients to other health care facilities, and § 1395dd\(d\) provides for the enforcement of § 1395dd's requirements through civil monetary penalties collected by the Secretary of Health and Human Services and through private civil actions by any individual who suffers personal harm as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section. 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\). The statute is construed as imposing strict liability on hospitals for violations of its screening and stabilization requirements.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Failures & Refusals to Treat > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Emergency Care Negligence > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

HN35 [blue icon] Failures & Refusals to Treat, Patient Anti-Dumping Act

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\).

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Failures & Refusals to Treat > Patient Anti-Dumping Act

HN36 [blue icon] Failures & Refusals to Treat, Patient Anti-Dumping Act

A hospital's duty to provide the required emergency medical screening and stabilizing treatment to persons requesting such care cannot be delayed by any inquiry as to that person's "method of payment or insurance status." 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(h\). Nor is the participating hospital's duty to provide emergency screening and treatment under the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395dd\(a\) and \(b\), limited to those persons who are regularly in the care of physicians or health care providers having current staff privileges or practice privileges at that hospital.

Public Health & Welfare Law > ... > Medicare > Providers > General Overview

HN37 [blue icon] Medicare, Providers

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395a\(a\).

Public Health & Welfare Law > ... > Medicare > Providers > General Overview

HN38 [blue icon] Medicare, Providers

Section 1802 of Title XVIII of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1395a, the so-called Medicare "freedom of choice provision," reflects one of the fundamental principles upon which the Medicare program was founded, and guarantees Medicare beneficiaries the freedom to choose health care providers, who would then be paid by Medicare at the program's prescribed rates. Section 1395a\(a\) bars interference by the Secretary of Health and Human Services or his subordinates in the administration of the Medicare program with a beneficiary's selection of a physician.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Contractual Relations & Housing > Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981) > General Overview

HN39 [blue icon] Contractual Relations & Housing, Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981)

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Contractual Relations & Housing > Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981) > Proof of Discrimination

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

HN40[] Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981), Proof of Discrimination

The provisions of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 address intentional racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of contracts: A § 1981 plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant intentionally discriminated against him or her on the basis of race.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Contractual Relations & Housing > Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981) > Protected Classes

HN41[] Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981), Protected Classes

The United States Supreme Court construes the language of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 that secures to all the same contracting rights as "white citizens" to refer only to the racial, as opposed to, say, gender-based or religious, character of the prohibited discrimination. Whites as well as blacks may assert contract denial claims under § 1981 on the basis of race. "Ancestry" as "race," as a prohibited basis for discrimination for purposes of § 1981, does not embrace national origin, religion, or status as an alien.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Contractual Relations & Housing > Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981) > Proof of Discrimination

HN42[] Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981), Proof of Discrimination

To state a claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, the plaintiffs must show that (1) they are members of an identifiable racial or ancestral group; (2) the defendant had an intent to discriminate on the basis of their race or ancestry; and (3) the discrimination concerned one or more of the activities enumerated in the statute, namely, the making and enforcing of a contract. A § 1981 claim for interference with the right to make and enforce a contract must allege the actual loss of a contract interest, not merely the possible loss of future contract opportunities.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Contractual Relations & Housing > Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981) > Protected Classes

HN43[] Equal Rights Under the Law (sec. 1981), Protected Classes

Prudential limitations on standing ordinarily require that an action under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 be brought by the direct victims of the alleged discrimination because they are best situated to assert the individual rights in question.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Conspiracy Against Rights > General Overview

HN44[] Protection of Rights, Conspiracy Against Rights

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1985\(3\).

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Conspiracy Against Rights > Elements

HN45[] Conspiracy Against Rights, Elements

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

To state a claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1985, there must be some racial, or perhaps otherwise class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus behind the conspirators' action. A plaintiff who fails to allege racial or class-based discrimination cannot state a claim under § 1985\(3\).

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Section 1983 Actions > General Overview

HN46 [+] Protection of Rights, Section 1983 Actions

See 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Section 1983 Actions > Elements > General Overview

HN47 [+] Section 1983 Actions, Elements

The language of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 provides an enforcement remedy for one who is deprived under color of state law of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution. There are two elements to a § 1983 claim: (1) the conduct complained of must have been under color of state law, and (2) the conduct must have subjected the plaintiff to a deprivation of constitutional rights, or rights protected by federal law.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Section 1983 Actions > Elements > Causal Relationship

HN48 [+] Elements, Causal Relationship

The language of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 does not specify the state of mind on the part of someone who "subjects, or causes to be subjected" a person to a deprivation of civil rights which a plaintiff must allege and prove to establish liability under the statute; the question is did the defendant violate the plaintiff's Fourteenth Amendment rights? The defendant's state of mind is relevant only to the existence of the claimed Fourteenth Amendment violation. Although § 1983 does not require a specific state of mind for actionability, a court must examine closely the nature of the constitutional right asserted to determine whether a deprivation of that right requires any particular state of mind. For instance, deprivations of equal protection require proof of discriminatory intent on the part of the state actor, while deprivations under the Eighth Amendment require a showing of deliberate indifference. Moreover, some deprivations of First Amendment rights require proof that the state's action was intended to repress an individual's protected speech or association.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Section 1983 Actions > Elements > Protected Rights

HN49 [+] Elements, Protected Rights

In order to state a claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, a complaint must assert a right to recover under the Constitution or other federal laws and not be wholly insubstantial and frivolous. Conclusionary allegations, unsupported by facts, will be rejected as insufficient to state a claim under the Civil Rights Act. The plaintiff must allege with at least some degree of particularity overt acts which defendants engaged in that support the plaintiff's claim.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Section 1983 Actions > Elements > General Overview

HN50 [+] Section 1983 Actions, Elements

In order to prevail on a claim for a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 conspiracy, a plaintiff must plead and prove not only a conspiracy, but also an actual deprivation of rights; pleading and proof of one without the other will be insufficient. In pleading conspiracy, a plaintiff must allege specific facts showing agreement and concerted action among the alleged co-conspirators. Conclusory allegations of conspiracy are insufficient to state a valid § 1983 claim. Thus, a plaintiff fails to state a claim for conspiracy absent specific facts showing a "meeting of the minds" among the alleged co-conspirators.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Direct Causal Links

HN51 [] Local Officials, Direct Causal Links

A local government may be liable under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 if the action that is alleged to be unconstitutional implements or executes a policy, statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers. Causation presents a threshold question: the first inquiry in any case alleging local governmental liability under § 1983 is the question whether there is a direct causal link between a local governmental policy or custom and the alleged constitutional deprivation, because it is only when the execution of the government's policy or custom inflicts the injury that a local government entity may be held liable under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Deliberate Indifference

HN52 [] Local Officials, Deliberate Indifference

Assuming that causation may be shown, to subject a governmental entity to liability under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, a municipal policy must be a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by a municipality's officers. Absent such an official policy, a municipality may also be held liable if the discriminatory practice is so permanent and well settled as to constitute a "custom or usage" with the force of law. Thus, acts that do not rise to the level of official policy may nonetheless create liability if they are sufficiently widespread and pervasive so as to constitute a custom. However, conduct directed solely at a plaintiff may not demonstrate a custom or policy of the entity to be deliberately indifferent to that conduct as a general matter.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Deliberate Indifference

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Direct Causal Links

HN53 [] Local Officials, Deliberate Indifference

The deliberate indifference standard may be satisfied when the municipality has actual or constructive notice that its action or failure is substantially certain to result in a constitutional violation, and it consciously and deliberately chooses to disregard the risk of harm. Although a single incident generally will not give rise to liability, deliberate indifference may be found absent a pattern of unconstitutional behavior if a violation of federal rights is a "highly predictable" or "plainly obvious" consequence of a municipality's action. The official position must operate as the "moving force" behind the violation, and the plaintiff must demonstrate a "direct causal link" between the action and the right violation.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Direct Causal Links

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

HN54 [blue document icon] Local Officials, Direct Causal Links

The policy "causation" question presupposes that a deprivation of constitutional rights has occurred by a municipality; if there was no deprivation, the policy or custom is immaterial.

Civil Rights Law > ... > Immunity From Liability > Local Officials > Customs & Policies

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Respondeat Superior Distinguished

HN55 [blue document icon] Local Officials, Customs & Policies

The doctrine of respondeat superior is not applicable to render a supervisor or other superior liable under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 for the unconstitutional conduct of his subordinates. Vicarious liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior cannot be applied either to superiors or to local government entities under § 1983, under any circumstances. Instead, local governmental entities are suable persons under § 1983 and can be held liable for their unconstitutional policies, practices, and customs.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Respondeat Superior Distinguished

HN56 [blue document icon] Immunity From Liability, Respondeat Superior Distinguished

The superior does not and should not invariably have a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 duty, solely by reason of position, to compensate a person whose constitutional rights have been violated by subordinates. What is currently required in order for the superior to have such a duty is that the superior personally either acted unconstitutionally or with deliberate indifference. That is, the superior must have possessed either the state of mind for the particular constitutional violation or deliberate indifference, and must also have played a causal role in plaintiff's constitutional deprivation.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Respondeat Superior Distinguished

HN57 [blue document icon] Immunity From Liability, Respondeat Superior Distinguished

The language of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 addresses conduct which subjects, or causes to be subjected, the plaintiff to a deprivation of civil rights, requiring pleading and proof of a causal connection between a defendant's conduct and the constitutional deprivation suffered by the plaintiff. Thus, theories of vicarious liability are not available to § 1983 plaintiffs. Only the direct acts or omissions of government officials, not the acts of subordinates, will give rise to individual liability under § 1983. Where an official becomes aware of a constitutional violation only after the fact, he or she cannot be held liable for the violation under § 1983 because the violation has already occurred and the official played no causal role in it. Thus, some personal involvement of the supervisory official in the subordinate's unconstitutional conduct, analogous to the official policy or custom requirement for local government liability, must be shown for § 1983 liability.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN58 [blue document icon] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

Government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability from civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Although courts have derived from this statement a variety of multi-part tests, the essential inquiry is would an objectively reasonable official have known that his conduct was unlawful?

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1</sup>

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN59 [+] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

In the Tenth Circuit, courts employ a three-step qualified immunity inquiry. First, a court asks whether the plaintiffs allegations, if true, establish a constitutional violation. If not, the suit is dismissed; if so, the court moves to the second step: whether the law was clearly established at the time the alleged violations occurred. This step gives the official an opportunity to show that he neither knew nor should have known of the relevant legal standard because the law was not clearly established at the time he acted. Where the law is not clearly established, courts do not require officials to anticipate its future developments, and qualified immunity is therefore appropriate. If the law was clearly established, the court reaches the third step of the inquiry: whether, in spite of the fact that the law was clearly established, "extraordinary circumstances," such as reliance on the advice of counsel or on a statute, so prevented the official from knowing that his actions were unconstitutional that he should not be imputed with knowledge of a clearly established right. This occurs only "rarely."

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN60 [+] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

Whether an official is protected by qualified immunity turns upon the objective legal reasonableness of the action, in light of legal rules clearly established at the time the action was taken. The contours of the right allegedly violated must be sufficiently clear so that a reasonable official would understand that what he or she is doing violates that right. This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in light of pre-existing law that unlawfulness must be apparent. Thus, if prior case law provides "fair warning" that an officer's conduct would violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights, officials can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law even in novel factual circumstances.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Burden Shifting

HN61 [+] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

Once a defendant raises the defense of qualified immunity, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to satisfy a heavy two-part burden to demonstrate that the defendant violated a constitutional or statutory right and that the right at issue was clearly established at the time of the defendant's unlawful conduct. If the plaintiff cannot make both showings, the defendant is entitled to qualified immunity; if he can, the burden shifts to the defendant to prove that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that he or she is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN62 [+] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

Qualified immunity is governed by an objective reasonableness standard, and evidence concerning the defendant's subjective intent is simply irrelevant to that defense.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN63 [blue icon] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

In order for the law to be clearly established there must have been a United States Supreme Court or other Tenth Circuit decision on point so that the contours of the right were sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Immunity From Liability > Defenses

HN64 [blue icon] Immunity From Liability, Defenses

Qualified immunity establishes a right not to be tried. The entitlement to qualified immunity is an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability, and like an absolute immunity, it is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > Deprivation of Economic Interests

HN65 [blue icon] Substantive Due Process, Deprivation of Economic Interests

The Fourteenth Amendment's "liberty" guarantee includes an individual's right to engage in any of the common occupations of life. Liberty denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men. In a Constitution for a free people, there can be no doubt that the meaning of "liberty" must be broad indeed.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > Deprivation of Economic Interests

HN66 [blue icon] Substantive Due Process, Deprivation of Economic Interests

The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment protects an individual's liberty interest which is viewed as including an individual's freedom to work and earn a living and to establish a home and position in one's community. It requires no argument to show that the right to work for a living in the common occupations of the community is of the very essence of the personal freedom and opportunity that it was the purpose of the Fourteenth Amendment to secure.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > Deprivation of Economic Interests

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Hospital Privileges > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

HN67 [blue icon] Substantive Due Process, Deprivation of Economic Interests

A physician's "liberty" interest in pursuing his or her professional practice and establishing a home and position in a particular community does not per se entitle the physician to exercise plenary staff privileges at public hospitals or medical facilities. A doctor has no constitutional right to the staff privileges of a hospital merely because he is licensed to practice medicine. Generally, a physician is limited to assertion of a substantive due process right not to be excluded from staff privileges except for reasons related to the operation of the hospital which are not arbitrary or capricious, and a right to procedural due process sufficient to ensure that the physician has an opportunity to demonstrate that the exclusion is not justified.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Hospital Privileges > General Overview

HN68 [blue icon] Procedural Due Process, Scope of Protection

A physician's liberty interest in pursuing a professional practice raises procedural due process concerns with respect to the grant or denial of staff privileges at a public hospital or medical facility once a request for such privileges has been made.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

HN69 [blue icon] Procedural Due Process, Scope of Protection

The essence of Fourteenth Amendment due process analysis is the implication of a liberty or property interest. Under the Fourteenth Amendment, procedural due process requires notice and a pre-deprivation hearing before property interests are negatively affected by governmental actors. Health care professionals have been held to have a property interest in their professional licenses.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Hospital Privileges > General Overview

HN70 [blue icon] Procedural Due Process, Scope of Protection

To pursue a due process claim in the courts based upon a denial of hospital staff privileges, those privileges must in fact be denied before the claim may be pursued in the courts.

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Facility & Personnel Licensing > Personnel Licensing

HN71 [blue icon] Facility & Personnel Licensing, Personnel Licensing

See Utah Code Ann. § 58-70a-501(1) (2002).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Facility & Personnel Licensing > Personnel Licensing

**HN72** [+] Facility & Personnel Licensing, Personnel Licensing

See Utah Admin. Code r. 156-70a-501 (2004).

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Facility & Personnel Licensing > Personnel Licensing

**HN73** [+] Facility & Personnel Licensing, Personnel Licensing

While it is true that under *Utah Code Ann. § 58-70a-501\(1\)* (2002) and Utah Admin. Code r. 156-70a-501 (2004), a physician assistant may provide "any medical services" not specifically prohibited that are within the range of her skills and scope of competence and the skills and scope of practice of her supervising physician, she cannot lawfully exercise the identical degree of independent professional judgment and discretion that a physician could exercise, and logically she could not be entitled as a matter of constitutional right to exercise practice privileges at hospitals, clinics, and similar facilities identical to those that physicians may enjoy.

Constitutional Law > Substantive Due Process > Deprivation of Economic Interests

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Facility & Personnel Licensing > Personnel Licensing

**HN74** [+] Substantive Due Process, Deprivation of Economic Interests

Limiting a physician assistant's practice privileges to take into account the statutory and regulatory requirement of direct supervision and review by a physician cannot operate to deprive the physician assistant of "liberty" or "property" otherwise guaranteed by the *Fourteenth Amendment*. Nor is it arbitrary or unreasonable for a health care facility to require that physician assistants exercise staff privileges under the supervision of a physician who currently has staff privileges at the same facility.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

**HN75** [+] Contract Interpretation, Good Faith & Fair Dealing

To determine the legal duty a contractual party has under the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, a court will assess whether a party's actions are consistent with the agreed common purpose and the justified expectations of the other party. The court determines the "purpose, intentions, and expectations" by considering the contract language and the course of dealings between and conduct of the parties.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

**HN76** [+] Contract Interpretation, Good Faith & Fair Dealing

Under Utah law, some general principles limit the scope of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, including the following: First, this covenant cannot be read to establish new, independent rights or duties to which the parties did not agree ex ante. Second, this covenant cannot create rights and duties inconsistent with express contractual terms. Third, this covenant cannot compel a contractual party to exercise a contractual right to its own detriment for the purpose of benefitting another party to the contract. Finally, courts will not use this covenant to achieve an outcome in harmony with the court's sense of justice but inconsistent with the express terms of the applicable contract.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1</sup>

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

HN77 [+] Contract Interpretation, Good Faith & Fair Dealing

Generally, the degree to which a party to a contract may invoke the protections of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing turns on the extent to which the contracting parties have defined their expectations and imposed limitations on contract terms. In all instances, however, the reach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing extends no further than the purposes and express terms of the contract.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

HN78 [+] Contract Interpretation, Good Faith & Fair Dealing

The Utah Supreme Court takes the position that the ability of a plaintiff to recover in tort for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in a contract has the potential for distorting well-established principles of contract law and will not be permitted. Utah law thus does not recognize an independent tort cause of action based upon good faith and fair dealing apart from the purposes and terms of an existing contract, and in contrast to equitable doctrines such as unconscionability, the implied covenant cannot serve as a basis for invalidating a contract.

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Patient Confidentiality > General Overview

HN79 [+] Medical Treatment, Patient Confidentiality

In Utah, the maintenance and protection of the confidentiality of medical records involves the application of both legal and ethical standards.

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Patient Confidentiality > General Overview

HN80 [+] Medical Treatment, Patient Confidentiality

See Utah Admin. Code r. 156-67-602 (2005).

Healthcare Law > Medical Treatment > Patient Confidentiality > General Overview

HN81 [+] Medical Treatment, Patient Confidentiality

See Utah Code Ann. § 58-67-803\(1\) (2002).

Torts > Intentional Torts > Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress > Elements

**HN82** [blue icon] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Elements

An action for severe emotional distress, though not accompanied by bodily impact or physical injury, may lie where the defendant intentionally engaged in some conduct toward the plaintiff, (a) with the purpose of inflicting emotional distress, or (b) where any reasonable person would have known that such would result; and his actions are of such a nature as to be considered outrageous and intolerable in that they offend against the generally accepted standards of decency and morality.

Torts > Intentional Torts > Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress > Elements

**HN83** [blue icon] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Elements

To prevail on her claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress, a plaintiff must prove that the defendants either intentionally or recklessly engaged in intolerable and outrageous conduct that caused her severe emotional distress.

Torts > Intentional Torts > Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress > Elements

Torts > ... > Types of Negligence Actions > Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress > Elements

**HN84** [blue icon] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress, Elements

Intentional infliction of emotional distress, in contrast to negligent infliction of emotional distress, does not require that plaintiff actually be at risk of bodily harm.

Torts > ... > Types of Negligence Actions > Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress > Potential Plaintiffs

**HN85** [blue icon] Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, Potential Plaintiffs

The Utah Supreme Court expressly recognizes a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress. It adopts the zone of danger approach, allows recovery to plaintiffs who suffer emotional distress because of another's negligence, though they do not suffer any physical impact, only if the plaintiffs are placed in actual physical peril and fear for their own safety. Therefore, this does not provide recovery to plaintiffs who are not within the zone of danger created by a defendant's negligence. The rule does not give protection to mental and emotional tranquility in itself. One who unintentionally but negligently subjects another to such emotional distress does not take the risk of any exceptional physical sensitiveness to emotion which the other may have unless the circumstances known to the actor should apprise him of it.

Torts > ... > Types of Negligence Actions > Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress > Potential Plaintiffs

**HN86** [blue icon] Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, Potential Plaintiffs

One restriction that provides a check on feigned disturbances, thereby ensuring the genuineness of claims is the requirement that plaintiffs who claim to be the direct victim of negligent infliction of emotional distress must allege resulting illness or bodily harm, including clinically identifiable mental illness.

Torts > ... > Types of Negligence Actions > Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress > Potential Plaintiffs

HN87 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, Potential Plaintiffs

If the actor unintentionally causes emotional distress to another, he is subject to liability to the other for resulting illness or bodily harm if the actor (a) should have realized that his conduct involved an unreasonable risk of causing the distress, otherwise than by knowledge of the harm or peril of a third person, and (b) from facts known to him should have realized that the distress, if it were caused, might result in illness or bodily harm. This rule has no application to illness or bodily harm of another which is caused by emotional distress arising solely from harm or peril to a third person, unless the negligence of the actor has otherwise created an unreasonable risk of bodily harm to the other.

Torts > ... > Types of Negligence Actions > Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress > Elements

HN88 Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, Elements

To sustain a claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress, the emotional distress suffered must be severe; it must be such that a reasonable person, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Clear & Convincing Proof

Torts > Business Torts > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

HN89 Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

In order to prevail on a claim of fraud or misrepresentation, all the elements of fraud must be established by clear and convincing evidence. Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), those missing elements of reasonable reliance, causation, and injury are among the circumstances constituting fraud that must be pleaded with particularity. Absent such pleading, plaintiffs' fraud claim remains vulnerable to dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), independent of a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) or 56.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN90 Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

In applying Utah's parallel civil rule, the mere recitation by a plaintiff of the elements of fraud in a complaint does not satisfy the particularity requirement. Rather, Utah R. Civ. P. 9(b) requires a complaint to recite the relevant surrounding facts with sufficient particularity to show what facts are claimed to constitute the fraud charges. Rule 9\(b\) also imposes a much more basic and fundamental requirement: a requirement of clarity and conciseness.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN91 Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **1

Pleading a fraud claim without specifying the facts upon which it is based essentially dumps upon the trial court the burden of sifting through the hundreds of paragraphs of alleged facts to ascertain whether plaintiffs have alleged facts necessary to make all their elements of fraud. Such an approach is unacceptable. It is plaintiffs' responsibility, not the courts, to set forth the relevant surrounding facts in such a manner that it is evident what facts are claimed to constitute the fraud charges.

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Conferences > Final Pretrial Conferences

HN92 [blue download icon] Conferences, Final Pretrial Conferences

See D. Utah Civ. R. 7-1(d).

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > General Overview

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Standards of Care > Hospitals

HN93 [blue download icon] Healthcare Law, Business Administration & Organization

Because the hospital bylaws constitute a contract between the hospital and the physician, the hospital must comply with those bylaws when taking actions which effect its staff. The weight of authority grants deference to hospital officials' professional judgment. Under this authority, courts require that a hospital only "substantially comply" with its bylaws. Substantial compliance with the bylaws adequately serves their primary purpose, which is to ensure fair procedures for staffing decisions.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Entry of Judgments > General Overview

HN94 [blue download icon] Judgments, Entry of Judgments

See D. Utah Civ. R. 54-1.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN95 [blue download icon] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure encourage litigants to plead only a simple statement, in sequence, of the events which have transpired, coupled with a direct claim by way of demand for judgment.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > Conforming Pleadings to Evidence

HN96 [blue download icon] Amendment of Pleadings, Conforming Pleadings to Evidence

While generally, motions to amend a complaint to conform to the evidence are made at trial or in the immediate aftermath of trial, the express language of Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(b\) does not limit such motions to that context.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Relief From Judgments > Altering & Amending Judgments

HN97 [blue icon] Relief From Judgments, Altering & Amending Judgments

Except to the extent that a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60\(b\) or Fed. R. Civ. P. 59\(e\) is deemed a "motion for reconsideration," the Federal Rules do not expressly provide for such motions. Nevertheless, in the Tenth Circuit, a "motion for reconsideration" may be made on one or more specific grounds: Grounds warranting a motion to reconsider include (1) an intervening change in the controlling law, (2) new evidence previously unavailable, and (3) the need to correct clear error or prevent manifest injustice. Thus, a motion for reconsideration is appropriate where the court has misapprehended the facts, a party's position, or the controlling law.

Civil Procedure > ... > Relief From Judgments > Grounds for Relief from Final Judgment, Order or Proceeding > Extraordinary Circumstances

HN98 [blue icon] Grounds for Relief from Final Judgment, Order or Proceeding, Extraordinary Circumstances

Relief under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60\(b\) is extraordinary and may only be granted in exceptional circumstances.

Counsel: For Steven MacArthur, Doctor, Nathaniel Penn, Doctor, Michelle Lyman, Helen Valdez, Candance Laws, Linda Cacapardo, Sue Burton, Amy Terlaak, Alison Dickson, Candace Holiday, Nicole Roberts, Donna Singer, Fred Riggs, All Plaintiffs, Plaintiffs Counter, Defendants: Susan Rose, SANDY, UT.

For San Juan County, J Tyron Lewis, Craig Halls, Richard Bailey, Defendants: Jesse C Trentadue, Michael W Homer, Thomas B. Price, SUITTER AXLAND, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Robert R. Harrison, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Kathleen M. Liuzzi, DUNN & DUNN, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For San Juan Health Services District, Defendant: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox, HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Robert R. Harrison, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Christine T. Greenwood, MAGLEBY & GREENWOOD PC, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Bill Redd, Commissioner: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox, HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Jesse C Trentadue, [\[\*\*2\]](#) Michael W Homer, Thomas B. Price, SUITTER AXLAND, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Robert R. Harrison, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Kathleen M. Liuzzi, DUNN & DUNN, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Reid M. Wood, Cleal Bradford, Laurie Schafer, Defendants: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox, HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Robert R. Harrison, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Roger Atcity, John Lewis, John Housekeeper, Karen Adams, Patsy Shumway, Gary Holladay, Defendants: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox, HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Christine T. Greenwood, MAGLEBY & GREENWOOD PC, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For James D. Redd, Doctor, L. Val Jones, Doctor, Manfred R. Nelson, Doctor, Marilee Bailey, Ora Lee Black, Lori Wallace, also known as Laurie Walker, Carla Grimshaw, Gloria Yanito, Julie Bronson, Defendants: Robert R. Harrison, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Lyn Stevens, San Juan County Commissioner, Defendant: Jesse C Trentadue, Michael W Homer, SUITTER AXLAND, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For San Juan County Defendants, All Defendants: Jesse C Trentadue, Michael W Homer, Thomas B. Price, SUITTER AXLAND, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Kathleen [\[\*\*3\]](#) M. Liuzzi, DUNN & DUNN, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Health District Defendants, San Juan Health Services District Dfts Group I consist of: San Juan Service District, Cleal Bradford, Dr. James Redd, Dr. L. Val Jones, Dr. Manfred Nelson, Marilee Bailey, Ora Lee Black, Lori Wallace, Carla Grimshaw, Gloria Yanito, also known as Health Dist Dfts, All Defendants: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox,

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1098L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **3

HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Robert R. Harrison, David W Slagle, SNOW & CHRISTENSEN & MARTINEAU, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For San Juan Health Defendants Group 2, San Juan Health Dfts Group 2 consists of: San Juan Health Services District, Roger Atcity, John Lewis, Patsy Shumway, Karen Adams, John Housekeeper, Gary Holliday, Reid Wood, Laurie Schafer, All Defendants: Blaine J. Benard, Carolyn Cox, HOLME ROBERTS & OWEN (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT; Christine T. Greenwood, MAGLEBY & GREENWOOD PC, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For HEALTH, Don Beckwith, Sandra Assasnik, Marilyn Brokoop, James (Harry) Boley, FNU Wilson, Mr. Masotti, Interested Parties: Jean P Hendrickson, UTAH ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE (160-140857), SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Mark Shurtleff, Stewart M. Hanson, Interested Parties: Dan R. Larsen, SNELL [**4] & WILMER (UT), SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Bradley Eddie, Terra Talker, Plaintiffs: Susan Rose, SANDY, UT.

Judges: BRUCE S. JENKINS, United States Senior District Judge.

Opinion by: BRUCE S. JENKINS

Opinion

---

[*1109] MEMORANDUM DECISION & ORDER

THE FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE (Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\))

Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\)

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS

Dr. Steven MacArthur, M.D

Ms. Michele Lyman, P.A.

Ms. Helen Valdez

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANTS

The County Commissioners

County Attorney Craig Halls

SJHSD Board Members: Atcity, Lewis, Housekeeper, Adams, Shumway & Holliday

The SJHSD Administrators: Wood, Bailey & Bradford

Laurie Schafer (a/k/a Laurie Shafer)

Marilee Bailey, R.N.

Ora Lee Black

Carla Grimshaw

Gloria Yanito

Julie Bronson

Lori Wallace, R.N. a/k/a Laurie Walker

Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, M.D.

Dr. Manfred Nelson, M.D.

Dr. James Redd, M.D.

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' THEORIES OF LIABILITY

(1) Plaintiffs' Civil RICO Claims (18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 et seq.)

Predicate Acts of "Racketeering Activity" (18 U.S.C. § 1961\(1\))

(a) 18 U.S.C. § 1341 - Mail Fraud

(b) 18 U.S.C. § 1512 - Witness Tampering

(c) 18 U.S.C. § 1951 - Interference with Commerce by Threats

(2) Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994 (18 U.S.C. § 248) [**5]

(3) Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112 \(2000\)

(4) Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd \(2000\)

(5) "Medicare Patient Bill of Rights" (42 U.S.C. § 1395a)

(6) 42 U.S.C. § 1981

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1109L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **5

(7) 42 U.S.C. § 1985\(3\)

(8) 42 U.S.C. § 1983

§ 1983 Conspiracy

Liability of the SJHSD & San Juan County

Plaintiffs' § 1983 Claims Against the County Commissioners & SJHSD Board Members

Vicarious Liability, Respondeat Superior & § 1983

The SJHSD Board & the SJHSD Medical Staff's "Policy" re: Physician Assistants

[*1110] Qualified Immunity & Plaintiffs' § 1983 Claims

Dr. MacArthur's § 1983 Claim

Dr. MacArthur's "Right" to Practice at SJHSD Facilities

Dr. MacArthur's Request for Privileges & Procedural Due Process

Ms. Lyman's § 1983 Claim

Substantive Due Process

Misogyny & "Hostile Environment" under § 1983

Qualified Immunity & Ms. Lyman's § 1983 Claim

Ms. Helen Valdez' § 1983 Claim

(9) Federal Antitrust Laws (15 U.S.C. §§ 1 et seq.)

The Local Government Antitrust Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 34-36)

Dr. MacArthur's Federal Antitrust Law Claim

Ms. Lyman's Federal Antitrust Law Claim

(10) Utah Constitution, art. I, §§ 1, 7, 25, 26, 27

(11) Utah Unfair Practices Act (Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-5-1 et seq. [**6] (2001))

(12) Utah Civil Rights Act (Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-7-1 et seq. (2001))

(13) Interference with Contract and with Prospective Business Relations

(14) "state common law defamation (also a U. S. Constitutional right to reputation as guaranteed by the Ninth Amendment)"

(a) Utah Law of Defamation

(b) Defamation & the Ninth Amendment

(15) "Federal common law and Utah contract common law and statutory provisions that prohibit contracts of adhesion, bad faith, and lack of fair dealing. Utah Code Ann. 78-12-25(1) (1996)," including the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

(a) Contracts of Adhesion

(b) Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

(16) "privacy rights and statutory entitlements to have their credential files and patient files accurately kept by the district under Medicaid and Utah Health Department statutes and regulations"

(17) Negligent and Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

(a) Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

(b) Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

(c) The Part I Plaintiffs' Emotional Distress Claims

(18) Fraud

Summary re: the Part I Plaintiffs' Causes of Action

Pretrial Determination of the Part I Plaintiffs' Claims

Claims [**7] Against San Juan County and the SJHSD

Claims Against the Individual Defendants

Dr. MacArthur's State Law Tort Claims

Ms. Lyman's State Law Tort Claims

Summary re: the Final Pretrial Conference

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE AN AMENDED COMPLAINT

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' MOTIONS FOR RECONSIDERATION

CONCLUSION

This case involves a potpourri of individual claims with individual histories and individual times and contexts, held together, if at all, by a common defendant, or common defendants. It has an erratic procedural history, complicated by prolix pleadings and appendices, evolving arguments, and motions to reconsider matters already decided. In an effort to deal with this matter as completely as we can--extended though it may be--the court in the context of pretrial has considered in detail each of the plaintiffs' legal theories, and the factual allegations advanced as the basis for those theories, all in an effort to [*1111] identify any genuine issues that would require a trial.

The original complaint filed in this action asserted claims by fifteen individual plaintiffs against San Juan County, the San Juan Health Services District, and various individual defendants. Some of those claims [**8] were decided upon motion, and some have been resolved by agreement; several of the original plaintiffs and defendants are no longer parties to this case. ( See Order on Motions Heard on July 2, 2002, filed August 22, 2002 (dkt. no. 417); Order on Motion of Defendant San Juan Foundation to Dismiss, filed June 5, 2002 (dkt. no. 366); Order of Dismissal with Prejudice, filed March 28, 2002 (dkt. no. 309); Order of Dismissal with Prejudice, filed March 25, 2002 (dkt. no. 306); Order of Dismissal with Prejudice, filed March 11, 2002 (dkt. no. 298); Order, filed February 12, 2002 (dkt. no. 272); Order, filed November 29, 2001 (dkt. no. 234); see also Order, filed February 15, 2002 (dkt. no. 279).) Some of the questions decided by the district judge initially assigned this case became the subject of an interlocutory appeal, and are now back before this court on remand. See MacArthur v. San Juan County, 309 F.3d 1216 \(10th Cir. 2002\).

By the time of the Final Pretrial Conference on November 14-15, 2002, there remained six named plaintiffs, whose claims fall into two discrete groups: plaintiffs Donna Singer, Fred Riggs and Al Dickson, who seek enforcement of a judgment against several of the [**9] defendants previously obtained in Navajo Tribal Court--the matter now before this court on remand from the court of appeals--and plaintiffs Dr. Steven MacArthur, Michelle Lyman and Helen Valdez, who assert individual claims against the defendants arising from various events and alleged acts of one or more of the defendants. The claims of these six remaining plaintiffs were detailed in a proposed Amended Complaint submitted by counsel a few days before the Final Pretrial Conference. ( See "Amended Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," annexed to "Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend and Supplement Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," and "Memorandum of Fact and Law in Support," filed November 6, 2002 (dkt. no. 438) (hereinafter "Proposed Amended Complaint").)<sup>1</sup> "Part I" of the Proposed Amended Complaint sets forth the claims of MacArthur, Lyman and Valdez (id. at 2-98 PP1-254); "Part II" of the same pleading spells out the relief sought by Singer, Riggs and Dickson. (Id. at 98-120.)

The claims and defenses involving the "Part I Plaintiffs," MacArthur, Lyman and Valdez, were also delineated in an agreed form of proposed Pretrial Order submitted six days later as contemplated by the court's local rules, see DUCivR 16-I\(e\), and by the schedule previously established by the court in this case.<sup>2</sup> ( See Proposed [*1112] Pretrial Order, received November 12, 2002.<sup>3</sup> ) On the eve of pretrial, the San Juan Health District defendants filed motions to dismiss those plaintiffs' RICO, Health Care Quality Improvement Act and EMTALA claims (dkt. nos. 443, 445, 447), followed the next day by motions to dismiss those plaintiffs' claims of interference with commerce by threats, mail fraud, witness tampering and federal antitrust law violations (dkt. nos. 450, 452, 456, 454).

THE FINAL PRETRIAL CONFERENCE (Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\))

---

<sup>1</sup> As noted in a November 8, 2002 remark on the docket, the Proposed Amended Complaint was accompanied by a separate addendum [**10] of "Pertinent Parts of the Navajo Court Record as Attachment to the Amended Complaint," received by the Clerk of the Court on November 8, 2002 and lodged in the case file.

<sup>2</sup> ( See Minute Entry, dated October 8, 2002 (dkt. no. 427).) At the request of plaintiffs' counsel, the dates for submission of the draft Pretrial Order (11/1/2002) and the Final Pretrial Conference (11/5/2002) were reset by amended notice of hearing, [**11] with the conference to commence on November 12, then November 14. ( See Motion for a Short Extension of Time to Submit the Final Pretrial Order for Medical Reasons, filed October 28, 2002 (dkt. no. 434); Notice of Hearing, filed October 31, 2002 (dkt. no. 435); Motion to Extend Time for Pretrial Proceedings, filed November 8, 2002 (dkt. no. 439); Amended Notice of Hearing, filed November 12, 2002 (dkt. no. 441).)

<sup>3</sup> The Proposed Pretrial Order ultimately was neither signed by the court nor docketed and filed in this case. To ensure a complete record of the Final Pretrial Conference in this action, a copy of the Proposed Pretrial Order in .pdf file format is annexed to this Memorandum Decision & Order as an Appendix.

At the Final Pretrial Conference, court and counsel explored in some detail the factual footing and legal theories underlying the claims of the Part I plaintiffs, engaging in an extended colloquy that sought to identify, formulate and simplify the issues, and to pinpoint any genuine issues of material fact issues requiring a trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\)

HN1[↑] At a pretrial conference, "consideration may be given, and the court [**12] may take appropriate action, with respect to (1) the formulation and simplification of the issues, including the elimination of frivolous claims or defenses; . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\). HN2[↑]

The reference in Rule 16\(c\)\(1\) to "formulation" is intended to clarify and confirm the court's power to identify the litigable issues. It has been added in the hope of promoting efficiency and conserving judicial resources by identifying the real issues prior to trial, thereby saving time and expense for everyone.... The notion is emphasized by expressly authorizing the elimination of frivolous claims or defenses at a pretrial conference. There is no reason to require that this await a formal motion for summary judgment. Nor is there any reason for the court to wait for the parties to initiate the process called for in Rule 16\(c\)\(1\).

Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 advisory committee note to 1983 amendment (citation omitted). "The court thus is directed to define the issues, facts, and theories actually in contention, which means that extraneous issues should be weeded out ...." 6A Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary K. Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1525, at 242 (2d ed. 1990) (footnotes omitted). [**13] As the court of appeals explained some years ago: "The salutary, indeed the desirable and efficacious, purpose of a pretrial conference is to sift the discovered and discoverable facts to determine the triable issues, both factual and legal, and to chart the course of the lawsuit accordingly." Lynch v. Call, 261 F.2d 130, 132 \(10th Cir. 1958\).

It follows that HN3[↑] "as a case takes shape and the court struggles to narrow and pinpoint the issues, the parties have an unflagging obligation to spell out squarely and distinctly those claims they desire to advance at the trial proper. Good-faith compliance with Civil Rule 16 plays an important role in this process." Veranda Beach Club Limited Partnership v. Western Surety Co., 936 F.2d 1364, 1371 \(1st Cir. 1991\) (citation omitted). Rule 16\(c\)\(1\) places upon counsel "a substantial responsibility for assisting the court in identifying the factual issues worthy of trial." Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 advisory committee note to 1983 amendment; cf. Erff v. MarkHon Industries, Inc., 781 F.2d 613, 617 \(7th Cir. 1986\) [*1113] ("Attorneys at a pre-trial conference must make a full and fair disclosure of their views as to what the real issues of the trial will be."); see \*\*14 also DUCivR 7-1\(d\).<sup>4</sup>

HN4[↑] Rule 16\(c\) has confirmed the court's power to identify the litigable issues, and to eliminate frivolous claims or defenses without awaiting the making of a summary judgment or other motion by the parties. But at the same time, counsel bear a substantial responsibility in formulating the triable issues in that they must these issues for the court or they waive the right to have them tried.

3 James W. Moore, et al.; Moore's Federal Practice P16.11, at 16-49 (2d ed. Rev. 1994) (footnotes omitted).

Both the Proposed Amended Complaint (Part \*\*15 I) and the Proposed Pretrial Order recite an extended litany of grievances against San Juan County, the San Juan Health Services District ("SJHSD") and various individual defendants, ranging from allegations of nepotism in the administration of the SJHSD and San Juan County

<sup>4</sup> DUCivR 7-1\(d\) reads:

(d) HN5[↑] Final Pretrial Conference. Trial counsel must attend the final pretrial conference with the court. Preparation for this final pretrial conference should proceed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 and should include (i) preparation by plaintiffs counsel of a recommended pretrial order that is submitted to other counsel at least five (5) days prior to the final pretrial date, and (ii) preparation for resolution of unresolved issues in the case.

HN6[↑] Our local rules thus anticipate that trial counsel will be fully prepared to participate in the pretrial examination of the issues contemplated by Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\).

government to an individual physician's ill-tempered use of derogatory language in referring to medical support staff and patients and his unavailability for specific patient emergencies. ( See Proposed Amended Complaint at 35 P58, 35 PP50-52, <sup>5</sup> 60 P146, 63 PP156-58, 64 P159, 66-67 PP163-164, 67-68 PP165-166; Proposed Pretrial Order at 21 P58, 21 PP 51-52, 43P146, 44-45 PP156-59, 46 PP163-164, 47-48 PP165-166.) Even so, the Proposed Amended Complaint represented a significant narrowing of the scope of plaintiffs' claims from that of the original complaint--a pleading that alleged a wide range of grievances involving the operation of San Juan County government and the SJHSD, <sup>6</sup> and sought the entry of sweeping declaratory judgments and writs of mandamus requiring, inter alia, a GAO <sup>7</sup> audit of federal funds expended in the county in [*1114] the previous ten years, an IRS audit of payroll tax withholding, the convening of [**16] a federal grand jury investigation, and the immediate seizure or sequestration of the defendant entities' financial records by the U.S. Marshal pending that investigation and the GAO and IRS audits. ( See Complaint, filed July 25, 2000 (dkt. no. 1), at 156 PP3, 5 (Prayer for Relief).)

HN7 A grievance involving a governmental unit is still a grievance,<sup>8</sup> but a grievance may or may not be "a claim upon which relief can be granted" in a judicial proceeding. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). In attempting to identify and define genuine issues for trial, court and counsel at pretrial undertook to parse the Part I Plaintiffs' allegations in search of viable legal claims. (See Transcript of Hearing, dated November 14, 2002 ("Tr. 11/14/02"), passim; Transcript of Hearing, dated November 15, 2002 ("Tr. 11/15/02"), passim.)

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS

[*1115] Dr. Steven MacArthur, M.D.

Dr. Steven MacArthur, M.D. is a licensed physician specializing in obstetrics and gynecology. By 1999, he had been in practice in his specialty for about eighteen years (though not in active practice for at least the prior year <sup>9</sup> ). On or about December 9, 1999, Dr. MacArthur requested full provisional one-year privileges to practice medicine at health care facilities operated by the SJHSD, including the Blanding Urgent Care Center, Blanding Birthing Center, Monument Valley Clinic, Monticello Clinic and San Juan Hospital, the only hospital facility located in San Juan <sup>5</sup> Part I of the Proposed Amended Complaint includes two series of paragraphs numbered 50 through 58 at pages 34 and 35, and a second sequence of paragraphs 125-168 at pages 54-69; the Proposed Pretrial Order incorporates two similar sequences at pages 20-21 and 38-48, reflective of the fact that counsel simply reiterated almost all of the allegations of Part I of the Proposed Amended Complaint as "Plaintiffs' Statement of Contested Issues of Fact" in Section 5 of the Proposed Pretrial Order.

In this Memorandum Decision & Order, for the sake of clarity, any citations to these numbered paragraphs in either document refer to both the page and paragraph number(s) of the reference.

<sup>6</sup> ( See, e.g., Complaint (Verified), filed July 25, 2000 (dkt. no. 1), at 141 P472 ("County Commissioners have laughed at Taxpayers who sought to have San Juan County Commissioners account for what they are spending [and] notice budget [**17] items prior to meetings by at least 24 hours."); id. at 150-151 P 514 ("San Juan County has treated the taxpayers with disdain and disrespect and laughed at those taxpayers bringing to the County Commission's attention the statutory provisions the taxpayers believed the County was violating.").

<sup>7</sup> Apparently referring to the General Accounting Office (now the Government Accountability Office). See What is GAO?, at <http://www.gao.gov/about/what.html>.

<sup>8</sup> Cf. U.S. Const., Amend. I ("Congress shall make no law. . . abridging . . . the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."). "The First Amendment . . . guarantees the [**18] right to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." White v. Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1227 (9th Cir. 2000) (internal quotation marks omitted).

<sup>9</sup> Tr. 11/14/02, at 6:16-18 (Ms. Rose.).

County.<sup>10</sup> The SJHSD did not grant Dr. MacArthur full provisional one-year privileges within thirty days after his request, as contemplated by the SJHSD medical staff bylaws. Nor did it deny them.

Instead, SJHSD administrators (defendants Bradford and Dr. James Redd) granted him two-week "temporary" practice privileges allowing him to treat at least a limited number of patients at SJHSD facilities, and these "temporary" privileges were extended twice, through February 2, 2000.<sup>11</sup>

Dr. MacArthur exercised his "temporary" privileges in providing care to several patients at SJHSD facilities; he also participated with another physician in a delivery by caesarian section in November or December of 1999. In doing so, Dr. MacArthur alleges that he encountered problems involving the availability, quality and sterility of medical instruments and equipment, and some resistance--even antagonism--on the part of SJHSD nurses and support staff in treating his patients. He was further troubled by rumors that cast doubt upon his background, professional integrity and expertise, and a local newspaper report that his privileges had been "lifted" by the SJHSD, when in fact no formal determination of his request had yet been made.

On or about February 2, 2000, the SJHSD did not [**21] further extend his "temporary" privileges, and had not yet acted on his requests for full provisional privileges. At that point, the delay as to full provisional privileges was explained on the basis that required documentation was missing from his application packet (viz., a copy of his medical license and DEA dispensing license), documentation which he believed had been furnished and in any event was readily available and easily verified.

By February of 2000, Dr. MacArthur had become apprehensive that his request for full provisional privileges may ultimately be denied, albeit for questionable, perhaps even pretextual reasons, and that his "temporary" privileges would soon expire and might not be further extended. He did not press the privileges issue with the SJHSD on or after February 2, 2000. Dr. MacArthur decided to move his medical practice to Ely, Nevada, and did not further pursue his request for full provisional practice privileges at the SJHSD facilities. ( See Proposed Pretrial Order at 37 P199.)

Dr. MacArthur now contends that his requests for full provisional one-year privileges were deferred in violation of his constitutional right as a licensed physician to pursue [**22] his profession through use of publicly-sponsored medical facilities, and for pretextual reasons (viz., "missing" documents), the real reasons being (1) discriminatory intent based upon his age (over 40), his associations with Ms. Lyman (gender), and Jewish and Mexican-American physicians (Drs. Penn and Mena), and his reporting of remarks concerning Dr. Penn; and (2) the intent to limit his competition with other SJHSD medical staff and contract physicians, none of whom are OB/GYN specialists, in serving the needs of women patients in San Juan County. He seeks an award of "damages in excess of $ 3.5 million dollars and attorney fees" to compensate him for the loss of income anticipated from an estimated ten years' practice in the San Juan County market, resulting from the failure of the SJHSD defendants to grant him full provisional privileges as he requested, and the conduct of those individuals who propagated rumors spreading

---

<sup>10</sup> The next nearest hospital facility to San Juan Hospital in Monticello, Utah is about 65 miles away to the north (Moab) or the east (Cortez, Colorado), and about 85 miles from Blanding. Shiprock [**19] Hospital in Shiprock, New Mexico, is between 65 to 85 miles from southern San Juan County. ( SeeProposed Pretrial Order at 19 P39.)

<sup>11</sup> On December 23, 1999, Dr. MacArthur was informed by Cleal Bradford of the SJHSD that he had been granted "temporary" privileges, which would last from December 23 through January 5, 2000, while his request for full provisional privileges was being considered. According to the defendants, when Dr. MacArthur first discussed his "temporary" privileges with Mr. Bradford, Bradford asked Dr. MacArthur to specify the number of patients that Dr. MacArthur thought he would treat during the temporary privilege period. When Dr. MacArthur indicated that it would be difficult to estimate exactly, Bradford told MacArthur to increase his estimate to cover any potential but unplanned patients. Defendants insist that Dr. MacArthur's "temporary privileges" did not carry any limitation [**20] on the actual number of patients that Dr. MacArthur could see during the "temporary" privileges period--but the same may not be true of the number of patients he could treat at SJHSD facilities. On January 10, 2000, Dr. MacArthur's "temporary" privileges were extended from January 5, 2000, through January 25, 2000. On January 26, 2000, Dr. MacArthur was again granted an extension through February 2, 2000.

defamatory falsehoods concerning his background, integrity or professionalism. (Proposed Amended Complaint at 94-95.)

Ms. Michele Lyman, P.A.

Plaintiff Michele Lyman resides in Blanding, Utah, and has been practicing as a licensed Physician's Assistant since [**23] 1996. She initially worked for the SJHSD at Montezuma Creek in 1995, completing her preceptorship under the supervision of Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, M.D. in 1996. She then became employed by and practiced under the supervision of Dr. James Redd, M.D., who was in private practice in Blanding; [*1116] she continued to be supervised by Dr. Jones as a "back-up" as well. While working for Dr. Redd, Ms. Lyman regularly covered Dr. Redd's clinic, and providing some coverage for the Blanding nursing home, the Blanding Birthing Center, the San Juan Hospital emergency room, and the Blanding Urgent Care Center, a SJHSD facility where she alleges she enjoyed full SJHSD medical staff privileges,<sup>12</sup> and was paid by the District for her "on-call" services. ( See Proposed Pretrial Order at 29 P132; Tr. 11/15/02, at 3:4-5:13 (Ms. Rose).) Ms. Lyman ceased working under Dr. Redd's supervision on or about October 7, 1998, but continued providing coverage for the SJHSD through November, 1998. She alleges that she was effectively denied her staff privileges at the Blanding Urgent Care Center within three days after leaving Dr. Redd, and thereafter experienced considerable difficulty in exercising her privileges at [**24] SJHSD facilities, even though she was working in Monticello under the supervision of two other Monticello physicians having SJHSD staff privileges, viz., Dr. Nathaniel Penn, M.D. from November 1998 until July 1999 (when Dr. Penn had moved his practice to Moab),<sup>13</sup> and Dr. Robert Mena, M.D., from July to November 1999 (when Dr. Mena's SJHSD privileges expired). In early 1999, Ms. Lyman and Dr. Penn opened a Blanding Family Practice clinic; Ms. Lyman eventually purchased that clinic from Dr. Penn and operated as a "state-approved off-site <sup>12</sup> While working under the supervision of Drs. Redd and Jones at the Blanding Urgent Care Center, plaintiffs allege that "Mrs. Lyman did the following patient procedures:

---

- a) Took care of acute head trauma's; and,
  - b) Put in chest tubes; and,
  - c) Delivered a couple of babies; and,
  - d) Sutured cuts; and,
  - e) Dealt with heart attacks; and,
  - f) Informed families of tragedies; and,
  - g) Ordered tests; and,
  - h) Prescribed medications and shots; and,
  - i) Prescribed tests to be run on the patients; and,
  - j) Admitted and discharged patients; and,
  - k) Consulted [**25] other specialists by phone; and,
  - l) Treated patients with infectious diseases; and,
  - m) Referred patients to the San Juan Hospital and to the other district facilities,
- all without a Dr. at her side and without on site supervision, and with no Dr. even in town available for assistance.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 55-57 P129.) However, plaintiffs then allege that "Mrs. Lyman and Dr. Key, before he left, informed Dr. Redd and Dr. Jones that this practice of leaving Mrs. Lyman without either Dr. on call was wrong, and that the practice should be changed," (id. at 57 P130), and now characterize that practice as a "Violation of Medical ByLaws and State laws and regs." ( Id. at 57.)

<sup>13</sup> ( SeeProposed Amended Complaint at 76 P203 (In "April, 1999, after working in Monticello under Dr. Penn, Ms. Lyman began a new practice *in Blanding*under the off-site direction of Dr. Nathaniel Penn."); Proposed Pretrial Order at 52 P203 (same).)

"independent rural clinic" for three years, until she in turn sold her practice. (Proposed Amended Complaint at 14, 96.)

In December 1999, Ms. Lyman requested a renewal of her SJHSD staff privileges (to be exercised under supervision by Dr. MacArthur), which request was delayed, purportedly because of "missing" documentation in her personnel file, e.g., CPR certification cards, that [**26] Ms. Lyman is certain had been properly issued and were current through at least December of 1999. She furnished copies of the missing cards, but alleges that the dates on those cards had been altered.

By the end of March, 2000, formal administrative action on her request for privileges was still being deferred by the SJHSD until the CPR certification card issue was resolved. According to the [*1117] pleadings, from November 1999 until sometime in 2001, Ms. Lyman may not have had a supervising physician practicing in San Juan County who had staff privileges with the SJHSD, except for the brief period between December 23, 1999 and February 2, 2000, when Dr. MacArthur exercised "temporary" SJHSD privileges.<sup>14</sup> At the time of pretrial, she was again being supervised by Dr. Jones. ( See Tr. 11/15/02, at 24:9-25, 26:7-11 (Ms. Rose).)

According to the plaintiffs,

The District employees as a pattern sought to restrain competition, there was inadequate impartiality in 'peer review' or in issuing privileges since the people issuing the privileges are usually in economic competition with those they are giving privileges. Privileges for Mrs. Lyman were de facto denied by nursing personnel and medical staff without any action by the District governance board.

(Proposed Pretrial Order at 14.) As Ms. Lyman's counsel explained at pretrial,

She's complaining that she could not get the privileges at the hospital when she was working under physicians that had privileges. Her patients she would send over to the clinic, they would not get shots. At one point she was told she couldn't order labs or x-rays. At one point she was told she couldn't set foot in the facility.

(Tr. 11/15/02, at 14-19 (Ms. Rose).)

In addition to the alleged interference with her practice privileges at SJHSD facilities after October 1998, Ms. Lyman alleges harassment and intimidation of, and denial of health care services to her patients by Dr. Redd and other SJHSD support staff, which [**28] she contends was intended to inhibit competition by her with the SJHSD medical staff and contract providers. She also alleges a deliberate campaign of harassment conducted against her by Dr. Redd since she ceased working for him in October of 1998, intended to hinder and frustrate her professional practice, and cause her severe emotional distress. She contends that Dr. Redd created a misogynistic "hostile environment" in his own medical office in Blanding during the time that she worked under his supervision, and that her personal and professional reputation has suffered as a consequence of defamatory rumors, insinuations and accusations published to her patients and others by one or more of the defendants.

Ms. Lyman seeks an award of "damages in excess of Six (6) Million Dollars" as compensation for "unfair practices" interfering with the exercise of her practice privileges and he relationship with her patients, the harassment and intimidation of her patients, "the terrorism of her children, and herself, and the spreading of rumors that equate to nothing less than criminal defamation for both Michele Lyman and Dr. MacArthur." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 96-98.) She also seeks injunctive [**29] relief "to protect patients of Mrs. Lyman and her supervising physician, and give Mrs. Lyman's patients uniform and considerate care with District staff sensitive to the unique needs of the patient," and allowing Ms. Lyman "to minimally go into any facility to at least speak [*1118] and associate with her patient, regardless of whether she has privileges at the District." According to plaintiff, "ordering the [SJHSD] governance board to make physicians and chiefs of staff accountable for patient complaints and treat all medical providers and physician's equally and uniformly is not contradictory to good public policy." ( Id. at 93-94.)

<sup>14</sup> At pretrial, however, counsel insisted Drs. Penn and Mena continued to supervise Ms. Lyman at a distance even after Dr. MacArthur left for Nevada--concededly doing do at that point without SJHSD privileges--and that when Drs. Penn and Mena no longer supervised her, Ms. Lyman "went to work under Dr. Jones," and therefore "there was never a time that she wasn't without [**27] a supervising physician." (Tr. 11/15/02, at 25:1-26:11 (Ms. Rose).)

Ms. Helen Valdez

The claims of plaintiff Helen Valdez arise out of a single event that took place on April 14, 1999. On that date, Ms. Valdez, accompanied by her sister-in-law, Charlene Gonzales, went to the San Juan Hospital emergency room at about 8:08 a.m. At that time, she was suffering from what was subsequently diagnosed as acute diverticulitis; she was experiencing symptoms including vomiting, cramping, diarrhea and pain, and felt very weak and tired. Ms. Valdez told the emergency room personnel "that she'd been sick, [and] needed to see a doctor." <sup>15</sup> **30 She assisted in filling out a typed patient admittance form, furnishing identification and health insurance information to an emergency room clerk named Judy Kascheaiveaz. She signed the form, as did the clerk. At that point, Ms. Valdez had not described her symptoms to the clerk. <sup>16</sup> Ms. Valdez became ill and went to the lavatory, and when she returned, she observed a nurse in the emergency room, Lori Wallace, R.N., tell the clerk that "she could set both her patients up in the emergency room for the physician," referring to Ms. Valdez and Michael Bailey, another individual who had come to the emergency room with an injured foot. <sup>17</sup>

While Ms. Valdez went to the lavatory a second time, her sister-in-law, Ms. Gonzales, says that she overheard the nurse, Ms. Wallace, tell the clerk to "tell Helen [Ms. Valdez] to go to the doctor's **31 office. Dr. Penn's office would open at 9:00." <sup>18</sup> Ms. Gonzales did not hear Ms. Wallace say anything else, and did not converse directly with Ms. Wallace about what she had overheard. <sup>19</sup>

Ms. Gonzalez related the overheard conversation to Ms. Valdez upon her return from the lavatory, and without any further conversation with Ms. Wallace, Ms. Kascheaiveaz, or other emergency room employees, Ms. Valdez left the emergency room, again accompanied by Ms. Gonzales. Instead of going to see her doctor at his office, Ms. Valdez went home. <sup>20</sup> At the time she left the emergency room, Ms. Valdez had not discussed her symptoms with Ms. Wallace or Ms. Kascheaiveaz, whom she had seen in the emergency room, <sup>21</sup> and had not yet seen or been examined by a physician.

[*1119] Her symptoms subsided for a day but then intensified, and three days later, Ms. Valdez went to the Blanding Urgent Care Clinic, where she was examined by Dr. James Redd, M.D. Dr. Redd diagnosed her condition as acute diverticulitis, for which he prescribed oral antibiotics and a strict liquid diet. <sup>22</sup>

---

<sup>15</sup> (Deposition of Charleen Gonzales, dated January 7, 2002, at 12:22-25.)

<sup>16</sup> (Deposition of Helen Valdez, dated December 6, 2001, at 18:11-22.)

<sup>17</sup> (Id. at 17:3-18:10.) At that point, according to Ms. Valdez, she had not spoken with Ms. Wallace and did not know whether or not the nurse "knew anything about [her] symptoms or what was wrong." (Id. at 18:11-22.)

<sup>18</sup> (Deposition of Charlene Gonzales, dated January 7, 2002, at 14:7-17, 20:13-24.)

<sup>19</sup> (Id.)

<sup>20</sup> Ms. Valdez testified in deposition that she believes Dr. Penn was already at the San Juan Hospital on the morning of April 14th, and that Mr. Bailey, the other emergency room patient at that time, subsequently told her he was examined by Dr. Penn in the emergency room about five minutes after Ms. Valdez had left. (Deposition of Helen Valdez, dated December **32 6, 2001, at 19:15-20:18.)

<sup>21</sup> Ms. Valdez telephoned the emergency room before going there on the morning of April 14th, and briefly discussed her symptoms with a nurse, someone other than Ms. Wallace. (Id. at 18:14-17.)

<sup>22</sup> After leaving the San Juan Hospital emergency room on April 14th, Ms. Valdez did not attempt to contact her physician, Dr. Penn, because she believed he was out of town that weekend. (Id. at 26:15-22.) Nor did she try to contact Dr. Penn when her symptoms worsened after seeing Dr. Redd because she did not want to be admitted to San Juan Hospital for treatment. She chose to go to Cortez, Colorado instead. (Id. at 35:4-21.)

Ms. Valdez' condition did not improve significantly, and two days later she went to Cortez, Colorado, where she was hospitalized and placed on IV fluids and antibiotics. After receiving treatment in the Cortez hospital for several days, Ms. Valdez [**33] returned home. Within a few days, she became ill again, and this time was admitted to the University of Utah Hospital, where she was diagnosed as having an obstruction requiring immediate surgery. She underwent surgery, which apparently was successful.

To compensate for "the badge of inferiority she was made to wear as she left the facility she had sought help from, not being able to see the provider of her choice, [and] not being able to feel as though she could return to a facility in Monticello for fear of Laurie Wallace," Ms. Valdez seeks an award of "damages of $ 350,000 and attorneys fees." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 92-93.)

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANTS

Besides the SJHSD and its parent entity, San Juan County,<sup>23</sup> the Part I Plaintiffs have named several individual defendants, originally and in the Proposed Amended Complaint: Commissioner Tyron Lewis, Commissioner Bill Redd, Craig Halls, Reid Wood, Cleal Bradford, Roger Atcity, John Lewis, John Housekeeper, Karen Adams, Patsy Shumway, Dr. James Redd, Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, Dr. Manfred Nelson, Richard Bailey, Marilee Bailey, Ora Lee Black, Gary Holliday, Laurie Schafer a/k/a "Laurie Shafer," [**34]<sup>24</sup> Lori Wallace a/k/a "Laurie Walker,"<sup>25</sup> Carla Grimshaw, Gloria Yanito, and Julie Bronson.

[*1120] The County Commissioners

By the time of pretrial, two San Juan County Commissioners remained as defendants in this action in their individual capacities: Bill Redd and Ty Lewis. Both apparently were also named as defendants for their conduct as SJHSD Board members.<sup>26</sup> Plaintiffs allege very few specific facts concerning Commissioners Redd or Lewis individually;<sup>27</sup> instead, their allegations are pleaded against the Commission or the County:

<sup>23</sup> HN8 San Juan County is organized as a political subdivision of the State of Utah under the Utah Constitution and Utah Code Ann. §§ 17-50-101 et seq. (2001). The SJHSD is organized as a special service district under the Utah Code Ann. § 17A-2-1301 et seq. (2004), and is funded in part through tax revenues. San Juan County appoints the members of the SJHSD governance board. See Utah Code Ann. § 17A-2-1326 (2001).

<sup>24</sup> Ms. Schafer was omitted from the caption of the original Complaint and apparently was added by a document entitled "Amendments to the Complaint Corrections of Errors," filed August 1, 2000 (dkt. no. 3). See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) ("A party may amend the party's pleading once as a matter of course at any time before a responsive pleading is served ...."). She was again omitted from the captions of both the Proposed Amended Complaint and the Proposed Pretrial Order, in each instance without explanation. Nevertheless, she appears to have been included among the defendants represented by Mr. Harrison in preparation of the Proposed Pretrial Order.

<sup>25</sup> The captions of the original Complaint, the [**35] Proposed Amended Complaint and the Proposed Pretrial Order refer to a defendant named "Laurie Walker"--in reality, Lori Wallace, R.N., a former SJHSD employee who was working in the San Juan Hospital emergency room on April 14, 1999 when plaintiff Helen Valdez was there seeking treatment. ( See Answer to Complaint by Laurie Walker (Lori Wallace), filed September 25, 2000 (dkt. no. 46) (name correction noted on docket).)

<sup>26</sup> Commissioner Redd was a member of the SJHSD Board for a brief period in late 1998 and early 1999, and Commissioner Lewis was a member from late 1998 to mid-1999. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 67 P2.)

<sup>27</sup> "County Commissioner Ty Lewis made the statement and determination in a public meeting that the County would drive out qualified private competitors," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 29 P135); "in [**37] areas of health care, Commissioner Ty Lewis is against a private entity that would or will compete with the District." ( Id. at 20 P50; Proposed Amended Complaint at 34 P50 (same)).

106. The County Commission and District Board, by not policing and supervising the medical staff and leaving carte blanche decisions on who gets on staff and does not get on staff, contributes directly to the private use of the staff's use of the governmental processes.

***

110. The lack of the District Board or County Commission [**36] in taking action to supercede medical staff and head of medical staff privilege-granting decisions, and deliberate indifference to investigating complaints, holding hearings, and exercising their government authority to foster economic competition as mandated by statutes, falls outside any 'political' action, and directly is intended to control the business processes of competitors of District employee physicians and P.A.s and those medical staff physicians directly contracting with the District.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 42-43 PP106, 110; Proposed Pretrial Order at 31 PP146, 150 (same). See Proposed Amended Complaint at 34 P52 ("The County and District had a de facto policy of deliberate indifference to those who complained of suffering from Dr. Redd and other District staff members.").)

County Attorney Craig Halls

As to San Juan County Attorney Craig Halls, the Part I Plaintiffs note that he "is the brother in law of Rick Bailey, District CEO and County Commission administrator." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 21 § 51.)<sup>28</sup> With respect to certain administrative problems at the San Juan Hospital identified by the Utah Department of Health at or about the time of the event complained of by Ms. Valdez, plaintiffs state that "the Health District and County Commissioners were informed of these problems in a Board meeting, with an executive session attended by Commissioner Bill Redd and County Attorney Craig Halls." (Id. at 60 P236; Proposed Amended Complaint at 87 P236 (same).) More generally, the Part I Plaintiffs allege that the County Commissioners, County Administrator and County Attorney "behaved in a deliberately indifferent manner, failed to adequately investigate the problems Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur identified in the District, did not hold hearings [*1121] on the matters, did not enforce, [**38] or take any actions to rectify the situations identified by Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 16-17.) "A pattern of deliberated indifference as a policy was exhibited by the County Commission, County Attorney, Health District board, administrators and medical staff." (Id. at 17.)

SJHSD Board Members: Atcity, Lewis, Housekeeper, Adams, Shumway & Holliday

Defendants Roger Atcity, John Lewis, John Housekeeper, Karen Adams, Patsy Shumway and Gary Holliday are or at relevant times were members of the Board of Trustees of the San Juan Health Services District. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 67 P3.) Defendant Cleal Bradford was also a member of the SJHSD Board from approximately February 1999 until June 1999, and from approximately June 22, 1999 until April 2001, Bradford served as executive director of the SJHSD. (Id.)

In the Proposed Amended Complaint, the Part [**39] I Plaintiffs plead very few factual allegations involving specific SJHSD Board members.<sup>29</sup> The Proposed Amended Complaint alleges nothing regarding intentionally

<sup>28</sup> Plaintiffs assert that "Cleat Bradford and James Redd had access to District board members and County Commissioners and the County Attorney as relatives and close friends, in a highly rural and isolated area," whereas plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman did not. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 32 PP151-152.)

<sup>29</sup> Plaintiffs allege that

223. [On] December 21, 1999 Ms. Lyman Attended San Juan Health Care Services board Meeting to discuss and attempt to resolve her problems with SJHSD staff with the SJHSD board. She requested to have a public meeting so the public could fully understand the issues involved in the health care system their tax dollars support.

224. SJHSD governance board chairman Roger Atcity stated that he and SJHSD Patsy Shumway and SJHSD Karen Adams had discussed the situation before the official meeting and had decided that the grievance meeting with SJHSD discriminatory acts or other culpable individual conduct of defendants Atcity, Shumway, Housekeeper,<sup>30</sup> John Lewis, and Adams. Other than noting his status as a SJHSD Board member, the Proposed Amended Complaint says nothing at all about defendant Gary Holliday.

Rather than addressing alleged conduct of individual Board members, the Plaintiffs appear to be complaining of alleged inaction by the Board as a Board: "The governance [*1122] board displayed a pattern of not holding doctors or others accountable for interfering in doctor/patient relations. The County was aware of the problems and did nothing to investigate, hold hearings, or resolve the provider and patients' and public's concerns as evidenced in petitions with hundreds of signatures." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 14; see id. at 31 P149 ("District Board members and CEOs stated they entrusted medical staff privileging to the medical staff or head of medical staff.").) In plaintiffs' view:

The District has illegally operated the district by having County Commissioners as board members, by not holding doctors accountable for violations of the law, by not following their own medical by-laws, by not applying policies [**42] equally across the board to all persons, by not overriding letters or memos of doctors that set policy, without board approval, while stifling economic competition in the area.

(Id. at 74.)

The SJHSD Administrators: Wood, Bailey & Bradford

Like their allegations against the SJHSD Board members, plaintiffs' claims against SJHSD administrators Wood, Bailey and Bradford are largely footed upon allegations of inaction in response to plaintiffs' grievances:

- 109. Reid Wood and Rick Bailey did nothing to assist Mrs. Lyman in exercising privileges with the District that the District Board never officially and formally terminated.
- 110. Reid Wood, Cleal Bradford, and Rick Bailey as CEOs never held the medical Staff chiefs accountable for policies effecting services of P.A.s, whether written or de facto.
- 111. Reid Wood, Cleal Bradford, and Rick Bailey as CEOs never contradicted the medical Staff chiefs for policies effecting services of Michele Lyman, whether written or de facto.

governance board would be private. Such a decision being made before the meeting and without public input appears to be in violation of Utah's Open Meeting law. (cmplt. # 162-168).

(Proposed Amended Complaint [**40] at 83-84 PP223-224; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 57 P223-224 (same).)

John Housekeeper did do some investigation for Mrs. Lyman, but labeled Dr. MacArthur a troublemaker because Dr. MacArthur was perceived by him to be associated with his current counsel in a lawyer/client relationship when Dr. MacArthur appeared at the District Board meeting in December, 1999.

(Id. at 22.)

Mrs. Valdez, Dr. MacArthur, Mrs. Lyman informed the District of their problems and to no avail. Dr. MacArthur and others reporting problems to Board member Patsy Shumway and John Housekeeper were labeled either troublemakers or Dr. Redd detractors.

(Proposed Pretrial Order at 14.)

The Defendant community leaders Rick Bailey, Ty Lewis, John Lewis, Karen Adams, Cleal Bradford, with the power and authority over the entire district, did nothing to investigate, find and hold accountable the responsible parties, and carried out a state identified de facto policy that diminished the standard of care for the patients.

(Id. at 27 P112(b).)

<sup>30</sup> Concerning Mr. Housekeeper, the Proposed Amended Complaint alleges that Ms. Lyman "suffered from Dr. Redd driving by her home honking his horn," and relates that "the horn honking [**41] subsided notably when John Housekeeper was notified as board member that it was going on and was asked to tell Dr. Redd to stop the honking." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 17, 22-23.) Plainly this scenario would not serve as a basis for any liability on the part of Mr. Housekeeper.

112. ....

b. The Defendant community leaders Rick Bailey, Ty Lewis, John Lewis, Karen Adams, Cleal Bradford, with the power and authority over the entire district, did nothing to investigate, find and hold accountable the [**43] responsible parties, and carried out a state identified de facto policy that diminished the standard of care for the patients.

****

126. CEO's Cleal Bradford, Reid Wood, and Rick Bailey did nothing to help these doctors [MacArthur, Penn & Mena] have improved working conditions within the district, or renew their licenses or privileges. All three doctors were not employees of the District when supervising Mrs. Lyman.

****

188. Reid Wood and all other CEO'S in this complaint, ignored Mrs. Lyman's attempts to rectify her situation, or exacerbated it.

****

190. December 10, 1998 - Mrs. Lyman called SJHSD administrator Reid Wood twice to see if she could resolve some of the issues she was having with the nurses at the hospital since joining Dr. Penn and to resolve some of the problems with the clinic. Reid Wood did not return her calls. The third Mrs. Lyman called she was told by Carla Grimshaw that he was out of the office.

(Proposed Pretrial Order at 26-28 PP109-111, 112(b), 126; id. at 49 P188, 50 P190; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 71-72 PP188, 190 (same).)

[*1123] As for Mr. Bradford, the plaintiffs describe the process by which he granted temporary practice privileges to Dr. MacArthur, [**44] (Proposed Pretrial Order at 25-26 PP98-101, 104-105), and then assert that "CEO Cleal Bradford made the determination in granting Dr. MacArthur limited temporary privileges that it was best for the District if referrals to the District facilities came from District doctors. Dr. MacArthur was not employed by the District." ( Id. at 29 P134.)<sup>31</sup> Finally, plaintiffs assert:

151. Cleal Bradford and James Redd had access to District board members and County Commissioners and the County Attorney as relatives and close friends, in a highly rural and isolated area.

152. Dr. MacArthur and Michele Lyman did not have this familial and close friend relationship with Commissioners and District Board members.

153. Cleal Bradford who signed off on privileges as the District CEO lobbied the Board and County Commission, and medical staff, in meetings with a plurality of the decision-making body, without Mrs. Lyman or Dr. MacArthur being present.

( Id. at 32 PP151-153; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 44 PP111-113 (same).)

What conceivable cause of action the latter allegations would pertain to is not readily apparent. The balance of the allegations against Wood, Bailey and Bradford assert a failure to take affirmative steps to investigate and remedy plaintiffs' grievances involving members of the SJHSD medical and support staff, similar to plaintiffs' claim against the individual SJHSD Board members.

Laurie Schafer (a/k/a Laurie Shafer)

Laurie Schafer served at relevant times as Patient Care Director for the SJHSD. Plaintiffs allege: (1) that "Dr. MacArthur had an incident report allegedly filed against him by Marilee Bailey, Julie, Bronson, Laurie Shafer, Cleal Bradford that was never discussed with him or placed in his District file, and is a report that he considers to be untrue." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 25 P96); (2) that "Mrs. Shafer noticed the dates [on Ms. Lyman's CPR cards]

<sup>31</sup> Plaintiffs also allege that "Dr. MacArthur had an incident report allegedly filed against him by Marilee Bailey, Julie Bronson, Laurie Shafer, Cleal Bradford that was never discussed [**45] with him or placed in his District file, and is a report that he considers to be untrue." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 39 P88; Proposed Pretrial Order at 25 P96 (same).)

were in error in medical staff meeting," that "the Medical staff and Cleal Bradford and Laurie Shafer discussed Mrs. Lyman's CPR card problems of wrong [**46] dates without Mrs. Lyman being present," that "Mrs. Lyman's CPR cards were reviewed and found to be appropriate on more than one occasion by Carla Grimshaw and Laurie Shafer," and that "the medical staff and Cleal Bradford and Laurie Shafer unanimously decided to publish the altered cards to the American Heart Association by vote of the medical staff, who was considering privileges for Mrs. Lyman, without Mrs. Lyman being present." ( Id. at 32 P164-165, 34 P174); (3) "The medical staff, Cleal Bradford, Laurie Shafer, Carla Grimshaw failed to notify Dr. MacArthur of any missing documents in his application packet." ( Id. at 35 P182); (4) "After, Dr. MacArthur missed this February 2000 meeting, Cleal Bradford, Laurie Shafer, Dr. Redd met with San Juan Record editor Bill Boyle and discussed Dr. MacArthur's privileges with Mr. Boyle. Dr. MacArthur's privileges was private information." ( Id. at 36 P195); (5) "Mrs. Lyman was told that her friendship with Laurie Shafer would be over as she knew it if Mrs. Lyman associated herself with Dr. Penn." ( Id. at 47 P137; and (5) on one recent occasion when Ms. Lyman was treating a patient at the Blanding Birthing Center under Dr. Jones' supervision, [**47] Ms. Shafer allegedly told "Mrs. Lyman and another nurse of Dr. Jones that they would have to leave. Mrs. Lyman and the nurse finished caring for the patient." ( Id. at 63 P254). Further, they allege that on December 16, 1998, Ms. Lyman was told she did not have SJHSD privileges and that SJHSD staff were not to take orders from her. "Ms. Lyman asked Ms. Yanito who gave her this order and she stated that Laurie Schafer and Dr. Redd," ( id. at 48-49 P 170), and that "Laurie Schafer called later in the day and stated that Ms. Lyman could use the lab and xray only during Dr. Penn's office hours, otherwise Ms. Lyman did not have privileges." ( Id. at 49 P186 (emphasis in original). See Proposed Amended Complaint at 39 P88; 46-49PP 132-133, 138, 142, 150; 51 P163; 59 P137; 69-71 PP170, 186; 91-92 P254 (same).)

Marilee Bailey, R.N.

At relevant times, defendant Marilee Bailey, R.N., worked as a nurse on the SJHSD support staff. Plaintiffs allege that Ms. Bailey is the wife of defendant Richard Bailey, and that like Laurie Schafer, "Dr. MacArthur had an incident report allegedly filed against him by Marilee Bailey, Julie Bronson, Laurie Shafer, Cleal Bradford that was never discussed with him [**48] or placed in his District file, and is a report that he considers to be untrue." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 25 P96; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 39 P88 (same).)

Ora Lee Black

Plaintiffs allege that "Ora Lee Black, as manager of Blanding clinic and birthing center, posted a paper on the walls within site of the patients stating that Mrs. Lyman had no privileges at SJHSD. Later the limited privileges of lab and exray [sic] were extended to her for her patients as required by State law," and that SJHSD "Staff had previously voted for her privileges and then the County, Board, and medical staff did nothing while District staff Ora Lee Black, Dr. Redd, Gloria Yanito denied her the same. Some privileges as to labs and exrays [sic] were eventually restored." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 49 P18733 54 P 209; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 71 P187 (same).) Further,

September 16, 1999 -Etta (Ms. Lyman's secretary) was told by Ora Lee Black that Ms. Lyman would not be allowed to order labs until Ms. Lyman sent a letter to Dr. Redd stating who her supervising physician was. (Ms. Lyman had already sent a letter to administration stating that the State DOPL had approved Dr. Penn in Moab as [**49] her supervising physician and Dr. Robert Dr. Mena in Monticello as her back up supervising physician as he was closer than Dr. Penn and could back up any emergencies for admits for Ms. Lyman at the San Juan Hospital). By then, Dr. Dr. Mena had quit the San Juan Health Care Services as an employee and had started a private practice. (cmplt. # 149).

( Id. at 55 P213; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 79-80 P213 (same).)

Carla Grimshaw

Carla Grimshaw is a SJHSD employee. Plaintiffs allege that "less than 24 hours prior to the February 2, 2000 medical staff meeting, Carla Grimshaw called Mrs. Lyman's office to invite Mrs. Lyman and Dr. [*1125] MacArthur to that meeting";<sup>32</sup> that "Carla Grimshaw delivered copies of Mrs. Lyman's file to her," and that "Mrs. Lyman and Carla Grimshaw, custodian for the records, acknowledge the CPR cards were missing from Mrs. Lyman's credentialing files while in the District's custody"; that "Mrs. Lyman's CPR cards were reviewed and found to be appropriate on more than one occasion by Carla Grimshaw and Laurie Shafer"; that "Carla Grimshaw, records custodian, stated that [Dr. MacArthur's] medical license and DEA license was missing," and "allegedly wrote a note to [**50] Mr. Bradford saying Dr. MacArthur was missing only his DEA license and State of Utah Medical License," but that "the medical staff, Cleal Bradford, Laurie Shafer, Carla Grimshaw failed to notify Dr. MacArthur of any missing documents in his application packet." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 26 P102, 32 P156, 33 P161, 34 P170, 35 P182, 184, 36 P191; see also Proposed Amended Complaint at 44-50 PP114-159 ("Credentialing Document Problems").) Plaintiffs also recount that on May 5, 1999,

Andrea Bianchini (Ms. Lyman's secretary) faxed Ms. Lyman's ACLS, PALS and BLS heart resuscitation American Heart Association certification cards to Judy at the hospital at the administration's request. Dr. Penn and Ms. Lyman have been requesting her privileges be restored through Reid Wood. Andrea also called Carla Grimshaw to make sure that the certifications have reached her. Grimshaw stated that the faxed cards have arrived and that Medical staff reviewed the certifications, found them in order, and the packet has been placed in her personnel file.

( Id. at 53 P207; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 77 P207.)

Gloria Yanito

Plaintiffs allege that on December 16, 1998 - On this day, Ms. Lyman attempted to send a patient to the E.R. in Blanding for treatment. As soon as the patient got to Blanding, Christine Singer (who began working for Dr. Penn in December 1998) took a call from Gloria Yanito, RN at the Blanding Urgent Care. Ms. Yanito stated that Ms. Lyman did not have privileges and that Ms. Lyman "can not give orders of any kind or use any of the county facilities". Ms. Singer then told Ms. Lyman, with several witnesses sitting in the office. Ms. Lyman immediately called Ms. Yanito back and asked Yanito to repeat the Message. Yanito repeated, "you do not have privileges. We are not supposed to take any orders from you and you are not allowed to set foot in any of the county facilities". Ms. Lyman asked Ms. Yanito who gave her this order and she stated that Laurie Schafer and Dr. Redd. Ms. Lyman then attempted to call Laurie Schafer and [**52] was told she was not in. Ms. Lyman spoke with Carla Grimshaw and told her she wanted this order in writing, Grimshaw stated that she would let Laurie know. Ms. Lyman also attempted to call Reid Wood, he was not in. (Cmplt. # 130)

( Proposed Pretrial Order at 48-49 P184; Proposed Amended Complaint at 69-70 P170 (same).) They further allege that Ms. Lyman had been granted SJHSD privileges, but "then the County, Board, [*1126] and medical staff did nothing while District staff Ora Lee Black, Dr. Redd, Gloria Yanito denied her the same," (id. at 54 P209), apparently referring to the December 16, 1998 conversation with respect to Ms. Yanito.

Julie Bronson

Plaintiffs allege that Julie Bronson, a nurse employed by the SJHSD, circulated a false rumor that Dr. MacArthur, inter alia, had previously lost practice privileges due to a felony conviction:

<sup>32</sup> On "February 1, 2000 Carla Grimshaw calls Ms. Lyman's office to say that Ms. Lyman and Dr. [*51] MacArthur need to be at Medical staff Meeting in the a.m. at 0800. Ms. Grimshaw states nothing about their privileges being an agenda item, or that medical staff would making any decisions about those privileges." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 58-59 P229.)

January 31, 2000- Louisa Lyman, of the Utah State Public Health system calls Ms. Lyman's office and states that nurse Julie Bronson has said that Dr. MacArthur lost his privileges to perform, epidurals due to a felony conviction, that during a delivery the nurse came to Dr. MacArthur in the Dr's lounge and told him that the OB was ready to push and he [**53] purportedly said, "I'm going to have an orgasm", and that Dr. MacArthur spent time in prison for tax evasion- All of which is totally untrue and without any foundation whatsoever. Louisa called her office and first spoke to Christine. Ms. Lyman called back and Louisa Lyman repeated this story. Ms. Lyman stated the story was untrue.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 84-85 P228; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 58 P228 (same).) They also allege, as noted above, that "Dr. MacArthur had an incident report allegedly filed against him by Marilee Bailey, Julie Bronson, Laurie Shafer, Cleal Bradford that was never discussed with him or placed in his District file, and is a report that he considers to be untrue." ( Id. at 39 P88; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 25 P96 (same).)

Lori Wallace, R.N. a/k/a Laurie Walker

As summarized above, Plaintiffs allege that on April 14, 1999, plaintiff Helen Valdez (accompanied by her sister-in-law, Charleen Gonzales) came to the San Juan Hospital emergency room, seeking medical care for an illness later diagnosed as acute diverticulitis. At that time, SJHSD employee Lori Wallace, R.N., was working in the emergency room. While Ms. Valdez was in the hospital lavatory, [**54] she alleges that Ms. Gonzales overheard Lori Wallace tell the emergency room clerk "to go to Dr. Penn's clinic." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 23; Proposed Pretrial Order at 13;id. at 23 P81 ("Mrs. Valdez was told by Mrs. Gonzales that Nurse Wallace had told the receptionist that Dr. Penn's clinic was open and Mrs. Valdez should go to the clinic.")) Without any direct conversation with Lori Wallace, Ms. Valdez decided to leave the emergency room, again accompanied by Ms. Gonzales, and return home. Plaintiffs allege that Ms. Valdez "was turned away, when accompanied by her Mexican-American appearing sister-in-law, by nurse Laurie Wallace"; at the same time, plaintiffs allege that "the white young male with no insurance in the ER waiting area was seen by Dr. Penn almost immediately after Mrs. Valdez left." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 86 P232-233; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 22 P66 ("Mrs. Valdez' neighbor who was a white young male and had no insurance was seen immediately.")) Plaintiffs pleaded no other factual allegations against Ms. Wallace.

Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, M.D.

Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, M.D., is a licensed physician practicing in Blanding, Utah, who at relevant times has [**55] provided services under contract with the SJHSD. Plaintiffs allege that "For Mrs. Lyman's claims, at times the [SJHSD] medical staff consisted of Dr. Penn, Dr. Mena, Dr. Jones, Dr. Nelson, Dr. Cook, Dr. Redd." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 30-31 [*1127] P28; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 18 P28 (same).<sup>33</sup>) According to plaintiffs,

- 32. Dr. Redd and Dr. Jones and Dr. Cook and Dr. Nelson did not approve Mrs. Lyman having privileges unless her doctor was a medical staff member and then only if the physician was in the same town as she.
- 33. While the policy for P.A.s appears neutral, it effected only Michele Lyman in how it was applied, monitored, and carried out.
- 34. Mrs. Lyman had no other place to apply for hospital privileges.
- 35. Mrs. Lyman's patients at times stopped going to her as they needed to use the District emergency facilities for ailments and were told they could not.

(Id. at 31 PP32-35.) Plaintiff Lyman alleged that her privileges were "severely limited by Dr. Redd and Dr. Jones with no action by the board of directors," recounting a single conversation in mid-1999:

---

<sup>33</sup> According to plaintiffs, With the exceptions of Dr. Jones and a Monument Valley clinic doctor, all other physicians and P.A.'s within San Juan District are employees of San Juan District." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 20 P43.)

209. Dr. Penn and Ms. Lyman attended the Medical staff Meeting for June, 1999. Dr. Penn and Ms. Lyman requested [**56] full privileges be restored and Dr. Redd and Jones both stated that only if Dr. Penn was willing to sit in Blanding with Ms. Lyman while Ms. Lyman took ER call and they would not supervise me. Mr. Bryant as a P.A. working under Dr. Jones while Dr. Jones was not in Blanding, had no such restraints. Mrs. Lyman pointed out that she covered the ER (Blanding urgent care clinic) in Blanding by herself on many occasions. There was no response. (Cmplt. 137-145) Staff had previously voted for her privileges and then the County, Board, and medical staff did nothing while District staff Ora Lee Black, Dr. Redd, Gloria Yanito denied her the same. Some privileges as to labs and xrays [sic] were eventually restored.

210. Dr. Penn then suggested to medical staff that the only reason that Dr. Redd was against Ms. Lyman's privileges was because Dr. Redd was mad at Ms. Lyman for quitting Dr. Redd and Dr. Redd couldn't take it. To this Dr. Redd responded, "So what!" Dr. Jones then made the comment that Ms. Lyman had a rather large following of patients and that when he was taking ER call he didn't want Ms. Lyman to be able to see her patients at will and thus "dip into his ER money". They left with [**57] the staff's edict that Ms. Lyman could call into the ER (Blanding Urgent Care) for shots. However, Ms. Lyman tried on several occasions to call in injections to the ER (Blanding Urgent Care Clinic) and was denied every time. Ms. Lyman always had to call Dr. Penn's office and have him call the order in. (Cmplt. 146)

(Id. at 78-79 PP209-210; see Proposed Pretrial Order PP209-210 (same).)

Circumstances change, and by the time of pretrial, Ms. Lyman was working for Utah Navajo Health Systems, once again under Dr. Jones' supervision, ( see Tr. 11/15/02, at 24:9-25 (Ms. Rose)); she points to two recent incidents involving patients in Dr. Jones' and her care:

253. Within the last 14 or so days, a patient of Dr. Jones and Michele Lyman's was told, when she called the Birthing Center in labor, that the Birthing Center was shut and she would just have to travel to Monticello. Dr. Jones' staff verified that indeed the BCC was claiming they were SHUT. The patient presented [**58] at Blanding Family Clinic, [*1128] now owned by Utah Navajo Health Systems, and was found to be too far progressed to travel anywhere. Time was of the essence. Mrs. Lyman's supervising physician was denied patient care by the District he has full privileges with. The lady delivered in the Blanding Family Clinic and was then transported to Monticello for observation. The Blanding Family Clinic is taxpayer supported. There is no record of this type of patient of a Dr. Redd being told the Birthing Center was shut.

254. In another instance, a woman in labor was bleeding to death and she and the baby were in a very dangerous situation. Dr. Jones and Mrs. Lyman transported the woman to the Birthing Center and did an immediate c section on the unconscious or nearly unconscious mother. Both mom and baby were saved. As Dr. Jones was cleaning up, Dr. Fisher and Laurie Shafer were telling Mrs. Lyman and another nurse of Dr. Jones that they would have to leave. Mrs. Lyman and the nurse finished caring for the patient. This incident occurred prior to the Clinic being 'shut' when Michele's next patient was in labor and delivered in a clinic.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 91-92 PP253-254; see Proposed Pretrial [**59] Order at 62-63 PP253-254 (same).)

Dr. Manfred Nelson, M.D.

Dr. Manfred Nelson, M.D., is a licensed physician practicing in San Juan County and at relevant times was a member of the SJHSD medical staff. Plaintiffs' allegations against Dr. Nelson--few as they are--essentially parallel those pleaded against Dr. Jones concerning restriction of Ms. Lyman's privileges in mid-1999, with the addition of the assertion that "Dr. Nelson sent a letter severely criticizing Mrs. Lyman and he is on Medical Staff and has never met her, spoken to her, or worked with her. His writings are the best evidence of the types of rumors he was being told, and the damages the medical staff were seeking to inflict upon Mrs. Lyman." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 61 P248.)

Dr. James Redd, M.D.

As noted above, Dr. James Redd, M.D., a Blanding, Utah physician, maintained a private medical practice in Blanding until he became a SJHSD employee in early 1999; at relevant times thereafter, Dr. Redd served as District medical staff director. Early in her career, plaintiff Lyman worked as a Physician Assistant under Dr. Redd's and Dr. Jones' supervision. She ended that arrangement in October 1998, and sought supervision [**60] by other physicians practicing in the area.

From a review of plaintiff Lyman's allegations at the time of pretrial, it becomes plainly apparent that Dr. Redd is the primary focus of those allegations. Plaintiffs plead a litany of factual allegations against Dr. Redd, recounting a series of incidents involving the making of derogatory remarks or infliction of other verbal abuse, interference with Ms. Lyman's exercise of SJHSD staff privileges from and after the time she left his supervision in October 1998, and harassment and intimidation of patients who had some relationship with Ms. Lyman and/or her supervising physicians (Drs. Penn, Mena, MacArthur and now, Jones). (See Proposed Pretrial Order at 41-45 PP133(D)-(F), 138, 144-150, 153, 156-159; id. at 45-48 PP162-163, 165-166; id. at 48-50 PP167-186, 193; id. at 62-63 PP253-254 (quoted supra); see also Proposed Amended Complaint at 58-76 PP133(D)-(F), 138, 143-150, 153, 156-195, 199-205; id. at 77-78 PP208 (emergency room patient "was told by Dr. Redd that she must choose between Ms. Lyman/Dr. Penn and [*1129] Dr. Redd as a health care provider," and that "if the patient chose Ms. Lyman, the patient could never use the E.R. again.").) Plaintiffs [**61] assert that "the District medical staff director, Dr. Redd has a long standing policy of animus toward women both as employees and as patients," (id. at 20 P51), borne out in the incidents recounted in their pleadings, and that Dr. Redd demeaned and disparaged the other physicians with whom Ms. Lyman had associated. (Id. at 56 PP215-216.) They also allege a pattern of personal harassment and annoyance directed against Ms. Lyman by Dr. Redd:

196. Dr. Redd was witnessed by others as driving by Mrs. Lyman's home, frequently honking.

197. Mrs. Lyman reports that Dr. Redd followed Mrs. Lyman's about 10 year old daughter in his car for a period of time, frightening the daughter.

198. Mrs. Lyman and her nurse Christine Singer, experienced numerous flat tires over a two week or so period, with no foreign items found in the tires. These flat tires occurred at the office and at their homes.

(Id. at 51 PP196-198; see Proposed Amended Complaint at 73-74 PP196-198 (same).)

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' THEORIES OF LIABILITY

As summarized in the Proposed Pretrial Order, Part I of the Proposed Amended Complaint asserts an array of causes of action arising under federal and Utah state law, including:

- (1) [**62] Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 et seq. \(2000\);
- (2) Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994, 18 U.S.C. § 248 \(2000\)(3) Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112 \(2000\);
- (4) Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(2000\);
- (5) "Medicare Patient Bill of Rights," 42 U.S.C. § 1395a \(2000\); (6) 42 U.S.C. § 1981 \(2000\);
- (7) 42 U.S.C. § 1985\(3\) \(2000\);
- (8) 42 U.S.C. § 1983\(2000\);

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1129 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **62

(9) § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15 \(2000\) and § 1 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 \(2000\);
<sup>34</sup>

(10) Utah Constitution, art. I, §§ 1, 7, 25, 26, 27;

(11) Utah Unfair Practices Act, Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-5-1 et seq. (2001);

(12) Utah Civil Rights Act, Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-7-1 et seq. (2001);

(13) interference with contract and with prospective business relations;

(14) "state common law defamation (also a U.S. Constitutional right to reputation as guaranteed by the Ninth Amendment";<sup>35</sup>

(15) "Federal common law and Utah contract common law and statutory provisions that prohibit contracts of adhesion, bad faith, and lack of fair dealing. Utah Code Ann. 78-12-25(1) (1996)," including [*1130] the implied covenant of [***63] good faith and fair dealing;<sup>36</sup>

(16) "privacy rights and statutory entitlements to have their credential files and patient files accurately kept by the district under Medicaid and Utah Health Department statutes and regulations";

(17) negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress; and

(18) fraud.

(See Proposed Pretrial Order at 3-6.)

HN9 Generally, a pleading must contain [***64] "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed.R.Civ.P. 8\(a\)\(2\). "Accordingly, a pleading must 'give[ ] fair notice and state[ ] the elements of the claim plainly and succinctly.'" Jones v. Community Redevelopment Agency, 733 F.2d 646, 649 \(9th Cir. 1984\) (quoting 2A J. Moore & J. Lucas, Moore's Federal Practice P8.13 at 8-111 (2d ed.1983)). To give such notice, a pleading must set forth specific facts as the basis for the plaintiffs' claims, not merely legal conclusions. Without specific facts, "claims are little more than conclusory allegations, which are insufficient to state a claim for relief." Swoboda v. Dubach, 992 F.2d 286, 289-290 \(10th Cir. 1993\) (citing Hall v. Bellmon, 935 F.2d 1106, 1110 \(10 th Cir. 1991\)).

HN10 The parties may test the legal sufficiency of claims by motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) or 56, and as explained above, "Rule 16 empowers district courts to weed out frivolous claims." Smith v. Gulf Oil Co., 995 F.2d 638, 644 \(6th Cir. 1993\). "There is no reason to require that [the elimination of frivolous claims] await a formal motion for summary judgment," Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\), advisory committee note to 1983 [***65] amendment, and it certainly "is not inconsistent with the general purpose of Rule 16 to use this rule 'to determine whether there are any issues remaining in the case that justify proceeding to a full trial on the merits.'" Chavez v. Illinois State Police, 251 F.3d 612, 654 \(7th Cir. 2001\) (quoting 6A Charles A. Wright, et al., Federal Practice & Procedure § 1529, at 301 (2d ed.1990)).

---

<sup>34</sup> More recently, plaintiffs' counsel has invoked the Utah Antitrust Act, Utah Code Ann. §§ 76-10-911 through 76-10-926 (2003), in addition to the federal antitrust statutes. (Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross- Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), at 4.)

<sup>35</sup> Plaintiffs' counsel now refers to "civil and criminal defamation with malice," apparently invoking Utah Code Ann. § 76-9-404 (2003) in addition to the common law theories. (Id.)

<sup>36</sup> Plaintiffs' counsel would now extend this theory to reach interference with a plaintiff's "right to pursue his profession and business affairs by lack of good faith and fair dealing inherent and mandated in all Utah business relations." (Id.)

In evaluating whether the plaintiffs' claims are maintainable or are frivolous, court and counsel must examine them within the framework of their various legal theories; the facts alleged as the basis for these claims must be considered in terms of the essential elements of each cause of action.

(1) Plaintiffs' Civil RICO Claims (18 U.S.C. §§ 1961 et seq.)

HN11 [↑] In order to state a civil RICO claim, a plaintiff must allege that he or she suffered (1) an injury to his or her business or property because the defendant(s), (2) while involved in one or more enumerated relationships with an "enterprise," (3) engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity or collected an unlawful debt. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-1968\(2000\).

Predicate Acts of "Racketeering Activity" (18 U.S.C. § 1961\(1\))

HN12 [↑] Among the essential elements required [**66] to establish civil liability under the RICO statute, plaintiffs must show, inter alia, that the defendants have conducted the affairs of an identifiable "enterprise" through a "pattern of racketeering activity," that is, that the defendants have committed a continuous series of related criminal acts in violation of one or more of the [*1131] statutes listed in 18 U.S.C. § 1961\(1\) ("racketeering activity" defined). 18 U.S.C. § 1962. See, e.g., BancOklahoma Mortgage Corp. v. Capital Title Co., 194 F.3d 1089, 1100 \(10th Cir. 1999\) ("To establish a civil RICO claim under 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(c\), [plaintiff] must show that the [defendants] '(1) participated in the conduct (2) of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of racketeering activity.' Resolution Trust Corp. v. Stone, 998 F.2d 1534, 1541 \(10th Cir. 1993\) (citing Phelps v. Wichita Eagle-Beacon, 886 F.2d 1262, 1273 \(10th Cir. 1989\)).") Defendants "need not engage in the stereotypical mobster behavior to come within the bounds of civil RICO," Smith v. Our Lady of the Lake Hosp., Inc., 960 F.2d 439, 447 \(5th Cir. 1992\) (citing United States v. Turkette, 452 U.S. 576, 580-81, 591, 69 L. Ed. 2d 246, 101 S. Ct. 2524\(1981\)), but they must nevertheless [**67] be shown to have participated in continuing criminal violations constituting an identifiable "pattern of racketeering activity." See H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Tel. Co., 492 U.S. 229, 239, 106 L. Ed. 2d 195, 109 S. Ct. 2893 \(1989\).<sup>37</sup>

The Proposed Amended Complaint points to mail fraud (18 U.S.C. § 1341), witness tampering (18 U.S.C. § 1512) and interference with commerce by threats (18 U.S.C. § 1951) as the predicate acts of racketeering activity pertinent to plaintiffs' claims asserted in this case.<sup>38</sup> (Proposed Amended Complaint at 12.)

(a) 18 U.S.C. § 1341 - Mail Fraud

18 U.S.C. § 1341 \(2000\) reads:

HN13 [↑] Whoever, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, or to sell, dispose of, loan, exchange, alter, give away, distribute, supply, or furnish or procure for unlawful use any counterfeit or spurious coin, obligation, security, or other article, or anything represented to be or intimated or held out to be

<sup>37</sup> The statute of limitations applicable to civil RICO actions is the four-year limitations period governing civil enforcement actions under the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15b. See, e.g., Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Assocs., Inc., 483 U.S. 143, 156, 107 S. Ct. 2759, 97 L. Ed. 2d 121 \(1987\); Phelps v. Wichita Eagle-Beacon, 886 F.2d 1262, 1273 n. 12 \(10th Cir. 1989\).

<sup>38</sup> "The various acts of racketeering activity described in the statute are often referred to as 'predicate acts' because they form the basis for liability under RICO." BancOklahoma Mortgage Corp., 194 F.3d at 1102 (citing Bacchus Industr., Inc. v. Arvin Industr., Inc., 939 F.2d 887, 891 \(10th Cir. 1991\)). [**68]

Plaintiffs' counsel also refers to "(d) illegal destruction or tampering with confidential documents in a federally contracted facility;" and "(e) intimidation of witnesses for monetary gain," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 3 P(5)), but these are not found among the offenses enumerated in the statute's definition of "racketeering activity" and thus cannot serve as RICO predicate acts. 18 U.S.C. § 1961\(1\) ("racketeering activity" defined).

such counterfeit or spurious article, for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice or attempting so to do, places in any" post office or authorized depository for mail matter, any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by the Postal Service, [**69] or deposits or causes to be deposited any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by any private or commercial interstate carrier, or takes or receives therefrom, any such matter or thing, or knowingly causes to be delivered by mail or such carrier according to the direction thereon, or at the place at which it is directed to be delivered by the person to whom it is addressed, any such matter or thing, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both. [*1132] If the violation affects a financial institution, such person shall be fined not more than $ 1,000,000 or imprisoned not more than 30 years, or both.

HN14 [↑] In order to prove the offense defined in § 1341 in a criminal proceeding, the government must prove the following essential elements: (1) that the defendant knowingly devised or knowingly participated in a scheme or artifice for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises; (2) that the pretenses, representations or promises were material, that is, they would reasonably influence a person to part with money or property; (3) that the defendant did so with the intent to defraud; and (4) that in advancing, [**70] or furthering, or carrying out this scheme to obtain money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, the defendant used the mail, or any private or commercial interstate carrier, or caused the same to be used by someone else.

HN15 [↑] To establish mail fraud as a predicate act of racketeering activity for the purposes of a civil RICO claim, plaintiffs must plead and prove facts establishing each of these essential elements as to each occurrence, as to each predicate act alleged as part of the requisite "pattern of racketeering activity." Rule 9\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that allegations of mail fraud be pleaded with particularity. See, e.g., Farlow v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., 956 F.2d 982, 989-90 \(10th Cir. 1992\) (predicate acts of mail fraud require heightened pleading pursuant to Rule 9\(b\)); Cayman Exploration Corp. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 873 F.2d 1357, 1362 \(10th Cir. 1989\) (Rule 9\(b\) requires particularity in pleading the RICO predicate acts of mail fraud).

Plaintiff Lyman alleges that her CPR certification cards, "a necessary component of her ability to obtain privileges were altered purposefully," that "she [**71] was not notified immediately that her cards were in some way in error," that "the cards were stolen from her file at least on two if not three occasions," that "the forged documents were mailed to the American Heart Association," and that "the doctors would have profited from Mrs. Lyman not being able to work . . . ." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 63 P255 (emphasis added); see id. at 14 ("forged documents were sent in the US mail to harm her reputation with the American Heart Association who oversees the cpr classification certification programs Mrs. Lyman is obligated to pass")); id. at 29 PP129-131 ("The U.S. mail was used to mail the cards while the local doctors and medical providers could profit from limiting Mrs. Lyman's competition and reputation with the American Heart Association"); id. at 34 PP174-175.)

Plaintiff Lyman thus complains that her CPR cards were altered and/or forged, and alleges "the use of the mail system to send fraudulent cards" to the American Heart Association. (Id. at 66.) Yet HN16 [↑] mail fraud is not committed simply by sending false statements through the mail; the mails must have been used to further a scheme to defraud or obtain money or property through false [**72] pretenses. See BancOklahoma Mortgage Corp., 194 F.3d at 1102. Here, Ms. Lyman's CPR cards, even if altered or forged, and thereby becoming false or "fraudulent" representations in one sense, are not themselves alleged to be the means of obtaining money or property, and are not such as to "reasonably influence a person to part with money or property" as required to prove a violation of § 1341. Plaintiffs allege that "the local doctors and medical providers could profit from limiting Mrs. Lyman's competition and reputation with the American Heart Association," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 29 P131), but do not claim that any of the defendants obtained or schemed to obtain money or property by means of the altered or forged CPR cards.

Here, the Part I Plaintiffs have failed to plead facts establishing HN17 [↑] the essential elements of mail fraud (a scheme or artifice to defraud, viz., to obtain money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, and the use of the mails in furtherance of the scheme) as against any of the named defendants.

(b) 18 U.S.C. § 1512 - Witness Tampering

HN18[↑] Section 1512 of Title 18, United States Code prohibits specific conduct, including [**73] physical force, threats of physical force, or intimidation, threatening, "corrupt" or "misleading" persuasion or harassment, that is intended to "influence, delay or prevent" a witness from attending or testifying in an official proceeding, or intended to cause testimony, records, documents, or other objects to be withheld, concealed, altered or destroyed in order to impair their availability for use in an official proceeding. 18 U.S.C. § 1512(a), (b), (c), (d) (2000). Section 1512 prohibits only the coercive conduct specifically described in its subsections; the legislative history reflects Congress' rejection of broadly inclusive language in favor of "the specific conduct narrowly described in the final version of the statute." United States v. Dawlett, 787 F.2d 771, 774-775 (1st Cir. 1986) (citing United States v. Lester, 749 F.2d 1288, 1295-1297 (9th Cir. 1984)); cf. McAndrew v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 206 F.3d 1031, 1039-1040 (11th Cir. 2000) (assertion that defendants attempted to deter plaintiff by force, intimidation, or threat from testifying before a federal grand jury about employer's activities by threatening him with job-related sanctions alleged a violation under the federal [**74] witness tampering statute).

The Part I Plaintiffs assert that defendant "Dr. Redd informed the head of the local nursing home that the nursing home patients would no longer see Dr. Cook as a result of making a witness statement," that "witnesses have requested that they not be used to give testimony due to fear of retaliation and loss of jobs," and that one witness has stated she is petrified her relatives will not stay employed or her children will not be seen at District facilities if she testifies." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 61 PP244-246; Proposed Amended Complaint at 88-89 PP244-246.) None of these allegations set forth facts evidencing conduct by any named defendant that falls within the scope of the statute.

HN19[↑] Prospective fact witnesses may indeed feel fearful, anxious or apprehensive about how their testimony may be responded to by those against whom it may be offered. In some cases, potential witnesses may fear for their very lives, and with good reason. Federal law affords such witnesses some degree of protection. See generally 18 U.S.C. § 1513 (retaliation against witness); 18 U.S.C. §§ 3521-3528 (2000) (federal witness protection program). But fear, anxiety and apprehension [**75] on the part of a prospective witness as to a future loss of employment, denial of services, or other adverse personal consequences do not equate with the culpable criminal conduct on the part of a defendant that violates § 1512. A defendant must do something -- use physical force, threats of physical force, or intimidation, threatening, corrupt or misleading persuasion or harassment -- that is intended to "influence, delay or prevent" a witness from attending or testifying in an official proceeding, or intended to cause testimony, records, documents, or other objects to [**1134] be withheld, concealed, altered or destroyed in order to impair their availability for use in an official proceeding, in order to run afoul of the witness tampering statute. 18 U.S.C. § 1512(a)-(d).<sup>39</sup> The Proposed Amended Complaint alleges nothing of that kind.<sup>40</sup>

<sup>39</sup> HN20[↑] Section 1512 addresses specific affirmative coercive or misleading conduct intended to inhibit or influence future witness testimony or the availability of evidence yet to be offered in a pending or future federal proceeding. See United States v. Rose, 362 F.3d 1059, 1067-1068 (8th Cir. 2004); United States v. Davis, 357 F.3d 726, 728-729 (8th Cir. 2004), [**76] vacated on other grounds, 543 U.S. 1099, 125 S. Ct. 1049, 160 L. Ed. 2d 993 (2005) (mem.); United States v. Romero, 54 F.3d 56, 62 (2d Cir. 1995) ("knowing interference with a potential communication between an individual who might become a witness and federal law enforcement officials falls within the ambit of Section 1512. We have thus previously noted that the statute covers 'potential' witnesses. United States v. Hernandez, 730 F.2d 895, 898 (2d Cir. 1984) ('[section] 1512 explicitly covers "potential" witnesses>'); United States v. Maggitt, 784 F.2d 590, 593 (5th Cir. 1986) ("18 U.S.C. § 1512 punishes only those threats made with the intent to cause the witness to withhold future testimony").

<sup>40</sup> More recently, plaintiffs' counsel has asserted that Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman suffered retaliation in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1513 for having informed the SJHSD's governance board of remarks made by SJHSD administration and staff concerning Dr. Nathaniel Penn being a "little New York Jew." (See Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), at [**77] 17; Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff Lyman's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' [sic] Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 696), at 24.) HN21[↑] Section 1513 prohibits violent retaliation (e.g., killing, attempting to kill, causing bodily injury, damaging tangible property)

(c) 18 U.S.C. § 1951 - Interference with Commerce by Threats

HN22 [+] The Anti-Racketeering Act of 1934, Act of June 18, 1934, ch. 569, 48 Stat. 979, codified at 18 U.S.C. § 1951 \(2000\), makes it a federal offense to commit robbery or extortion that in any way or degree obstructs commerce. To prove guilt, the government must prove that a defendant committed extortion or robbery, and that such conduct interfered with interstate commerce. Though § 1951 is often referred to as the "Hobbs Act," the Hobbs Act (Act of July 3, 1946, ch. 537, 60 Stat. 420) itself amended the 1934 Anti-Racketeering Act to include extortionate conduct by labor unions, which had been held to be exempt under the statute's original language. See United States v. Local 807, Teamsters Union, 118 F.2d 684, 687-88 \(2d Cir. 1941\), aff'd, 315 U.S. 521, 539, 86 L. Ed. 1004, 62 S. Ct. 642 \(1942\).

The courts read the legislative history of the 1934 Act to indicate that Congress enacted the 1934 legislation to eliminate racketeering by organized gangs, which was found to have a substantial effect on interstate commerce, particularly the interstate transportation industry. See [*1135] United States v. Local 807, Teamsters Union, 315 U.S. 521, 528-530, 86 L. Ed. 1004, 62 S. Ct. 642 \(1942\) [***79] (citing H. Rep. No. 1833, 73d Cong. 2d Sess. (1934)). The 1934 Act was first introduced in the Senate in response to a Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce investigation of "rackets" and "racketeering," which the Committee defined as "an organized conspiracy to commit the crimes of extortion or coercion, or attempts to commit extortion or coercion," as defined by "the penal law of the State of New York and other jurisdictions." S. Rep. No. 75-1189, 75th Cong., 1st Sess., at 3 (1935). The Committee reported that many businesses were being coerced to pay "dues" for "protection" from gangsters -- most of whom were actually affiliated with those offering the "protection" -- who would engage in the "hijacking" of trucks used to transport merchandise in interstate commerce, as well as price-fixing and other coercive conduct harmful to commerce. Id. at 9, 21-23; Local 807, Teamsters Union, 315 U.S. at 529-30 (citing H.R. Rep. No. 73-1833, "at 2 (1934) (the 1934 Act was intended to make unlawful racketeering "in connection with price fixing and economic extortion directed by professional gangsters.")). According to the 1934 bill's sponsor, Senator Copeland, the legislation was intended [***80] to "render more difficult the activities of predatory criminal gangs." S. Rep. No. 73-1440, at 1 (1934). The same was true of the 1946 legislation:

In arguing for the adoption of the Hobbs Act, Congressman Hobbs, the sponsor of the Act, emphasized that the 1934 Act was being amended to address highway robbery by organized labor unions and was intended to protect individuals and goods in interstate commerce. Additional testimony during the debate in the House of Representatives clearly establishes that the Hobbs Act was passed to protect individuals "trying to deliver food into the various big cities in our nation" and those "who feel they have a right to drive down ... public highways and streets ..." According to Mr. Hobbs, the "sole and simple purpose" of the Hobbs Act is to protect interstate commerce and "free the highways and streets of this country of robbers." Thus, the Hobbs Act was originally a subject matter specific statute that applied only to actions of organized gangs, and, like other subject matter specific statutes, was passed by Congress only after findings that the specific type of crime so addressed presented a national problem. This interpretation of the Hobbs Act is [***81] further supported by the initial and long held position of the Justice Department that the robbery provision of the Act was to be utilized only in instances "involving organized crime, gang activity, or wide-ranging criminal activity."

Michael McGrail, The Hobbs Act after Lopez, 41 B.C.L. Rev. 949, 956-57 \(2000\) (footnotes omitted). Since its 1946 re-enactment in the Hobbs Act, the Court has read § 1951 to "manifest ... a purpose to use all the constitutional power Congress has to punish interference with interstate commerce by extortion, robbery or physical violence."

---

against any person for attending or furnishing testimony or evidence in a federal proceeding or providing information to a law enforcement officer "relating to the commission or possible commission of a Federal offense. ..." 18 U.S.C. § 1513\(a\), \(b\). Plaintiffs have alleged no federal proceeding, no reporting of a federal offense, and no violent retaliation. Even § 1513\(e\), which prohibits "interference with the lawful employment or livelihood of any person for providing to a law enforcement officer any truthful information relating to the commission or possible commission of any Federal offense," simply cannot be read to reach the reporting of ethnic remarks to a local hospital's governance board.

Counsel's assertion that § 1513 was violated by conduct so plainly outside the clear language of the statute raises [***78] serious concerns under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

United States v. Culbert, 435 U.S. 371, 373, 55 L. Ed. 2d 349, 98 S. Ct. 1112 (1978) (quoting Stirone v. United States, 361 U.S. 212, 215, 4 L. Ed. 2d 252, 80 S. Ct. 270 (1960)).

In Scheidler v. National Organization for Women, Inc., 537 U.S. 393, 154 L. Ed. 2d 991, 123 S. Ct. 1057 (2003), however, the Court read HN23<sup>41</sup> the Hobbs Act's definition of "extortion" as "the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official [*1136] right," 18 U.S.C. § 1951(b)(2), to require "that a person must 'obtain' property from another party to [**82] commit extortion," that is, that there must be "not only the deprivation but also the acquisition of property." 537 U.S. at 404. The anti-abortion protestors in Scheidler did not violate § 1951 for purposes of civil RICO liability because in physically obstructing the operation of clinics performing abortions, they "neither pursued nor received 'something of value from' respondents that they could exercise, transfer or sell"; thus, under § 1951, "merely interfering with or depriving someone of property" was not "sufficient to constitute extortion." Id. at 405.

Even if taken as true in their entirety, none of the factual allegations of Part I of the Proposed Amended Complaint identify any property 'obtained' or acquired from the plaintiffs by San Juan County, the SJHSD, or any of the named individual defendants with plaintiffs' consent "induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right." <sup>41</sup> Nor do any of the additional factual assertions set forth more recently in the Part I Plaintiffs' combined motions for reconsideration and summary judgment identify any property or thing of value obtained and acquired by the defendants from [**83] these plaintiffs through extortionate means. (See Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 664); Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670); Plaintiff Lyman's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 695).) These plaintiffs are not engaged in the interstate transportation of goods, or in the sale of merchandise flowing through interstate commerce. Nor, for that matter, do any of plaintiffs' allegations describe conduct of the kind of "organized crime, gang activity, or wide-ranging criminal activity" on the part of the named defendants that Congress had in mind in enacting the statute.

HN24<sup>42</sup> A private civil action under the federal RICO statute remains available as a means for those persons who have been "injured in [their] business or property" by reason of a violation of RICO's criminal provisions to seek legal and equitable remedies for their injuries from those whose ongoing criminal conduct has caused them harm. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964. However, civil RICO liability does not serve merely as a device to multiply the money damages available to parties embroiled in more commonplace civil litigation,<sup>43</sup> or as a [*1137] means to vilify civil litigants by labeling them as "racketeers," gangsters, extortionists and criminals. See Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., Inc., 473 U.S. 479, 496, 87 L. Ed. 2d 346, 105 S. Ct. 3275 (1985) ((a civil RICO plaintiff only has standing if "he has been injured in his business [**85] or property by the conduct constituting the violation").

HN25<sup>44</sup> Where a plaintiff's amended complaint fails to allege specific facts stating the elements essential to her federal claim under RICO, dismissal with prejudice is warranted. See, e.g., Martinez v. Martinez, 207 F.Supp.2d <sup>41</sup> Plaintiffs assert that Ms. Lyman's patients "were told that even in an emergency they would not be seen by the District if they continued to visit Mrs. Lyman [**84] for health care. Mrs. Lyman believes threatening patients that emergency care will be denied in an emergency is extortion of the lowest kind." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 63 P255.) A threat of denial of emergency medical care by a public facility may be found to be improper for a number of reasons, but such a threat does not constitute "extortion" within the meaning of the Hobbs Act.

<sup>42</sup> The potential for abuse of the civil RICO remedy was recognized some years ago: "Given the resulting proliferation of civil RICO claims and the potential for frivolous suits in search of treble damages, greater responsibility will be placed on the bar to inquire into the factual and legal bases of potential claims or defenses prior to bringing such suit or risk sanctions for failing to do so." Chapman & Cole v. Itel Container Int'l, 865 F.2d 676, 685 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 872, 110 S. Ct. 201, 107 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1989) (quoting Black & Magenheim, Using the RICO Act in Civil Cases, Houston Law. , Oct. 1984, at 20, 24-25 (Oct. 1984)).

1303, 1305-09 (D.N.M. 2002) ("no reasonable or competent counsel who had read any Tenth Circuit cases concerning civil RICO complaints, and the requisites thereof, could believe that the amended complaint filed in this case stated a viable RICO claim."), *aff'd in part, [*86] vacated and remanded in part on other grounds, 62 Fed.Appx. 309, 2003 WL 1904807 (10th Cir. 2003); Condict v. Condict, 826 F.2d 923, 929 (10th Cir. 1987)* (affirming dismissal of civil RICO claim; "this is but an unsuccessful effort to dress a garden-variety fraud and deceit case in RICO clothing").

(2) Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994 (18 U.S.C. § 248)

HN26 [+] The Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994, Pub. L. No. 103-259, 108 U.S.C. 694, codified at 18 U.S.C. §§ 241, 248 (2000), addresses the conduct of anyone who "by force or threat of force or by physical obstruction, intentionally injures, intimidates or interferes with or attempts to injure, intimidate or interfere with any person because that person is or has been, or in order to intimidate such person or any other person or any class of persons from, obtaining or providing reproductive health services," or that person is "exercising or seeking to exercise the First Amendment right of religious freedom at a place of religious worship[.]<sup>43</sup> Though it is primarily a criminal statute, § 248\(c\)\(1\) provides that "any [*87] person aggrieved by reason of the conduct prohibited by subsection (a) may commence a civil action" seeking "temporary, preliminary or permanent injunctive relief and compensatory and punitive damages, as well as the costs of suit and reasonable fees for attorneys and expert witnesses," or as an alternative to compensatory damages, "an award of statutory damages in the amount of $ 5,000 per violation." 18 U.S.C. § 248\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(b\).

There appears little doubt that patient access to a hospital, clinic, birthing center, or physician's office in San Juan County that offers "medical, surgical, counseling or referral services relating to ... pregnancy" comes within the scope of protection afforded by this statute. 18 U.S.C. § 248\(e\)\(1\), \(5\). The plaintiffs in this case, however, have not alleged that the defendants engaged in the specific offense conduct prohibited by the statute, that is, the [*88] use of "force or threat of force or ... physical obstruction" to "intentionally injure[], intimidate[] or interfere[] with" patient access to reproductive health care facilities and services. Part I of the Proposed Amended Complaint makes no allegation of facts showing that any defendant has used physical force or obstruction to obstruct or intimidate anyone seeking to obtain or provide reproductive health services.

[*1138] (3) Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112 \(2000\)

Following the Pretrial Conference, the Part I Plaintiffs apparently moved to dismiss their claims under the Health Care Quality Improvement Act (HCQIA), 42 U.S.C. § 11101-11152 \(2000\), and the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd \(2000\), on grounds of mootness. (See Plaintiffs' Motion to Dismiss, filed November 25, 2002 (dkt. no. 463).) At the hearing on January 7, 2003, the court granted plaintiffs' motion. (See Minute Entry, dated January 7, 2003 (dkt. no. 480).)<sup>44</sup>

<sup>43</sup> Section 248\(a\)\(3\) also prohibits conduct which "intentionally damages or destroys the property of a facility, or attempts to do so, because such facility provides reproductive health services, or intentionally damages or destroys the property of a place of religious worship." 18 U.S.C. § 248\(a\)\(3\).

<sup>44</sup> As the case proceeded, Ms. Valdez' EMTALA and HCQIA claims were specifically dismissed on motion by her own counsel. (See Plaintiffs' Motion to Dismiss, filed November 25, 2002 (dkt. no. 463).) As written, [*89] that motion moved "for an order dismissing the defendants' motions to dismiss EMTALA and Health Care Quality Improvement Act claims, due to mootness" -- apparently making what amounted to a motion to strike the defendants' moving papers. (Id. (emphasis added); see Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs' EMTALA Claims, filed November 13, 2002 (dkt. no. 447).) The Plaintiffs' Motion to Dismiss was not accompanied by an explanatory memorandum.

However, as docketed, calendared and heard, the Plaintiffs' Motion to Dismiss was treated as a motion to dismiss Ms. Valdez' EMTALA and HCQIA claims as moot:

THE COURT: ... Many of the items that we dealt with before have heretofore been resolved. I do note that plaintiff's motion to dismiss the EMTALA and Health Care Quality Improvement Act Claims, docket number 463, filed November 25th are Apart from the question of mootness and the effect of plaintiffs' own motion, it appears in any event that the Part I Plaintiffs' claim would fail to state a legally cognizable claim. HN27[] Title IV, § 412 of the HCQIA, 42 U.S.C. § 11112, the provision cited by plaintiffs, does set standards for professional review actions affecting a health practitioner's practice privileges,<sup>45</sup> but it does so in the context of a statutory scheme that shields the review participants from civil liability arising from the review action if that action satisfies § 11112's procedural criteria.<sup>46</sup> See 42 U.S.C. § 11111; Decker v. IHC Hospitals, Inc., 982 F.2d 433, 436 \(10th Cir. 1992\).

now moot and I take it ought to be, you don't have any problem with that determination, your motion, that is you're dismissing those claims?

MS. ROSE: Uh, yes.

THE COURT: Isn't that right, the EMTALA and Health Care Quality Improvement Act claims?

MS. ROSE: That would be fine.

THE COURT: It was your motion and I think we can grant that at this point without further [\[\*\*90\]](#) ado. .

(Transcript of Hearing, dated January 7, 2003, at 4:23-5:10 (emphasis added).) The dismissal of plaintiff's EMTALA and HCQIA claims was duly noted in the Minute Entry. (See Minute Entry, dated January 7, 2003 (dkt. no. 480) ("Grants, motion to dismiss (Dkt # 463)." See also Transcript of Hearing, dated February 24, 2003, at 30:19-31:8 (The Court).)

<sup>45</sup> HCQIA § 412 reads in part:

(a) HN28[] In general. For purposes of the protection set forth in section 11111 \(a\) of this title, a professional review action must betaken-

- (1) in the [\[\*\*91\]](#) reasonable belief that the action was in the furtherance of quality health care,
- (2) after a reasonable effort to obtain the facts of the matter,
- (3) after adequate notice and hearing procedures are afforded to the physician involved or after such other procedures as are fair to the physician under the circumstances, and
- (4) in the reasonable belief that the action was warranted by the facts known after such reasonable effort to obtain facts and after meeting the requirement of paragraph (3).

A professional review action shall be presumed to have met the preceding standards necessary for the protection set out in section 11111 \(a\) of this title unless the presumption is rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence.

42 U.S.C. §11112\(a\) \(2000\).

<sup>46</sup> 11 of HCQIA provides:

(1) HN29[] Limitation on damages for professional review actions

If a professional review action (as defined in section 11151 \(9\) of this title) of a professional review body meets all the standards specified in section 11112 \(a\) of this title, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section-

- (A) the professional review body,
- (B) any person acting as a member or staff to the body,
- (C) any person under a contract or other formal [\[\*\*92\]](#) agreement with the body, and
- (D) any person who participates with or assists the body with respect to the action, shall not be liable in damages under any law of the United States or of any State (or political subdivision thereof) with respect to the action.

42 U.S.C. § 11111 \(2000\) (emphasis added). HN30[] Section 11111 makes an express exception as to liability under "any law of the United States or any State relating to the civil rights of any person or persons, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42

The court of appeals has determined that HN31<sup>46</sup> the HCQIA does not create a private civil cause of action in favor of plaintiffs whose staff privileges at a medical facility have been adversely affected by a professional or peer review action. See, e.g., Hancock v. Blue Cross-Blue Shield, 21 F.3d 373, 374 (10th Cir. 1994). Therefore, in the context of a grievance by a health care professional whose staff privileges have been limited or denied by a peer review process, the question posed by the HCQIA is not whether the participants in the review process [\[\*\*93\]](#) are liable under the HCQIA, but whether the HCQIA operates to immunize those participants from private civil liability based upon other legal theories. Therefore, as a matter of law, the Part I Plaintiffs can plead no claim "for violation of the guarantees found in" the HCQIA as such.

(4) Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd \(2000\)

HN32<sup>47</sup> The Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), as added by § 9121\(b\) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985, 100 Stat. 164,, and as amended, 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd, places obligations of screening and stabilization upon hospitals and emergency rooms that receive patients suffering from an "emergency medical condition."

Roberts v. Galen of Virginia, Inc., 525 U.S. 249, 250, 142 L. Ed. 2d 648, 119 S. Ct. 685 (1999). Among other provisions, EMTALA requires the emergency departments of hospitals participating in the federal Medicare program to provide appropriate medical screening and stabilizing treatment for all persons who present themselves at the emergency room and request care:

HN33<sup>48</sup> (a) Medical screening requirement. In the case of a hospital that has a hospital emergency department, [\[\*\*94\]](#) if any individual (whether or not eligible for benefits under this subchapter) comes to the emergency department and a request is made on the individual's behalf for examination or treatment for a medical condition, the hospital must provide for an appropriate medical screening examination within the capability of the hospital's emergency department, including ancillary services routinely available to the emergency department, to determine whether or not an emergency medical condition (within the meaning of subsection (e)(1) of this section) exists.

[*1140] (b) Necessary stabilizing treatment for emergency medical conditions and labor

(1) In general

If any individual (whether or not eligible for benefits under this subchapter) comes to a hospital and the hospital determines that the individual has an emergency medical condition, the hospital must provide either-

(A) within the staff and facilities available at the hospital, for such further medical examination and such treatment as may be required to stabilize the medical condition, or

(B) for transfer of the individual to another medical facility in accordance with subsection (c) of this section.

42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(a\), \(b\) \(2000\). HN34<sup>49</sup> Subsection (c) of § 1395dd [\[\*\*95\]](#) sets standards governing the transfer of emergency room patients to other health care facilities, and subsection \(d\) provides for the enforcement of § 1395dd's requirements through civil monetary penalties collected by the Secretary of Health and Human Services and through private civil actions by "any individual who suffers personal harm as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section." 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\) \(2000\).<sup>47</sup> The statute has been construed as imposing strict liability on hospitals for violations of its screening and stabilization requirements. See Abercrombie v. Osteopathic Hosp. Founders Ass'n, 950 F.2d 676, 681 (10th Cir. 1991); Stevision v. Enid Health Systems, Inc., 920 F.2d 710, 713 (10th Cir. 1990).

U.S.C. 2000e, et seq. and the Civil Rights Acts, 42 U.S.C. 1981, et seq." and for actions by the Attorney General under the federal antitrust laws. Id.

<sup>47</sup> Subsection (d) of § 1395dd reads:

HN35<sup>50</sup> (2) Civil enforcement

HN36 [↑] A hospital's duty to provide the required emergency medical screening and stabilizing treatment to persons requesting such care cannot be delayed by any inquiry as to that person's "method of payment or insurance status." 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(h\). Nor is the participating hospital's duty to provide emergency screening and treatment under § 1395dd\(a\) and \(b\) limited to those persons who are regularly in the care of physicians or health care providers having current staff privileges or practice privileges at that hospital.

As to plaintiff Helen Valdez, counsel at the time of pretrial asserted the "violation of Mrs. Valdez' entitlement [**97] to an equal standard of care and to be examined upon her presentation to the emergency room of the hospital as mandated by 42 USC 1395dd," apparently invoking EMTALA's private civil remedy. (Proposed Amended Complaint at 14 P(22); Proposed Pretrial Order at 5 P(23).)

The event in question occurred on April 14, 1999, yet plaintiff Valdez did not plead a claim under § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\) of EMTALA in the original complaint in this action filed on July 25, 2000,<sup>48</sup> and did not attempt to [*1141] plead such a claim until the Proposed Amended Complaint, submitted on November 6, 2002 -- one week before pretrial and "more than two years after the date of the violation with respect to which the action is brought," 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\)\(C\)-- as an attachment to the "Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend and "Supplement Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," (dkt. no. 438).

On the eve of pretrial, the SJHSD defendants filed a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss plaintiff's EMTALA claim as asserted in the Proposed Pretrial Order on the ground of the two-year statute of limitations. (See Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs' EMTALA Claims, filed November 13, 2002 (dkt. no. 447); Memorandum in Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's EMTALA Claim, filed November 13, 2002 (dkt. no. 448).)

(A) Personal harm Any individual who suffers personal harm as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section may, in a civil action against the participating hospital, obtain those damages available for personal injury under the law of the State in which the hospital is located, and such equitable relief as is appropriate:

(B) [**96] Financial loss to other medical facility Any medical facility that suffers a financial loss as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section may, in a civil action against the participating hospital, obtain those damages available for financial loss, under the law of the State in which the hospital is located, and such equitable relief as is appropriate.

(C) Limitations on actions No action may be brought under this paragraph more than two years after the date of the violation with respect to which the action is brought.

<sup>48</sup> Plaintiffs' counsel now points to two paragraphs out of 523 in the original Complaint as invoking the EMTALA civil remedy:

365. In violation of EMPTALA [sic] and COBRA violations Mrs. Valdez was not examined, checked, asked what her problem was, nor had her temperature and blood pressure checked [*98] while Mrs. Valdez was in such a condition.

* * * *

377. Mrs. Valdez had a right to expect an examination by a Dr. Of her choice at San Juan Hospital at the time of presentment with her malady pursuant to her insurance contracts and EMPTALA [sic] and COBRA statutes and regulations.

(Complaint (Verified), filed July 25, 2000 (dkt. no. 1), at 108-109 PP365, 377.) Besides the fact that neither paragraph accurately states an EMTALA requirement, the original Complaint makes no reference to EMTALA or COBRA in its extended statement of the plaintiffs' "Causes of Action," (id. at 118-154 PP443-523).

Clearly, the original Complaint did not give fair notice to the SJHSD of any claim of liability under EMTALA, even if one had been intended.

Absent leave to amend her pleadings [**99] under Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) & \(b\), or incorporation of the claim as a triable issue in a pretrial order pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\), even taking all of Ms. Valdez' alleged facts as true, the conclusion would necessarily follow that her claim under EMTALA is time-barred.<sup>49</sup>

(5) "Medicare Patient Bill of Rights" (42 U.S.C. § 1395a)

Plaintiffs' counsel points to § 1802 of Title XVIII of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1395a, as an additional footing for plaintiff Helen Valdez' claims, alleging a "violation of Mrs. Valdez' Medicare Patient Bill of Rights to see the medicare provider of her choice," and a violation of her right "to freely contract and associate with the provider of her choice as found in 42 USC 1395a." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 13, 14 PP(19), (24); Proposed Pretrial Order at 5, 6 PP(20), (25).)

Concerning Medicare beneficiaries, § 1395a provides in part:

§ 1395a. Free choice by patient guaranteed

(a) HN37[] Basic freedom of choice Any individual entitled to insurance benefits under this subchapter may obtain health services from any institution, agency, or person qualified to participate [**100] under this subchapter if such institution, agency, or person undertakes to provide him such services.

HN38[] This statute, the so-called Medicare "freedom of choice provision," reflects one of the fundamental principles upon which the Medicare program was founded, and guarantees Medicare beneficiaries the freedom to choose health care providers, who would then be paid by Medicare at the program's prescribed rates. Section 1395a\(a\) bars interference by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (or his subordinates [*1142] in the administration of the Medicare program) with a beneficiary's selection of a physician.<sup>50</sup>

Nothing in the Proposed Amended Complaint or in counsel's proffers at the Pretrial Conference suggests that the Secretary, Medicare program officials -- or anyone else involved in HHS administration of Medicare benefits -- attempted to interfere with Ms. Valdez' choice of health care providers from among those qualified to participate in the Medicare program. No claim whatsoever is made that Dr. Penn [**101] or any other qualified provider was denied Medicare payment or reimbursement for medical care provided to Ms. Valdez as an eligible Medicare recipient.

(6) 42 U.S.C. § 1981

Section 1981 of Title 42, United States Code reads:

HN39[] (a) Statement of equal rights. All persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every State and Territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other.

(b) "Make and enforce contracts" defined. For purposes of this section, the term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship.

<sup>49</sup> Her EMTALA claim fails on its merits as well. (See infra at 109 & n. 81.)

<sup>50</sup> The remaining language of this section gives limited statutory authority for beneficiaries to contract for health care services, e.g., with managed care networks. 42 U.S.C. § 1395a\(b\).

(c) Protection against impairment. The rights protected by this section are protected against impairment by nongovernmental discrimination and impairment under color of State law.

42 U.S.C. § 1981 \(2000\).<sup>51</sup> HN40 [↑] Section 1981 [**102] addresses intentional racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of contracts: "A § 1981 ... plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant intentionally discriminated against him or her on the basis of race." Guides, Ltd. v. Yarmouth Group Property Mgmt., Inc., 295 F.3d 1065, 1073 (10th Cir. 2002) (citing Stewart v. Adolph Coors Co., 217 F.3d 1285, 1288 (10th Cir. 2000)). As to the scope of the protection afforded by § 1981:

HN41 [↑] The Supreme Court has construed the language that secures to all the same contracting rights as "white citizens" to refer only to the racial (as opposed to, say, gender-based or religious) character of the prohibited discrimination .... Whites as well as blacks may assert contract denial claims under § 1981 on the basis of race.

[*1143] Harold S. Lewis, Jr., Civil Rights and Employment Discrimination Law § 1.2, at 3 (1997) (footnote omitted) (citing McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co., 427 U.S. 273, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493, 96 S. Ct. 2574 (1976); see also Guides, Ltd. v. Yarmouth Group Property Mgmt., Inc., 295 F.3d at 1081 n.3 (dissenting opinion) ("In this Circuit, a racial-identity is the cornerstone of a section 1981 and 1982 cause of [**103] action and a necessary element of a plaintiff's prima facie case. See Shawl v. Dillards, Inc., 17 Fed. Appx. 908, 2001 WL 967887, at *2 (10th Cir. 2001) ("To establish a claim under § 1981, the plaintiffs must show that (1) they are members of a protected class ...." (citing Hampton v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc., 247 F.3d 1091, 1101 (10th Cir. 2001)))."). The Supreme Court understands "race" to include "ancestry," defined as genetic membership in an "ethnically and physiognomically distinctive subgrouping of homo sapiens." St. Francis College v. Al-Khzraji, 481 U.S. 604, 613, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 107 S. Ct. 2022 (1987) (quoting Al-Khzraji v. Saint Francis College, 784 F.2d 505, 517 (3d Cir. 1986)).

Based on the history of § 1981, we have little trouble in concluding that Congress intended to protect from discrimination identifiable classes of persons who are subjected to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics. Such discrimination is racial discrimination that Congress intended § 1981 to forbid, whether or not it would be classified as racial in terms of modern scientific theory.

Id. (footnote omitted). However, "ancestry" as "race" -- [**104] as a prohibited basis for discrimination for purposes of § 1981-- does not embrace national origin, religion or status as an alien. Id. at 613 ("If respondent on remand can prove that he was subjected to intentional discrimination based on the fact that he was born an Arab, rather than solely on the place or nation of his origin, or his religion, he will have made out a case under § 1981."); King v. Township of East Lampeter, 17 F.Supp.2d 394, 417 (E.D.Pa. 1998) ("The scope of § 1981 is not so broad as to include disparity in treatment on the basis of religion, sex, or national origin."), affirmed, 182 F.3d 903 (3d Cir.) (mem.), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 951, 120 S. Ct. 373, 145 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1999); Vuksta v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 540 F.Supp. 1276, 1281 (E.D.Pa.1982), affirmed, 707 F.2d 1405, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 835, 104 S. Ct. 121, 78 L. Ed. 2d 119 (1983)

Thus, to state a claim under § 1981, the plaintiffs must show that (1) they are members of an identifiable racial or ancestral group; (2) the defendant had an intent to discriminate on the basis of their race or ancestry; and (3) the discrimination concerned one or more of the activities enumerated in the statute, viz., the making and enforcing of a contract. See Green v. State Bar of Texas, 27 F.3d 1083, 1086 (5th Cir. 1994); Mian v. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp., 7 F.3d 1085, 1087 (2d Cir. 1993). A § 1981 claim for. "interference with the right to make and enforce a contract must allege the actual loss of a contract interest, not [**106] merely the possible loss of future contract opportunities." Morris v. Office Max, Inc., 89 F.3d 411, 414-15 \(7th Cir. 1996\) (citing Phelps v. Wichita Eagle-Beacon, 886 F.2d 1262 \(10th Cir. 1989\)). Moreover, "It has been held that HN43 [↑] 'prudential limitations on standing ordinarily require that an action under section[] 1981 ... be brought by the direct victims of the alleged discrimination because they are best situated to assert the individual rights in question.'" Guides, Ltd., 295 F.3d at 1072 (quoting Clifton Terrace Assoc., Ltd. v. United Technologies Corp., 289 U.S. App. D.C. 121, 929 F.2d 714, 721 \(D.C.Cir. 1991\)).

<sup>51</sup> 42 U.S.C. § 1981 \(2000\) was originally enacted as part of the HN42 [↑] Civil Rights Act of 1866, Act of April 9, 1866, ch. 31, 14 Stat. 27, the first of the Reconstruction Era civil rights acts, and was grounded upon the Thirteenth Amendment, ratified a year earlier. The provision was re-enacted in 1870, two years after the ratification [**105] of the Fourteenth Amendment. See. Act of May 31, 1870, ch. 114, § 16, 16 Stat. 144. It was amended more recently by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, Pub. L. No. 102-166, title I, § 101, 105 Stat. 1071 \(1991\) (designated then-existing provisions as subsection (a) and added subsections (b) and (c)). See also Guides, Ltd. v. Yarmouth Group Property Mgmt., Inc., 295 F.3d 1065, 1080 (10th Cir. 2002) (dissenting opinion) ("The protection afforded by these statutes finds its roots in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments...." (citations omitted).)

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1143 [2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **105

[*1144] None of the allegations of the Proposed Amended Complaint plead facts that would serve as direct evidence of intentional discrimination against the Part I Plaintiffs in the making or enforcement of contracts based upon these plaintiffs' race or ancestry. See Durham v. Xerox Corp., 18 F.3d 836, 841 \(10th Cir.\) ("Without proof of pretext or direct evidence of discriminatory intent, Durham cannot meet her ultimate burden of proving intentional discrimination."), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 819, 115 S.Ct. 80, 130 L.Ed. 2d 33 (1994). Several paragraphs repeat comments allegedly [**107] made by one defendant, Dr. Redd, in which he referred to Dr. Nathaniel Penn as a "little New York Jew," or words to that effect. (Proposed Amended Complaint at 53 P168(B); 58 P133(F); 59 P138; 68-69 P166.) Such comments may or may not address Dr. Penn's "ancestry" for purposes of § 1981, cf. Shaare Tefila Congregation v. Cobb, 481 U.S. 615, 95 L.Ed. 2d 594, 107 S.Ct. 2019 \(1987\) (42 U.S.C. § 1982 protects property rights of Jewish congregation in synagogue); Singer v. Denver Sch. Dist. No. 1, 959 F. Supp. 1325, 1331 \(D.Colo. 1997\), but that question is not now before this court because Dr. Penn is no longer a plaintiff in this action. (See Minute Entry, dated March 1, 2002 (dkt. no. 296).)

(7) 42 U.S.C. § 1985\(3\)

Section 1985\(3\) of Title 42, United States Code reads:

(3) HN44 [↑] Depriving persons of rights or privileges. If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire or go in disguise on the highway or on the premises of another, for the purpose of depriving, either directly or indirectly, any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws; or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities [**108] of any State or Territory from giving or securing to all persons within such State or Territory the equal protection of the laws; or if two or more persons conspire to prevent by force, intimidation, or threat, any citizen who is lawfully entitled to vote, from giving his support or advocacy in a legal manner, toward or in favor of the election of any lawfully qualified person as an elector for President or Vice President, or as a Member of Congress of the United States; or to injure any citizen in person or property on account of such support or advocacy; in any case of conspiracy set forth in this section, if one or more persons engaged therein do, or cause to be done, any act in furtherance of the object of such conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his person or property, or deprived of having and exercising any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, the party so injured or deprived may have an action for the recovery of damages occasioned by such injury or deprivation, against any one or more of the conspirators.

42 U.S.C. § 1985\(3\) \(2000\). <sup>52</sup>

HN45 [↑] To state a claim under § 1985, there "must be some racial, or perhaps otherwise class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus behind the conspirators' action." Griffin v. Breckenridge, 403 U.S. 88, 102, 29 L.Ed. 2d 338, 91 S.Ct. 1790 \(1971\). A plaintiff who fails to allege racial or class-based discrimination cannot state a claim under § 1985\(3\). See Burns v. County of King, 883 F.2d 819, 821 \(9th Cir. 1989\) (citing Bretz v. Kelman, 773 F.2d 1026, 1028 \(9th Cir. 1985\) (en banc)).

[*1145] In this case, the Part I Plaintiffs allege "civil rights violations regarding freedom to contract, free speech, free association, including 1985 conspiracy," and a "conspiracy to deprive the Plaintiffs of their legal entitlements of due process, equal protection, privacy, rights of association, rights to contract," as well as "state license

---

<sup>52</sup> Section 1985 was enacted as part of the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871, Act of April 20, 1871, ch. 22, § 2, 17 Stat. 13. [**109]

entitlements," "Medicaid entitlements," and even an "entitlement to a contract with the District that is based upon principles of good faith and fair dealing, with adequate consideration," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 3 P(1), 4 PP(9), (10), (12), (13) & (14)), but they do not allege discrimination against any remaining Part I Plaintiff based upon that plaintiff's race. [**110]

(8) 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Section 1983 of Title 42, United States Code, provides, in pertinent part:

HN46 Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State ..., subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress, ....

42 U.S.C. § 1983 \(2000\).<sup>53</sup> HN47 "Section 1983 provides an enforcement remedy for one who is deprived under color of state law of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution." Trujillo v. Board of County Comm'r's of Santa Fe, 768 F.2d 1186, 1189 (10th Cir. 1985). "There are two elements to a section 1983 claim: (1) the conduct must have subjected the plaintiff to a deprivation of constitutional rights," or rights protected by federal law. Jones v. Community Redevelopment Agency, 733 F.2d 646, 649 (9th Cir. 1984) (citing Williams v. Gorton, 529 F.2d 668, 670 (9th Cir. 1976)).

HN48 Section 1983 does not specify the state of mind on the part of someone who "subjects, or causes to be subjected" a person to a deprivation of civil rights which a plaintiff must allege and prove to establish liability under the statute; the question is "did the defendant violate the plaintiff's Fourteenth Amendment rights? The defendant's state of mind is relevant only to the existence of the claimed Fourteenth Amendment violation." 1 Sheldon H. Nahmod, Civil Rights and Civil Liberties Litigation: The Law of Section 1983 § 3:2 (4th ed. Rev. 2004) (footnote omitted).

Although this section does not require a specific state of mind for actionability, see Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 534, 101 S.Ct. 1908, 1912, 68 L.Ed.2d 420 (1981), a court must examine closely the nature of the constitutional right asserted to determine whether a deprivation, of that right requires any particular state of mind, McKay v. Hammock, 730 F.2d 1367, 1373 (10th Cir. 1984) (en banc). For instance, it is well established that deprivations of equal protection require proof of discriminatory intent on the part of the state actor, see, e.g., Washington v. Davis, 426 U.S. 229, 96 S.Ct. 2040, 48 L.Ed.2d 597 (1976), [**112] while deprivations under the Eighth Amendment require a showing of deliberate indifference, see, e.g., Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 97 S.Ct. 285, [*1146] 50 L.Ed.2d 251 (1976). Moreover, some deprivations of First Amendment rights require proof that the state's action was intended to repress an individual's protected speech or association. See, e.g., Mt. Healthy City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 287, 97 S. Ct. 568, 576, 50 L. Ed. 2d 471 (1977); ....

Trujillo, 768 F.2d at 1189 (some citations omitted).<sup>54</sup>

<sup>53</sup> Like § 1985, § 1983 was originally enacted as part of the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871, Act of April 20, 1871, ch. 22, 17 Stat. 13. [**111]

<sup>54</sup> See 1 Nahmod, supra, at § 3:2:

Different Fourteenth Amendment violations (and hence Bill of Rights violations) require different states of mind, apparently because of the language and history of the applicable constitutional provisions. For example, equal protection violations

HN49 [↑] In order to state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a complaint must assert a right to recover under the Constitution or other federal laws and not be wholly insubstantial and frivolous. See, e.g., Keniston v. Roberts, 717 F.2d 1295, 1298 (9th Cir. 1983).

"Conclusionary allegations, unsupported by facts, [will be] rejected as insufficient to state a claim under the Civil Rights Act." Sherman v. Yakahi, 549 F.2d 1287, 1290 (9th Cir. 1977). The plaintiff must "allege with at least some degree of particularity overt acts which defendants engaged in" that support the plaintiff's claim. Id., quoting Powell v. Workmen's Compensation Board, 327 F.2d 131, 137 (2d Cir. 1964).

Jones, 733 F.2d at 649.

Here, the Part I Plaintiffs assert civil rights "violations regarding freedom to contract, free speech, free association," and "retaliation for speaking and association," as well as the denial of due process guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 3 PP(1), (2), (3).<sup>55</sup>) They allege "interference with the patients' [**114] and [plaintiffs'] ability to freely contract for services with the District, with each other, with patients as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment, Utah Unfair Practices Act, and federal common law," (id. at 4 P(8)), and as to plaintiff Helen Valdez, a denial of equal protection of the laws. (id. at 5 P(21).)

Whether these allegations are wholly insubstantial and frivolous, or whether they raise genuine issues requiring a trial was examined in detail by court and counsel during the Pretrial Conference. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\).

§ 1983 Conspiracy

The Part I Plaintiffs also allege a "conspiracy to deprive the Plaintiffs of their legal entitlements of due process, equal protection, privacy, rights of association, rights to contract," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 4 P(13)), but they do not plead specific facts showing both conspiratorial agreement and concerted action by the named defendants.

HN50 [↑] In order to prevail on such a claim, "a plaintiff must plead and prove not only a conspiracy, but also an actual deprivation [**115] of rights; pleading and proof of one without the other will be insufficient." [*1147] /Dixon v. Lawton, 898 F.2d 1443, 1449 (10th Cir. 1990); Snell v. Tunnell, 920 F.2d 673, 701 (10th Cir. 1990). In pleading conspiracy, a plaintiff must allege "specific facts showing agreement and concerted action among [the alleged co-conspirators]." Hunt v. Bennett, 17 F.3d 1263, 1266 (10th Cir. 1994). "Conclusory allegations of conspiracy are insufficient to state a valid § 1983 claim." Durre v. Dempsey, 869 F.2d 543, 545 (10th Cir. 1989). Thus, a plaintiff fails to state a claim for conspiracy absent specific facts showing a "meeting of the minds" among the alleged co-conspirators. See Hunt, 17 F.3d at 1268.

Marino v. Mayger, 118 Fed.Appx. 393, 404-405, 2004 WL 2801795, **10 (10th Cir. 2004) (unpublished disposition). The Part I Plaintiffs' conclusory assertion of a conspiracy, without more, fails to state a viable claim under § 1983.

Liability of the SJHSD & San Juan County

To state a colorable claim against San Juan County or the SJHSD under § 1983, the Part I Plaintiffs each must allege that a policy or custom of the County or the SJHSD was the proximate cause of the plaintiffs' constitutional injury. [*116] See Monell v. Dept. of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611, 98 S. Ct. 2018 (1978) HN51 [↑] (local government may be liable under § 1983 if "the action that is alleged to be unconstitutional require purposeful discrimination, Eighth Amendment violations require deliberate indifference, and due process violations require more than mere negligence. The Supreme Court finally made clear the distinction between § 1983 and the underlying constitutional violation in Parratt v. Taylor when it held that, as a matter of statutory interpretation, § 1983 imposed no independent state-of-mind requirement [**113] for the prima facie case, in contrast to state-of-mind requirements for the violation of particular constitutional provisions themselves. [Footnotes omitted.]

---

<sup>55</sup> Plaintiffs also assert their reliance upon a due process guarantee in the provisions of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112 \(2000\), discussed infra.

implements or executes a policy, statement, ordinance, regulation or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers."). Causation presents a threshold question: "our first inquiry in any case alleging [local governmental] liability under § 1983 is the question whether there is a direct causal link between a [local governmental] policy or custom and the alleged constitutional deprivation," because "it is only when the 'execution of the government's policy or custom ... inflicts the injury'" that a local government entity may be held liable under § 1983. City of Canton, Ohio v. Harris, 489 U.S. 378, 385, 103 L. Ed. 2d 412, 109 S. Ct. 1197 (1989) (internal citation omitted). HN52[] Assuming that causation may be shown,

To subject a governmental entity to liability, "a municipal policy must be a 'policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by [a municipality's] officers.'" See Lankford v. City of Hobart, 73 F.3d 283, 286 (10th Cir. 1996) [**117] (quoting Starrett v. Wadley, 876 F.2d 808, 818); see also Monell v. New York City Dep't of Social Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611 (1978). Absent such an official policy, a municipality may also be held liable if the discriminatory practice is "so permanent and well settled as to constitute a 'custom or usage' with the force of law." Lankford, 73 F.3d at 286 (quoting Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 168, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970)).

Murrell v. School Dist. No. 1, 186 F.3d 1238, 1249 (10th Cir. 1999). Thus, acts that do not rise to the level of official policy may nonetheless create liability if they are "sufficiently widespread and pervasive so as to constitute a 'custom.'" Id. at 1250. However, conduct directed solely at a plaintiff may not "demonstrate a custom or policy" of the entity "to be deliberately indifferent" to that conduct as a general matter. Id. (citing Monell, 436 U.S. at 691 & n. 56).

HN53[] This deliberate indifference standard may be satisfied "when the municipality has actual or constructive notice that its action or failure is substantially certain to result in a constitutional violation, and it consciously and deliberately chooses [**118] to disregard the risk of harm." [*1148] Barney v. Pulsipher, 143 F.3d 1299, 1307 (10th Cir. 1999). Although a single incident generally will not give rise to liability, Oklahoma City v. Tuttle, 471 U.S. 808, 823, 105 S.Ct. 2427, 85 L.Ed.2d 791 (1985), "deliberate indifference may be found absent a pattern of unconstitutional behavior if a violation of federal rights is a 'highly predictable' or 'plainly obvious' consequence of a municipality's action." Barney, 143 F.3d at 1307 (internal citations omitted). The official position must operate as the "moving force" behind the violation, and the plaintiff must demonstrate a "direct causal link" between the action and the right violation. Bd. of County Comm'r's v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 399, 117 S.Ct. 1382, 137 L.Ed.2d 626 (1997).

Olsen v. Layton Hills Mall, 312 F.3d 1304, (10th Cir. 2002).

Plaintiffs contend that "the County and District had a de facto policy of deliberate indifference to those who complained of suffering from Dr. Redd and other District staff members," and that "the County and District had a policy of harming the reputations of persons in retaliation for challenging their authority." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 20-21 P52-53; see Proposed [**119] Amended Complaint at 34 PP52-53 (same)). In the Proposed Amended Complaint, they allege that the SJHSD administrators and Board members, as well as the County Commissioners, County Administrator and County Attorney "behaved in a deliberately indifferent manner, failed to adequately investigate the problems Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur identified in the District, did not hold hearings on the matters, did not enforce, or take any actions to rectify the situations identified by Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 16-17.) "A pattern of deliberated indifference as a policy was exhibited by the County Commission, County Attorney, Health District board, administrators and medical staff." (Id. at 17.) <sup>56</sup>

---

<sup>56</sup> More recently, counsel argued that "[a] repeated pattern of a government entity's conduct is a de facto 'silent' policy enabling [individual defendants] to ultra vires arbitrarily deny a plaintiff of his liberty and property rights," that "careful or heightened scrutiny attaches when these liberty and property rights are compromised by government," and that the federal civil rights acts are "designed to specifically cure a situation wherein the officials refuse [**120] to enforce provisions of the law." (Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), at 5 (citing Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U. S. 833, 120 L. Ed. 2d 674, 112 S. Ct. 2791 (1992), and Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611, 98 S. Ct. 2018(1978)).)

Of course, HN54↑ the policy "causation" question presupposes that a deprivation of constitutional rights has occurred; if there was no deprivation, the policy or custom is immaterial. Before the Part I Plaintiffs can plead and prove an arguable legal claim against San Juan County or the SJHSD for liability under § 1983, they first must allege "the deprivation of [a] right[], privilege[], or immunity secured by the Constitution and laws." 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

For the reasons explained hereafter, on the factual allegations now before the court, Dr. MacArthur suffered no arguable deprivation of a constitutional "liberty" or "property" interest, or other federally protected right. See infra at 83-94. Likewise, for reasons explained hereafter, [\[\*121\]](#) Ms. Lyman has not alleged facts showing such a deprivation. See infra at 94-105. Finally, Ms Valdez asserts that--as a woman of advancing years, married to a Mexican-American husband--being refused examination [\[\*1149\]](#) and treatment at an emergency room denies her the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment, yet, as examined in greater detail below, the specific facts pleaded and proffered in support of her claim show no actual refusal or denial of examination or treatment on the date in question, and therefore prove insufficient to raise a genuine issue as to constitutional deprivation that would require a trial. See infra at 106-111.

Plaintiffs' § 1983 Claims Against the County Commissioners & SJHSD Board Members

In the Proposed Amended Complaint, the plaintiffs alleged that the SJHSD "Board members and County Commissioners ... behaved in a deliberately indifferent manner; failed to adequately investigate the problems Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur identified in the District, did not hold hearings on the matters, did not enforce, or take any actions to rectify the situations identified by Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 16-17.) The plaintiffs [\[\*122\]](#) characterize the SJHSD Board's inaction on their grievances as "[a] pattern of deliberated indifference as a policy" that "was exhibited by the County Commission, County Attorney, Health District board, administrators and medical staff." (Id. at 17; see also id. at 21 ("The County and District ... evidenced a pattern of deliberate indifference to [plaintiffs'] plight."); id. at 87 P237 ("The Health District and the County did not did not reprimand Dr. Redd or any other medical staff member for their treatment of Mrs. Lyman or Dr. MacArthur, or Helen Valdez.").) As noted above, plaintiffs also asserted at pretrial that "the County and District had a de facto policy of deliberate indifference to those who complained of suffering from Dr. Redd and other District staff members." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 21 P52.)

Vicarious Liability, Respondeat Superior & § 1983

The defendants respond that "with respect to each of the plaintiffs' discrimination and due process claims, San Juan County, the Health District, Roger Atcity, John Lewis, John Housekeeper, Karen Adams, Patsy Shumway and Gary Holliday are not liable because respondeat superior liability does not attach for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [\[\*123\]](#) unless the adverse treatment resulted from a policy or custom of the Health District, of which there is no evidence in this case." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 7 Pvii.)

It has long been understood that HN55↑ "the doctrine of respondeat superior was not applicable to render a supervisor or other superior liable under § 1983 for the unconstitutional conduct of his subordinates." 1 Sheldon H. Nahmod, Civil Rights and Civil Liberties Litigation: The Law of Section 1983 § 3:90, at 3-330 (4th ed. rev. 2004) (footnotes omitted); see Draeger v. Grand Central, Inc., 504 F.2d 142, 145 (10th Cir. 1974) ("Generally speaking, the doctrine of vicarious liability or respondeat superior has been ruled out in cases arising under the Federal Civil Rights statutes."). Monell v. Dept. of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611, 98 S. Ct. 2018 (1978), clearly holds that vicarious liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior "cannot be applied either to superiors or to local government entities" under § 1983, under any circumstances. 1 Nahmod, supra, at § 3:91, at 3-332 (emphasis in original; footnote omitted). Instead, Monell held that local governmental entities "are suable persons under § 1983 [\[\*124\]](#) and can be held liable for their unconstitutional policies, practices and customs." Id. (emphasis in original).

[\[\*1150\]](#) Consequently, in light of Monell, . . . HN56↑ the superior does not and should not invariably have a § 1983 duty, solely by reason of position, to compensate a person whose constitutional rights have been violated by subordinates. What is currently required in order for the superior to have such a duty is that the superior personally either acted unconstitutionally or with deliberate indifference. That is, the superior must have possessed either the state of mind for the particular constitutional violation or deliberate indifference, and must also have played a causal role in plaintiff's constitutional deprivation.

Id. (emphasis added & footnote omitted). HN57 Section 1983 addresses conduct which "subjects, or causes to be subjected" the plaintiff to a deprivation of civil rights, requiring pleading and proof of a causal connection between a defendant's conduct and the constitutional deprivation suffered by the plaintiff. See Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 376-377, 46 L. Ed. 2d 561, 96 S. Ct. 598 \(1976\) ("the responsible authorities had played no affirmative part in depriving any members [\[\*\*125\]](#) of the two respondent classes of any constitutional rights").

Thus, theories of vicarious liability are not available to § 1983 plaintiffs. "Only the direct acts or omissions of government officials, not the acts of subordinates, will give rise to individual liability under § 1983." Coleman v. Houston Indep. Sch. Dist., 113 F.3d 528, 534 \(5th Cir. 1997\). Where an official becomes aware of a constitutional violation only after the fact, he or she cannot be held liable for the violation under § 1983 because the violation has already occurred and the official played no causal role in it. See Schultz v. Baumgart, 738 F.2d 231, 238-239 \(7th Cir. 1984\). Thus, "some personal involvement of the supervisory official in the subordinate's unconstitutional conduct -- analogous to Monell's official policy or custom requirement for local government liability -- must be shown for § 1983 liability." 1 Nahmod, supra, § 6.6, at 6-24 (emphasis in original). See Annotation, Vicarious Liability of Superior Under 42 USCS § 1983 for Subordinate's Acts in Deprivation of Civil Rights, 51 A.L.R. Fed. 285 (1981 & Supp. 2004), and cases cited therein.

The Part I Plaintiffs plead the language of "deliberate indifference," [\[\*\*126\]](#) "pattern," and "policy," but allege no specific facts showing that the individual SJHSD Board members knew of or directly instigated any denial HN58 [\[\*\*126\]](#) of constitutional due process or other actionable deprivation by SJHSD medical and support staff members; nor do they assert that the alleged violations were directly effected pursuant to an existing policy or custom instituted by each Board member named as a defendant. Instead, plaintiffs contend that the SJHSD Board members owed an affirmative duty to provide the plaintiffs with post- deprivation relief--that is, a duty after the fact to investigate matters that the plaintiffs complained of, to "find and hold accountable the responsible parties," and to thereby "resolve the provider and patients' and public's concerns." Cf. 1 Nahmod, supra, § 6:6 at 6-24 ("Plaintiffs may be expected to try to fit local government failure to act cases into Monell's category of official policy or custom.")

Plaintiffs have not cited to pertinent authority establishing such an affirmative duty on the part of senior public officials to vindicate plaintiffs' interests in that fashion--the breach of which would render the County Commissioners or SJHSD Board members [\[\*\*127\]](#) individually liable to plaintiffs under § 1983. Absent such authority, the court has discerned no basis in the law or policy of § 1983 for finding the existence of such an affirmative duty. See generally [\[\*1151\] Baker v. McCollan, 443 U.S. 137, 61 L. Ed. 2d 433, 99 S. Ct. 2689 \(1979\)](#) (sheriff has no affirmative duty under § 1983 to investigate arrestee's claims of innocence and mistaken identity).

Even assuming that plaintiffs' claims of due process violations or discrimination by SJHSD medical or support staff could be proven, holding the County Commissioners and SJHSD Board members individually liable for failing to vindicate the plaintiffs' interests after the fact-- failing to investigate their complaints, "not holding hearings on the matters," and not "taking any actions to rectify the situations identified by Mrs. Lyman and Dr. MacArthur"-- would attach § 1983 liability to post hoc conduct that can bear no causal relationship to the alleged constitutional deprivations themselves. Remembering that § 1983 imposes liability only upon one who "subjects, or causes to be subjected" a person to a constitutional deprivation, the requirement that a plaintiff must demonstrate a "direct causal [\[\*\*128\]](#) link" between the defendant's conduct and the civil rights violation, Bd. of County Comm 'rs v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 399, 137 L. Ed. 2d 626, 117 S. Ct. 1382 \(1997\), would appear to preclude the imposition of § 1983 liability upon the County Commissioners and the SJHSD Board members based upon the "failure to vindicate" theory urged by the Part I Plaintiffs.

The SJHSD Board & the SJHSD Medical Staff's "Policy" re: Physician Assistants

Referring to the SJHSD medical staff's alleged adoption in 1999 of a staff "policy" requiring Physician Assistants exercising SJHSD staff privileges to be supervised by a local physician having SJHSD staff privileges,<sup>57</sup> plaintiffs complain that "while the [Physician Assistant] policies in question appear to be facially neutral, in application they applied only to Mrs. Lyman and were not approved by the District Board. However, [*1152] the District Board knew of them and did nothing to stop them from being used to prevent Mrs. Lyman's practice." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 22 (emphasis added).)"<sup>58</sup>

Ms. Lyman's contention that the 1999 staff "policy" re: local supervision (or the other alleged "denials" of privileges of which she complains) resulted in a constitutional deprivation under § 1983 presupposes that she had a constitutional right to exercise practice privileges at SJHSD facilities free of any such limitation or restraint imposed by the [**131] SJHSD medical staff.

Qualified Immunity & Plaintiffs' § 1983 Claims

In the Proposed Pretrial Order, the defendants asserted that because San Juan County and the Health District are political subdivisions of the State of Utah and the alleged acts and/or omissions by County commissioners, officials or employees or Health District trustees, employees or staff members, about which plaintiffs complain, were carried out within the scope of and pursuant to their official duties as trustees, employees or staff members of the Health District, plaintiffs' claims are barred by the doctrine of qualified immunity, as well as "the provisions of the Utah Governmental Immunity Act, Utah Code Ann. § 63-30-1 et seq., including but not limited to § 63-30-3 and § 63-30-10." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 10-11 Pxxxvi.)

The Supreme Court has held that HN59 [↑] "government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability from civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or

<sup>57</sup> Plaintiff Lyman alleges:

31. Though Dr. Penn and Dr. Mena were staff members, Michele Lyman did not enjoy full privileges while supervised by them.

32. Dr. Redd [**129] and Dr. Jones and Dr. Cook and Dr. Nelson did not approve Mrs. Lyman having privileges unless her doctor was a medical staff member and then only if the physician was in the same town as she.

33. While the policy for P.A.s appears neutral, it effected only Michele Lyman in how it was applied, monitored, and carried out.

* * * *

209. Dr. Penn and Ms. Lyman attended the Medical staff Meeting for June, 1999. Dr. Penn and Ms. Lyman requested full privileges be restored and Dr. Redd and Jones both stated that only if Dr. Penn was willing to sit in Blanding with Ms. Lyman while Ms. Lyman took ER call and they would not supervise me. Mr. Bryant as a P.A. working under Dr. Jones while Dr. Jones was not in Blanding, had no such restraints. Mrs. Lyman pointed out that she covered the ER (Blanding urgent care clinic) in Blanding by herself on many occasions. There was no response. (Cmplt. 137-145) Staff had previously voted for her privileges and then the County, Board, and medical staff did nothing while District staff Ora Lee Black, Dr. Redd, Gloria Yanito denied her the same. Some privileges as to labs and xrays were eventually restored.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 31 PP31-33; 78 P209; see [**130] Proposed Pretrial Order at 18 PP31-33; 54 P209 (same).)

Recounting that the medical staff "passed a policy saying in order to have privileges your supervising physician has to be in the same town," Ms. Lyman's counsel asserted that she did not see "where the governing board adopted that policy so it was an action taken by medical staff but under the bylaws the governing board is the body that sets the policy." (Tr. 11/15/02, at 15:7-24 (Ms. Rose).) Apparently the argument is that the SJHSD Board adopted a "policy" of letting the medical staff make "policy" concerning Physician Assistants' staff privileges, but that it did so without any formal Board action.

<sup>58</sup> Plaintiffs also allege that "as a policy and pattern of practice, those who inform those in power of problems are subjected to reputation assassination within the area." (Id. at 17.)

constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known." Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396, 102 S. Ct. 2727 \(1982\). This grant of immunity [**132] is intended to balance two competing interests. On the one hand, when an official abuses his office, "an action for damages may offer the only realistic avenue for vindication of constitutional guarantees." Id. 457 U.S. at 814. On the other hand, exposing government officials to damages suits "entails substantial social costs," Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 638, 97 L. Ed. 2d 523, 107 S. Ct. 3034 \(1987\), such as "the expenses of litigation, the diversion of official energy from pressing public issues, . . . the deterrence of able citizens from acceptance of public office . . . [and the deterrence of public officials from] 'the unflinching discharge of their duties.'" Harlow, 457 U.S. at 814. "The Supreme Court has attempted to strike the balance between these two concerns by shielding government officials from suits for civil damages 'insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.'" Lawrence v. Reed, 406 F.3d 1224, 1230 \(10th Cir. 2005\) (quoting Harlow, 457 U.S. at 818). "Although courts have derived from this statement a variety of multi-part tests, the essential inquiry is: would an [**133] objectively reasonable official have known that his conduct was unlawful?" Id. (citing Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. at 640).

HN60 [↑] In the Tenth Circuit, we employ a three-step inquiry. See Roska ex rel. Roska v. Peterson, 328 F.3d 1230, 1239-40, 1247, 1251 \(10th Cir. 2003\). First, we ask "whether the plaintiff's allegations, if [*1153] true, establish a constitutional violation." Id. at 1239-40. If not, the suit is dismissed; if so, we move to the second step: "whether the law was clearly established at the time the alleged violations occurred." Id. at 1247. This step gives the official an opportunity to show that he "neither knew nor should have known of the relevant legal standard" because the law was not clearly established at the time he acted. Harlow, 457 U.S. at 819, 102 S.Ct. 2727. Where the law is not clearly established, courts do not require officials to anticipate its future developments, and qualified immunity is therefore appropriate.

If the law was clearly established, we reach the third step of the inquiry: whether, in spite of the fact that the law was clearly established, "extraordinary circumstances"--such as reliance on the advice of counsel or on a statute--"so 'prevented' [**134] [the official] from knowing that his actions were unconstitutional that he should not be imputed with knowledge of a clearly established right." Roska, 328 F.3d at 1251. This occurs only "rarely." Id.

Id. <sup>59</sup> HN61 [↑] Whether an official is protected by qualified immunity thus turns upon the objective legal reasonableness of the action, in light of legal rules clearly established at the time the action was taken. <sup>60</sup> The contours of the right allegedly violated must be sufficiently clear so that a reasonable official would understand that what he or she is doing violates that right. Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639, 97 L. Ed. 2d 523, 107 S. Ct. 3034 \(1987\). "This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, . . . but it is to say that in light of pre-existing law that unlawfulness must be apparent." Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 739, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666, 122 S. Ct. 2508 \(2002\) (quoting Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. at 640) (internal citation omitted). Thus, if prior case law provides "fair warning"

<sup>59</sup> HN62 [↑] Once a defendant raises a the defense of qualified immunity, "the burden shifts to the plaintiff [to] satisfy a heavy two-part burden" to "demonstrate that the defendant violated a constitutional or statutory right[,] and "that the right at issue was clearly established at the time of the defendant's unlawful conduct." Gross v. Pirtle, 245 F.3d 1151, 1155, 1156 \(10th Cir. 2001\). If the plaintiff cannot make both showings, the defendant is entitled to qualified immunity; if he can, the burden shifts to the defendant "to prove that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that he or she is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Id. at 1156.

<sup>60</sup> The Supreme Court has expressly held that HN63 [↑] qualified immunity is governed by an objective reasonableness standard, and that "evidence concerning the defendant's subjective intent is simply irrelevant to that defense." Crawford-El v. Britton, 523 U.S. 574, 588, 140 L. Ed. 2d 759, 118 S. Ct. 1584 \(1998\).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1153 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **134

that an officer's conduct would violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights, "officials [**135] can still be on notice that their conduct violates established law even in novel factual circumstances." Id. at 739-740, 741.<sup>61</sup>

It is important to note that HN65 qualified immunity "establishes a right not to be tried." Elliott v. Thomas, 937 F.2d 338, 341 (7th Cir. 1991). Accordingly, the [*1154] courts often find it appropriate to make a determination on this issue prior to commencement of trial.

"The 'entitlement [to qualified immunity] is an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability; and like an absolute immunity, it is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial.'" National Commodity and Barter Association v. Archer, 31 F.3d 1521, 1532 n. 8 (10th Cir. 1994) (quoting Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526, 86 L. Ed. 2d 411, 105 S. Ct. 2806 (1985)).

Chavez v. City of Albuquerque, 402 F.3d 1039, 1044 \(10th Cir. 2005\).

Dr. MacArthur's § 1983 Claim

Dr. MacArthur's [*137] "Right" to Practice at SJHSD Facilities

Counsel asserts that "Dr. MacArthur's ability to practice medicine entering into patient contracts which are property constitutes a liberty and property right," relying on an oft-quoted passage from the Declaration of Independence and an excerpt from Justice Bradley's dissenting opinion in The Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L. Ed. 394 (1873), referring to the right to pursue a common calling.<sup>62</sup> (Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), at 4-5.) In counsel's view, this "liberty and property right" to practice medicine amounts to a carte blanche entitlement to full practice privileges at county-sponsored hospital and clinical facilities. Counsel elaborated on this view at the Pretrial Conference:

THE COURT: Okay. Now what's, what's Dr. MacArthur complaining about?

MS. ROSE: He's complaining about one, he had, he had a medical license that allowed him privileges.

THE COURT: Well you don't get privileges as a matter [of] course do you?

MS. ROSE: I think that when [*138] you're, I think that when there is a Congressional policy for encouraging people, providers to go to rural areas to increase competition in those areas and so forth.

THE COURT: But the hospital as a hospital grants privileges and denies privileges or revokes privileges?

MS. ROSE: And that's, that's the key question here Your Honor. He has, I mean they're not claiming that I'm aware of that he was unqualified to work there, they're claiming that those 2 documents weren't in his file. Dr. Redd said he saw the documents.

* * * *

<sup>61</sup> According to the court of appeals, HN64 "In order for the law to be clearly established there must have been [*136] a Supreme Court or other Tenth Circuit decision on point so that 'the contours of the right [were] sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right.' Finn v. N.M., State Pers. Office, 249 F.3d 1241 (10th Cir. 2001) at 1250 (quoting Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 640, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 97 L.Ed.2d 523 (1987))." McFall v. Bednar, 407 F.3d 1081, 2005 WL 1023433 (10th Cir. 2005).

<sup>62</sup>

This right to choose one's calling is an essential part of that liberty which it is the object of government to protect; and a calling, when chosen, is a man's property right.... A law which prohibits citizens ... from adopting a lawful employment, or from following a lawful employment previously adopted, does deprive them of liberty as well as property, without due process of law.

83 U.S. \(16 Wall.\), at 116, 122 (Bradley, J., dissenting); see Tr. 11/14/02 at 28:11-23 (Ms. Rose) (quoting Justice Bradley's dissenting opinion, [*140] 83 U.S. \(16 Wall.\) at 120).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1154 LEXIS 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **140

THE COURT: Well no one says that you're entitled to have hospital privileges. Show me a provision that says that you're entitled, as a matter of right to have hospital privileges?

MS. ROSE: Well here's another way of rephrasing that. Where is the provision that allows a tax supported publicly funded district to prohibit an otherwise [*1155] qualified physician from using the facilities for these patients and I think that's more of the crux of it.

We've got, we've, you know, the district's powers are limited by statute. Where's the statute that allows this district to deny and limit the powers and rights and privileges that Dr. MacArthur gets from having that medical license[?].

* [**139] * * *

THE COURT: Yes. The fact that you have a medical license doesn't give you automatically hospital privileges. You've got to have a different kind of relationship established.

MS. ROSE: And what right, what statutory source allows the hospital to maintain a monopoly or attempt to maintain a monopoly and reserve its privileges to those they arbitrarily and capriciously choose to bestow them upon[?]

Nothing, there is no source for a publicly funded tax supported hospital accepting Medicare and Medicaid to do so because to do so deprives the Medicare patients in the area of the right to choose who their providers are.

(Tr. 11/14/02, at 19:7-23, 24:13-25:1, 28:24-29:10.)

As counsel suggests, HN66<sup>63</sup> the *Fourteenth Amendment's* "liberty" guarantee includes an individual's right "to engage in any of the common occupations of life":

"While this court has not attempted to define with exactness the liberty ... guaranteed (by the *Fourteenth Amendment*), the term has received much consideration and some of the included things have been definitely stated. Without doubt, it denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized ... as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men." *Meyer v. Nebraska*, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 43 S.Ct. 625, 626, 67 L.Ed. 1042. In a Constitution for a free people, there can be no doubt that the meaning of 'liberty' must be broad indeed. See, e.g., *Bolling v. Sharpe*, 347 U.S. 497, 499-500, 74 S.Ct. 693, 694, 98 L.Ed. 884; *Stanley v. Illinois*, 405 U.S. 645, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 (1972).

*Board of Regents of State Colleges v. Roth*, 408 U.S. 564, 572, 33 L. Ed. 2d 548, 92 S. Ct. 2701 (1972) [**141] (quoting *Meyer v. Nebraska*, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 67 L. Ed. 1042, 43 S. Ct. 625 (1923)).<sup>63</sup> As the Fifth Circuit more recently elaborated in *Martin v. Memorial Hosp. at Gulfport*, 130 F.3d 1143 (5th Cir. 1997):

HN67<sup>63</sup> "The *Due Process Clause* ... protects an individual's liberty interest which is viewed as including an individual's freedom to work and earn a living and to establish a home and position in one's community." *Cabrol v. Town of Youngsville*, 106 F.3d 101 (5th Cir. 1997), citing [*1156] *Roth, supra, 408 U.S. at 572, 92 S.Ct. at 2706-07*. "It requires no argument to show that the right to work for a living in the common occupations of the community is of the very essence of the personal freedom and opportunity that it was the purpose of the [fourteenth] Amendment to secure." *Phillips v. Vandygriff*, 711 F.2d 1217, 1222 (5th Cir. 1983), quoting *Truax v. Raich*, 239 U.S. 33, 41, 36 S.Ct. 7, 10, 60 L.Ed. 131 (1915). See also: *Meyer v. Nebraska*, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 43 S.Ct. 625, 626, 67 L.Ed. 1042 (1923) ("Without doubt, 'liberty' in the [*fourteenth amendment*] denotes

---

<sup>63</sup> Thomas M. Cooley, A Treatise on the Constitutional Limitations which rest upon the Legislative Power of the States of the American Union 824 (8th ed. 1927):

"Liberty" as used in [the Due Process] clause denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, to establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized at common law as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men. [Footnote omitted.]

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1156 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **141

not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations [**142] of life ..."); and Schware v. Board of Bar Examiners, 353 U.S. 232, 238-39, 77 S.Ct. 752, 756, 1 L.Ed.2d 796 (1957) ("A state cannot exclude a person from the practice of law or from any other occupation ... for reasons that contravene the Due Process or Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.").

Id. at 1148.

Nonetheless, HN68[<sup>64</sup>] a physician's "liberty" interest in pursuing his or her professional practice and establishing a home and position in" a particular community does not per se entitle the physician to exercise plenary staff privileges [**143] at public hospitals or medical facilities. To the contrary, "Suits by physicians who have been denied hospital staff privileges are not new. It has been clearly established for years that a doctor has no constitutional right to the staff privileges of a hospital merely because he is licensed to practice medicine. Hayman v. Galveston, 273 U.S. 414, 47 S. Ct. 363, 71 L. Ed. 714 (1927)." Sosa v. Board of Managers of Val Verde Mem. Hosp., 437 F.2d 173, 175 (5th Cir. 1971).<sup>64</sup> Generally, a physician is limited to assertion of a substantive due process right not to be excluded from staff privileges except for reasons related to the operation of the hospital which are not arbitrary or capricious, and a right to procedural due process sufficient to ensure that the physician has an opportunity to demonstrate that the exclusion is not justified. See Woodbury v McKinnon, 447 F.2d 839, 842 (5th Cir. 1971); Sosa v. Board of Managers of Val Verde Mem. Hosp., 437 F.2d at 176-177; Sarasota Cty Pub Hosp Bd v Shahawy, 408 So.2d 644, 646-647 (Fla. 1981).

Absent the recognition of a per se right to pursue medical practice through the exercise of full staff privileges at government-sponsored medical facilities, the SJHSD's exercise of supervisory power to grant, limit or deny practice privileges at those facilities--by requiring physicians to apply for and obtain privileges under the medical staff bylaws--did not deny a substantive constitutional "liberty and property right" to practice medicine or to make contracts with patients for his professional services.<sup>65</sup>

HN69[<sup>64</sup>] [*1157] A physician's liberty interest in pursuing a professional practice raises procedural due process concerns with respect to the grant or denial of staff privileges at a public hospital or medical facility once a request for such privileges has been made.

Dr. MacArthur's Request for Privileges & Procedural Due Process

---

<sup>64</sup> In Hayman, the Court stated that the only protection claimed here is that of appellant's privilege to practice his calling. However extensive that protection [**144] may be in other situations, it cannot, we think, be said that all licensed physicians have a constitutional right to practice their profession in a hospital maintained by a state or a political subdivision, the use of which is reserved for purposes of medical instruction. It is not incumbent on the state to maintain a hospital for the private practice of medicine.

Hayman v. City of Galveston, 273 U.S. 414, 416-417, 71 L. Ed. 714, 47 S. Ct. 363 (1927).

<sup>65</sup> Justice Sutherland's opinion in Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 67 L. Ed. 785, 43 S. Ct. 394 (1923), cited by plaintiffs, extolls the virtue of freedom of contract, but does so in the context of state legislation prescribing [**145] minimum wages for women and children in private employment, without reference to the pursuit of a particular line of employment. See id. at 545-546 ("the right to contract about one's affairs is a part of the liberty of the individual protected by this [Due Process] clause," and although "there is, of course, no such thing as absolute freedom of contract[,] ... freedom of contract is, nevertheless, the general rule, and restraint the exception, and the exercise of legislative authority to abridge it can be justified only by the existence of exceptional circumstances"), overruled by West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish, 300 U.S. 379, 81 L. Ed. 703, 57 S. Ct. 578 (1937). The Court has long since abandoned Adkins' expansive view of freedom of contract. See Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 860, 120 L. Ed. 2d 674, 112 S. Ct. 2791 (1992).

Dr. MacArthur's [**146] § 1983 claim also attempts to raise an issue of procedural due process concerning a right to notice and hearing concerning his December 1999 request for full provisional privileges at SJHSD facilities:

MS. ROSE: All right. This is what the crux of it is. There was no due process, there was no notice. He was never told there was a problem. He was never given an opportunity to rectify the problem. There's no, by the bylaws there's no hearing process available for physicians that have temporary privileges. He was given no hearing basis except that, you know, he was not told any time in advance that this February 2nd hearing was going to be held to discuss his staff privileges.

(Tr. 11/14/02, at 20:25-21:8 (Ms. Rose).) <sup>66</sup> Counsel referred to a February 2, 2000 SJHSD staff meeting at which it is alleged that Dr. MacArthur's December 1999 request for privileges was discussed, but no formal action was taken. Dr. MacArthur was not present for the February 2 meeting; he had accompanied his wife out of town for a medical procedure. (See Tr. 11/14/02, at 11:13-19 (Ms. Rose).) SJHSD's executive director, Cleal Bradford, also was not in attendance. Mr. Bradford's signature would have been required [**147] for any grant of provisional privileges or any further extension of Dr. MacArthur's "temporary" privileges beyond their February 2 expiration date. (See Tr. 11/14/02, at 16:1-21, 17:25-18:16 (Ms. Rose).)

[*1158] According to the facts alleged by the plaintiffs, the SJHSD had neither granted nor denied Dr. MacArthur's request for full provisional privileges as of February 2, 2000, when his "temporary" privileges expired; the matter was tabled pending the receipt of further documentation. At that point, as counsel explained, Dr. MacArthur moved his practice to Ely, Nevada. (Tr. 11/14/02, at 18:17-19:6 (Ms. Rose).)

THE COURT: After his temporary hospital privileges expired what did he do in reference to having that issue be examined?

MS. ROSE: At that point he left.

THE COURT: He went to Ely?

MS. ROSE: Starting May 1st I believe.

(Id. at 25:22-26:2.) According to counsel, Dr. MacArthur chose to go to Ely, Nevada, because the situation in San Juan County "was so inhospitable." (Id. at 26:12-21 (Ms. Rose); see id. [**149] at 37:8-38:8 (Ms. Cox).) "The working conditions in the area were so hostile, not only to him but to his patients that he felt he had no alternative but to leave ...." (Id. at 42:20-23 (Ms. Rose).)

Whether an environment is hospitable or hostile is a matter of perception, based upon an aggregation of circumstances and events. Taking plaintiffs' factual allegations as true, it appears that in providing medical care to his patients at SJHSD facilities, Dr. MacArthur experienced several unpleasant and frustrating instances involving a lack of sterile and functional medical instruments; conduct on the part of SJHSD nurses or staff that was disrespectful, ill-mannered, rude, and at times, unprofessional; and he became the subject of disparaging rumors circulated among the SJHSD support staff by a few antagonists, rumors that threatened to injure his personal

<sup>66</sup> In arguing the denial of procedural due process, Dr. MacArthur's counsel retreated somewhat from her substantive due process theory:

THE COURT: Okay. Well your idea is that in rural areas a doctor with a medical degree and a medical license has unrestricted power to practice in a local hospital?

MS. ROSE: No, Your Honor, it is subject to what is called peer review. It is subject to notice and due process and that's verified in 42 U.S.C. § 11112 ....

Tr. 11/14/02, at 31:25-32:5.) In counsel's view, the Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112, discussed supra, "requires that if you're going to limit or deny privileges to a doctor you do it with adequate and fair notice and due process." (Tr. 11/14/02, at 33:7-9 (Ms. Rose).) As noted above, § 411 of the HCQIA, 42 U.S.C. § 11111, encourages the use of peer review procedures in supervising physicians' practice privileges by immunizing the review participants from civil liability arising from a review action (with specific exceptions) [**148] if that action meets § 11112's procedural criteria. The HCQIA does not impose due process requirements on hospitals and health care facilities; it provides an incentive for the adoption of notice-and-hearing procedures by the facilities themselves. Section 11111\(a\)\(1\) does not immunize peer review participants from liability under the federal civil rights acts, including 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

reputation and his professional practice. All of these factors contributed to his perception that the SJHSD environment was inhospitable, and led ultimately to his decision in February of 2000 to forsake his request for privileges at SJHSD and move his practice to Nevada.

HN70[] The essence of Fourteenth Amendment due process analysis is the [**150] implication of a liberty or property interest. See *Board of Regents v. Roth*, 408 U.S. 564, 571-72, 33 L. Ed. 2d 548, 92 S. Ct. 2701 \(1972\). "Under the Fourteenth Amendment, procedural due process requires notice and a pre-deprivation hearing before property interests are negatively affected by governmental actors." *Marcus v. McCollum*, 394 F.3d 813, 820 \(10th Cir. 2004\). Health care professionals have been held to have a property interest in their professional licenses. See, e.g., *Seay v. Campbell*, 130 Fed. Appx. 268, 2005 WL 1023400 \(10th Cir. 2005\) ("property" interest in license to practice dentistry); Annotation, Rights as to notice and hearing in proceeding to revoke or suspend license to practice medicine, 10 A.L.R. 5th 1 (1993).

Some courts have expressed the view that "hospital staff privileges are generally considered to be a property or liberty interest of the physician," at least where they have already been granted by a government-sponsored facility. *Beyer v. Lakeview Community Hosp.*, 187 F.3d 634, \(Table\), 1999 WL 552606, \*\*3 \(6th Cir. 1999\) (citing *Foster v. Mobile County Hospital Bd.*, 398 F.2d 227, 229 \(5th Cir. 1968\)). A limitation, revocation or termination of existing [**151] hospital staff privileges would thus have due process implications.

At least two circuits have held that "seeking staff privileges, which entitle a physician to admit patients to a particular hospital, has been held to be a protected liberty interest ...." *Silverstein v. Gwinnett Hosp. Authority*, 861 F.2d 1560, 1566 \(11th Cir. 1988\) (citations omitted). See [*Burkette v. Lutheran General Hospital*, 595 F.2d 255, 255-256 \[\*1159\] \(5th Cir. 1979\)](#) ("We have held that a physician in private practice denied staff privileges in a hospital that is subject to the fourteenth amendment possesses a protectible 'liberty' interest that can ground a complaint on such a denial. *Shaw v. Hospital Authority*, 507 F.2d 625 \(5th Cir. 1975\).").<sup>67</sup>

HN71[] To pursue a due process claim in the courts based upon a denial of hospital staff privileges, however, those privileges must in fact be denied before the claim may be pursued in the courts. See *Unnamed Physician v. Board of Trustees of Saint Agnes Medical Center*, 93 Cal. App. 4th 607, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 309 \(Ct. App. 2001\) (physician challenging hospital's denial or withdrawal of staff privileges must pursue the internal remedies afforded by that hospital to a final decision on the merits before resorting to the courts for relief); *Eufemio v. Kodiak Island Hosp.*, 837 P.2d 95 \(Alaska 1992\) (exhaustion of administrative remedies required); *Eidelson v. Archer*, 645 P.2d 171 \(Alaska 1982\). The reported cases involving due process claims and hospital staff privileges arise from the actual denial, restriction, non-renewal or revocation of staff privileges. See generally Annotation, Exclusion Of, or Discrimination Against, Physician or Surgeon by Hospital, 28 A.L.R. 5th 107 (1995 & Supp. 2004) and cases cited therein.

In this instance, the SJHSD had neither granted nor denied Dr. MacArthur's [**153] request for full one-year provisional privileges at the time that he decided to move his practice to Nevada in February or March of 2000. For his part, Dr. MacArthur did not press the issue after his "temporary" privileges expired by their own terms on February 2, 2000--temporary privileges that in fact had afforded Dr. MacArthur the use of the SJHSD hospital and Blanding birthing center to treat his patients and deliver babies during most of the time that his request for full provisional privileges was pending. Close examination of plaintiffs' allegations turns up no instance in which Dr. MacArthur was denied access to SJHSD facilities to provide care to a patient during the time that his request for full privileges was pending and his temporary privileges--twice extended--remained in effect.

---

<sup>67</sup> The Utah courts have also entertained contractual "due process" claims involving the limitation or revocation of practice privileges at private hospitals based upon notice-and-hearing requirements found in hospital bylaws. See, e.g., *Rees v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc.*, 808 P.2d 1069 \(Utah 1991\); *Houston v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc.*, 933 P.2d 403, 408 \(Utah Ct. App. 1997\). In this case, Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman have not pleaded such claims based upon the SJHSD [**152] medical staff bylaws, instead choosing to attack the validity of the bylaws themselves. See infra note 104.

Taking Dr. MacArthur's factual allegations as true, the court concludes that Dr. MacArthur had not in fact been denied access to SJHSD facilities by any final action or determination by the SJHSD before Dr. MacArthur deliberately chose to forsake his request for full one-year SJHSD provisional staff privileges in favor of pursuing his medical practice elsewhere. Dr. MacArthur's election to move [**154] his practice out of state waived his request for staff privileges at SJHSD facilities, and mooted any § 1983 claim based upon a denial of such privileges on due process grounds. His claim of denial or exclusion never became ripe for judicial review prior to February 2, 2000, the point at which Dr. MacArthur effectively abandoned his request for SJHSD privileges. See, e.g., Unity Ventures v. Lake County, 841 F.2d 770, 775-776 (7th Cir. 1988) (absent final governmental action denying intended use of property, § 1983 due process challenge to local land use regulation was not ripe [*1160] for judicial review); Unnamed Physician v. Board of Trustees of Saint Agnes Medical Center, 93 Cal. App. 4th 607, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 309 (Ct. App. 2001).

His § 1983 claim cannot raise a triable issue, and must therefore be dismissed as against all of the defendants. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1).

Ms. Lyman's § 1983 Claim

Substantive Due Process

From the colloquy at the Final Pretrial Conference, it became ever more apparent that even though plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman have pleaded many parallel allegations concerning the question of staff privileges, their positions differ in fundamental ways. For one thing, Dr. MacArthur [**155] as a licensed physician was free to compete for patient business with other licensed physicians; Ms. Lyman, as a licensed Physician's Assistant, is required by Utah law to work under the direct supervision of a physician. Under Utah law, the scope of practice for a Physician Assistant is defined in pertinent part as follows:

58-70a-501. Scope of practice.

- (1) A physician assistant may provide any medical services that are not specifically prohibited under this chapter or rules adopted under this chapter, and that are:
  - (a) within the physician assistant's skills and scope of competence;
  - (b) within the usual scope of practice of the physician assistant's supervising physician; and
  - (c) provided under the supervision of a supervising physician and in accordance with a delegation of services agreement.

Utah Code Ann. § 58-70a-501 (2002) (emphasis added). <sup>68</sup> State Administrative Rule R156-70a, the Physician Assistant Practice Act Rules, provides:

R156-70a-501. Working Relationship and Delegation of Duties.

HN72[] In accordance with Section 58-70a-501, the working relationship and delegation of duties between the supervising physician and the physician assistant are specified as follows:

- (1) The supervising [**156] physician shall provide supervision to the physician assistant to adequately serve the health care needs of the practice population and ensure that the patient's health, safety and welfare will not be adversely compromised. The degree of on-site supervision shall be outlined in the Delegation of Services Agreement maintained at the site of practice. Physician assistants may authenticate with their signature any form that may be authenticated by a physician's signature.
- (2) There shall be a method of immediate consultation by electronic means whenever the physician assistant is not under the direct supervision of the supervising physician.

---

<sup>68</sup> This statutory definition has been in effect since its enactment in 1997. See 1997 Utah Laws ch. 229, § 11.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1160, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **156

(3) The supervising physician shall review and co-sign sufficient numbers of patient charts and medical records to ensure that the patient's health, safety, and welfare will not be adversely compromised. The Delegation of Services Agreement, maintained at the site of practice, shall outline specific parameters for review that are appropriate for the working relationship.

(4) A supervising physician shall not supervise more than two full time equivalent (FTE) physician assistants without the prior approval of the division and [*161] the board, and if patient [**157] health, safety, and welfare will not be adversely compromised.

Utah Admin Code § R156-70a-501 (2004).

HN73 [+] While it is true that under these provisions, a Physician Assistant may provide "any medical services" not specifically prohibited that are within the range of her skills and scope of competence and the skills and scope of practice of her supervising physician, she cannot lawfully exercise the identical degree of independent professional judgment and discretion that a physician could exercise, and logically she could not be entitled as a matter of constitutional right to exercise practice privileges at hospitals, clinics and similar facilities identical to those that physicians may enjoy. (Cf. Tr. 11/15/02, at 34:21-39:5 (Ms. Rose).)

HN74 [+] Limiting a Physician Assistant's practice privileges to take into account the statutory and regulatory requirement of direct supervision and review by a physician cannot operate to deprive the Physician Assistant of "liberty" or "property" otherwise guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment. Nor is it arbitrary or unreasonable for a health care facility [**158] to require that Physician Assistants exercise staff privileges under the supervision of a physician who currently has staff privileges at the same facility.

The restrictions on plaintiff Lyman's practice privileges at SJHSD facilities described in the Proposed Amended Complaint and at pretrial,<sup>69</sup> fall short of a constitutional deprivation,<sup>70</sup> and thus cannot serve as the factual footing

<sup>69</sup> Starting from the [**159] premise that "while working for Dr. Redd, Mrs. Lyman applied for and received privileges with the District, with the same scope of privileges as Dr. Redd," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 27 P117; see id. at 39 P127 ("Mrs. Lyman's scope of privileges was originally for duties equal to Dr. Redd's.")), Ms. Lyman alleges that after leaving Dr. Redd's supervision in October, 1998, her privileges were restricted in several respects: "Mrs. Lyman could not admit or discharge patients without first her supervising doctor initially and officially and physically signing off on the patient's admit or discharge," (id. at 48 P169); she was told on one occasion in December 1998 that she could not give orders to SJHSD staff, (id. at 48-49 P170); later that same day, she was told she "could use the lab and xray only during Dr. Penn's office hours, [and that] otherwise Ms. Lyman did not have privileges," (id. at 49 P186 (emphasis in original)); "later the limited privileges of lab and exray [sic] were extended to her for her patients as required by State law," (id. at 49 P187), but in September 1999, her secretary was told "that Ms. Lyman would not be allowed to order labs until Ms. Lyman sent a letter to [**160] Dr. Redd stating who her supervising physician was." (Id. at 55 P213). (See Proposed Amended Complaint at 55 P127; 69-70 P11 169-170; 70-71 P1 186-187; 79-80 P213 (same); Tr. 11/15/02, at 8:20-10:25, 17:6-11, 19:2-20:19, 22:15-20, 28:8-19, 30:4-20, 31:9-32:17, 40:22-42:3, 44:22-45:5, 46:7-20, 54:9-20.)

Ms. Lyman also alleges interference with her care for individual patients: in one instance, her request for a Holter monitor for a patient was denied (id. at 49 P185); on at least two occasions, her request for patient medical records was refused by Dr. Redd, (id. at 50-51 PP189, 193-194); despite an understanding with the SJHSD medical staff concerning injections, "Ms. Lyman tried on several occasions to call in injections to the ... ER (Blanding Urgent Care Clinic) and was denied every time. Ms. Lyman always had to call Dr. Penn's office and have him call the order in requests to the Blanding Urgent Care Center for injections for patients were denied by SJHSD staff," (id. at 54-55 P210). (See Proposed Amended Complaint at 70-73 PP185, 189, 193-194, 210 (same); Tr. 11/15/02, at 16:10-17:5, 21:19-21, 22:5-14, 26:12-25, 30:4-31:6, 39:3-40:12; compare supra n. 12.)

<sup>70</sup> Substantive due process [**161] requires that a termination, suspension, denial or restriction of a plaintiff's practice privileges not be "arbitrary, capricious, or without a rational basis." Tonkovich v. Kansas Bd. of Regents, 159 F.3d 504, 528 (10th Cir. 1998) (quoting Brenna v. Southern Colo. State College, 589 F.2d 475, 477 (10th Cir. 1978)).

The Tenth Circuit recently reiterated the standards for evaluating substantive due process claims:

In analyzing plaintiff's substantive due process claim, the court assumes plaintiff's employment was an interest entitled to protection. In Uhlrig v. Harder, 64 F.3d 567 (10th Cir. 1995), we stated that "the standard for judging a substantive due process claim is whether the challenged government action would 'shock the conscience of federal judges.'" Id. at for Ms. [*1162] Lyman's § 1983 claim against any of the individual defendants, including the SJHSD Board and San Juan County Commissioners. (See Tr. 11/15/02, at 26:14-32:17, 34:20-44:7 (Ms. Rose).) Or, looking at it another way, plaintiffs' allegations, taken as true, fail to establish a violation of a clearly established constitutional right to unrestricted practice privileges as a state-licensed Physician Assistant at publicly-sponsored medical facilities, and as a result, plaintiff's § 1983 claim against the individual defendants is barred by the doctrine of qualified immunity. Plaintiff Lyman likewise fails to allege an arguable claim of constitutional deprivation resulting from a "policy" or "custom" of the SJHSD or San Juan County, and cannot hold either entity liable under § 1983.

Procedural Due-Process

Plaintiffs plead a "Lack of Notice and Due Process," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 46-52 PP129-167; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 33-37 PP161-199 (same)), but relatively few of the factual allegations pleaded under that heading pertain to Ms. Lyman, and they address the alleged alteration of dates on her CPR certification cards--cards curiously discovered to be "missing" from her SJHSD file at the time that she requested staff privileges to practice under Dr. MacArthur's supervision in December, 1999. (See id. at 46-48 PP129-140, 142-146.)<sup>71</sup> Other than alleging that "the Medical staff and Cleal Bradford and Laurie Shafer discussed Mrs. Lyman's CPR card problems of [*1163] wrong dates without Mrs. Lyman being present," (id. at 46-47 P133), and "the medical staff and Cleal Bradford and Laurie Shafer unanimously decided to publish the altered cards to the American Heart Association by vote of the medical [**163] staff, who was considering privileges for Mrs. Lyman, without Mrs. Lyman being present," (id. at 48 P142), Ms. Lyman does not plead specific facts showing a denial of fair notice and an opportunity to be heard on the CPR card issue. (Cf. Proposed Pretrial Order at 63 P255 ("she was not notified immediately that her cards were in some way in error").) In fact, she alleges that the CPR card problem was brought to her attention, that she furnished accurate CPR certification information to the SJHSD, but that her SJHSD privileges ultimately were not renewed. She did not pursue the request any further. (See Tr. 11/15/02, at 52:3-53:17 (Ms. Rose).)

While the specific instances of interference with her exercise of her SJHSD privileges may raise contract-based claims under Utah law, see infra, Ms. Lyman has not alleged specific facts showing a denial of procedural due process guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Misogyny & "Hostile Environment" under § 1983

---

573 (quoting Collins v. City of Harker Heights, 503 U.S. 115, 112 S.Ct. 1061, 117 L.Ed.2d 261 (1992)) (further quotations omitted). To "satisfy the 'shock the conscience' standard, a plaintiff must do more than show that the government actor intentionally or recklessly caused injury to the plaintiff by abusing or misusing government power." Id. at 574. Rather, a plaintiff "must demonstrate a degree of outrageousness and [**162] a magnitude of potential or actual harm that is truly conscience shocking." Id.

Babbar v. Ebadi, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 11798, 2000 WL 702428, at *10 (10th Cir. 2000).

Ferraro v. Board of Trustees of Labette County Medical Center, 106 F. Supp. 2d 1195, 1202 (D.Kan. 2000).

<sup>71</sup> Ms. Lyman also asserts that she "had sought privileges ever since they were de facto terminated by district policy after she began working for Dr. Penn, having left the practice of Dr. Redd," in October 1998, (Proposed Amended Complaint at 40 P91), but her specific factual allegations reflect that she continued to exercise her privileges through 1999. The scope of her privileges was the subject of discussion involving Ms. Lyman, Dr. Penn and the SJHSD medical staff in which it was acknowledged by the medical staff that Ms. Lyman could, *inter [**164] alia*, request x-rays, lab work and injections for patients, and could continue to exercise privileges under local physician supervision. See supra at n. 69. In December of 1999, she requested renewal of her existing privileges, which had a renewal date of December 22, 1999. (See Tr. 11/15/02, at 49:6-52:6 (Ms. Rose).)

Whether certain SJHSD nurses or other employees interfered with the exercise of her existing privileges is another matter, (see Proposed Pretrial Order at 14 ("Privileges for Mrs. Lyman were de facto denied by nursing personnel and medical staff without any action by the District governance board.")), raising potential claims of breach of contract or the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, or interference with contract.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1163 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **164

Ms. Lyman complains that Dr. Redd, the "Chief of Medical Staff has a long standing animus toward women," that during the time she [**165] was employed by Dr. Redd in his private practice from June 1996 until October 1998, she observed Dr. Redd being angry and verbally abusive in dealing with his female employees, e.g., referring to Ms. Lyman as an "idiot" and another employee as an "incompetent bitch," and that

149. Mrs. Lyman observed that each nurse, in order to avoid Dr. Redd's tirades would turn on each other or disassociate with the person who Dr. Redd targeted that day.

150. Thus, an atmosphere of distrust and hostility permeated the office creating a hostile work and patient environment.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 60-61 PP143, 149-150.)

Generally, to plead a viable "hostile environment" claim, a plaintiff must show "that under the totality of the circumstances (1) the harassment was pervasive or severe enough to alter the terms, conditions, or privilege of employment, and (2) the harassment was racial or stemmed from racial animus," or other forbidden class-based discriminatory animus, such as gender. Bolden v. PRC Inc., 43 F.3d 545, 551 (10th Cir. 1994) (citation omitted). In a case involving discrimination on account of race, "[a] plaintiff cannot meet this burden by demonstrating "a few isolated incidents [**166] of racial enmity" or "sporadic racial slurs," or the like. Id. (quoting Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co., 833 F.2d 1406, 1412-13 (10th Cir. 1987)). Instead, "there must be a steady barrage of opprobrious racial comments." Chavez v. New Mexico, 397 F.3d 826, 832 (10th Cir. 2005). Where the enmity is based upon gender, a plaintiff must likewise allege a "steady barrage" or "steady stream" of misogynistic abuse in order to sustain a "hostile environment" claim. See, e.g., Gross v. Burggraf Constr. Co., 53 F.3d 1531, 1539 (10th Cir. 1995) ("It is beyond dispute that evidence that a woman was subjected to a steady stream of vulgar and offensive epithets because of her gender would be sufficient to establish a claim under Title VII"); Winsor v. Hinckley Dodge, Inc., 79 F.3d 996, 1000-1001 (10th Cir. 1996) ("Over the course of her employment, plaintiff was called a 'whore,' 'floor whore,' 'curb whore,' 'curb side cunt,' and 'bitch,' on a consistent basis. These sexual epithets have been identified [*1164] as 'intensely degrading' to women." (internal quotation & citation omitted)).

"Hostile work environment harassment occurs when unwelcome sexual conduct "unreasonably interferes with an individual's work [**167] performance or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment." Meritor Sav. Bank, FSB v. Vinson, 477 U.S. 57, 65, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1986) (quoting 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a)(3)). According to the court of appeals, Meritor states that "for sexual harassment to be actionable, it must be sufficiently severe or pervasive 'to alter the conditions of [the victim's] employment and create an abusive working environment.'" Id. at 67, 106 S.Ct. at 2405 (citation omitted). The mere utterance of a statement which "engenders offensive feelings in an employee" would not affect the conditions of employment to [a] sufficiently significant degree to violate Title VII." Id. (quoting Rogers v. EEOC, 454 F.2d 234, 238 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 957, 92 S.Ct. 2058, 32 L.Ed.2d 343 (1972)).

Smith v. Northwest Financial Acceptance, Inc., 129 F.3d 1408, 1412 (10th Cir. 1997).<sup>72</sup> In the context of a hostile environment claim, courts must "filter out complaints attacking the ordinary tribulations of the workplace, such as the sporadic use of abusive language, gender-related jokes, and occasional teasing." Forager v. City of Boca

<sup>72</sup> Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc., 510 U.S. 17, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1993), clarified the elements of a claim for gender discrimination resulting from a hostile work environment. The Supreme Court held that conduct within the purview of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-1 et seq., must be severe or pervasive enough to create both "an objectively hostile or abusive work environment--an environment that a reasonable person would find hostile"--and an environment the victim-employee subjectively perceives as abusive or hostile. Id. at 21-22. Whether an environment is "hostile" or "abusive" is determined by looking at the totality of circumstances, such as "the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; ... whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance"; and the context in which the conduct occurred. Id. at 23. Additionally, the Harris Court specifically noted that any relevant factor "may be taken into account, [but] no single factor is required." Id.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1164 LEXIS 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **167

Raton, 524 U.S. 775, 788, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 \(1998\) [**168] (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Plaintiff Lyman did not plead [**169] and does not assert a "hostile environment" claim under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 200e-1 et seq. However, the court of appeals has held that, apart from Title VII, gender discrimination and sexual harassment can result in a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment right to equal protection of the law that is actionable under § 1983.<sup>73</sup> However, a [*1165] plaintiff must allege "the state action necessary to support a § 1983 claim,<sup>74</sup> and each individual defendant must act under color of state law; a "state actor" must serve as the plaintiff's "supervisor or in some other way exercise state authority over her." Noland v. McAdoo, 39 F.3d 269, 271 \(10th Cir. 1994\); see also David v. City & County of Denver, 101 F.3d 1344, 1354 \(10th Cir. 1996\) (public co-employees may act under color of law if they exercise de facto authority over victim), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 858, 118 S. Ct. 157, 139 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1997).<sup>75</sup>

Here, the "state action" requirement proves somewhat problematic. During the time Ms. Lyman worked for Dr. Redd, Dr. Redd was engaged in private medical practice, and was not a SJHSD employee. His conduct in that context would lack the requisite "state action" needed to sustain a § 1983 claim. The plaintiffs' factual allegations suggest that Dr. Redd was speaking to Ms. Lyman and his other employees as a private employer, and not in any official capacity.<sup>76</sup> Though [**172] Dr. Redd became employed by the SJHSD in March of 1999 and would likely be held to be a "state actor" as to his conduct as SJHSD medical director or "Chief of Medical Staff,"<sup>77</sup> the plaintiffs'

<sup>73</sup>

If a plaintiff can show a constitutional violation by someone acting under color of state law, then the plaintiff has a cause of action under Section 1983, regardless of Title VII's concurrent application. See Owens v. Rush, 654 F.2d 1370, 1380 \(10th Cir. 1981\) [**170] ("Title VII did not impair in any way [plaintiff's] independent, substantive rights created by the First and Fourteenth Amendments . . . . Substantive rights conferred in the 19th Century were not withdrawn, sub silentio, by the subsequent passage of the modern statutes.") (quoting Great Am. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Novotny, 442 U.S. 366, 377, 99 S.Ct. 2345, 2351, 60 L. Ed. 2d 957); Day v. Wayne County Bd. of Auditors, 749 F.2d 1199, 1205 \(6th Cir. 1984\) ("Where an employee establishes employer conduct which violates both Title VII and rights derived from another source--the Constitution or a federal statute . . . the claim based on the other source is independent of the Title VII claim, and the plaintiff may seek the remedies provided by § 1983 in addition to those created by Title VII."); cf. Meade v. Merchants Fast Motorline, Inc., 820 F.2d 1124, 1127 \(10th Cir. 1987\) ("plaintiff may properly pursue his cause of action under § 1981 for private employment discrimination despite the applicability of Title VII to the same conduct").

Starrett v. Wadley, 876 F.2d 808, 814 \(10th Cir. 1989\).

<sup>74</sup> To be successful, section 1983 claimants must make two showings to establish that the conduct at [**171] issue constituted state action. 'First, the deprivation must be caused by the exercise of some right or privilege created by the State or by a rule of conduct imposed by the State or by a person for whom the State is responsible.' Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 937, 102 S.Ct. 2744, 73 L.Ed.2d 482 \(1982\). 'Second, the party charged with the deprivation must be a person who may fairly be said to be a state actor.' Id. Nieto v. Kapoor, 268 F.3d 1208, 1215 \(10th Cir. 2001\).

<sup>75</sup> State action under § 1983 can occur when a supervisor "participates in or consciously acquiesces in sexual harassment . . . by co-workers." Murrell v. School Dist. No. 1, 186 F.3d 1238, 1250 \(10th Cir. 1999\) (quotation marks and citation omitted).

<sup>76</sup> At that time, Dr. Redd was also a member of the SJHSD medical staff, and at different times in 1996 may have served as chief of staff. (See Tr. 11/15/02, at 3:20-22 (Ms. Rose). Dr. Redd's conduct as the SJHSD chief of staff may be state action under § 1983. See, e.g., Nieto v. Kapoor, 268 F.3d 1208, 1215-1217 \(10th Cir. 2001\) (non-employee medical director of hospital department acted under color of state law for purposes of § 1983 "when undertaking his supervisory duties over plaintiffs' work" in that department and was "a state actor for purposes of section 1983."). Yet plaintiffs do not allege that Dr. Redd was acting as the SJHSD chief of staff--not as a private employer engaged in a private medical practice--in making the alleged derogatory remarks to Ms. Lyman and others who worked for him. (See Proposed [**173] Amended Complaint at 60-68 PP145-166.)

<sup>77</sup> (Proposed Amended Complaint at 60 P143.)

pleadings speak of the "atmosphere of distrust and hostility" that "permeated" Dr. Redd's office in Blanding at the time Ms. Lyman worked there. (Proposed Amended Complaint at 61 P150.)<sup>78</sup>

[*1166] Qualified Immunity & Ms. Lyman's § 1983 Claim

Further, as noted above, the defendants contend that because "the alleged acts and/or omissions by County commissioners, officials or employees or Health District trustees, employees or staff members, about which plaintiffs complain, were carried out within the scope of and pursuant to their official duties as trustees, employees or staff members of the Health District, plaintiffs' claims are barred by the doctrine of qualified immunity," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 10 Pxxxvi), at least to the extent those claims are asserted pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

[**174] Concerning individual defendants who have raised a claim of qualified immunity,

The threshold inquiry is whether the alleged facts (or, on summary judgment, the evidenced facts) taken in the light most favorable to the plaintiff show a constitutional violation. Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 150 L.Ed.2d 272 (2001). "If no constitutional right would have been violated were the allegations established, there is no necessity for further inquiries concerning qualified immunity." Id.

Simkins v. Bruce, 406 F.3d 1239, 1241 (10th Cir. 2005).

From the foregoing summary, it readily becomes apparent that the plaintiffs' allegations as of the eve of pretrial, taken as true and in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, failed on their face to show a constitutional violation by the individual defendants. "[A] defamatory statement published by state officials is not for that reason alone a Fourteenth Amendment violation," 1 Nahmod, supra, § 3:40, at 3-117 (citing Paul v. Davis, 424 U.S. 693, 96 S. Ct. 1155, 47 L. Ed. 2d 405 (1976)), and the making of derogatory remarks, the infliction of verbal abuse, the honking of car horns and other potentially tortious conduct does not [**175] automatically implicate the Due Process Clause simply because the actor is employed by a local health services district or is a member of its medical staff. Nor does interference with, or even the breach of a district contract with a health services provider, caused by a district official or staff acting under his direction, necessarily result in a constitutional deprivation of "liberty" or "property" that is actionable under § 1983. Absent a constitutional deprivation, qualified immunity entitles the individual defendants to a dismissal of plaintiff Lyman's § 1983 claims.

Ms. Helen Valdez' § 1983 Claim

The facts underlying the claim of plaintiff Helen Valdez have already been summarized herein. ( See supra at 15-17, 30-31.) Her potential civil claim under EMTALA being time-barred, at least absent leave to amend,<sup>79</sup> the only claim that remained pending for consideration at the time of pretrial was her § 1983 claim of purposeful national origin, gender and age discrimination in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

In order to state a viable equal protection claim under § 1983, "a plaintiff must show that the defendants acted with [**176] an intent or purpose to discriminate against the plaintiff based upon membership in a protected class." Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 686 (9th Cir. 2001) (citations omitted); see also Washington v. Davis, 426 U.S. 229, 240, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (1976). To support her § 1983 claim, then, Ms. Valdez must come forward with facts indicating a discriminatory intent on the part of the defendants. [*1167] See Firefighters Local Union No. 1784 v. Stotts, 467 U.S. 561, 583 n. 16, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 (1984) ( §§ 1981 & 1983); Village of Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 265, 97 S. Ct. 555, 50 L. Ed. 2d 450

<sup>78</sup> Ms. Lyman would not have standing to bring a "hostile environment" claim under either Title VII or § 1983 for verbal abuse occurring after October or November of 1998 because at that point she was no longer employed by Dr. Redd. She was working with and being supervised by Dr. Penn; after she left Dr. Redd's supervision in 1998, Dr. Redd's derogatory remarks--rude, offensive, antagonistic and unprofessional as they may have been--could not alter the terms, conditions, or privileges of Ms. Lyman's subsequent employment.

<sup>79</sup> ( See supra at 59-60.)

(1977) (equal protection). She must also allege facts showing that a defendant "engaged in specific conduct that denied her equal protection of the laws." Williams v. Bramer, 180 F.3d 699, 701 \(5th Cir. 1999\).

Ms. Valdez is a white female over the age of 60, married to a Mexican-American husband. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 69 PP14-15.) Counsel asserts that on April 14, 1999, she was "turned away" from the San Juan Hospital emergency room because of her age, her gender, her association with her Mexican-American husband and sister-in-law, [**177] and with her then-primary care physician, Dr. Penn, who was identified as being Jewish. ( See Tr. 11/15/02, at 59:1-15 (Ms. Rose); Memorandum of Points and Authorities Supporting Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 665), at 6-20.)<sup>80</sup> Counsel relies upon a "disparate treatment analysis," citing McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 \(1973\), based upon allegations that Ms. Valdez "was turned away, when accompanied by her Mexican-American appearing sister-in-law, by nurse Laurie Wallace," while at the same time, "the white young male with no insurance in the ER waiting area was seen by Dr. Penn almost immediately after Mrs. Valdez left." (Proposed Amended Complaint at 86 P232-233; see Proposed Pretrial Order at 22 P66 ("Mrs. Valdez' neighbor who was a white young male and had not insurance was seen immediately.").)

Counsel's proffered inference of discriminatory treatment and discriminatory purpose from the fact that another patient waiting in the emergency room was examined by a physician and Ms. Valdez was not collides with a key fact: Ms. Valdez was not refused screening, examination, or treatment; nor was she instructed or ordered by any emergency room personnel to leave the facility. ( See supra at 15-17.) At pretrial, counsel argued that Ms. Valdez "was told to go"--an assertion belied by the plaintiffs' own pleadings and Ms. Valdez' own deposition testimony. (Tr. 11/15/02, at 60:7 (Ms. Rose).) Ms. Valdez explained that she decided [**179] to leave the emergency room and return home after her sister-in-law told her that she had overheard a nurse, Lori Wallace, tell the emergency room clerk who had assisted Ms. Valdez in filling out her patient admittance form to tell Ms. Valdez to go to her physician's clinic. ( See supra at 15-16 & nn. 18-19; Tr. 11/15/02, at 57:1-4 (Ms. Rose) ("Laurie [sic] Wallace had told the receptionist, tell them to go to the clinic, it's open, something to that effect. The exact words were tell them to go to the [*1168] clinic.")) Shortly before that, however, Ms. Valdez had observed Lori Wallace tell the same clerk that "she could set both her patients up in the emergency room for the physician," apparently referring to Ms. Valdez and Michael Bailey, the other individual then waiting in the emergency room. ( Id.)

Yet Ms. Valdez did not speak directly to either the nurse or the clerk about her symptoms or ask whether or when she would be seen by a doctor at the emergency room. She left the facility, apparently assuming that she would not be examined. She explained her reticence in her deposition:

A Well, living in San Juan County for many years and living in a Mexican-American community, you kind of [**180] learn to keep your place. You don't just voluntarily speak out. You just kind of wait until spoken to.

Q How does that apply to being a woman in San Juan County?

A I believe probably about the same.

(Deposition of Helen Valdez, dated December 6, 2001, at 52:17-24.) In this instance, she did not wait to be spoken to; assuming that she would not be examined at the emergency room, Ms. Valdez simply left. Taking the plaintiff's factual averments as true--in particular, the portions of the deposition testimony of Ms. Valdez and Ms. Gonzales submitted to the court by plaintiffs' counsel--it cannot fairly be said that Ms. Valdez was "turned away" from examination and treatment at the San Juan Hospital emergency room on April 14, 1999. No one on the SJHSD staff

<sup>80</sup> Claims of class-based discrimination against a non-minority plaintiff based upon association with the plaintiff's minority spouse have met with mixed results. Compare, [**178] e.g., Davis v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transp. Authority, 924 F.2d 51 \(3d Cir. 1991\) (plaintiff white police officer married to African-American spouse prevailed on § 1983 anti-discrimination claim arising out of officer's discharge from employment), with University Village Music Center v. Seattle School Dist., 844 F.2d 793 \(Table\), 1988 WL 33365, \(9th Cir. 1988\) (unpublished disposition) (conclusory allegations that the defendants discriminated against plaintiff's business because his former wife is of Japanese descent insufficient to state a § 1983 claim).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1168 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **178

told Ms. Valdez that she would not be examined by a physician if she remained there, and both Ms. Valdez and Ms. Gonzales acknowledged that no one on the SJHSD staff expressly instructed Ms. Valdez to leave.<sup>81</sup>

Before Lori Wallace may be held liable under § 1983 for a constitutional deprivation purposefully inflicted upon Ms. Valdez,<sup>82</sup> there needs to be at least one sworn averment of specific facts in the record showing that Ms. Wallace acted that "with an intent or purpose to discriminate against the plaintiff" based upon the plaintiff's membership in a protected class (or at least her identification with a protected class),<sup>83</sup> and that Ms. Wallace "engaged in specific conduct that denied her equal protection of the laws." None was cited or proffered at pretrial, and none was submitted in connection with either the Proposed Amended Complaint or the Proposed Pretrial Order.

At the conclusion of the pretrial colloquy concerning Ms. Valdez' claim, this court concluded:

Looking at the statutes referred to and particularly the suggestion that implicitly the complaint ought to conform with what is said to be the evidence, [*1169] namely that she went to an emergency room and wasn't treated, I think under the factual scenario presented that it is insufficient to justify referring the matter to a fact-finder and under the circumstances that cause of action as alleged and as proffered should also be dismissed and I will so order.

(Tr. 11/15/02, at 117:10-18 (the Court).)

"The pretrial conference is never to be used as a substitute for trial . . . . Nevertheless, just as the Court may render judgment on immaterial issues for which there is no dispute of material fact, 'judgment may be ordered . . . if [*183] there is no triable issue left at the end of the discussion.'" Pifcho v. Brewer, 77 F.R.D. 356, 357 (M.D. Pa. 1977) (quoting 6 Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1525 (1971).)

(9) Federal Antitrust Laws (15 U.S.C. §§ 1 et seq.)

Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.A. § 15 \(1997\), cited by the Part I Plaintiffs, provides in part that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor" in an appropriate federal district court "and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee," expressly providing injured parties with a private civil treble damages remedy for violations of the federal antitrust laws. As a remedial provision, § 4 itself does not proscribe any specific anti-competitive conduct. Conduct "forbidden in the antitrust laws" is defined elsewhere, as in the first two sections of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.A. § 1 \(1997\), states in part:

Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the [*184] several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal . . . .

Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.A. § 2 \(1997\), states in part:

Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, . . . .

<sup>81</sup> This being so, Ms. Valdez was not denied or refused the screening, examination or stabilizing treatment for an "emergency medical condition" required by EMTALA, 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(a\), and has no arguable legal claim arising [*181] from a violation of that statute. 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(d\). ( See supra at 56-58.)

<sup>82</sup> Counsel now argues the existence of a County "policy or custom" of disparate treatment of "people of color," relying largely on hearsay assertions of anecdotal evidence. ( See Memorandum of Points and Authorities Supporting Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 665), at xii, 18-19.) [*182] This claim was neither pleaded through specific allegations in the Proposed Amended Complaint nor raised as an issue in the Proposed Pretrial Order.

<sup>83</sup> Muzquiz v. W.A. Foote Memorial Hosp., Inc., 70 F.3d 422, 429 (6th Cir. 1995) (witness' "subjective belief that minorities would be treated differently at the hospital was simply not probative of a discriminatory animus").

Section 4 of the Clayton Act "requires a plaintiff to show actual injury," Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 111, 107 S. Ct. 484, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1986), and "the plaintiff must still allege an injury of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent." Id. (footnote omitted). Indeed, "standing and antitrust injury are essential elements in a private antitrust damages action brought under section 4 of the Clayton Act." Reazin v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas, 899 F.2d 951, 960 (10th Cir. 1990) (citing Cargill, 479 U.S. at 110; Associated Gen. Contractors, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1983)). According to the court of appeals, the following factors are "to be considered in determining [**185] antitrust standing:"

the causal connection between the antitrust violations and plaintiff's injury; the defendant's intent; the nature of the plaintiff's injury; the directness or indirectness of the connection between the plaintiff's injury and the allegedly unlawful market restraint; the speculativeness of the plaintiff's damages; and the "risk of duplicative recoveries . . . or the danger of complex apportionment of damages." Associated Gen. Contractors, 459 U.S. at 544, 103 S. Ct. at 912.

Id. at 962 n. 15.

The "nature of the plaintiff's injury factor" is "designed to implement [*1170] the requirement that only antitrust injuries are redressable under ." Id. (emphasis in original). "Antitrust injury" is demonstrated "'by a causal relationship between the harm and the challenged aspect of the alleged violation' of the federal antitrust laws." Id. at 961 (quoting Alberta Gas Chems., Ltd. v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 826 F.2d 1235, 1240 (3d Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1059, 108 S. Ct. 2830, 100 L. Ed. 2d 930 (1988).).

An antitrust violation may be expected to cause ripples of harm to flow through the Nation's economy; but "despite the broad wording of § 4 there is a point beyond [**186] which the wrongdoer should not be held liable." . . . It is reasonable to assume that Congress did not intend to allow every person tangentially affected by an antitrust violation to maintain an action to recover threefold damages for the injury to his business or property.

Blue Shield of Virginia v. McCready, 457 U.S. 465, 476-477, 102 S. Ct. 2540, 73 L. Ed. 2d 149 (1982) (citation omitted). In evaluating a private plaintiff's standing under § 4, "we look (1) to the physical and economic nexus between the alleged violation and the harm to the plaintiff," and "(2), more particularly, to the relationship of the injury alleged with those forms of injury about which Congress was likely to have been concerned in making defendant's conduct unlawful and in providing a private remedy under § 4." Id. at 478.<sup>84</sup> The "injury suffered by the plaintiff must be of the type the antitrust laws were intended to forestall." Id. at 484 n.21, 486; see Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977) (an antitrust injury is an "injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful"). [**187]

Thus, to "prevail, a private plaintiff must establish both (1) that it has standing and (2) the defendant has violated the antitrust laws. . . . The antitrust injury element of standing demands that the plaintiff's alleged injury result from the threat to competition that underlies the alleged violation." 2 Phillip E. [**188] Areeda, Herbert Hovenkamp & Roger D. Blair, Antitrust Law P335, at 297 (2d ed. 2000) (footnote omitted). "Once it appears, whether early or late in the litigation, that either requirement [of standing or antitrust violation] is lacking, the suit must be dismissed." Id.

<sup>84</sup> Ms. McCready, a subscriber to a group health care plan who had been denied reimbursement by the plan for the cost of services of a clinical psychologist, brought her suit under § 4, alleging that the plan had conspired with a professional association of physicians and psychiatrists to exclude psychologists from receiving payment under the plan for outpatient treatment of mental disorders, including psychotherapy in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. 457 U.S. at 467-70. The Court concluded that "the injury she suffered was inextricably intertwined with the injury the conspirators sought to inflict on psychologists and the psychotherapy market. In light of the conspiracy here alleged we think that McCready's injury 'flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful . . . and falls squarely within the area of congressional concern.' Id. at 484 (footnote omitted).

At the time of the Pretrial Conference, the Part I Plaintiffs asserted that the "District employees as a pattern sought to restrain competition[;] there was inadequate impartiality in 'peer review' or in issuing privileges since the people issuing the privileges are usually in economic competition with those they are giving privileges." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 14-15.) The Proposed Amended Complaint alleged that "District employee doctors and Dr. Jones who was contracted with the District constituted about 80% or greater [*1171] of the competing doctors in the area," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 30 P26), and that "at all times, Dr. MacArthur and Michele Lyman were subject to District policies regarding their privileges as written and accepted by medical providers and physicians who economically competed with them." ( Id. at 30 P27.)

In this case, then, the alleged "conduct forbidden by the antitrust laws" arises in the [**189] context of the grant, limitation, or denial of medical practice privileges at a hospital, clinic or birthing center. ( See generally id. at 26-34 PP1-49 ("Specific Statements of Facts -- Anti-Trust Claims"); id. at 34-58 PP50-168 ("Facts for 42 USC 1983, and antitrust and RICO claims"); id. at 58-86 PP125-230 (same).)

Plaintiffs assert that the geographic market in which plaintiffs and the "District" health care services providers compete is San Juan County, Utah, with a "rural" or "frontier" population of over 13,000 people; the boundaries of the SJHSD are co-extensive with those of the county. ( Id. at 29-30 PP19-25.) Within that geography, plaintiffs assert that the SJHSD is the sole provider of hospital and birthing center services to that population:

37. San Juan Hospital and Blanding Birthing Center are the only facilities in San Juan County for births and are operated solely by San Juan Health Services District.

38. Nearly all emergency ambulance deliveries are made to San Juan Hospital.

39. The next nearest hospital facility to San Juan Hospital in Monticello, Utah is about 65 miles away in either a north (Moab) or east (Cortez, Co.) direction, and about 85 miles from Blanding. [**190] Shiprock hospital is between 65 to 85 miles from southern areas of San Juan County in Shiprock, New Mexico.

40. San Juan Hospital is the sole provider for those persons with insurance but without transportation to go outside the county or with physical conditions requiring ambulance transportation.

41. Any physician delivering babies in San Juan County would need to use the closest San Juan District facilities for patients in active labor.

( Id. at 32-33 PP37-41.) Further, according to plaintiffs, "With the exceptions of Dr. Jones and a Monument Valley clinic doctor, all other physicians and P.A.'s within San Juan District are employees of San Juan District," and none of these providers specialized in obstetrics and gynecology during the period that Dr. MacArthur--an obstetrician/gynecologist--sought staff privileges at SJHSD facilities. ( Id. at 33 PP43, 44.) The Part I Plaintiffs assert that "Dr. MacArthur's practice was in direct competition with District and District associated General Practitioners who delivered babies," and received additional compensation for doing so. ( Id. at 34 P48; see id. at 33 PP45-47.) According to these plaintiffs, the grant or denial of privileges to [**191] Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman was driven by considerations of competitive economics rather than professional practice concerns:

45. Without Dr. MacArthur and Michele Lyman to treat obstetric patients, the patients if they wished a local delivery when they went into labor, had to go to a doctor not specialized in the area of obstetrics.

* * * *

49. In making the determination of granting privileges, the medical staff and CEOs would analyze the effect of the independent practices of Dr. MacArthur and Michele Lyman upon their income outside any formal 'peer review' [*1172] context and in regards to them obtaining privileges.

( Id. at 33-34 PP45, 49.)

The Proposed Amended Complaint speaks of the "anti-competitive effect" of limiting the privileges of Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman:

42. Dr. MacArthur's limited temporary privileges preventing him from fully using the District facilities provided his patients with limited options in where they could receive their care, and prevented some from becoming his patient.

* * * *

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1172 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **191

98. The likely and logical per se effect of not granting District privileges to Michele Lyman and Dr. MacArthur is that patients would not be able to choose Michele Lyman or Dr. MacArthur [**192] as providers if they wished to receive to receive their care at the hospital.

(Proposed Amended Complaint at 33 P42, 40-41 P98.)

The restriction or denial of hospital staff privileges as a result of peer review procedures may indeed raise antitrust concerns:

Peer review of physicians holding or applying for hospital or medical staff privileges has given rise to numerous antitrust claims. The courts have recognized that peer review has the potential to be procompetitive by ensuring that only competent, professional, and otherwise qualified practitioners are permitted to practice at health care institutions. On the other hand, staff privilege decisions can raise a risk of anti-competitive abuse insofar as they are typically made upon the recommendations of members of the medical staff who may be direct or indirect competitors of the physician under review. The courts have recognized that a denial or termination of staff privileges arguably can insulate the other medical staff members from competition by the physician under review . . . .

2 American Bar Association Section of Antitrust Law, Antitrust Law Developments (Fifth) 1326-1327 (5th ed. 2002) (footnote omitted).

However, civil [**193] liability under the federal antitrust laws for "anticompetitive" conduct is not without limit.

At the outset of the Final Pretrial Conference, the defendants moved to dismiss the Part I Plaintiffs' antitrust claims on the grounds that (1) the claims are barred by the "state action" doctrine announced in Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 351-353, 63 S. Ct. 307, 87 L. Ed. 315 (1945); (2) the claims are barred by the Local Government Antitrust Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-544, 98 Stat. 2750, codified at 15 U.S.C. §§ 34-36 (2000); (3) the plaintiffs have failed to identify a specific antitrust law violation or plead the essential elements of such a violation; and (4) the plaintiffs have failed to plead an effect on interstate commerce. (Memorandum in Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs' Antitrust Claims, filed November 14, 2002 (dkt.no. 455), at 3-8.)

The Local Government Antitrust Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 34-36)

The Local Government Antitrust Act provides that "no damages, interest on damages, costs, or attorney's fees may be recovered under , 4A, or 4C of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 15, 15a, or 15c) from [**194] any local government, or official or employee thereof acting in an official capacity," 15 U.S.C. § 35(a), or "based on any official action directed by a local government, or official or employee thereof acting in an official capacity." 15 U.S.C. § 36(a). Federal courts are thus precluded "from awarding monetary relief on antitrust claims brought against local government [*1173] entities." Thatcher Enterprises v. Cache County Corp., 902 F.2d 1472, (10th Cir. 1990).

All that the Defendants need show in order to assert a valid claim of immunity from antitrust liability is that they acted in an official capacity or were directed by government officials or employees who were themselves acting in their official capacities. As previously discussed, these standards do not include a consideration of the defendant's intentions. The court considers only the objective questions: (i) whether, in light of the authority invested in a local government, its officials or employees, the actions complained of were lawful and taken within the scope of their authority, . . . or (ii) whether, if the defendant is not a local government official or employee, the actions were directed by a local government or one [**195] of its officials or employees acting within the scope of his authority.

Sandcrest, supra, at 1148 (citations omitted).

Cohn v. Wilkes General Hosp., 767 F. Supp. 111, 113 (W.D.N.C. 1991) (quoting Sandcrest Outpatient Services, P.A. v. Cumberland County Hospital, 853 F.2d 1139, 1148 (4th Cir. 1988)), affirmed, 953 F.2d 154 (4th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1230, 112 S. Ct. 3057, 120 L. Ed. 2d 922 (1992). In Cohn, the court held that the statute applied to bar a chiropractor's antitrust claim against a municipal hospital, its board of trustees and medical staff arising from the hospital's denial of his request for hospital staff privileges for allegedly anti-competitive reasons.

Applying the Local Government Antitrust Act in the context of this action, it appears to bar the damages claims of plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman as against the SJHSD, San Juan County, the defendant members of the SJHSD Board, SJHSD's administrators and medical staff, and subordinate employees. Both plaintiffs allege that the members of the SJHSD medical staff--Drs. Redd, Jones and Nelson--acted upon plaintiffs' requests for full staff privileges for anti-competitive purposes, viz., to limit competition [\[\*\*196\]](#) by Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman with the SJHSD medical staff for patients in the San Juan County area, and that other defendants at least acquiesced in their doing so, in their capacity as SJHSD Board members, administrators or County Commissioners. ( See Proposed Amended Complaint at 26-34 PP1-49 ("Specific Statements of Facts -- Anti-Trust Claims"); id. at 34-58 PP50-168 ("Facts for 42 USC 1983, and antitrust and RICO claims"); id. at 58-86 PP125-230 (same).)

Dr. MacArthur's Federal Antitrust Law Claim

By the time of pretrial, Dr. MacArthur's federal antitrust claim against the defendants sought only an award of treble damages under § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15. Applying the Local Government Antitrust Act to that claim leaves no viable federal antitrust claim remaining.

Apart from this statutory preclusion, Dr. MacArthur's federal antitrust claim fails on its own facts.

Plaintiffs insist that a denial of the full provisional SJHSD staff privileges requested by Dr. MacArthur in December of 1999 would be anti-competitive in both purpose and effect. Whatever force that argument may have, the fact remains uncontested that the SJHSD did not deny privileges to Dr. MacArthur [\[\*\*197\]](#) before he elected to move his practice out of state. The SJHSD, under the authorizing signatures of Mr. Bradford and Dr. Redd, granted Dr. MacArthur "temporary" staff privileges two weeks after he made his [\[\*1174\]](#) request for full one-year provisional privileges, and extended those privileges twice through February 2, 2000. During that interim period, Dr. MacArthur exercised his temporary privileges in providing care for his patients, and he does not allege specific facts showing that he was unable to provide care for any particular patient because of any limitation of those privileges by number or duration.

Even taking as true Dr. MacArthur's allegation that his request for full privileges was placed in the hands of other SJHSD staff physicians with whom he was competing for patients--competitors who would put their own economic interests first in making such a determination--he has failed to allege any actionable "antitrust injury" to his practice during the brief period of time in which he was exploring the San Juan County market for obstetrics and gynecological care. As explained above, § 4 of the Clayton Act "requires a plaintiff to show actual injury," Cargill, Inc., 479 U.S. at 111, [\[\*\*198\]](#) and "the plaintiff must still allege an injury of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent." Id. (footnote omitted).

Moreover, because there no final determination by the SJHSD to deny Dr. MacArthur the privileges he sought, his federal antitrust claim, like his § 1983 claim, was not ripe at the time he elected to move his practice out of the area, and, thereafter was rendered moot by his absence from the San Juan County health care services market after March of 2000. See Unity Ventures v. Lake County, 841 F.2d at 776-777 (absent final governmental action denying intended use of property, federal antitrust claim based on local land use regulation was not ripe).

Consequently, Dr. MacArthur's federal antitrust law claims must be dismissed as against all defendants. Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\).

Ms. Lyman's Federal Antitrust Law Claim

As explained above, the effect of the Local Government Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 35\(a\), is to bar plaintiff Lyman's federal antitrust claim for treble damages against the defendants, limiting that claim to a request for declaratory and injunctive relief.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1174 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **198

As explained above, to on a private civil claim under § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, [\[\*\*199\]](#) "a private plaintiff must establish both (1) that it has standing and (2) the defendant has violated the antitrust laws. . . ." 2 Phillip E. Areeda, Herbert Hovencamp & Roger D. Blair, Antitrust Law P335, at 297. "Once it appears, whether early or late in the litigation, that either requirement [of standing or antitrust violation] is lacking, the suit must be dismissed." Id. Likewise, § 16 of the Clayton Act permits injunctive relief "against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 26 (emphasis added).

Plaintiff Lyman claims that one or more of the defendants have violated the antitrust laws, but does not allege the specific nature of that violation. ( See Proposed Amended Complaint at 26-34 PP1-49; id. at 34-58 PP50-168; id. at 58-86 PP125-230.) Gleaning the elements of a particular antitrust law violation from the dense thicket of the plaintiffs' pleadings, original or amended, proves a daunting and largely fruitless task.

Taking action that is intended to disadvantage a competitor, or that has that effect, intended or not, by itself does not violate the antitrust laws. Yet plaintiff Lyman has alleged little more than that one or more SJHSD medical [\[\*\*200\]](#) staff defendants--Drs. Redd, Jones and Nelson-- [\[\*1175\]](#) took their own economic interests into consideration when addressing matters involving the plaintiff's practice privileges at SJHSD facilities in 1999, or that the effect of one or another limitation upon Ms. Lyman's privileges as a Physician Assistant operated to limit her ability to compete directly with physicians in the market for medical care in the San Juan County area.

Moreover, according to Ms. Lyman's counsel, Ms. Lyman did not have SJHSD privileges after December 22, 1999, the date her existing privileges expired, her request for renewal of her privileges in December 1999 ultimately was denied, and she made no further application for SJHSD privileges after that date:

THE COURT: Did she subsequently apply again for privileges at the hospital?

MS. ROSE: No, sir.

THE COURT: The district, she never applied again?

MS. ROSE: No, Sir.

(Tr. 11/15/02, at 53:13-17.) Thus, there exists no currently existing controversy between Ms. Lyman and the defendants concerning her entitlement to exercise of staff privileges at SJHSD facilities or the potential for denial of those privileges in violation of the federal antitrust laws. In this context, [\[\*\*201\]](#) any claim for declaratory relief under 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201-2202 has "become moot because a declaratory judgment would no longer have any effect on defendants' behavior. See Utah Animal Rights Coalition v. Salt Lake City Corp., 371 F.3d 1248, 1256-57 (10th Cir. 2004) (holding that an action for declaratory relief was moot when the requested declaration involved past conduct not likely to recur)." GF Gaming Corp. v. City of Black Hawk, Colo., 405 F.3d 876, 883 (10th Cir. 2005); see Cox v. Phelps Dodge Corp., 43 F.3d 1345, 1348 (10th Cir. 1994) ("What makes a declaratory judgment action 'a proper judicial resolution of a 'case or controversy' rather than an advisory opinion is the settling of some dispute which affects the behavior of the defendant toward the plaintiff.'") (quoting Hewitt v. Helms, 482 U.S. 755, 761, 107 S. Ct. 2672, 96 L. Ed. 2d 654 (1987)).<sup>85</sup>

<sup>85</sup> As the court of appeals recently elaborated:

It is not enough that a plaintiff wishes to have the moral satisfaction of a judicial ruling that he was right and his adversary was wrong; the relief sought must have legal effect in determining the present and future rights and obligations of the parties. "The crucial question is whether [\[\*\*202\]](#) 'granting a present determination of the issues offered . . . will have some effect in the real world.'" Citizens for Responsible Gov't State Political Action Comm. v. Davidson, 236 F.3d 1174, 1182 (10th Cir. 2000), quoting Kennecott Utah Copper Corp. v. Becker, 186 F.3d 1261, 1266 (10th Cir. 1999); see also Colorado Off-Highway Vehicle Coalition v. United States Forest Serv., 357 F.3d 1130, 1133 (10th Cir. 2004) ("A 'case or controversy' no longer exists when it is impossible for the court to grant any effectual relief whatsoever to a prevailing party."); Air Line Pilots Assn., Int'l v. UAL Corp., 897 F.2d 1394, 1396-97 (7th Cir. 1990) (the test is whether the relief sought would "make a difference to the legal interests of the parties (as distinct from their psyches, which might remain deeply engaged with the merits of the litigation)").

Utah Animal Rights Coalition v. Salt Lake City Corp., 371 F.3d 1248, 1263 (10th Cir. 2004).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1175 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **202

Similar mootness problems afflict Ms. Lyman's request for injunctive relief. See, e.g., Facio v. Jones, 929 F.2d 541, 544 \(10th Cir. 1991\) ("plaintiff cannot maintain a declaratory or injunctive action unless he or she can demonstrate a good chance of being [**203] likewise injured in the future"); Moreover, if, as the Proposed Amended Complaint indicates, Ms. Lyman seeks injunctive relief "to protect patients of Mrs. Lyman and her supervising physician, and [*1176] give Mrs. Lyman's patients uniform and considerate care with District staff sensitive to the unique needs of the patient," and allowing Ms. Lyman "to minimally go into any facility to at least speak and associate with her patient, regardless of whether she has privileges at the District," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 93), that relief would not be granted as "against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws" as provided by § 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 26. Nor would "ordering the [SJHSD] governance board to make physicians and chiefs of staff accountable for patient complaints and treat all medical providers and physician's equally and uniformly," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 94), be tailored to redress a specific antitrust violation.

As framed in plaintiffs' pleadings, Ms. Lyman's claim under the federal antitrust laws did not assert an arguable legal theory at the time of pretrial.

(10) Utah Constitution, art. I, §§ 1, 7, 25, 26, 27

The Part I Plaintiffs [**204] point to several provisions of the Utah Constitution as a footing for their allegations of "due process violations" or "violation of Mrs. Valdez' Utah Constitutional rights" by the defendants, (Proposed Amended Complaint at 11 P(3), 14 P(23)):

Article I, [Section 1. \[Inherent and inalienable rights.\]](#)

All men have the inherent and inalienable right to enjoy and defend their lives and liberties; to acquire, possess and protect property; to worship according to the dictates of their consciences; to assemble peaceably, protest against wrongs, and petition for redress of grievances; to communicate freely their thoughts and opinions, being responsible for the abuse of that right.

***

Article I, [Section 7. \[Due process of law.\]](#)

No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law.

***

Article I, [Section 25. \[Rights retained by people.\]](#)

This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

Article I, [Section 26. \[Provisions mandatory and prohibitory.\]](#)

The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise.

Article I, [Section 27. \[\*\*205\] \[Fundamental rights.\]](#)

Frequent recurrence to fundamental principles is essential to the security of individual rights and the perpetuity of free government.

Utah Const., art. I, §§ 1, 7, 25-27. The Utah Constitution's Due Process Clause, Article I, § 7, provides a footing for a direct private right of action seeking a remedy for an alleged deprivation of life, liberty or property, but only in "appropriate"--that is, extraordinary--circumstances:<sup>86</sup>

<sup>86</sup> The source of judicial authority to grant relief in "appropriate circumstances" in Utah is the common law:

20. We begin by identifying the source of our authority to award damages for constitutional violations. Except for the Takings Clause, the Utah Constitution does not expressly provide damage remedies for constitutional violations. Thus, aside from the Takings Clause, there is no textual constitutional right to damages for one who suffers a constitutional tort. Nor has the legislature enacted any laws authorizing damage claims for constitutional violations in general, or the violation of the Due Process Clause or the Open Education Clause in particular. Thus, there is no express statutory right to damages

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1176 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **205

[*1177] 22. To ensure that damage actions are permitted only "under appropriate circumstances," we therefore hold that a plaintiff must establish the following three elements before he or she may proceed with a private suit for damages.

23. First, a plaintiff must establish that he or she suffered a "flagrant" violation of his or her constitutional rights. See Dick Fischer Dev. v. Department of Admin., 838 P.2d 263, 268 (Alaska 1992); see also Bott, 922 P.2d at 734-35, 739-40 (describing the level of defendants' culpability necessary to create damages liability). In essence, this means that a defendant must have violated "clearly established" constitutional rights "of which a reasonable person would have known." Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396 (1982). [**206] To be considered clearly established, "the contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right." Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639-40, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 97 L.Ed.2d 523 (1987) (citations omitted). The requirement that the unconstitutional conduct be "flagrant" ensures that a government employee is allowed the ordinary "human frailties of forgetfulness, distractibility, or misjudgment without rendering him or herself liable for a constitutional violation." Bott, 922 P.2d at 739-40.

24. Second, a plaintiff must establish that existing remedies do not redress his or her injuries. See Schweiker v. Chilicky, 487 U.S. 412, 425, 108 S.Ct. 2460, 101 L.Ed.2d 370 (1988) (refusing to create a damages remedy for an alleged due process violation where Congress had provided meaningful safeguards or remedies); Bush v. Lucas, 462 U.S. 367, 378, 103 S.Ct. 2404, 76 L.Ed.2d 648 (1983) (same with respect to alleged First Amendment violation); Dick Fischer Dev., 838 P.2d at 268; Bonner v. City of Santa Ana, 45 Cal.App.4th 1465, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 671, 673, 676-78 (1996) (refusing to create damages remedy for [*1178] alleged due [**207] process violation where alternative common law tort cause of action existed); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 874A cmt. h, at 309 (suggesting courts should consider the adequacy of existing remedies when deciding whether to provide a tort remedy). This second requirement is meant to ensure that courts use their common law remedial power cautiously and in favor of existing remedies. See Lynch v. Jacobsen, 55 Utah 129, 138-39, 184 P. 929, 933 (1919). We urge caution in light of the myriad policy considerations involved in a decision to award damages against a governmental agency and/or its employees for a constitutional violation. Moreover, we urge deference to existing remedies out of respect for separation of powers' principles. In general, the legislative branch has the authority, and in many cases is better suited, to establish appropriate remedies for individual injuries. By requiring courts to defer to relevant legislative determinations of appropriate remedies, we respect the legislature's important role in our constitutional system of government.

for one who suffers a constitutional tort. In the absence of applicable constitutional or statutory authority, Utah courts employ the common law. See Utah Code Ann. § 68-3-1 (1996). Under the common law, "individuals had access to remedies of money damages for violations of their individual rights, and these rights, enumerated in fundamental documents, were the forerunners of many of the provisions adopted in federal and state bills of rights." Bott, 922 P.2d at 739 [**210] (citations omitted). Hence, a Utah court's ability to award damages for violation of a self-executing constitutional provision rests on the common law. The Restatement (Second) of Torts supports this view. Restatement section 874A states that when no specific remedy is mentioned, a court may accord an appropriate remedy to one injured from the violation of a constitutional provision. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 874A & cmt. a (1979). Comment (g) to section 874A suggests that a court's authority to do so arises from the common law. See id. cmt. g, at 306-07; see also Jennifer Friesen, State Constitutional Law § 7-5(c) (2d ed. 1996) (stating that section 874A espouses a common law doctrine).

21. This common law ability to award damages for constitutional violations requires policy decisions by the court, and it should be aware of them and face them candidly. . . . The court is not required to provide the civil remedy, and yet judicial tradition gives it the authority to do this under appropriate circumstances. The court has discretion and it must be careful to exercise that discretion cautiously and soundly.

Restatement § 874A cmt. d, at 303.

Spackman ex rel. Spackman v. Board of Educ. of Box Elder County School Dist., 2000 UT 87, PP20-21, 16 P.3d 533, 537-538 [**211] (quoting Bott v. DeLand, 922 P.2d 732, 739 (Utah 1996)) (footnotes omitted).

25. Third, a plaintiff must establish that equitable relief, such as an injunction, was and is wholly inadequate to protect the plaintiff's [**208] rights or redress his or her injuries. See, e.g., Bott, 922 P.2d at 739 (stating that "if prisoners' rights under article I, section 9 are violated, injunctive relief may not be adequate to remedy prisoners' injuries"); see also, e.g., Davis v. Passman, 442 U.S. 228, 245, 99 S.Ct. 2264, 60 L.Ed.2d 846 (1979) (stating that damages are an appropriate remedy where plaintiff was unconstitutionally terminated from her job on a congressional staff because, in part, "equitable relief in the form of reinstatement would be unavailing" in light of the fact that her former employer was no longer a congressman); cf. Rockhouse Mountain Property Owners Ass'n, Inc. v. Town of Conway, 127 N.H. 593, 503 A.2d 1385, 1388 (1986) (stating that damages are an inappropriate remedy for a constitutional violation where the alleged injury "can be undone" by the judiciary). This final requirement is meant to take advantage of the meaningful role equitable relief can play in redressing constitutional injuries, while not implicating so many of the difficult policy considerations raised by a decision to award damages.

Spackman ex rel. Spackman v. Board of Educ. of Box Elder County School Dist., 2000 UT 87, PP22-25, 16 P.3d 533, 538-539 [**209] (footnotes omitted).

The Part I Plaintiffs have not even attempted to plead these three essential elements of a direct civil action under the Utah Constitution in either the Proposed Amended Complaint and the Proposed Pretrial Order. They did not raise them as issues at the Final Pretrial Conference. Nor have they addressed them in the legal memoranda submitted either prior to the Final Pretrial Conference, or since. "Failure of counsel to identify an issue for the court can result in waiver: 'If counsel fail to identify an issue for the court, the right to have the issue tried is waived.' Fed.R.Civ.P. 16 advisory committee's note." Smith v. Gulf Oil Co., 995 F.2d 638, 644 (6th Cir. 1993).

Besides failing to address the essential elements of a direct civil action under the Utah Constitution, the Part I Plaintiffs have not identified the specific constitutional right(s) that come within the scope of Article I, §§ 1, 25, 26, and 27, that purportedly have been violated by the conduct of one or more of the defendants.

To date, the reported case law construing the Article I, § 25 "retained rights" provision has involved parental rights [**212] issues. [*1179] See, e.g., In re P., 648 P.2d 1364 (Utah 1982); In re K.B.E., 740 P.2d 292 (Utah Ct. App. 1987); T.R.F. v. Felan, 760 P.2d 906 (Utah Ct. App. 1988); P.O. v. S.G., 927 P.2d 202 (Utah Ct. App. 1996); J.R. v. State of Utah, 261 F. Supp. 2d 1268 (D. Utah 2003). Article I, §§ 26 and 27 appear to be declaratory of general constitutional principles rather than an enumeration of individual constitutional rights as such. See Ritchie v. Richards, 14 Utah 345, 361-363, 47 P. 670 (1896) (Bartch & Miner, JJ.) (constitutional provisions prescribing formalities to be observed in the enactment of laws are mandatory and binding on the legislature); see generally Comment, Fundamental Principles, Individual Rights, and Free Government: Do Utahns Remember How to Be Free?, 1996 Utah L. Rev. 661 ("exploring the meaning of [art. I] Section 27 of the Utah Constitution").

Having considered the pleadings, proffers, arguments and memoranda submitted by counsel, the court cannot "identify the litigable issues" that plaintiffs believed would arise under these provisions. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b); Chavez v. New Mexico, 397 F.3d 826, 839 (10th Cir. 2005) [**213] ("the Court refuses to go on a fishing expedition in search of legal analysis and facts to support these claims").

(11) Utah Unfair Practices Act (Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-5-1 et seq. (2001))

The Utah Unfair Practices Act, Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-5-1 through 13-5-18 (2001), disallows the use of a list of specific unfair trade practices by persons "engaged in commerce," including anti-competitive price discrimination,<sup>87</sup>

---

<sup>87</sup> Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-3 [**215] (2001). Section 13-5-3\(1\)\(a\) provides:

(1)(a) It is unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, where either or any of the purchasers involved in such discrimination are in commerce, where such commodities are sold for use, consumption, or resale within the state and where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to advertising or sale of goods at a price less than cost,<sup>88</sup> and advertising goods, wares, or merchandise that the advertiser is not prepared to supply.<sup>89</sup> These forbidden practices involve trade in "goods," "merchandise," "articles," "products" and "commodities," and services or facilities furnished in connection with such trade, as well as the services of someone "who performs work upon, renovates, alters or improves any personal property belonging to another person, except necessary repairs due to damage in transit . . . ." Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-12(2) (2001). As the Utah Supreme Court explains, "The immediate stimuli for the enactment of such acts were in part the rapid rise of chain stores, and in part the general sharpening of [*1180] competitive practices under pressure of the [**214] depression." Burt v. Woolsulate, Inc., 106 Utah 156, 160, 146 P.2d 203 (1944).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1179 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **215

One of the practices aimed at by these [Unfair Practices Acts] statutes is that, common in chain stores, of selling at lower prices in one locality than in another and making up losses incurred by profits in other stores. Even more important in the application of anti-discrimination statutes today is the prevention of discrimination sales by manufacturers to customers with unusually strong bargaining power who can force large price concessions. . . .

On the whole the anti-discrimination provisions of the Unfair Practices Acts seem best fitted to reach manufacturers and producers who, in the past have placed certain retail buyers in preferred competitive positions by giving them special, rebates or other price favors. . . .

Id. (quoting Comment, Prohibiting Price Discrimination and Sales Below Cost: The State Unfair Practices Acts, 32 Ill. L. Rev. 816 (1938)); see also 54A Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, etc. §§ 1077-1106 (1997); Annot., Validity, Construction and Application of State Statutory Provision Prohibiting Sales of Commodities Below Cost-Modern Cases, 41 A.L.R. 4th 612 (1985).<sup>90</sup> create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefit of such discrimination, or with customers of either of them.

<sup>88</sup> Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-7(1) (2001):

(1) It is hereby declared that any advertising, offer to sell, or sale of any merchandise, either by retailers or wholesalers, at less than cost as defined in this act with the intent and purpose of inducing the purchase of other merchandise or of unfairly diverting trade from a competitor or otherwise injuring a competitor, impairs and prevents fair competition, injures public welfare, is unfair competition contrary to [**216] public policy and the policy of this act and is declared to be a violation of this act.

See also Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-9 (2001) (selling goods in quantity below cost); Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-10 (2001) (advertising and segregation of below-cost goods at forced liquidation or close-out sales).

<sup>89</sup> Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-8 (2001).

<sup>90</sup> In Trade Comm. v. Skaggs Drug Centers, Inc., 21 Utah 2d 431, 446 P.2d 958 (Utah 1968), the Utah Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the Utah Unfair Practices Act, and elaborated upon its purpose:

It has been argued that the purpose of statutes such as the Utah Unfair Practices Act is to preserve a competitive climate by preventing large business concerns through the unrestrained use of size and resources alone, from overwhelming and destroying their smaller competitors. These statutes it is claimed seek to preserve the right of a competitor to enter a market and compete with those already operating.

It has been further argued that unrestrained price cutting on a massive scale has had disastrous effect on the small independent retailer with limited resources. That the below cost selling has become a weapon in the fight for markets and customers, characterized [**217] by the deliberate use of below cost selling to undercut, overwhelm and destroy competition, all to the benefit and further enrichment of the big interests. It is further claimed that to correct the unscrupulous conduct of these vested groups it became necessary for government to adopt such unfair trade practices acts as the one here in question.

Plaintiffs allege "interference with the patients' and plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman's ability to freely contract for services with the District, with each other, with patients as guaranteed by the . . . Utah Unfair Practices Act," among other laws, (Proposed Pretrial Order at 4 P(8)), and the "violation of the Utah Unfair Practices Act," (id. at 4 P(15); Proposed Amended Complaint at 12 P14), but nowhere in their pleadings do they detail the nature of that alleged [**218] violation. Instead, plaintiffs appear to cite the Act for its general policy statement "fostering economic competition," <sup>91</sup> and as a footing for an award of treble damages. (Proposed [*1181] Amended Complaint at 26 P2; id. at 97 (Prayer for Relief) ("Mrs. Lyman is praying for damages in excess of Six (6) Million Dollars, some of which is treble damages, due to unfair practices . . .").)

The Utah Unfair Practices Act does provide for an award of treble damages in favor of a private plaintiff who has been injured by "any act in violation of this chapter" and has sustained actual damages,<sup>92</sup> but such acts would be those expressly defined by the Act as "a violation of this act" or as "unlawful." Neither the Act's general purpose "to safeguard the public against the creation [**219] or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition" nor the "liberal construction" of its terms can extend civil liability--or the Act's criminal sanctions--beyond the "unfair and discriminatory practices" expressly "prohibited" by the Act itself. Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-17 (2001).

Where, as here, the plaintiffs fail to plead or otherwise identify acts by one or more defendants that violate the Utah Unfair Practices Act's specific provisions, neither the conclusory allegation of a violation [**220] nor the generalized assertion of interference with freedom of contract can sustain their treble damages claims under that Act.

(12) Utah Civil Rights Act (Utah Code Ann. §§ 13-7-1 et seq.(2001))

Utah Code Ann. § 13-7-3 (2001) reads:

13-7-3. Equal right in business establishments, places of public accommodation, and enterprises regulated by the state.

All persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal and are entitled to full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, goods and services in all business establishments and in all places of public accommodation, and by all enterprises regulated by the state of every kind whatsoever, without discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, religion, ancestry or national origin. Nothing in this act shall be construed to deny any person the right to regulate the operation of a business establishment or place of public accommodation or an enterprise regulated by the state in a manner which applies uniformly to all

We do not suggest that a purpose to divert or capture a competitor's business is wrong or unethical. It is perfectly legitimate so long as it is not carried out unfairly. The legislature simply has declared it unfair to accomplish it through giving away goods or services or selling them for less than cost.

Id., 21 Utah 2d at 438, 441, 446 P.2d at 962-963, 965 (footnote omitted).

<sup>91</sup> Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-17 (2001) reads: Policy of act.

The Legislature declared that the purpose of this act is to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition, by prohibiting unfair and discriminatory practices by which fair and honest competition is destroyed or prevented. This act shall be liberally construed that its beneficial purposes may be subserved.

<sup>92</sup> Under Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-14 (2001):

Any person or the state of Utah may maintain an action to enjoin a continuance of any act in violation of this chapter, and, if injured by the act, for the recovery of damages. If, in such action, the court finds that the defendant is violating or has violated any of the provisions of this chapter, it shall enjoin the defendant from a continuance of the violation. It is not necessary that actual damages to the plaintiff be alleged or proved. In addition to such injunctive relief, the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the defendant three times the amount of the actual damages sustained or $ 2,000, whichever is greater, plus court costs.

persons without regard to race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, or national origin; or to deny any religious organization the right to regulate the operation and procedures of its establishments. [**221]

This explicit guarantee of equal treatment reflects Utah's public policy "to assure all citizens full and equal availability of all goods services and facilities offered by" business establishments, places of public accommodation and state-regulated enterprises "without discrimination because of race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, or national origin," and the State's recognition since 1965 that "the practice of discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, or national origin . . . endangers the health, safety, and general welfare of this state and its inhabitants." Utah Code Ann. § 13-7-1 (2001).<sup>93</sup> Section 13-7-4\(3\) [*1182] provides that "any person who is denied the rights provided for in Section 13-7-3 shall have a civil action for damages and any other remedy available in law or equity against any person who denies him the rights provided for in Section 13-7-3 or who aids, incites or conspires to bring about such denial."

Plaintiffs' pleading alleges the "violation of Mrs. Valdez' state right to receive services equally with all other patients as found in Utah Code Ann. 13-7-2," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 13 P(21)), but she does not allege specific facts showing discrimination against her on the basis of her race, color, sex, religion, ancestry or national origin, or plead specific facts from which such discrimination may reasonably be inferred. Nor does she allege specific facts showing that she was denied "full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, goods and services" in a "place[] of public accommodation," as guaranteed by the Utah statute.

(13) Interference with Contract and with Prospective Business Relations

The tort of "interference with contract" addresses "conduct which 'intentionally and improperly interferes with the performance of a contract . . . between another and a third person by inducing or otherwise causing the third person not to perform the contract.' Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766 (1979). See also Bunnell v. Bills, 13 Utah 2d 83, 90, 368 P.2d 597, 602 (1962); W. Prosser, Handbook [*223] of the Law of Torts § 129 at 929-30 (4th ed. 1971); Annot., 26 A.L.R.2d 1227 (1952)." Leigh Furniture and Carpet Co. v. Isom, 657 P.2d 293 (Utah 1982).

"The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic relations reaches beyond protection of an interest in an existing contract and protects a party's interest in prospective relationships of economic advantage not yet reduced to a formal contract (and perhaps not expected to be)." Leigh, 657 P.2d at 302 (citing Buckaloo v. Johnson, 14 Cal.3d 815, 537 P.2d 865, 868-69, 122 Cal.Rptr. 745, 748-49 (1975); Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766B comment c; Prosser, supra, at § 130). In the Leigh case, the Utah Supreme Court recognized "a common-law cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic relations," and adopted the Oregon definition of this tort. Id. at 304 (citing Straube v. Larson, 287 Ore. 357, 361, 600 P.2d 371, 374 (1979); Top Service Body Shop, Inc. v. Allstate Insurance Co., 283 Ore. 201, 205, 209, 582 P.2d 1365, 1368, 1371 (1978)). "Under this definition, in order to recover damages, the plaintiff must prove (1) that the defendant intentionally interfered with the plaintiffs existing or potential [**224] economic relations, (2) for an improper purpose or by improper means, (3) causing injury to the plaintiff." Id.

The "economic relations" protected by this theory are diverse. "Driving away an individual's existing or potential customers is the archetypical injury this cause of action was devised to remedy. E.g., Guillory v. Godfrey, 134 Cal.App.2d 628, 286 P.2d 474 (1955); Tuttle v. Buck, 107 Minn. 145, 119 N.W. 946 (1909); W. Prosser, Handbook of the Law of Torts § 130 (4th ed. 1971); Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766B\(a\)," Leigh, 657 P.2d at 306, but protection extends to "any prospective contractual [*1183] relations . . . if the potential contract would be of pecuniary value to the plaintiff" (excluding contracts to marry), as well as "a continuing business or other customary relationship not amounting to a formal contract." Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766B comment c (1979).

---

<sup>93</sup> This statute was first enacted by the Utah Legislature in 1965, (1965 Utah Laws ch. 174), a watershed year for civil rights, government reform and other significant Utah legislation. A 1973 amendment added discrimination on the basis of sex [**222] to the conduct prohibited by the statute. See 1973 Utah Laws ch. 18, § 3.

The question of interference for an "improper purpose" or by an "improper means" requires the weighing of several relevant factors:

In determining whether an actor's conduct in intentionally interfering with a contract or a prospective contractual relation of another is improper or not, consideration is given [**225] to the following factors:

- (a) the nature of the actor's conduct,
- (b) the actor's motive,
- (c) the interests of the other with which the actor's conduct interferes,
- (d) the interests sought to be advanced by the actor,
- (e) the social interests in protecting the freedom of action of the actor and the contractual interests of the other,
- (f) the proximity or remoteness of the actor's conduct to the interference and
- (g) the relations between the parties.

Restatement (Second) of Torts § 767(a)-(g) (1979). As the Leigh court observed:

In the rough and tumble of the marketplace, competitors inevitably damage one another in the struggle for personal advantage. The law offers no remedy for those damages--even if intentional--because they are an inevitable byproduct of competition. Problems inherent in proving motivation or purpose make it prudent for commercial conduct to be regulated for the most part by the improper means alternative, which typically requires only a showing of particular conduct.

The alternative of improper purpose will be satisfied where it can be shown that the actor's predominant purpose was to injure the plaintiff. . . .

657 P.2d at 307 (footnote & citations omitted). As the [**226] Restatement explains, a competitor's interference with a prospective contractual relation is not improper if, among other things, "his purpose is at least in part to advance his interest in competing with the other." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 768(d) (1979).

g. The actor's purpose. The rule stated in this Section developed to advance the actor's competitive interest and the supposed social benefits arising from it. If his conduct is directed, at least in part, to that end, the fact that he is also motivated by other impulses, as, for example, hatred or a desire for revenge is not alone sufficient to make his interference improper. But if his conduct is directed solely to the satisfaction of his spite or ill will and not at all to the advancement of his competitive interests over the person harmed, his interference is held to be improper.

Id. § 768 comment g.

The factual allegations underpinning Dr. MacArthur's and Ms. Lyman's interference claims were considered in some detail at the Final Pretrial Conference

(14) "state common lawdefamation (also a U.S. Constitutional right to reputation as guaranteed by the Ninth Amendment)"

(a) Utah Law of Defamation

"At its core, an action for [**227] defamation is intended to protect an individual's interest in maintaining a good reputation." West v. Thomson Newspapers, 872 P.2d 999, 1008 (Utah 1994); see Seegmiller v. KSL, Inc., 626 P.2d 968, 973 (Utah 1981) (recognizing that "the integrity of an individual's reputation is essential to his standing [*1184] in society, in his vocation, and even in his family").

In order to state a claim for defamation under Utah law, a plaintiff must show "that defendants published the statements concerning him [either in print or by spoken words], that the statements were false, defamatory, and not subject to any privilege, that the statements were published with the requisite degree of fault, and that their publication resulted in damage." West, 872 P.2d at 1007-08 (footnotes omitted).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1184 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **227

Wayment v. Clear Channel Broadcasting, Inc., 2005 UT 25, P18 n.2, 116 P.3d 271, 2005 WL 858167; see DeBry v. Godbe, 1999 UT 111, P8, 992 P.2d 979, 982; <sup>94</sup> Cox v. Hatch, 761 P.2d 556, 561 (Utah 1988); Seegmiller v. KSL, Inc., 626 P.2d 968, 974, 976 (Utah 1981); Berry v. Moench, 8 Utah 2d 191, 331 P.2d 814, 818-19, 820-21 (1958); Utah Code Ann. §§ 45-2-2 (1998); Tracy H. Fowler, Note, Modernizing Defamation Law in Utah, [**228] 1980 Utah L. Rev. 535; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 558 (1972). <sup>95</sup> Under Utah law, "a statement is defamatory if it impeaches an individual's honesty, integrity, virtue, or reputation and thereby exposes the individual to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule." West, 872 P.2d at 1008 (citing Cox, 761 P.2d at 561 (citing Utah Code Ann. § 45-2-2(1))). "A court simply cannot determine whether a statement is capable of sustaining a defamatory meaning by viewing individual words in isolation; rather, it must carefully examine the context in which the statement was made, giving the words their most common and accepted meaning." Id. at 1009 (citations omitted).

As detailed most recently in the Wayment opinion, the question of "requisite degree of fault" that must be shown largely turns upon whether the plaintiff is in some sense a "public figure." 2005 UT 25, PP17-36, 116 P.3d 271. If a plaintiff is a non-"public" private individual, "the necessary degree of fault which must be shown in a defamation action . . . is negligence." Seegmiller, 626 P.2d at 973; accord, In re I.M.L. v. State of Utah, 2002 UT 110, P25, 61 P.3d 1038, 1045 ("in a civil action for libel 'actual malice' is required if the statement concerns a public official, whereas only negligence is required if the statement concerns a private citizen"); see 50 Am. Jur. 2d Libel and Slander § 21 (1995).

(b) Defamation & the Ninth Amendment

Plaintiffs have not cited and this court has not found Supreme Court or Tenth Circuit [**230] case authority recognizing "a U.S. Constitutional right to reputation as guaranteed by the Ninth Amendment," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 12 P(6)), at least as a theory of legal liability for injury to reputation independent of state defamation law.

Given that "it cannot be presumed that any clause in the constitution is intended to be without effect," Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cranch) 137, 174, [*1185] 2 L. Ed. 60 (1803), the Ninth Amendment must be afforded a stature greater than that of a mere "inkblot," <sup>96</sup> and recent scholarship argues various approaches to its interpretation. <sup>97</sup> At

<sup>94</sup> According to DeBry v. Godbe,

To establish her claim for defamation, the plaintiff must demonstrate that (1) the defendant published the statements in the letter concerning Ms. DeBry; (2) the statements were false; (3) the statements were not subject to privilege; (4) the statements were published with the requisite degree of fault; and (5) the statements resulted in damages. See West v. Thomson Newspapers, 872 P.2d 999, 1007-08 (Utah 1994).

<sup>95</sup> The Restatement (Second) of Torts § 558 identifies four elements necessary in [**229] order to establish a cause of action in defamation: (a) a false and defamatory statement concerning another; (b) an unprivileged publication to a third party; (c) fault amounting at least to negligence on the part of the publisher; and (d) either actionability of the statement irrespective of special harm or the existence of special harm caused by the publication.

<sup>96</sup> (in the words of Judge Robert Bork, The Bork Disinforms, Wall St. J., Oct. 5, 1987, at 22.)

<sup>97</sup> See, e.g., The Rights Retained by the People: The History and Meaning of the Ninth Amendment (Randy E. Barnett ed. 1989); The Rights Retained by the People: The Ninth Amendment and Constitutional Interpretation, Volume II (Randy E. Barnett ed. 1993); The Bill of Rights: Original Meaning and Current Understanding 419-451 (Eugene W. Hickok, Jr., ed. 1991); Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress, The Constitution of the United States of America: Analysis and Interpretation 1503-1505 (1992 ed.); Kurt T. Lash, The Lost Jurisprudence of the Ninth Amendment, 83 Tex. L. Rev. 597 (February 2005); Kurt T. Lash, The Lost [**232] Original Meaning of the Ninth Amendment, 83 Tex. L. Rev. 331 (2004); Christopher J. Schmidt, Revitalizing the Quiet Ninth Amendment: Determining Unenumerated Rights and Eliminating Substantive Due Process, 32 U. Balt. L. Rev. 169 (2003); Akhil Reed Amar, The Bill of Rights 119-133 (1998); John Hart Ely, Democracy and Distrust--a Theory of Judicial Review 34-41 (1980); Charles A. Black, Jr., Decision According to Law (1981); Raoul Berger, The Ninth Amendment, as Perceived by Randy Barnett, 88 Nw. U.L. Rev. 1508 (1994); Raoul Berger, Suzanna

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1185 LEXIS 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **232

a minimum, the Ninth Amendment serves as a "constitutional 'saving clause'" <sup>98</sup> avoiding an overly narrow construction of the Bill of Rights. While it may or may not "constitute[] an independent source of rights protected from infringement by either the States or the Federal Government," the Ninth Amendment "shows a belief of the Constitution's authors that fundamental rights exist that are not expressly enumerated in the first eight amendments and an intent that the list of rights included there not be deemed exhaustive." Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 492, 85 S. Ct. 1678, 14 L. Ed. 2d 510 \(1965\) [**231] (Goldberg, J., concurring).

The Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments protect certain fundamental personal liberties from abridgment by the Federal Government or the States. . . . The Ninth Amendment simply shows the intent of the Constitution's authors that other fundamental personal rights should not be denied such protection or disparaged in any other way simply because they are not specifically listed in the first eight constitutional amendments.

Id. (citations omitted).

One recent commentary asserts that reading the Ninth Amendment in light of the original intent of the Framers (and in particular, James Madison) requires the courts to strike a balance between the competing constitutional right to free speech and non-constitutional legal rights to reputation, but rejects the view that the Ninth Amendment elevates the right to [*1186] reputation to constitutional status. Laurence Claus, Protecting Rights from Rights: Enumeration, Disparagement, and the Ninth Amendment, 79 Notre Dame L. Rev. 585, 587 (2004) (the "right to reputation is not relevantly denied or disparaged unless listing certain rights in the Constitution is construed to leave reputation less protected than it would otherwise have been" under state laws, at least as they existed in 1789 or 1791.) This raises the question whether, e.g., the vindication of First Amendment interests in free expression [**234] at the expense of state defamation laws protecting the reputation of "public figures" serves "to deny or disparage" unenumerated rights "retained by the people" contrary to the Ninth Amendment. See id. at 586, 616-621. However, that issue does not arise here, where no one has asserted that either Dr. MacArthur or Ms. Lyman are "public figures" subject to more limited protection under Utah defamation law. See Wayment v. Clear Channel Broadcasting, Inc., 2005 UT 25, PP17-36, 116 P.3d 271.

Unless the Part I Plaintiffs are attempting to extend their claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to include defamatory injury to reputation (as one among the "rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws" of the United States),<sup>99</sup> invoking the Ninth Amendment in the context of their defamation claims does not appear to make

And--the Ninth Amendment, 1994 B.Y.U. L. Rev. 51; William Van Alstyne, Slouching Toward Bethlehem with the Ninth Amendment, 91 Yale L. J. 207 (1981).

<sup>98</sup> At the time of the adoption of the Bill of Rights,

Madison's comments in Congress also reveal the perceived need for some sort of constitutional "saving clause," which, among other things, would serve to foreclose application to the Bill of Rights of the maxim that the affirmation of particular rights implies a negation of those not expressly defined. See 1 Annals of Cong. 438-440 (1789). See also, e.g., 2 J. Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States 651 (5th ed. 1891). Madison's [**233] efforts, culminating in the Ninth Amendment, served to allay the fears of those who were concerned that expressing certain guarantees could be read as excluding others.

Richmond Newspapers v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 579-80, 100 S. Ct. 2814, 65 L. Ed. 2d 973 & n.15 \(1980\) (Burger, C.J.) (plurality opinion).

<sup>99</sup> The Supreme Court has rejected the assertion of reputation as a discrete interest protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Reputation alone--apart from some more tangible interests such as employment--does not implicate [**235] any "liberty" or "property" interests sufficient to invoke the procedural protection of the Due Process Clause; hence, to establish a claim under § 1983 and the Fourteenth Amendment, more must be involved than simply defamation by a state official. Paul v. Davis, 424 U.S. 693, 701-712, 96 S. Ct. 1155, 47 L. Ed. 2d 405 \(1976\).

[A plaintiff's] interest in reputation is simply one of a number which the State may protect against injury by virtue of its tort law, providing a forum for vindication of those interests by means of damages actions. And any harm or injury to that any substantive difference to the legal standards to be applied or the judicial remedies that may be available to them.<sup>100</sup>

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1186 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **235

[*1187] (15) "Federal common law and Utah contract common law and statutory provisions that prohibit contracts of adhesion, bad faith, and lack of fair dealing. Utah Code Ann. 78-12-25(1) (1996)," including the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman allege "bad faith void contracts that lack fair dealing," the "denial of their entitlement to a contract with the District that is based upon principles of good faith and fair dealing, with adequate consideration," and "violations of Federal common law and Utah contract common law and statutory provisions that prohibit contracts of adhesion, bad faith, and lack of fair dealing. Utah Code Ann. §§ 78-12-25(1) (1996)." <sup>101</sup> (Proposed Pretrial Order at 4-5 PP(11), (12) & (18).)

(a) Contracts of Adhesion

"A contract of adhesion is an agreement forced on one party by another who has superior bargaining strength." Russ v. Woodside Homes, Inc., 905 P.2d 901, 906 n.1 (Utah Ct. App. 1995) (citing Wagner v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 786 P.2d 763, 766 n. 2 (Utah Ct. App. 1990), <sup>102</sup> overruled on other grounds, Allen v. Prudential Property and Cas.

interest, even where, as here, inflicted by an officer of the State, does not result in a deprivation of any "liberty" or "property" recognized by state or federal law, nor has it worked any change of respondent's status as theretofore recognized under the State's laws. For these reasons, we hold that the interest in reputation asserted in this case is neither "liberty" nor "property" guaranteed against state deprivation without due process of law.

Id. at 712.

<sup>100</sup> Under Utah law, private civil damages action for common-law defamation are subject to a one-year statute of limitations: "An action may be brought within one year: [*236] . . . (4) for libel, slander, assault, battery, false imprisonment, or seduction; . . ." Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-29(4) (2002).

"Under Utah law, the statute of limitations begins to run when the cause of action accrues." Rutherford v. AT & T Communications of the Mt. States, Inc., 844 P.2d 949, 975 (Utah 1992); see also Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-1 (2002). "A tort cause of action accrues when all of its elements come into being and the claim is actionable." Rutherford, 844 P.2d at 975. Pursuant to Utah Code section 78-12-29(4), "an action may be brought within one year . . . for libel . . . [or] slander." Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-29(4) (2002). "In libel cases, the one-year period of section 78-12-29(4) does not run until the libel is known or is reasonably discoverable by the plaintiff." Allen v. Ortez, 802 P.2d 1307, 1314 (Utah 1990).

*Christensen v. Drossos, 2005 UT App 170, 2005 WL 851700, *1.*

It appears to be uncontested that in this case, both Dr. MacArthur and Ms. Lyman became aware of the false and malicious rumors allegedly being circulated about them by one or more of the individual defendants contemporaneously with the rumors' circulation. For Dr. MacArthur, the pertinent events [*237] transpired between October 1999 and March 2000, at which time he relocated to Nevada. Ms. Lyman may have a timely claim for defamatory falsehoods that were known or reasonably discoverable after July 25, 1999, but some of the events of which she complains may have taken place before that date.

<sup>101</sup> Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-25(1) (2002) provides that "an action may be brought within four years:"

(1) upon a contract, obligation, or liability not [*238] founded upon an instrument in writing; also on an open account for goods, wares, and merchandise, and for any article charged on a store account; also on an open account for work, labor or services rendered, or materials furnished; provided, that action in all of the foregoing cases may be commenced at any time within four years after the last charge is made or the last payment is received;

<sup>102</sup> Wagner defined an "adhesion contract" as "a contract entered into between two parties of unequal bargaining strength, expressed in the language of a standardized contract, written by the more powerful bargainer to meet its own needs, and offered to the weaker party on a "take it or leave it basis. . . ."" 786 P.2d at 766 n.2 [*239] (quoting Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co., 65 Cal.2d 263, 54 Cal.Rptr. 104, 107, 419 P.2d 168, 171 (1966)).

Ins. Co., 839 P.2d 798 (Utah 1992)). "In other words, an adhesion contract is one in which the party has no alternative." (Id.)

Under Utah law, "adhesion contracts" are not prohibited per se. Instead, the Utah Supreme Court has enumerated several equitable doctrines that may be applied to remedy over-reaching in the making of adhesion contracts, including the doctrines of estoppel, waiver, unconscionability, breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing, and the rule that ambiguous language is to be resolved against the drafter. Allen v. Prudential Property and Cas. Ins. Co., 839 P.2d 798, 805-807 & nn. 11-16 (Utah 1992) (rejecting proposed rule that ambiguous insurance contract provisions must be interpreted to effectuate the "reasonable expectations" of the insured). "The existing equitable doctrines, such as waiver, estoppel, and unconscionability, apply to any contractual relationship regardless of context so long as warranted by the facts." Id. at 806 n.17.

(b) Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Utah has recognized that all contracts contain a covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Beck v. Farmers Ins. Exchange, 701 P.2d 795, 798 (Utah 1985). [*1188] As the Utah Supreme Court explained [**240] in Christiansen v. Farmers Ins. Exchange, 2005 UT 21, 116 P.3d 259, 2005 WL 791117:

A breach of express contract claim arises out of the express terms of the contract, and the breach is proven in relation to those terms. See Fairbourn Commercial, Inc. v. Am. Hous. Partners, Inc., 2004 UT 54, P11, 94 P.3d 292 (relying on a contract's express terms to determine the intent of the parties). A claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, by contrast, is based on judicially recognized duties not found within the four corners of the contract. See Beck v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 701 P.2d 795, 798 (Utah 1985). These duties, unlike the duties expressly stated in the contract, are not subject to alteration by the parties. They exist whenever a contract is entered, see id., and are imposed on the parties "consistent with the agreed common purpose" of the contract, St. Benedict's Dev. Co. v. St. Benedict's Hosp., 811 P.2d 194, 200 (Utah 1991).

2005 UT 21, at P10. Under Utah law, "the covenant of good faith and fair dealing inheres in all contracts," id. at 11, and Under the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, both parties to a contract impliedly promise not to intentionally [**241] do anything to injure the other party's right to receive the benefits of the contract. St. Benedict's Dev. Co. v. St. Benedict's Hosp., 811 P.2d 194, 199 (Utah 1991). A violation of the covenant is a breach of the contract. Id. at 200 (citing Beck v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 701 P.2d 795, 798 (Utah 1985)).

Eggett v. Wasatch Energy Corp., 2004 UT 28, P14, 94 P.3d 193,

HN75[ To determine the legal duty a contractual party has under this covenant, a court will assess whether a "party's actions [are] consistent with the agreed common purpose and the justified expectations of the other party." Id. at 200. This court determines the "purpose, intentions, and expectations" by considering "the contract language and the course of dealings between and conduct of the parties." Id.

Oakwood Village LLC v. Albertsons, Inc., 2004 UT 101, P43, 104 P.3d 1226, 1239-1240.

HN76[ Under Utah law, "some general principles limit the scope of the covenant," including the following:

First, this covenant cannot be read to establish new, independent rights or duties to which the parties did not agree ex ante. Brehany v. Nordstrom, Inc., 812 P.2d 49, 55 (Utah 1991). Second, this covenant cannot create rights and duties inconsistent [**242] with express contractual terms. See id.; Rio Algom Corp. v. Jimco, Ltd., 618 P.2d 497, 505 (Utah 1980). Third, this covenant cannot compel a contractual party to exercise a contractual right "to its own detriment for the purpose of benefitting another party to the contract." Olympus Hills Shopping Ctr. v. Smith's Food & Drug Ctrs., 889 P.2d 445, 457 n. 13 (Utah Ct. App. 1994). Finally, we will not use this covenant to achieve an outcome in harmony with the court's sense of justice but inconsistent with the express terms of the applicable contract. See Dalton v. Jerico Constr. Co., 642 P.2d 748, 750 (Utah 1982).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1188 (2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **242

Oakwood Village LLC, 2004 UT 101, P45, 104 P.3d at 1240; see Brehany v. Nordstrom, Inc., 812 P.2d 49, 55 (Utah 1991) (the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing "cannot be construed . . . to establish new, independent rights or duties not agreed upon by the parties."). HN77 Generally, "the degree to which a party to a contract may invoke the protections of the covenant turns on the extent to which the contracting parties have defined their expectations and imposed [*1189] limitations on contract terms." Smith v. Grand Canyon Expeditions, 2003 UT 57, P20, 84 P.3d 1154, 1160.<sup>103</sup> [**243] In all instances, however, "the reach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing extends no further than the purposes and express terms of the contract." Id., 2003 UT 57, P22, 84 P.3d at 1160.

The "federal common law" reading of this implied covenant finds reflection in United States ex rel. Norbeck v. Basin Elec. Power Coop., 248 F.3d 781 (8th Cir.2001), in which the Eighth Circuit, applying federal [**245] common law, was confronted with the application of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing to a contract term involving amortization of certain costs. Id. at 794-97. Basin Electric reversed a portion of the district court's judgment granted for a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, noting that the covenant "does not imply 'an everflowing cornucopia of wished-for legal duties,'" and "does not impose a general requirement that a party act reasonably[;] rather, the covenant acts as a gap filler to deal with circumstances not contemplated by the parties at the time of contracting." Id. at 796 (internal citations omitted). The implied covenant would not be applied in a fashion that necessitates rewriting the contract to give one party "benefits for which it did not bargain." Id. at 797-98.

Plaintiffs assert the "denial of their entitlement to a contract with the District that is based upon principles of good faith and fair dealing, with adequate consideration," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 4 P(12)); "injuries from the defendants' by way of . . . (12) bad faith void contracts that lack fair dealing," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 11-12 P(12)); and that [**246] as to Dr. MacArthur, "every time he was given a contract in bad faith with ambiguities [sic] upon which he relied, he has a claim." (Id. at 95; Proposed Pretrial Order at 64.) Yet nowhere in the Proposed Amended Complaint, the Proposed [*1190] Pretrial Order, or plaintiffs' more recent written submissions do they plead specific facts identifying the "bad faith void contracts" in question, or detailing the bad faith or over-reaching involved in making those contracts.<sup>104</sup>

<sup>103</sup> According to Justice Nehring, author of the Smith v. Grand Canyon Expeditions opinion:

The implied covenant is by its very nature a pliable doctrine. It is inherently amorphous and evades definitional precision. These traits place the implied covenant directly at odds with predictability of conduct, the most basic and cherished characteristic of the contracts which the implied covenant was created to serve. As one commentator observed, "While the varieties of good faith are not quite as infinite as those of religious faith, it would be quite extraordinary if this protean concept were used in the same sense in all . . . assorted instances." Farnsworth, E. Allan, Good Faith Performance and Commercial Reasonableness Under the Uniform Commercial Code, 30 U. Chi. L.Rev. 666, 668 (1968).

However, this answer is unsatisfactory to many who share the view made evident in the dissent that the implied covenant can too easily turn away from being an ally of contract law and become its antagonist. [**244] This happens when courts mishandle the subtle but important distinction between invoking the implied covenant to compel a contracting party to honor the "agreed common purpose" and "justified expectations" of another party to the contract, Restatement Second of Contracts § 205 cmt. a (1979), and injecting it to "establish new, independent rights or duties not agreed upon by the parties" or to "nullify a right granted by a contract to one of the parties." Brehany v. Nordstrom, 812 P.2d 49, 55 (Utah 1991).

The parties can reduce the risk that a court will remake their contract and award one party "benefits for which it did not bargain," . . . by bargaining for terms that limit the exercise of unfettered discretion by one party or that otherwise clearly articulate the purposes and expectations of the parties. In short, the parties to a contract are best served when they fill their own gaps.

Eggett v. Wasatch Energy Corp., 2004 UT 28, P 43-45, 94 P.3d at 204 (Nehring, J., concurring).

<sup>104</sup> If these allegations were intended to refer to the SJHSD medical staff bylaws that govern medical practice at District facilities, the reference is well-hidden. Under Utah law, it is understood that "hospital bylaws constitute 'a contract between the hospital

Instead, it appears that plaintiffs' counsel is attempting to weave the equitable doctrines enumerated in Allen into an affirmative legal duty of "fair dealing" affecting "all Utah business relations," independent of the terms of a specific contract--a duty to make all contracts on terms that accommodate the economic expectations of the plaintiffs. Indeed, plaintiffs' counsel asserts an "interference with" Dr. MacArthur's "right to pursue his profession and business affairs by lack of good faith and fair dealing inherent and mandated in all Utah business relations." (Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff [\[\*\*248\]](#) MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), at 4.)

HN78 [T]he Utah Supreme Court has taken the position "that the ability of a plaintiff to recover in tort for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in a contract 'has the potential for distorting well-established principles of contract law and will not be permitted.'" Berube v. Fashion Centre, Ltd., 771 P.2d 1033, 1046 (Utah 1989) (Durham, J.) (quoting Beck v. Farmers Insurance Exchange, 701 P.2d 795, 799 (Utah 1985)). Utah law thus does not recognize an independent tort cause of action based upon "good faith and fair dealing" apart from the purposes and terms of an existing contract, and in contrast to equitable doctrines such as unconscionability, the implied covenant cannot serve as a basis for invalidating a contract.

(16) "privacy rights and statutory entitlements to have their credential files and patient files accurately kept by the district under Medicaid and Utah Health Department statutes and regulations"

The confidentiality of individual patients' medical information has been [\[\*\*249\]](#) a matter of long-standing concern, acknowledged in the Hippocratic Oath (ca. 400 B.C.E.).<sup>105</sup>

[*1191] Drawing from its rich history, confidentiality remains widely acknowledged as a fundamental ethical tenet of medicine, as patients must be willing to confide sensitive and personal information to health care professionals. Therefore, its value in the context of the patient-physician relationship stems partly from the need for patients to trust their physicians, and for physicians to express their loyalty to patients.

Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs, American Medical Association, Privacy in the Context of Health Care (CEJA Report 2-I-01), at 2 (December 2001), available at <http://www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/upload/mm/369/ceja\_2i01.pdf> Concern for the protection of patient confidentiality and privacy finds current expression in the American Medical Association's Principles of Medical Ethics: "A physician shall respect the rights of patients, colleagues, and other health professionals, and shall safeguard patient confidences and privacy within the constraints of the law." American Medical Association, Principles of Medical Ethics PIV (2001), available at <<http://www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/category/2512.html>>. [\[\*\*250\]](#)<sup>106</sup> and the physician," and that "the Hospital must comply with those bylaws when taking actions which effect its staff." Houston v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc., 933 P.2d 403, 408 (Utah Ct. App. 1997) (quoting Rees v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc., 808 P.2d 1069, 1076 (Utah 1991)).

In contrast to Rees and Houston, the plaintiffs in this action do not seek to enforce the provisions of the SJHSD bylaws, or even to enforce the implied covenant of good faith and fair [\[\*\*247\]](#) dealing as an implied term of the bylaws "contract." They list no claim for breach of contract. Instead, they apparently contend that the SJHSD "medical staff bylaws in and of themselves are "unconstitutional [unconscionable?], violative of covenants of good faith and fair dealing." (Tr. 11/14/02, at 43:5-9 (Ms. Rose).) Yet this view of the medical staff bylaws would necessarily hold them to be unenforceable and of no legal effect-leaving plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman with no procedural mechanism by which they could have obtained or maintained practice privileges at SJHSD facilities.

<sup>105</sup> The Oath of Hippocrates, 4th Century, B.C.E., reads in part:

What I may see or hear in the course of the treatment or even outside of the treatment in regard to the life of men, which on no account one must spread abroad, I will keep to myself, holding such things shameful to be spoken about.

Ludwig Edelstein, The Hippocratic Oath: Text, Translation, and Interpretation (1943).

<sup>106</sup> The terms "confidentiality" and "privacy" address distinct, yet overlapping concerns: "In the context of health care, emphasis has been given to confidentiality, which is defined as information told in confidence or imparted in secret. However, physicians

[HN79] In Utah, the maintenance and protection of the confidentiality of medical records involves the application of both legal and ethical standards. The Utah Medical Practice Act Rules (Rule R156-67) currently provide:

R156-67-602. Medical Records.

[HN80] In accordance with Subsection 58-67-803\(1\), medical records shall be maintained to be consistent with the following: [\[\*\*251\]](#)

- (1) all applicable laws, regulations, and rules; and
- (2) the Code of Medical Ethics of the Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs as published in the AMA Policy Compendium, 2001 edition, which is hereby incorporated by reference.

Utah Admin. Code § R156-67-602 (2005); see Utah Code Ann. § 58-67-803\(1\) (2002) [HN81] ("Medical records maintained by a licensee shall: (a) meet the standards and ethics of the profession; and (b) be maintained in accordance with division rules made in collaboration with the board.").

The advent of electronic storage and computer access to patient medical records and health information has increased patient privacy and confidentiality concerns, as one recent commentary explains:

[As] access to medical information of a sensitive nature has grown, those in the medical community and privacy advocates began to recognize the need for broad privacy protections to medical data. The result of this campaign is the Standards for Privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information (the "Privacy Rule"), a set of regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health and Human Services ("HHS"). The Privacy Rule was required by the Health Insurance Portability & Accountability [\[\*\*252\]](#) Act of 1996 ("HIPAA"), then popularly known as the Kennedy-Kassenbaum Act. At the time, HIPAA received significant attention, because it made it easier for an employee to maintain health insurance after leaving a job. HIPAA also provided that if Congress did not pass legislation pertaining to medical [\[\*1192\]](#) privacy within a specified time, HHS would promulgate regulations to that affect. HHS issued a proposed rule in October 1999, and after an unusually long and contentious comment period and a clerical error that nearly derailed the regulations at the last second, the Privacy Rule was implemented in early 2001.

Kevin B. Davis, Privacy Rights in Personal Information: HIPAA and the Privacy Gap Between Fundamental Privacy Rights and Medical Information, 19 J. Marshall J. Computer & Info. L. 535, 536 \(2001\) (footnotes omitted).

In enacting the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), Pub. L. No. 104-191, 110 Stat. 1936 (1996), Congress mandated the establishment of national standards for protection of the privacy of individually identifiable health and medical information. As indicated, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services promulgated such standards in [\[\*\*253\]](#) 2001, and most health plans and health care providers that are covered by the new rule were required to comply with the new standards by April of 2003. See Standards for Privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information, 65 Fed. Reg. 82462 \(Dec. 28, 2000\), codified at 45 C.F.R. Parts 160-164 (2004).<sup>107</sup>

Prior to the enactment of HIPAA, Utah law already afforded some degree of legal protection for the privacy and confidentiality of patient medical records. See, e.g., Hoopiiaina v. Intermountain Health Care, 740 P.2d 270, 272 \(Utah Ct. App. 1987\) ("Confidentiality of patient information is required by Utah Code Ann. § 78-25-25 (1987) and Chapter 7.404 of the Utah State Department of Health, Hospital and Psychiatric Hospital Rules and Regulations, also should be mindful of patient privacy, which encompasses information that is concealed from others outside of the patient-physician relationship." Privacy in the Context of Health Care, supra, at 3.

---

<sup>107</sup> In mid-2001, HHS released an FAQ-style "Guidance" commentary explaining the new "Privacy Rule" standards and requirements. HHS Office for Civil Rights, Standards for Privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information (2001), at <http://www.hhs.gov/ocr/hipaa/finalmaster.html> (July 6, 2001; last revised January 14, 2002).

Medical Records Department (1984 Revision).").<sup>108</sup> Utah law may afford some common-law privacy protection for [**254] medical records as well.<sup>109</sup>

[*1193] At this point, however, this court need not reconstruct the pre-HIPAA Utah law of confidentiality of patient medical records; plaintiffs assert the breach of such confidentiality, but plead no specific facts by which such a breach could be established. Plaintiffs asserted at the time of the Pretrial Conference that "Mrs. Lyman had patient files disappear, and patients['] confidentiality breached," (Proposed Pretrial Order at 13), that "patients of Michele Lyman were subjected to ... (3) breach of confidentiality of any medical treatment they did receive in the District facilities," (id. at 30 P139), that [**256] "confidentiality of her patients was broken on more than one occasion by medical staff and other SJHSD personnel," (id. at 51 P195), but with no specific factual allegations as to particular instances in which such a breach of confidentiality has occurred, or in which it is alleged there was a public disclosure of a patient's embarrassing private medical information.<sup>110</sup> Moreover, absent such specific factual allegations, the court need not decide the threshold question whether the remaining Part I Plaintiffs have the requisite standing to assert claims for a breach of confidentiality or invasion of privacy affecting third persons, viz., their patients. Cf. Singleton v. Wulff, 428 U.S. 106, 49 L. Ed. 2d 826, 96 S. Ct. 2868 (1976) (plurality opinion); Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 31 L. Ed. 2d 349, 92 S. Ct. 1029 (1972); Tileston v. Ullman, 318 U.S. 44, 87 L. Ed. 603, 63 S. Ct. 493 (1943); Henry P. Monaghan, Third Party Standing, 84 Colum. L. Rev. 277 (1984).<sup>111</sup>

(17) Negligent and Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

(a) Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

---

<sup>108</sup> Originally adopted in 1971 (1971 Utah Laws ch. 213, § 1), Utah Code Ann. § 78-25-25 (2002) addressed attorney access to patient medical records, and was repealed and re-enacted in 2003 in light of HIPAA and the HHS Privacy Rule. See Utah Code Ann. § 78-25-25 (Supp. 2004); 2003 Utah Laws ch. 64, § 2.

<sup>109</sup> Under Utah law, to prevail on a claim of public disclosure of embarrassing private facts, a plaintiff must establish the following essential elements:

- (1) the disclosure of the private facts must be a public disclosure and not a private one;
- (2) the facts disclosed to the public must be private facts, and not public ones; [and]
- (3) the matter made public must be one that would be highly offensive and objectionable to a reasonable person of ordinary sensibilities.

Shattuck-Owen v. Snowbird Corp., 2000 UT 94, P 11, 16 P.3d 555, 558 (quoting Stien v. Marriott Ownership Resorts, Inc., 944 P.2d 374, 380 (Utah Ct. App. 1997) (quoting W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 117, at 856-857 (5th ed. 1984) (footnote omitted))). See also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652D (1977) ("One who gives publicity to a matter concerning the private [**255] life of another is subject to liability to the other for invasion of his privacy, if the matter publicized is of a kind that (a) would be highly offensive to a reasonable person, and (b) is not of legitimate concern to the public.") Shattuck-Owen notes that the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652D (1977) "contains another element requiring that the matter made public not be 'of legitimate concern to the public,'" but did not "decide whether to adopt this requirement as an element of the invasion of privacy tort we address today." 2000 UT 94, P 11, 16 P.3d 555 n.1, 16 P.3d at 558 n.1.

<sup>110</sup> The Proposed Amended Complaint asserts that "some of Mrs. Lyman's patients[] were subjected to community gossip for conditions that were supposed to be private," (Proposed Amended Complaint at 17-18), at least implying [**257] some breach of confidentiality. That assertion is omitted from the recitation of contested issues of fact in the Proposed Pretrial Order, replaced by the equally conclusory assertions that "Patients of Michele Lyman were subjected to ... (3) breach of confidentiality of any medical treatment they did receive in the District facilities, . . . (6) false rumors as to their medical conditions," still without any reference to particular instances. (Proposed Pretrial Order at 30 P139.)

<sup>111</sup> Ordinarily, a litigant "must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties." Valley Forge Christian College v. Americans United for Separation of Church & State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 474, 70 L. Ed. 2d 700, 102 S. Ct. 752 (1982) (quoting Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 499, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343, 95 S. Ct. 2197 (1975)).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1193L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **257

In DeBry v. Godbe, 1999 UT 111, 992 P.2d 979, the Utah Supreme Court reiterated the essential elements of a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress:

In Samms v. Eccles, we stated the elements [**258] of such a claim:

HN82[] An action for severe emotional distress, though not accompanied by bodily impact or physical injury, [may lie] where the defendant intentionally engaged in some conduct toward the plaintiff, (a) with the purpose of inflicting emotional distress, or, (b) where any reasonable person would have known that such would result; and his actions are of such a nature as to be considered outrageous and intolerable in that they offend against the generally accepted standards of decency and morality.

11 Utah 2d 289, 293, 358 P.2d 344, 346-47 (1961).

1999 UT 111, P 25, [*1194] 992 P.2d at 986.<sup>112</sup> HN83[] "To prevail on her claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress," a plaintiff "must prove that the defendants either intentionally or recklessly engaged in intolerable and outrageous conduct that caused her severe emotional distress." Rutherford v. AT & T Communications, 844 P.2d 949, 967 (Utah 1992).<sup>113</sup>

(b) Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

HN85[] The Utah Supreme Court first expressly recognized a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress in Johnson v. Rogers, 763 P.2d 771 (Utah 1988).

In Johnson, after surveying the various tests that courts in this country have developed to determine liability for the negligent infliction of emotional distress, we adopted the position taken by section 313 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts (1965), as explained in the comments accompanying that section. Section 313's approach, also referred to as the zone of danger approach, allows recovery to plaintiffs who suffer emotional distress because of another's negligence, though they do not suffer any physical impact, only if the plaintiffs are placed in actual physical peril and fear for their own safety. Johnson, therefore, does not provide recovery to plaintiffs who are not within the zone of danger created by a defendant's negligence.

Boucher By and Through Boucher v. Dixie Medical Center, 850 P.2d 1179, 1181 (Utah., 1992). [**260]<sup>114</sup> The comments to Restatement § 313 "restrict the scope of a claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress":

<sup>112</sup> Godbe affirmed the district court's conclusion that the plaintiff's "intentional infliction of emotional distress claim could not survive summary judgment because Godbe's conduct was not outrageous and intolerable under Samms." Id.

<sup>113</sup> HN84[] Intentional infliction of emotional distress, [**259] in contrast to negligent infliction of emotional distress, does not require that plaintiff actually be at risk of bodily harm. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 312.

<sup>114</sup> Section 313 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts reads:

HN87[] (1) If the actor unintentionally causes emotional distress to another, he is subject to liability to the other for resulting illness or bodily harm if the actor

(a) should have realized that his conduct involved an unreasonable risk of causing the distress, otherwise than by knowledge of the harm [**262] or peril of a third person, and

(b) from facts known to him should have realized that the distress, if it were caused, might result in illness or bodily harm.

(2) The rule stated in Subsection (1) has no application to illness or bodily harm of another which is caused by emotional distress arising solely from harm or peril to a third person, unless the negligence of the actor has otherwise created an unreasonable risk of bodily harm to the other.

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1194L 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **262

Comment "a" declares that the "rule stated in this Section does not give protection to mental and emotional tranquillity in itself." Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 313 cmt. a \(1965\). Comment "c" articulates a form of "reasonable person" test by noting that in contrast to the section 312 rule for intentional creation of emotional distress, "one who unintentionally but negligently subjects another to such emotional distress does not take the risk of any exceptional physical sensitiveness to emotion which the other may have unless the circumstances known to the actor should apprise him of it." Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 313 cmt. c \(1965\). These comments recognize the fact that "we cannot permit every claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress to go to a jury under such varying standards as [*1195] each trial judge may choose." Johnson, 763 P.2d at 785 (Zimmerman, J., concurring in part).

Harnicher v. University of Utah Medical Center, 962 P.2d 67, 70 \(Utah 1998\). HN86 One restriction that "provides a check on feigned disturbances, thereby ensuring the genuineness" [\*\*261 of claims<sup>115</sup> is the requirement that plaintiffs who claim to be the direct victim of negligent infliction of emotional distress must allege resulting illness or bodily harm, including clinically identifiable mental illness. See id. at 71-72 (affirming summary judgment against plaintiffs who "had not suffered any bodily harm or physical injury that would support an action for negligent infliction of emotional distress"); Hansen v. Mountain Fuel Supply Co., 858 P.2d 970, 974 \(Utah 1993\) ("emotional disturbance that is not severe enough to result in illness or physical consequences is likely to be in the realm of the trivial. Such a disturbance is likely to be so temporary and subjective that to attempt to compensate it would unduly burden defendants and the courts. See Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 436A cmt. b \(1965\); ....").

<sup>116</sup>

Given that Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 313\(1\) does not give protection to mental and emotional tranquility per se, "consequently, much of the "emotional distress" which we endure ... is not compensable." Thing v. La Chusa, 48 Cal.3d 644, 257 Cal.Rptr. 865, 771 P.2d 814, 829 \(1989\) (denying recovery for negligent infliction of emotional distress where mother of injured child arrived at the scene after accident had already occurred)." Harnicher, 962 P.2d at 72. HN88[ To sustain a claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress, "the emotional distress suffered must be severe; it must be such that 'a reasonable [person,] normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.'" Mountain Fuel, 858 P.2d at 975 (quoting Rodrigues v. State, 52 Haw. 156, 472 P.2d 509, 520 \(1970\)).

(c) The Part I Plaintiffs' Emotional Distress Claims

Intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress "are claims for ... different torts, each with separate elements," and "obviously, [a] plaintiff must make the necessary allegations in his complaint \*\*264 to support each separate claim, and at trial plaintiff must prove all of the elements of each claim to recover for that cause of action," each by a preponderance of the evidence. Heiner v. Simpson, 2001 UT 39, PP 8, 9, 23 P.3d 1041, 1043 (footnote omitted); id. 2001 UT 39 17 n. 3, 23 P.3d at 1043 n.3.

Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 313 \(1965\); see also Hansen v. Sea Ray Boats, 830 P.2d 236, 240-241 \(Utah 1992\) (discussing §313).

<sup>115</sup> Hansen v. Mountain Fuel Supply Co., 858 P.2d 970, 974 \(Utah 1993\).

<sup>116</sup> As Mountain Fuel explains:

The language used in section 313 of the Restatement provides some guidance. Subsection (1) allows recovery for "illness or bodily harm." Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 313\(1\) \(1965\) (emphasis added). The drafters' use of "or" rather than "and" shows an intention to allow a plaintiff to recover not only where bodily harm results from emotional trauma, but where "illness" results as well. "Illness" is "an unhealthy condition of body or mind." Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary 566 (1981). From this we conclude that \*\*263 either physical or mental illness may support the ... cause of action.

Court and counsel reviewed the factual allegations underlying Ms. Lyman's claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress in light of this analytical framework at the Final Pretrial Conference. (See infra at 174-176.)

(18) Fraud

Under Utah law,

The elements that a party must allege "to bring a claim sounding in fraud" are [*1196] (1) that a representation was made (2) concerning a presently existing material fact (3) which was false and (4) which the representor either (a) knew to be false or (b) made recklessly, knowing that there was insufficient knowledge upon which to base such a representation, (5) for the purpose of inducing the other party to act upon it and (6) that the other party, acting reasonably and in ignorance of its falsity, (7) did in fact rely upon it (8) and was thereby induced to act (9) to that party's injury and damage. Gold Standard, Inc. v. Getty Oil Co., 915 P.2d 1060, 1066-67 (Utah 1996) [**265] (citations omitted); Educators Mut. Ins. Ass'n. v. Allied Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 890 P.2d 1029, 1032 (Utah 1995); accord Crookston v. Fire Ins. Exch., 817 P.2d 789, 800 (Utah 1991).

Armed Forces Ins. Exchange v. Harrison, 2003 UT 14, P 16, 70 P.3d 35, 40.

Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires that "in all averments of fraud ..., the circumstances constituting fraud ... shall be stated with particularity." "Simply stated, a complaint must 'set forth the time, place and contents of the false representation, the identity of the party making the false statements and the consequences thereof.'" Schwartz v. Celestial Seasonings, Inc., 124 F.3d 1246, 1252 (10th Cir. 1997) (quoting Lawrence Nat'l Bank v. Edmonds (In re Edmonds), 924 F.2d 176, 180 (10th Cir. 1991)). At a minimum, Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff set forth the "who, what, when, where and how" of the alleged fraud. Williams v. WMX Techs., 112 F.3d 175, 179 (5th Cir. 1997)); see also Harrison v. Westinghouse Savannah River Co., 176 F.3d 776, 784 (4th Cir. 1999) ("The 'circumstances' required to be pled with particularity under Rule 9(b) are 'the time, place, and contents of the false representations, as well [**266] as the identity of the person making the misrepresentations and what he obtained thereby.'") (quoting 5 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1297, at 590 (2d ed. 1990)).

Thus, while a federal court will examine state law to determine whether the elements of fraud have been pled sufficiently to state a cause of action, the Rule 9(b) requirement that the circumstances of the fraud must be stated with particularity is a federally imposed rule. One of the main purposes of the rule is to apprise the defendant of fraudulent claims and of the acts that form the basis for the claim.... In other words, "in cases in which fraud lies at the core of the action, the rule does not permit a complainant to file suit first, and subsequently to search for a cause of action."

Hayduk v. Lanna, 775 F.2d 441, 443 \(1st Cir. 1985\) (quoting Lopez v. Bulova Watch Co., Inc., 582 F.Supp. 755, 766 (D.R.I.1984) (emphasis added)).<sup>117</sup> See also Annotation, Construction and application of provision of Rule 9(b), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, that circumstances constituting fraud or mistake be stated with particularity, 27 A.L.R. Fed. 407 (1976 & Supp. 2004).

[*1197] As discussed above, plaintiff Lyman alleges that her CPR certification cards, "a necessary component of her ability to obtain privileges were altered purposefully," that "the cards were stolen from her file at least on two if not three occasions," that "the forged documents were mailed to the American Heart Association," and that "the

<sup>117</sup> Once past the [**267] pleading stage, a party must then prove the elements of fraud by clear and convincing evidence:

"A finding of fraud must be based on the existence of all its essential elements .... 'Fraud is a wrong of such nature that it must be shown by clear and convincing proof and will not lie in mere suspicion or innuendo.'" Taylor v. Gasor, Inc., 607 P.2d 293, 294-95 (Utah 1980) (internal citations omitted) (quoting Lundstrom v. Radio Corp. of Am., 17 Utah 2d 114, 117-18, 405 P.2d 339, 341 (1965)).

Armed Forces Ins. Exchange v. Harrison, 2003 PP 14, K27, 70 P.3d at 43.

doctors would have profited from Mrs. Lyman. not being able to work ...." (Proposed Pretrial Order at 63 P255; see also id. at 14, 29 PP129-131, 34 PP174-175.) No less than five essential elements of fraud are omitted from her allegations, viz., that the altered cards were sent to the American Heart [**268] Association "[1] for the purpose of inducing the other party to act upon it and [2] that the other party, acting reasonably and in ignorance of its falsity, [3] did in fact rely upon it [4] and was thereby induced to act [5] to that party's injury and damage." Secor v. Knight, 716 P.2d 790, 794 (Utah 1986) (quoting Dugan v. Jones, 615 P.2d 1239, 1246 (Utah 1980)).

HN89 [↑] "In order to prevail on a claim of fraud [or misrepresentation], all the elements of fraud must be established by clear and convincing evidence. " Id. (emphasis added). Under Rule 9(b) those missing elements of reasonable reliance, causation and injury are among the "circumstances constituting fraud" that must be pleaded with particularity. Absent such pleading, plaintiffs' fraud claim remains vulnerable to dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), independent of a motion under Rules 12(b)(6) or 56.

Would plaintiffs' state law fraud claim fare better in a Utah state court? HN90 [↑] In applying Utah's parallel civil rule, the Utah Supreme Court has held that "the mere recitation by a plaintiff of the elements of fraud in a complaint does not satisfy the particularity requirement." Armed Forces Ins. Exch. v. Harrison, 2003 UT 14, P 16, 70 P.3d at 40. [**269] Rather, Utah Rule 9(b) requires a complaint to recite "the relevant surrounding facts" "with sufficient particularity to show what facts are claimed to constitute [the fraud] charges. " " Id. (quoting Williams v. State Farm Ins. Co., 656 P.2d 966, 971 (Utah 1982) (quoting Heathman v. Hatch, 13 Utah 2d 266, 372 P.2d 990, 991 (1962))). Moreover, as the Utah Court of Appeals recently observed in Coroles v. Sabey, 2003 UT App 339, 79 P.3d 974, rule 9(b) also imposes a much more basic and fundamental requirement: a requirement of clarity and conciseness":

In Heathman v. Hatch, 13 Utah 2d 266, 372 P.2d 990 (1962), the Utah Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal of the plaintiffs complaint because the complaint, which was "33 legal size typewritten pages" in length, did not comply with rule 9(b). 372 P.2d at 991-92. The Court stated the following regarding the complaint's noncompliance with that rule:

Without burdening this opinion with the details of plaintiff's much too long and involved complaint, it is sufficient to say that its shortcomings are such that it was well within the discretion of the trial court to conclude that it failed to comply with [rules 8(a) and 9(b)], and, accordingly, [**270] to grant the motion to dismiss. The objective of these rules is to require that the essential facts upon which redress is sought be set forth with simplicity, brevity, clarity and certainty so that it can be determined whether there exists a legal basis for the relief claimed; and, if so, so that there will be a clearly defined foundation upon which further proceedings by way of responsive pleadings and/or trial can go forward in an orderly manner.

Id. at 992.

*2003 UT App 339, P 23, [*1198] 79 P.3d at 980* (footnote omitted). As Coroles explains, HN91 [↑] pleading a fraud claim without specifying the facts upon which it is based "essentially dumps upon the trial court ... the burden of sifting through the hundreds of paragraphs of alleged facts to ascertain whether Plaintiffs have 'alleged ... facts necessary to make all their elements of fraud.' DeBry v. Noble, 889 P.2d 428, 443 (Utah 1995)."

Such an approach is unacceptable. It is Plaintiffs' responsibility, not the courts', to set forth "the relevant surrounding facts" in such a manner that it is evident ""what facts are claimed to constitute [the fraud] charges. " "Armed Forces, 2003 UT 14 at P 16, 70 P.3d 35 (citations omitted) (emphasis added). See *Arena Land & Inv. Co. v. Petty, No. 94-4196, 1995 WL 645678, at *1, 1995 U.S.App. LEXIS 31140, at *3 (10th Cir. Nov. 3, 1995)* [**271] ("The third amended complaint is wordy, repetitive and fails to allege the necessary elements of the claims it is asserting. Indicative of the complaint's inadequacy is the fact that it rambles on for sixty-four pages before reaching the first claim for relief. It is neither the court's nor the appellees' role to sift through a lengthy, conclusory and poorly written complaint to piece together the cause of action.").

Id. at P 27, 79 P.3d at 980-81 (footnote omitted).

Here, this court is-as was the Utah Court of Appeals in Coroles--"unable to ascertain ""what facts are claimed to constitute [the fraud] charges."'" 79 P.3d 974, 2003 UT App 339, P 27 n.12 (quoting Armed Forces Insurance Exchange v. Harrison, 2003 UT 14, P 16, 70 P.3d 35 (citations omitted)).

Summary re: the Part I Plaintiffs' Causes of Action

Whether the Part I Plaintiffs' claims had any arguable legal merit or raised genuine issues for trial--a question of further formulation of the issues for trial under Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\) was addressed in some detail at the Final Pretrial Conference. Accepting the Proposed Amended Complaint as the best articulation of the Part I Plaintiffs' claims as of the time of pretrial, [\[\*\*272\]](#)<sup>118</sup> it becomes apparent that many of plaintiffs' theories of liability had already failed as a matter of law--one because the statute in question simply does not afford plaintiffs a private civil remedy, the others because they are legally meritless: either the essential elements of the cause of action have no bearing upon the specific facts alleged by these plaintiffs (even if those facts are taken as true and all reasonable inferences are drawn in their favor), or because the plaintiffs have pleaded the claims in conclusory terms, without alleging any specific facts that would provide a viable factual footing for these claims, that is, without a plain statement of the claim showing that they are entitled to relief. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 8\(a\)\(2\).<sup>119</sup> These legally meritless claims include those pleaded as arising under (i) RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq.; (ii) the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act of 1994, 18 U.S.C. § 248; (iii) the Health Care Quality Improvement Act, 42 U.S.C. § 11112; (iv) the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA), 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd; [\[\*1199\]](#) (v) the "Medicare Patient Bill of Rights," or freedom-of-choice provision, 42 U.S.C. § 1395a; (vi) 42 U.S.C. § 1981; [\[\*\*273\]](#) (vii) 42 U.S.C. § 1985\(3\); (viii) 42 U.S.C. § 1983; (ix) the federal antitrust laws; (x) the Utah Constitution, Art. I, §§ 1, 7, 25, 26, 27; (xi) the Utah Unfair Practices Act, Utah Code Ann. § 13-5-1 et seq., (xii) the Utah Civil Rights Act, Utah Code Ann. § 13-7-1 et seq.; (xiii) "Federal common law and Utah contract common law and statutory provisions that prohibit contracts of adhesion, bad faith, and lack of fair dealing," including the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; (xiv) "privacy rights and statutory entitlements to have their credential files and patient files accurately kept by the district under Medicaid and Utah Health Department statutes and regulations"; (xv) negligent infliction of emotional distress; and (xvi) fraud. Those claims may properly be dismissed as frivolous pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\) because they are based upon an indisputably meritless legal theory, or are rooted upon conclusory assertions rather than specific facts, as reflected in the Proposed Amended Complaint and the Proposed Pretrial Order.<sup>120</sup> Cf. Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 327, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338, 109 S. Ct. 1827 \(1989\) (claim "based on an indisputably meritless legal [\[\*\*274\]](#) theory" or founded on "clearly baseless" factual contentions may be dismissed as "frivolous" under 28 U.S.C. § 1915); Green v. Seymour, 59 F.3d 1073, 1077 \(10th Cir. 1995\) (complaint is "frivolous" under 28 U.S.C. § 1915 "where it lacks an arguable basis either in <sup>118</sup> As noted above, almost all of its allegations were repeated verbatim as the "Plaintiffs' Statement of Contested Issues of Fact" in Section 5 of the Proposed Pretrial Order.

<sup>119</sup> Further, absent leave to amend her pleadings in some fashion, plaintiff Valdez' EMTALA claim--pledged as a cause of action for the first time in the Proposed Amended Complaint and mirrored in the Proposed Pretrial Order--was clearly time-barred. See 42 U.S.C. § 1395dd\(d\)\(2\)\(C\). Plaintiff Lyman's defamation claim may be time-barred as to any actionable conduct known of or reasonably discoverable prior to July 25, 1999.

<sup>120</sup> Neither Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\) nor the accompanying advisory committee notes articulate the legal standard to be applied in determining whether a claim or defense is "frivolous" within the meaning of the rule. The advisory committee note to the 1983 amendment to Rule 16 makes general reference to a case from the D.C. Circuit, Meadow Gold Products Co. v. Wright, 108 U.S.App.D.C. 33, 278 F.2d 867 \(D.C. Cir. 1960\). That case states that [\[\*\*277\]](#) "the primary purpose of the pre-trial procedure is to 'define the claims and defenses of the parties for the purpose of eliminating unnecessary proof and issues, lessening the opportunities for surprise and thereby expediting the trial,'" but does not speak of "frivolous" claims. 278 F.2d at 869 (quoting Rosden v. Leuthold, 107 U.S.App.D.C. 89, 92, 274 F.2d 747, 750 \(D.C. Cir. 1960\)).

Some guidance may be gleaned from case law construing analogous rule and statutory language, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 1915\(e\) \(2000\). Cf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11\(b\)\(2\) (claims and defenses "warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law").

fact or law."); Olson v. Stotts, 9 F.3d 1475, 1476 (10th Cir. 1993) (claim is "frivolous" under 28 U.S.C. § 1915 "if the factual contentions supporting the claim are 'clearly baseless,' . . . or the claim is based on a legal theory that is 'indisputably meritless,'"); Mitchell v. Horn, 318 F.3d 523, 530 (3d Cir. 2003) (to be "frivolous" under 28 U.S.C. § 1915, "a claim must rely on 'an indisputably meritless legal theory' or a 'clearly baseless' . . . factual scenario"); Taylor v. Johnson, 257 F.3d 470, 472 (5th Cir. 2001) (complaint is "frivolous" if it "lacks an arguable basis in law or fact, and a complaint lacks such a basis if it relies on an indisputably meritless legal theory."); Walker v. City of Bogalusa, 168 F.3d 237 (5th Cir. 1999) (claim is "frivolous" under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 if "it is 'so lacking in arguable merit as to be groundless or without foundation'" (quoting Plemer v. Parsons-Gilbane, 713 F.2d 1127, 1140 (5th Cir. 1983)) [**275] (construing 42 U.S.C. §2000e-5\(k\)) (quoting Jones v. Texas Tech University, 656 F.2d 1137, 1145 (5th Cir. 1981)); Karam v. City of Burbank, 352 F.3d 1188, 1195 (9th Cir. 2003) (complaint may be deemed "frivolous" under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 "only when the result is obvious or the ... arguments of error are wholly without merit" (quoting [*1200] McConnell v. Critchlow, 661 F.2d 116, 118 (9th Cir. 1981))); Davis v. Target Stores Div. of Dayton Hudson Corp., 87 F. Supp. 2d 492, 494 (D. Md. 2000) (claim is "frivolous" under Title VII (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5\(k\)) "if a plaintiff presents no evidence to support his claim or if he has gone forward on the basis of no colorable legal theory"); see also Annotation, Standards for determining whether proceedings in forma pauperis are frivolous and thus subject to dismissal under 28 U.S.C.A. sec. 1915(d), 52 A.L.R. Fed. 679 (1981 & Supp. 2004); Annotation, Right of defendant in civil rights case to receive award of attorney's fees under Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C.A. sec. 1988), 104 A.L.R. Fed. 14 (1991 & Supp. 2004); Black's Law Dictionary 601 (5th ed. 1979) ("A pleading is 'frivolous' when it is clearly insufficient in its face, [**276] and does not controvert the material points of the opposite pleading, and is presumably interposed for mere purposes of delay or to embarrass the opponent.").

Pretrial Determination of the Part I Plaintiffs' Claims

For the reasons explained in some detail above, the Final Pretrial Conference concluded with a bench ruling dismissing the Part I Plaintiffs' remaining federal claims on the grounds that they did not have an arguable basis in law and lacked sufficient support in plaintiffs' factual allegations to raise a triable issue, even where those allegations are taken as true and viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs. (See [**278] Tr. 11/15/02, at 113:9-118:7 (the court); Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\).)

Plaintiffs' counsel subsequently objected to the dismissal of the Part I Plaintiffs' claims at the Final Pretrial Conference on the grounds that (1) no summary judgment motion was pending at the time of the Final Pretrial Conference, and plaintiffs did not receive ten days' notice that summary judgment would be considered; (2) no notice was given to the plaintiffs that the pretrial hearing was in actuality a hearing of dismissal of all of their claims; (3) several issues of material fact were raised in the pretrial conference; and (4) dismissal with prejudice, without leave to amend, operates as a "severe sanction" that should only be imposed in extraordinary cases. According to plaintiffs' counsel, there are "two types of dismissal" under the Federal Rules: Rule 12\(b\) dismissal and Rule 56 summary judgment--or three, viz., as a discovery sanction (Rule 37\(b\)\(2\)\(C\))--a view that fails to take into account Rule 16\(c\)\(1\) and the function of the final pretrial conference. (See supra at 4-7 ("The Final Pretrial Conference (Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)").))

The court's expectations concerning the proposed pretrial order and the [**279] final pretrial conference were spelled out for counsel in explicit terms at the hearing on August 22, 2002:

THE COURT: A pretrial order is a joint product. I'm interested in isolating the genuinely disputed factual issues. I'm interested in isolating the genuinely disputed legal issues if any. I want a roster of all your witnesses on all sides. I want a roster of all your exhibits for your cases in chief.

MS. ROSE: Roster of exhibits and witnesses.

THE COURT: I'm interested in having the attorneys sign off on the suggested form of pretrial order so that I know that you've agreed to it even if you agree to disagree as to the identified issues, and I'm interested as I said in giving you a little more time here.

****

We're interested in identifying the issues, identifying both legal propositions [*1201] and factual propositions, the witnesses, the exhibits.

And then at pretrial I'm interested in counsel being prepared to talk theory, that is legal theory, legal authority, statutory authority or case authority and be able to talk facts, this is what this witness is going to tell us Judge. That way we can try to screen what's here and see what's genuinely disputed and what genuinely deserves a [*280] fact finder trial.

(Transcript of Hearing, dated August 22, 2002, at 31:23-32:9, 32:25-33:9 (the court) (emphasis added).) And this was not the only occasion in which the court expressed its expectations concerning pretrial to counsel in open court, and on the record. (See Minute Entry, dated July 2, 2002 (dkt. no. 386); Minute Entry, dated October 8, 2002 (dkt. no. 427).) These expressed expectations comport with both the purpose and function of Rule 16\(c\) and the requirements of the court's Local Rules, particularly DUCivR 16-1\(d\): HN92↑ "Preparation for this final pretrial conference should proceed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16 and should include (i) preparation by plaintiffs counsel of a recommended pretrial order..., and (ii) preparation for resolution of unresolved issues in the case." (Emphasis added.)

As explained in some detail herein, this court addressed these plaintiffs' claims in the context of the Final Pretrial Conference, and did so pursuant to Rule 16\(c\)\(1\), applying Rule 16\(c\)\(1\) standards, using the parties' Proposed Pretrial Order as a guide--not pursuant to Rule 56, applying Rule 56\(c\) standards; not pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), working solely within the confines of the [*281] written pleadings; and not in the context of the imposition of discovery sanctions against the plaintiffs pursuant to Rule 37\(b\)\(2\).<sup>121</sup>

Claims Against San Juan County and the SJHSD

As explained above, the pretrial examination of the Part I Plaintiffs' causes of action leads to the conclusion that these plaintiffs have no viable federal causes of action against either San Juan County or the San Juan Health Services District. The remaining state tort law claims involve intentional torts allegedly committed by one or more individual defendants.

Claims Against the Individual Defendants

The colloquy at the Final Pretrial Conference confirmed that as against the individual defendants--Commissioner Tyron Lewis, Commissioner Bill Redd, County Attorney Craig Halls, Reid [*282] Wood, Cleal Bradford, Roger Atcity, John Lewis, John Housekeeper, Karen Adams, Patsy Shumway, Dr. Lloyd Val Jones, Dr. Manfred Nelson, Rick Bailey, Marilee Bailey, Ora Lee Black, Gary Holliday, Carla Grimshaw, Gloria Yanito, and Julie Bronson--the Part I Plaintiffs have failed to allege legally viable § 1983 claims against these defendants, even taking plaintiffs' factual allegations as true and treating them in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims fail as against these defendants as well.

As against County Attorney Craig Halls, the Part I Plaintiffs have alleged no wrongful conduct whatsoever. Essentially the same may be said for defendant Carla Grimshaw. Defendants Ora Lee Black and Gloria Yanito are alleged to have communicated [*1202] directions concerning Ms. Lyman's staff privileges that purportedly originated with Dr. Redd, the SJHSD medical director, or Ms. Schafer, the patient care director. By themselves, these allegations do not state an arguable legal claim under the plaintiffs' remaining state tort law theories. Nor does it appear that any remaining state law claim was pleaded against defendant Lori Wallace. (See Proposed Pretrial [**283] Order at 5-6 PP(20)-(25).)

---

<sup>121</sup> See, e.g., Ehrenhaus v. Reynolds, 965 F.2d 916, 921 (10th Cir. 1992) (district court acted within its discretion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 37\(b\)\(2\)\(C\) in dismissing complaint with prejudice as sanction for violation of discovery order when securities fraud plaintiff failed to appear for scheduled deposition notwithstanding court's order and warning that court would dismiss complaint if plaintiff did not comply with order).

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1202L<sup>A</sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **282

Likewise, the Part I Plaintiffs complain of the County Commissioners and SJHSD Board members inaction on their behalf, but allege no intentionally tortious acts by any of these defendants that establish any of the elements of the remaining state law causes of action for interference with contract, interference with prospective business relations, defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Dr. MacArthur's State Law Tort Claims

As against defendant Julie Bronson (and possibly Marilee Bailey, Laurie Schafer and Cleal Bradford, ( see Proposed Pretrial Order at 25 P 96)), Dr. MacArthur alleges facts that, when taken in the light most favorable to him, may support a state law defamation claim. Whether he alleged a non-frivolous claim of interference with contract or interference with prospective business relations against those few individual defendants who were directly involved with his request for full provisional staff privileges appears more doubtful. He did not allege facts that would support a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress against any defendant.

Dr. MacArthur's federal claims having been dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16\(c\)\(1\), [**284] this court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(a\) (2000) over his remaining state law tort claims of defamation against Ms. Bronson (or others), and interference with contract/prospective business relations against Dr. Redd, Mr. Bradford or others who had direct involvement with Dr. MacArthur's December 1999 request for full one-year provisional privileges pursuant to the SJHSD medical staff bylaws. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(c\)\(3\) (2000). Dr. MacArthur has pleaded no other non-frivolous state tort claims against any other defendant.

Ms. Lyman's State Law Tort Claims

From an examination of the Proposed Amended Complaint, the Proposed Pretrial Order and through the colloquy at the Final Pretrial Conference, it became increasingly apparent that Ms. Lyman was not claiming a denial of practice privileges as much as she was alleging intentional interference by some defendants with the exercise of practice privileges which Ms. Lyman understood she had already been granted by the SJHSD and which remained in effect until December 22, 1999. She alleges a series of incidents in which her orders for laboratory tests, heart monitors, injections, x-rays and other [**285] routine procedures would be refused or ignored, often at the instance or direction of Dr. Redd. ( See supra n.69 and accompanying text.)

While such incidents may not amount to a constitutional deprivation actionable under § 1983 and subject to claims of qualified immunity--they may constitute at least a colorable state tort claim. An excluded practitioner may be able to avoid the qualified privilege barrier to § 1983 claims by pleading and proving that an individual defendant's actions were taken to satisfy a personal grudge, not in the best interests of the hospital, and therefore constituted an intentional tort, such as interference with contractual relations. See, e.g., Straube v Emanuel Lutheran Charity Bd., 287 Or. 375, <sup>A</sup>12031 600 P.2d 381 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 996, 100 S. Ct. 1657, 64 L. Ed. 2d 242 (1980). In addition, non-tort theories such as breach of contract may be available to remedy discrepancies between reasonable expectations as to practice privileges and restrictions imposed upon their actual exercise.

HN93 [↑] Because the Hospital bylaws constitute "a contract between the hospital and the physician," Rees, 808 P.2d at 1076, the Hospital must comply with those bylaws when [**286] taking actions which effect its staff. Moreover, we agree with the weight of authority which grants deference to hospital officials' professional judgment. Under this authority, courts require that a hospital only "substantially comply" with its bylaws. See, e.g., Hosp. Owens v. New Britain Gen. , 32 Conn. App. 56, 627 A.2d 1373, 1379-80 \(Conn. App. 1993\)aff'd,229 Conn. 592, 643 A.2d 233 (Conn. 1994); Friedman v. Memorial Hosp., 523 N.E.2d 252, 253 (Ind. App. 1988); Smith v. Our Lady of the Lake Hosp., 639 So. 2d 730, 755 (La. 1994); Mahmoodian v. United Hosp. Ctr., Inc., 185 W. Va. 59, 404 S.E.2d 750, 755 (W. Va.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 863, 112 S. Ct. 185, 116 L. Ed. 2d 146 (1991); see also Piacitelli v. Southern Utah State College, 636 P.2d 1063, 1066-67 (Utah 1981)

416 F. Supp. 2d 1098, *1203, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25235, **286

(finding substantial compliance with policies in college personnel manual sufficient to withstand due process attack); see generally Kathleen M. Dorr, Annotation, Exclusion of, or Discrimination Against, Physician or Surgeon by Hospital, 28 A.L.R. 5th 107, § 3, at 152-67 (1995 & Supp. 1996) (collecting cases). Substantial compliance with the bylaws adequately serves their primary purpose, which is to ensure fair procedures [**287] for staffing decisions. See, e.g., Owens, 627 A.2d at 1379-80.

Houston v. Intermountain Health Care, Inc., 933 P.2d 403, 408 \(Utah Ct. App. 1997\).<sup>122</sup>

Plaintiff Lyman may also have viable state tort claims against Dr. Redd for defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Defamation claims under Utah law are constrained by the one-year limitations statute, but claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress have a much longer temporal reach:

Utah Code section 78-12-25(3) permits an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress to be brought within four years of actionability. See Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-25(3) (2002) ("An action may be brought within four years ... for relief not otherwise provided by law."); see also Rutherford, 844 P.2d at 975 (applying section 78-12-25(3) to determine the statute of limitations for the plaintiff's intentional infliction of emotional distress claim).

In Rutherford, the Utah Supreme Court noted that "because [**288] of the nature of [an intentional infliction of emotional distress] cause of action, it can be difficult to determine when all its elements--intentional, outrageous conduct proximately causing extreme distress--have come into being. Of particular difficulty is the element of injury--extreme emotional distress. " 844 P.2d at 975. However, the difficulty in determining when the emotional distress occurred is generally limited to situations "where a defendant subjects a plaintiff not to a single outrageous act, but to a pattern or practice of acts." Id.

Christensen v. Drossos, 2005 UT App 170, 2005 WL 851700, \*1. Furthermore, "When conduct that [*1204] would give rise to a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress is continuous and ongoing, and it is unclear when the plaintiff suffered severe emotional distress, the statute of limitations begins to run from the time the last injury is suffered or the tortious conduct ceases." Hatch v. Davis, 102 P.3d 774, 2004 UT App 378, P 44, 102 P.3d 774, 785 (footnote omitted).

Ms. Lyman's federal claims having been dismissed at the conclusion of the Final Pretrial Conference, this court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(a\) [**289] over her remaining state law tort claims. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(c\)\(3\). Those claims, therefore, will be dismissed without prejudice.

Summary re: the Final Pretrial Conference

As the court explained at the conclusion of the Final Pretrial Conference, "The effort is again to sort out as best we can what the contentions are and the footings for those contentions," a process "resulting in the orders that the court has indicated." Tr. 11/15/02, at 228:8-10 (the court.).

In revisiting that sorting process in the process of preparing this more formal written disposition of the issues presented, the court has elaborated upon the legal and factual bases for its bench ruling in somewhat greater detail. The court has also taken this opportunity to clarify the jurisdictional disposition of the plaintiffs' few remaining state law claims in the interest of avoiding at least some confusion concerning those matters.

Initially, the court had called upon counsel for the prevailing parties to prepare proposed forms of order memorializing the court's bench ruling at the pretrial conference, consistent with this court's local rule, DUCivR 54-1\(a\) & \(b\):

<sup>122</sup> In dealing with the enforcement of the terms of written hospital bylaws, presumably the Utah six-year limitations statute for actions based upon written contracts would apply. See Utah Code Ann. § 78-12-23(2) (2002).

HN94 [↑] (a) Orders in Open Court. Unless otherwise determined [**290] by the court, orders announced in open court in civil cases must be prepared in writing by the prevailing party, served within five (5) days of the court's action on opposing counsel, and submitted to the court for signature pursuant to the provisions of section (b) of this rule.

(b) Orders and Judgments. Unless otherwise determined by the court, proposed orders and judgments prepared by an attorney must be served upon opposing counsel for review and approval as to form prior to being submitted to the court for review and signature. Approval will be deemed waived if no objections are filed within five (5) days after personal service or eight (8) days after service by mail.

The preparation of proposed forms of order led to another series of objections, revisions, hearings, and supplemental memoranda on the same. ( See Plaintiff's Formal Objection to the Court assigning the drafting of the Final Dismissal Order to the Defense Counsel, filed November 20, 2002 (dkt. no. 458); Proposed Final Order of Dismissal with Prejudice, received November 22, 2002; Proposed Order Denying Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend, received November 26, 2002; Plaintiffs' Objection to the Form of the Proposed [**291] Dismissal Order, filed November 27, 2002 (dkt. no. 465); Plaintiffs' Objection to the Defendants' Proposed Order Denying the Plaintiffs' Motion to Amend the Complaint, filed December 27, 2002 (dkt. no. 477); Transcript of Hearing, dated February 24, 2003, at 26:17-31:15, 71:8-12; Proposed Order of Dismissal With Prejudice, received March 4, 2003; Objection to the Defendants' Proposed Order of Dismissal With Prejudice, filed March 10, 2003 (dkt. no. 511); Transcript of Hearing, dated December 19, 2003; Supplemental Objections to the Final Orders of Dismissal of Federal and State Law Claims, filed December 29, 2003 (dkt. no. 585).

[*1205] In preparing this written disposition of the Part I Plaintiffs' claims, the court has also taken the opportunity to address several of the objections raised by the plaintiffs to the proposed forms of order earlier submitted by counsel,<sup>123</sup> particularly where those objections were directed against the substance of the court's bench ruling or the conduct of the pretrial conference, as opposed to the form of the proposed orders reflecting that ruling. Cf. DUCivR54-1\(b\).

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE AN AMENDED COMPLAINT

It has long been understood that HN95 [↑] "the Federal Rules encourage litigants to plead only a simple statement, in sequence, of the events which have transpired, coupled with a direct claim by way of demand for judgment." Meadow Gold Products Co. v. Wright, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 33, 278 F.2d 867, 869 \(D.C. Cir. 1960\) (citing Gins v. Mauser Plumbing Supply Co., 148 F.2d 974 \(2d Cir. 1941\)). From the commencement of this litigation, plaintiffs' counsel has taken a dramatically different approach to pleading the Part I Plaintiffs' claims, at times shuffling each plaintiff's factual allegations and legal assertions together as one would a deck of playing cards, sacrificing narrative [**293] sequence in favor of argumentative characterizations and conclusory assertions.

Plaintiffs' Proposed Amended Complaint was no exception. Filed a week before the Final Pretrial Conference, "Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend and Supplement Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," and "Memorandum of Fact and Law in Support," filed November 6, 2002 (dkt. no. 438), sought leave to file the Proposed Amended Complaint in order to correct any deficiencies in the plaintiffs' pleadings referred to by the Tenth Circuit in MacArthur v. San Juan County, 309 F.3d 1216 \(10th Cir. 2002\), and to amend plaintiffs' pleadings to conform to the evidence and clarify the remaining issues. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(b\). The defendants did not have an opportunity to respond to that motion before the Final Pretrial Conference began on November 14, 2002.

<sup>123</sup> ( See, e.g., Plaintiffs' Objection to the Form of the Proposed Dismissal Order, filed [**292] November 27, 2002 (dkt. no. 465), at 3, 5 ("the Plaintiffs should be allowed to know what legal theories and facts and rules the Court was relying upon for dismissing each Plaintiffs' claim in the pretrial setting. Plaintiffs should not be forced to ferret out by intuition what the Court meant, was thinking at the time, or intended .... Plaintiffs respectfully request the Court itself to identify the claims of the Plaintiffs and the reasons for their dismissal." ).)

At the conclusion of the Final Pretrial Conference on February 15, 2002, the court made a bench ruling denying the motion for leave to amend:

MS. ROSE: I've put in a motion to amend the complaint and I drafted it in 2 parts. Since these plaintiffs have been dismissed is there any way of procedurally just looking at amending the [**294] complaint for the second part?

THE COURT: Well I dealt with the important aspect of the amended complaint, namely the emergency room problem and I've dealt with that and I'll simply deny the motion to amend.

MS. ROSE: No, no, I meant no, Your Honor, I'm sorry, I didn't mean for these 3 plaintiffs that have been dismissed, I understand they are gone. What I'm talking about is I amended the complaint that I originally filed for Singer, Riggs and Dickson and is that motion for amending that part of the complaint still viable?

THE COURT: No, the motion is denied.

[*1206] Tr. 11/15/02, at 119:8-23.) The court again addressed the matter at the February 24, 2003 hearing on all pending motions. ( See Transcript of Hearing, dated February 24, 2003, at 36:21-23 ("We dealt with the question of amendments and I have indicated to you that as an amendment the answer is no." (the court).) A proposed form of order denying the motion was submitted to the court, as were objections thereto, and the proposed order has not been entered.

Having reviewed the record in this matter in preparing this written disposition, the court has again examined the motion for leave to amend as well as the Proposed Amended Complaint. [**295] The allegations of the Proposed Amended Complaint, prolix and circuitous as they are, correspond far more closely to the issues as framed by counsel in the Proposed Pretrial Order than do the even more prolix and partially obsolete allegations of the original Complaint, as earlier amended. ( See Complaint (Verified), filed July 25, 2000 (dkt. no. 1); "Amendments to the Complaint; Correction of Errors," filed August 1, 2000 (dkt. no. 3).)

HN96 While generally, motions to amend a complaint to conform to the evidence "are made at trial or in the immediate aftermath of trial," Steven Baicker-McKee, et al., Federal Civil Rules Handbook 337 (2000 ed.), the express language of Rule 15(b) does not limit such motions to that context.

Viewing the Proposed Amended Complaint as the best statement of plaintiffs' claims as of the time of pretrial, and given the close relationship between the proposed pleading and the Proposed Pretrial Order, it likely would serve the interests of clarity of the record to grant the leave to amend as requested, and direct the filing of the Proposed Amended Complaint nunc pro tunc to November 14, 2002, the date of the Final Pretrial Conference. Granting leave to amend [**296] on that basis avoids confusion between the Part I Plaintiffs' claims as pleaded in the original Complaint and their claims as addressed in the context of pretrial, and does so without reviving any claims that were disposed of in the course of the Final Pretrial Conference. Granting leave to amend also serves to clarify the remaining plaintiffs' claims as pleaded in Part II of the Proposed Amended Complaint, concerning the enforcement of certain orders of the Navajo Tribal Court. Therefore, the court concludes that its earlier bench ruling concerning the "Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend and Supplement Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," filed November 6, 2002 (dkt. no. 438), should be vacated and the motion should be granted nunc pro tunc to November 14, 2002.

THE PART I PLAINTIFFS' MOTIONS FOR RECONSIDERATION

In the months since the November 2002 pretrial conference, court and counsel have addressed matters concerning the claims of the remaining three plaintiffs, Singer, Riggs and Dickson, and the questions of Navajo Tribal Court jurisdiction they have raised. In addition, the court has heard, considered and ruled upon a series of motions [**297] filed by the parties, including a request for a settlement conference, which was granted, ( see Minute Entry, dated July 6, 2004.(dkt. no. 657)), but apparently to no avail. ( See Minute Entry, dated September 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 663).)

Shortly after the reported failure of the settlement conference, the Part I Plaintiffs' filed a series of motions for reconsideration of the court's bench rulings at the Final Pretrial Conference, coupled with motions for summary judgment in favor of the Part I Plaintiffs pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. ( See Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to [\[\*1207\]](#) Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 664); Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670); Plaintiff Lyman's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' [sic] Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 695).) Responsive memoranda were filed by the defendants, [\[\*\*298\]](#) followed by the plaintiffs' reply memoranda and several additional motions.<sup>124</sup>

HN97 Except to the extent that a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60\(b\) or Fed. R. Civ. P. 59\(e\) is deemed a "motion for reconsideration," the Federal Rules do not expressly provide for such motions. Nevertheless, in this circuit, a "motion for reconsideration" may be made on one or more specific grounds:

Grounds warranting a motion to reconsider include (1) an intervening change in the controlling law, (2) new evidence previously unavailable, and (3) the need to correct clear error or prevent manifest injustice. See Brumark Corp. v. Samson Resources Corp., 57 F.3d 941, 948 (10th Cir. 1995). Thus, a motion for reconsideration is appropriate where the court has misapprehended the facts, a party's position, or the controlling law.

Servants of the Paraclete v. Doe, 204 F.3d 1005, 1012 \(10th Cir. 2000\).

Here, the Part I Plaintiffs urge reconsideration [\[\*\*300\]](#) of this court's November 15, 2002 bench ruling on most, if not all of the available grounds. ( See Memorandum of Points and Authorities Supporting Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 665), passim; Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), passim; Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff Lyman's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' [sic] Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 696), passim.) They also raise additional issues not addressed at pretrial, particularly as to the nature of the relationships between [\[\*1208\]](#) various defendants, their liability insurers and their counsel of record.

The court has reviewed and considered the Part I Plaintiffs' motions for reconsideration and supporting memoranda and exhibits as part of the process of preparing this written embodiment of that bench [\[\*\*301\]](#) ruling, and has referred to them more than once in the foregoing analysis of the plaintiffs' various claims. The Part I Plaintiffs' "new evidence previously unavailable" consists largely of deposition testimony of a SJHSD officer obtained in another federal lawsuit relating conversations about non-parties, or evidence of collateral matters concerning the background and credibility of one or more of the individual defendants, ( e.g., unrelated prior criminal convictions).

---

<sup>124</sup> ( See "Plaintiffs' MacArthur, Lyman, Valdez' Motion for Sanctions," filed January 25, 2005 (dkt. no. 703); San Juan County Defendants' Combined (1) Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff Valdez' Motion to Reconsider and (2) Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 29, 2004 (dkt. no. 673); San Juan County Defendants' Combined (1) Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion to Reconsider and (2) Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 13, 2004 (dkt. no. 682); Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to MacArthur's November 29, 2004 Motion for Summary Judgment (Health District), filed December 14, 2004 (dkt. no. 684); Health District Defendants' Joinder in Motion, filed December 21, 2004 (dkt. no. 690); Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Lyman's December 26, 2004 Motion for Summary Judgment (Health District), filed January 14, 2005 (dkt. no. 699); San Juan County Defendants' Combined (1) Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff Lyman's Motion to Reconsider and (2) Motion for an [\[\*\*299\]](#) Extension of Time to Respond to Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed January 18, 2005 (dkt. no. 701); Joinder in San Juan County Defendants' Combined (1) Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff Lyman's Motion to Reconsider and (2) Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed February 3, 2005 (dkt. no. 706).)

The plaintiffs also complain of materials not produced by the defendants in discovery in this action. They also use these motions as an opportunity to adjust their legal contentions and theories of liability.

In large part, however, the Part I Plaintiffs' motions for reconsideration simply reargue the same legal claims grounded upon the same factual allegations as were set forth in the Proposed Amended Complaint and the Proposed Pretrial Order, and discussed in some detail at the Final Pretrial Conference.

Having examined the motions for reconsideration, the court concludes that in each instance, the motion presents no exceptional circumstances justifying relief from the court's prior bench ruling as it has been further [<sup>**302</sup>] explicated herein. Cf. Bud Brooks Trucking, Inc. v. Bill Hodges Trucking Co., 909 F.2d 1437, 1440 (10th Cir. 1990) HN98↑ ("Relief under Rule 60(b) is extraordinary and may only be granted in exceptional circumstances."). The Part I Plaintiffs have failed to point to "new evidence previously unavailable" that materially alters the existing factual footing for their claims; nor have they established a "need to correct clear error or prevent manifest injustice" as to any claim that has been dismissed on its merits, as detailed above.

Therefore, the Part I Plaintiffs' motions for reconsideration should in each instance be denied in all respects.<sup>125</sup>

CONCLUSION

With the determination of the Part I Plaintiffs' motions for reconsideration and for sanctions, this court's consideration of these plaintiffs' [<sup>**303</sup>] claims against the remaining defendants draws to a close. Based upon detailed examination in the context of the Final Pretrial Conference, the Part I Plaintiffs' claims have been dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(c)(1), on the merits and with prejudice, with the exception of the remaining state tort law claims of plaintiffs MacArthur and Lyman for interference with contract, interference with prospective business relations, defamation and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress as against defendants Redd, Jones, Schafer, Nelson, and Bradford, as well as defendants Bronson and Marilee Bailey (defamation only), over which this court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction, see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c); those claims shall be dismissed without prejudice.

The claims asserted and issues raised by the remaining plaintiffs, Singer, Riggs and Dickson, and the defenses and issues [<sup>*1209</sup>] raised by the remaining defendants in response to those plaintiffs' claims, currently remain under advisement, and will be addressed in a separate written disposition to be issued in due course. The claims of plaintiffs Singer, Riggs and Dickson having already been submitted for decision, the remaining [<sup>**304</sup>] defendants need not answer or otherwise respond to the plaintiffs' Amended Complaint, which has been directed to be filed herein, nunc pro tunc to November 14, 2002.

Good cause thus appearing therefor,

IT IS ORDERED that the "Plaintiffs' Rule 15 Motion to Amend and Supplement Complaint to Conform to the Evidence & the 10th Cir. Court 10-7-02 Opinion," and "Memorandum of Fact and Law in Support," filed November 6, 2002 (dkt. no. 438), shall be and hereby is GRANTED nunc pro tunc to November 14, 2002; the Clerk of the Court is directed to file the proposed Amended Complaint annexed thereto in the record in this action (Civil No. 2:00-CV-584BSJ)<sup>126</sup> and enter the same upon the docket forthwith;

---

<sup>125</sup> The denial of plaintiffs' motions for reconsideration renders moot their accompanying motions for summary judgment. Thus, no further response by the defendants to the latter motions is required. ( See Order re: Pending Motions, filed March 30, 2005 (dkt. no. 7]8), at 5-6.)

"Plaintiffs' MacArthur, Lyman, Valdez' Motion for Sanctions," filed January 25, 2005 (dkt. no. 703), shall likewise be denied.

<sup>126</sup> The caption of the Proposed Amended Complaint erroneously refers to "civil no. 92-C-1071TS," a case currently assigned to Chief Judge Benson.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the claims of plaintiff Dr. Steven MacArthur shall be and hereby are DISMISSED with prejudice as against all of the defendants named herein, except that the court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over his claims for intentional interference with contract, intentional interference with prospective business relations [**305] and defamation as against defendants Dr. James Redd, Dr. L. Val Jones, Laurie Schafer, Dr. Manfred Nelson, and Cleal Bradford, Julie Bronson and Marilee Bailey, see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c); those claims are hereby DISMISSED without prejudice;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the claims of plaintiff Michele Lyman shall be and hereby are DISMISSED with prejudice as against all of the defendants named herein, except that the court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over her claims for intentional interference with contract, intentional interference with prospective business relations, defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress as against defendants Dr. James Redd, Dr. L. Val Jones, Laurie Schafer, Dr. Manfred Nelson, and Cleal Bradford, see 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c); those claims are hereby DISMISSED without prejudice;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the claims of plaintiff Helen Valdez shall be and hereby are DISMISSED with prejudice as against the defendants named herein, and in particular defendants Lori Wallace and the San Juan Health Services District;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff Valdez's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' [**306] Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed October 26, 2004 (dkt. no. 664), is hereby DENIED;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff MacArthur's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed November 23, 2004 (dkt. no. 670), is hereby DENIED;

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiff Lyman's Motion for the Court to Reconsider its Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Valdez' [sic] Discrimination Claims and Plaintiffs' Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, filed December 28, 2004 (dkt. no. 695), is hereby DENIED;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that "Plaintiffs' MacArthur, Lyman, Valdez' [*1210] Motion for Sanctions," filed January 25, 2005 (dkt. no. 703), is hereby DENIED; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a printed copy of the Proposed Pretrial Order, received by the court on November 12, 2002, shall be lodged by the Clerk of the Court in the file as part of the record in this action, and that an electronic (.pdf format) copy of the Proposed Pretrial Order shall be appended by the Clerk of the Court to the electronic (.pdf format) copy of this Memorandum Decision & Order and be made available as part [**307] of the permanent CM/ECF case record in this action.

DATED this 13 day of June, 2005.

BY THE COURT:

BRUCE S. JENKINS

United States Senior District Judge

Freeman v. Lasky, Haas & Cohler

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

February 16, 2005, Argued and Submitted, Pasadena, California ; June 14, 2005, Filed

No. 03-56588

Reporter

410 F.3d 1180 *; 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 11132 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,827

ARLEEN FREEMAN, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated; JAMES ALEXANDER, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs-Appellants, v. LASKY, HAAS & COHLER, a professional corporation; CHARLES B. COHLER; LUCE, FORWARD, HAMILTON & SCRIPPS; CHRISTOPHER J. HEALEY; WHITE AND BRIGHT, a professional corporation; DAVID S. BRIGHT; MUSICK, PEELER & GARRETT LLP; MICHAEL J. HICKMAN; JON F. MCKINLEY; CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS, INC.; JOHN LOMAC; MARK MARCHAND; DIANNE MCMILLAN; SHARE JACKSON; SCOTT HUBAL; JUNE BARLOW, Defendants-Appellees.

Prior History: [**1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of California. D.C. No. CV-03-00715 MJL/JAH. M. James Lorenz, District Judge, Presiding.

Disposition: AFFIRMED.

Core Terms

---

sham, lawsuit, antitrust, discovery, Sherman Act, misconduct, immunity, incidental, petitions, realtors'

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

HN1 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

The Noerr-Pennington doctrine extends to all three branches of government, and thus exempts bringing a lawsuit--that is, petitioning a court--from antitrust liability.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN2 [blue icon] Noerr-Pennington Doctrine, Sham Exception

While Noerr-Pennington immunity is broad, it is not so broad as to cover all litigation: "Sham" petitions don't fall within the protection of the doctrine. There are three circumstances when litigation might be sham: First, if the alleged anticompetitive behavior consists of bringing a single sham lawsuit (or a small number of such suits), the antitrust plaintiff must demonstrate that the lawsuit was (1) objectively baseless, and (2) a concealed attempt to interfere with the plaintiff's business relationships. Second, if the alleged anticompetitive behavior is the filing of a series of lawsuits, the question is not whether any one of them has merit--some may turn out to, just as a matter of chance--but whether they are brought pursuant to a policy of starting legal proceedings without regard to the merits and for the purpose of injuring a market rival. Finally, in the context of a judicial proceeding, if the alleged anticompetitive behavior consists of making intentional misrepresentations to the court, litigation can be deemed a sham if a party's knowing fraud upon, or its intentional misrepresentations to, the court deprive the litigation of its legitimacy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

HN3 Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Noerr-Pennington immunity from antitrust liability, and the sham exception, also apply to defensive pleadings, because asking a court to deny one's opponent's petition is also a form of petition; thus, the courts speak of a "sham defense" as well as a "sham lawsuit."

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > General Overview

Constitutional Law > Bill of Rights > Fundamental Freedoms > Freedom to Petition

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Right to Petition Immunity

HN4 Scope, Exemptions

Because the Noerr-Pennington doctrine grows out of the Petition Clause, its reach extends only so far as necessary to steer the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 1 to 3, clear of violating the First Amendment. Immunity thus applies only to what may fairly be described as petitions, not to litigation conduct generally. A complaint, an answer, a counterclaim and other assorted documents and pleadings, in which plaintiffs or defendants make representations and present arguments to support their request that the court do or not do something, can be described as petitions without doing violence to the concept. But discovery is merely communication between parties as an aid to litigation. It is not in any sense a communication to the court and is therefore not a petition. Nevertheless, conduct incidental to a petition is protected by Noerr-Pennington if the petition itself is protected.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Defenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Defenses

410 F.3d 1180, *1180L<sup>2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 11132, **1</sup>

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Right to Petition Immunity

HN5 Sherman Act, Defenses

Discovery, like settlement talks, is conduct incidental to a petition for purposes of the Noerr-Pennington exception to antitrust liability. Thus, whether discovery misconduct violates the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 1 to 3, depends on whether the defense as a whole would be actionable.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > General Overview

Real Property Law > Torts > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN6 Noerr-Pennington Doctrine, Sham Exception

To apply the sham exception to Noerr-Pennington immunity in the context of a defense, courts look to the test for a sham lawsuit spelled out in the first Kottle exception. This two-part test contains both an objective and a subjective component. On the first prong, the issue is whether the defense is or is not objectively baseless. The existence of probable cause to institute legal proceedings--a notion drawn from the common-law tort of wrongful civil proceedings--precludes a finding that an antitrust defendant has engaged in sham litigation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN7 Noerr-Pennington Doctrine, Sham Exception

Under the second part of a definition of sham litigation as an exception to Noerr-Pennington immunity, the court should focus on whether the baseless lawsuit conceals an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor through the use of the governmental process--as opposed to the outcome of that process--as an anticompetitive weapon.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Defenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

HN8 Clayton Act, Defenses

For a defense of a lawsuit to be a sham for purposes of the first Kottle sham litigation exception to Noerr-Pennington immunity, plaintiffs would have to show that the defense was not merely baseless, but aimed at interfering with their business by, for example, sapping their financial resources or distracting their attention.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN9 [+] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Noerr-Pennington immunity from antitrust liability is not limited to lawyers. A Noerr-Pennington case need not involve claims against lawyers at all.

Counsel: David Barry, Barry & Associates, San Francisco, California, for the plaintiffs-appellants.

Jeffrey M. Shohet and Stanley J. Panikowski, Gray Cary Ware & Freidenrich LLP, San Diego, California; Charles A. Bird, Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps LLP, San Diego, California; Robert F. Semmer, Coughlan, Semmer & Lipman, LLP, San Diego, California; Cheryl A. Orr, Musick, Peeler & Garrett LLP, Los Angeles, California, for the defendants-appellees.

Judges: Before: Alex Kozinski, Stephen S. Trott and Richard R. Clifton, Circuit Judges. Opinion by Judge Kozinski.

Opinion by: Alex Kozinski

Opinion

---

[*1182] KOZINSKI, Circuit Judge:

We consider the applicability of Noerr-Pennington immunity to discovery misconduct.

Facts

Realtor Arleen Freeman subscribes to a regional real-estate Multiple Listing [*1183] Service (MLS) run by Sandicor, a corporation owned and managed by various local realtors' associations. Charging that Sandicor's MLS subscription fees were fixed at artificially high levels, Freeman sued Sandicor, the realtors' [*2] associations, and some of their officers and directors under the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2. The defendants in that litigation wrongfully withheld information in discovery. After the misconduct came to light, the district court granted new discovery and sanctioned the defendants, but it nonetheless granted their motion for summary judgment. On appeal, we affirmed in part and reversed in part. *Freeman v. San Diego Ass'n of Realtors*, 322 F.3d 1133 \(9th Cir. 2003\).

Freeman now brings a new antitrust action against some of the executives, lawyers and law firms of the associations involved in the previous litigation, and against the state realtors' association directly, based on the discovery misconduct that, she claims, involved subornation of perjury and intimidation of witnesses. Freeman argues that, by stretching out the litigation, the discovery misconduct postponed the day of judgment and thus extended Sandicor's price fixing. The district court dismissed the complaint with prejudice for failure to state a claim, based (among other grounds) on the Noerr-Pennington doctrine. Freeman appeals.<sup>1</sup>

[**3] Analysis

1. The First Amendment aspect of antitrust law, the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, was first announced in Eastern Railroad Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464, 81 S. Ct. 523 (1961), where the Supreme Court interpreted the Sherman Act, in view of "the right of the people . . . to petition the Government for a redress of grievances," U.S. Const. amend. I, to not cover political lobbying:

To hold that the government retains the power to act in [its] representative capacity [to make laws that operate to restrain trade] and yet hold, at the same time, that the people cannot freely inform the government of their wishes would impute to the Sherman Act a purpose to regulate, not business activity, but political activity, a purpose which would have no basis whatever in the legislative history of that Act. . . . Such a construction of the Sherman Act would [also] raise important constitutional questions. The right of petition is one of the freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights, and we cannot, of course, lightly impute to Congress an intent to invade these freedoms.

365 U.S. at 137-38 [**4] (footnote omitted); see also United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 669-70, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965). HN1 [↑] The doctrine extends to all three branches of government, and thus also exempts bringing a lawsuit--that is, petitioning a court--from antitrust liability. See Cal. Motor Transp. Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 510, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642, 92 S. Ct. 609 (1972).

HN2 [↑] While Noerr-Pennington immunity is broad, it is not so broad as to cover all litigation: "Sham" petitions don't fall within [*1184] the protection of the doctrine. See Noerr, 365 U.S. at 144; Cal. Motor Transp., 404 U.S. at 511; Prof'l Real Estate Investors, Inc. v. Columbia Pictures Indus., Inc., 508 U.S. 49, 56-57, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611, 113 S. Ct. 1920 (1993). We have recognized three circumstances when litigation might be sham:

First, if the alleged anticompetitive behavior consists of bringing a single sham lawsuit (or a small number of such suits), the antitrust plaintiff must demonstrate that the lawsuit was (1) objectively baseless, and (2) a concealed attempt to interfere with the plaintiff's business relationships.

Second, if the alleged [**5] anticompetitive behavior is the filing of a series of lawsuits, "the question is not whether any one of them has merit--some may turn out to, just as a matter of chance--but whether they are brought pursuant to a policy of starting legal proceedings without regard to the merits and for the purpose of injuring a market rival."

Finally, in the context of a judicial proceeding, if the alleged anticompetitive behavior consists of making intentional misrepresentations to the court, litigation can be deemed a sham if "a party's knowing fraud upon, or its intentional misrepresentations to, the court deprive the litigation of its legitimacy."

Kottle v. Northwest Kidney Ctrs., 146 F.3d 1056, 1060 (9th Cir. 1998) (citations omitted) (quoting USS-POSCO Indus. v. Contra Costa County Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council, 31 F.3d 800, 811 (9th Cir. 1994); Liberty Lake Invs., Inc. v. Magnuson, 12 F.3d 155, 159 (9th Cir. 1993)).

---

<sup>1</sup> The complaint was filed as a separate action because the statute of limitations was about to run out and our mandate in the original case, which would have officially remanded the action, hadn't yet issued. Freeman requested that the district court classify the complaint as supplemental to the original case when it regained jurisdiction. The district court, however, did not consolidate the action with the original lawsuit, but continued to treat it as a separate lawsuit. Its dismissal is therefore a final judgment subject to appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

HN3 ↑ Noerr-Pennington immunity, and the sham exception, also apply to defensive pleadings, see In re Burlington N., Inc., 822 F.2d 518, 532-33 (5th Cir. 1987), because asking a court to [**6] deny one's opponent's petition is also a form of petition; thus, we may speak of a "sham defense" as well as a "sham lawsuit."

2. HN4 ↑ Because the Noerr-Pennington doctrine grows out of the Petition Clause, its reach extends only so far as necessary to steer the Sherman Act clear of violating the First Amendment. Immunity thus applies only to what may fairly be described as petitions, not to litigation conduct generally. A complaint, an answer, a counterclaim and other assorted documents and pleadings, in which plaintiffs or defendants make representations and present arguments to support their request that the court do or not do something, can be described as petitions without doing violence to the concept. But discovery is merely communication between parties as an aid to litigation. It is not in any sense a communication to the court and is therefore not a petition. See Theofel v. Farey-Jones, 359 F.3d 1066, 1078-79 (9th Cir. 2004) (noting that "subpoenaing private parties in . . . private . . . litigation" is hardly petitioning). Nevertheless, "conduct incidental to" a petition is protected by Noerr-Pennington if the petition itself is [**7] protected. Id. at 1078 (internal quotation mark omitted); cf. Noerr, 365 U.S. at 143-44.

In Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc. v. Professional Real Estate Investors, Inc., 944 F.2d 1525 (9th Cir. 1991), aff'd on other grounds, 508 U.S. 49, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611, 113 S. Ct. 1920 (1993), we considered whether a refusal to settle a lawsuit could be actionable under the Sherman Act. We held:

A decision to accept or reject an offer of settlement is conduct incidental to the prosecution of the suit and not a separate and distinct activity which might form the basis for antitrust liability. Consequently, [defendant's] ability to establish that [plaintiffs'] refusal to [settle] violated the Sherman Act depends on its success or failure in showing that the [*1185] [underlying lawsuit] is actionable under the federal antitrust laws.

Id. at 1528-29. Because the underlying lawsuit was not a sham, plaintiffs' refusal to settle could not support antitrust liability. HN5 ↑ Discovery, like settlement talks, is "conduct incidental to" a petition--in this case, incidental to the realtors' associations' defense against Freeman's [**8] lawsuit. Thus, whether this particular misconduct violates the Sherman Act depends on whether the defense as a whole would be actionable.

Discovery misconduct, subornation of perjury and witness intimidation are, of course, serious matters. Had they not been brought to light in time, it is entirely possible that they would so have infected the defense of the lawsuit as to make it a sham. But we need not decide that question today because it is clear that the defense here was not a sham.

HN6 ↑ To apply the sham exception in the context of a defense, we look to the test for a sham lawsuit spelled out in the first Kottle exception. See page 7062 supra. This two-part test contains both an objective and a subjective component. On the first prong, the defense was not "objectively baseless." "The existence of probable cause to institute legal proceedings"--a notion drawn from the common-law tort of wrongful civil proceedings--"precludes a finding that an antitrust defendant has engaged in sham litigation." Prof'l Real Estate Investors, 508 U.S. at 62. And here, there was probable cause, because defendants prevailed on their defense in the district court after the [**9] discovery misconduct was discovered, undone and sanctioned. Cf. Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts 894 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984) ("A recovery by the plaintiff in the original action usually is regarded as conclusive evidence of the existence of probable cause, even though it is subsequently reversed, unless it can be shown to have been obtained by fraud or other imposition upon the court." (footnotes omitted)).

On the second prong, there is no evidence that the defense as a whole was "a concealed attempt to interfere with the plaintiff's business relations." See also Prof'l Real Estate Investors, 508 U.S. at 60-61 HN7 ↑ ("Under this second part of our definition of sham, the court should focus on whether the baseless lawsuit conceals 'an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor,' through the 'use [of] the governmental process--as opposed to the outcome of that process--as an anticompetitive weapon.'" (quoting Noerr, 365 U.S. at 144 (emphasis added); City of Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Adver., Inc., 499 U.S. 365, 380, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382, 111 S. Ct. 1344 (1991)) (alteration in original). [**10] HN8 ↑ For a defense of a lawsuit to be a sham for purposes of the first Kottle exception, plaintiffs would have to show that the defense was not merely baseless, but aimed at interfering with their business by, for example, sapping their financial resources or distracting their attention.

There was enough objective merit and subjective good faith in the defense of the original antitrust suit to cover it, and the conduct incidental to it, with the Noerr-Pennington cloak.<sup>2</sup>

[*1186] [**11] 3. The district court used Noerr-Pennington immunity (among other grounds) to dismiss the complaint as to the attorney defendants only; the complaint was dismissed as to the other defendants based on other theories. However, HN9 Noerr-Pennington immunity is not limited to lawyers: The *First Amendment* petition right belongs to the defendants in the original case, though their employees, law firms and lawyers, as their agents in that litigation, get to benefit as well. Indeed, a Noerr-Pennington case, such as Professional Real Estate Investors, need not involve claims against lawyers at all. Noerr-Pennington immunity is a sufficient ground to dismiss the complaint as to all defendants. We therefore affirm the district court's ruling as to the non-lawyer defendants on this alternative ground. See *New Kids on the Block v. News Am. Publ'g*, 971 F.2d 302, 305 \(9th Cir. 1992\) (we may affirm the district court's judgment on any ground fairly presented by the record before us).

AFFIRMED.

---

End of Document

---

<sup>2</sup> Freeman further alleges that, on one occasion, the attorney defendants made false factual representations to the court. Compl. P 37. Unlike Freeman's other allegations, which concern out-of-court misconduct, this one falls within the third *Kotte* exception, under which misrepresentations to the court make a petition a sham if they "deprive the litigation of its legitimacy." See page 7063 supra. Our conclusion that the defense as a whole was not a sham also establishes that this isolated instance of litigation misconduct would not, if proven, deprive the defense as a whole of its legitimacy.

In re Enron Corp.

United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York

June 14, 2005, Decided

Chapter 11, Case No. 01 B 16034 (AJG) (Confirmed)

Reporter

327 B.R. 526 *; 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1065 **; 44 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 249

In re: ENRON CORP., et al., Reorganized Debtors.

Core Terms

---

filed rate doctrine, electricity, energy, rates, wholesale, tariff, cases, state law claim, anti trust law, preemption, regulation, market-based, violations, markets, state law, preempted, refunds, sales, manipulation, interstate, courts, file a tariff, transactions, antitrust, remedies, reasons, argues, exclusive jurisdiction, unfair competition, field preemption

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN1 [] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

The Cartwright Act prohibits agreements to limit or reduce the production, or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16720\(b\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN2 [] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

The Unfair Competition Law prohibits unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business acts and practices. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN3 [] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

The California Commodity Law prohibits fraudulent acts or conduct in connection with the purchase or sale of a commodity. Cal. Corp. Code §§ 29536-37.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN4 [+] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

Pursuant to Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204; Cal. Govt. Code § 12658; Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16750\(c\), 16754, 16760, the state can prosecute violations of these state laws on behalf of the people.

Constitutional Law > Supremacy Clause > Federal Preemption

Governments > Federal Government > US Congress

Constitutional Law > Supremacy Clause > General Overview

HN5 [+] Supremacy Clause, Federal Preemption

Federal preemption of state law is rooted in the Supremacy Clause, U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 2. Where Congress manifests an intent to occupy an entire regulatory field, any remedy sought outside of the congressional scheme is considered completely preempted. Federal courts have rarely identified legislation which has been found to completely preempt state jurisdiction.

Constitutional Law > Supremacy Clause > General Overview

HN6 [+] Constitutional Law, Supremacy Clause

In the absence of an express preemption by Congress, state law is preempted: (1) when Congress intends that federal law occupy a given field; and (2) to the extent that state law actually conflicts with federal law, that is, when it is impossible to comply with both state and federal law, or where the state law stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment of the full purposes and objectives of Congress.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > Exclusive Jurisdiction

Constitutional Law > ... > Commerce Clause > Interstate Commerce > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > Preemption

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > ... > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Civil Actions > Jurisdiction

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Independent System Operators

327 B.R. 526, *526L<sup>2005</sup> Bankr. LEXIS 1065, **1065

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > Federal Rate Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > Wholesale Rates

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Federal Powers

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > State Powers

HN7 Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

State actions against wholesale electricity suppliers alleging violations of California's unfair business practices law are preempted by the Federal Power Act because the conduct the state sought to condemn was expressly governed by the California Independent System Operator tariffs and they encroach upon the substantive provisions of the tariff, an area reserved exclusively to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), both to enforce and to seek remedy. FERC has been granted broad authority by Congress, in addition to the authority to determine the "just and reasonable rates" for wholesale power. The statute delegates to the FERC exclusive authority to regulate the transmission and sale at wholesale of electric energy in interstate commerce except those which Congress has made explicitly subject to regulation by the states. Retail sales of electricity and wholesale intrastate sales are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the states. Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C.S. §§ 824-824m.

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > General Overview

Communications Law > Regulators > US Federal Communications Commission > Jurisdiction

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > Federal Rate Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > Wholesale Rates

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Rates > General Overview

HN8 Electric Power Industry, Electricity Distribution & Transmission

16 U.S.C.S. § 824e provides that upon a determination by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) that any rate charge, or classification, demanded, observed, charged, or collected by any public utility for any transmission or sale subject to the jurisdiction of the FERC, or that any rule, regulation, practice, or contract affecting such rate, charge, or classification is unjust, unreasonable, unduly discriminatory or preferential, the FERC shall determine the just and reasonable rate, charge, classification, rule, regulation, practice, or contract to be thereafter observed and in force, and shall fix the same by order. Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C.S. § 824e.

Administrative Law > Agency Adjudication > Informal Agency Action

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil, Gas & Mineral Interests > Purchase Contracts > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Independent System Operators

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Deregulation & Restructuring

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > Federal Rate Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN9 [blue] Agency Adjudication, Informal Agency Action

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) possesses broad remedial authority to address anti-competitive behavior, specifically through profit disgorgement and refunds. Further, FERC can proceed by rulemaking rather than case-by-case adjudication, and can rely on general findings of systemic monopoly conditions and the resulting potential for anti-competitive behavior, rather than evidence of monopoly and undue discrimination on the part of individual utilities. Federal Power Act, §§ 205, 206(a), 16 U.S.C.S. §§ 824d, 824e\(a\); Department of Energy Organization Act, § 403(c), 42 U.S.C.S. § 7173\(c\).

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Independent System Operators

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN10 [blue] US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Authorities & Powers

California entities that transact through the California Independent System Operator (ISO) or the California Power Exchange and engage in improper practices are in violation of filed tariffs. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) and the Market Surveillance Unit are directed by the ISO's Market Monitoring and Information Protocol to refer matters to the FERC for enforcement.

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > Preemption

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Independent System Operators

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > Rate Setting & Tariffs

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Gaming & Lotteries

HN11[] Regulators, US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission

Since 1998, the California Independent System Operator and the California Power Exchange tariffs have contained provisions that identify and prohibit "gaming" and "anomalous market behavior" in the sale of electric power. "Anomalous market behavior" is: (1) behavior that departs significantly from the normal behavior in competitive markets that do not require continuing regulation; or (2) as behavior leading to unusual or unexplained market outcomes. Circumstances include: (1) withholding of generation capacity under circumstances in which it would normally be offered in a competitive market; (2) unexplained or unusual redeclarations of availability; (3) unusual trades or transactions; (4) pricing and bidding patterns that are inconsistent with prevailing supply and demand conditions; and (5) unusual activity or circumstances relating to imports from or exports to other markets or exchanges.

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Legislative Controls > Implicit Delegation of Authority

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Corporations > Dissolution & Receivership > Involuntary Dissolution

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

HN12[] Legislative Controls, Implicit Delegation of Authority

Implicit in Federal Energy Regulatory Commission orders granting market-based rates to the marketers is a presumption that a company's behavior will not involve fraud, deception or misrepresentation. Companies failing to adhere to such standards were and are subject to revocation of their market-based rate authority.

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Jurisdiction

Governments > Federal Government > Claims By & Against

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Primary Jurisdiction

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

HN13 Separation of Powers, Jurisdiction

The filed rate doctrine is essentially a rule of jurisdiction whose applicability is circumscribed by both the congressionally mandated jurisdiction of the regulatory agency and the occurrence of the triggering event of filing a rate or tariff. The filed rate doctrine is applicable where rates were filed with a federal regulatory agency and where the offending transactions are carried out with reference to a filed tariff. The filed rate doctrine forbids a regulated entity from charging rates for its service other than those properly filed with the appropriate federal regulatory authority. The purpose of the doctrine is preservation of the agency's primary jurisdiction over reasonableness of rates and the need to insure that regulated companies charge only those rates of which the agency has been made cognizant.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > Federal Power Act > Federal Rate Regulation

HN14 Exemptions & Immunities, Filed Rate Doctrine

While market-based rates may not have historically been the type of rate envisioned by the filed rate doctrine, they do not fall outside the purview of the doctrine.

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

HN15 Energy & Utilities Law, Antitrust Issues

The reporting requirements are an integral part of a tariff, with Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's implied enforcement mechanisms sufficient to provide substitute remedies for the obtaining of refunds for the imposition of unjust, unreasonable and discriminatory rates.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Transportation Law > Carrier Duties & Liabilities > Rates & Tariffs

Transportation Law > Carrier Duties & Liabilities > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Restraints of Trade

HN16 [blue document icon] Common Carrier Duties & Liabilities, Rates & Tariffs

In addressing the right of action that a violation of the antitrust laws give to one who has been injured in its business or property, the United States Supreme Court has stated that injury implies violation of a legal right. The Supreme Court concluded that the legal rights of a shipper as against a carrier in respect to a rate are measured by the published tariff. A rate is not necessarily illegal because it is the result of a conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Antitrust Act. What rates are legal is determined by the Act to Regulate Commerce. Under § 8 of the latter act, the exaction of any illegal rate makes the carrier liable to the person injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of any such violation.

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > Authorities & Powers

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Liability

HN17 [blue document icon] US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Authorities & Powers

When Congress has established an exclusive form of regulation, there can be no divided authority over interstate commerce. Under the filed rate doctrine, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission alone is empowered to make that judgment, and until it has done so, no rate other than the one on file may be charged.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Injunctions

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > Filed Rate Doctrine

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil, Gas & Mineral Interests > Purchase Contracts > Remedies for Breach

HN18 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Injunctions

Remedies for breach and non-performance of operating agreements approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) in the interstate wholesale electricity market fall within the exclusive domain of FERC.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > Filed Rate Doctrine

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Ratemaking Procedures

HN19 Filed Rate Doctrine, Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

The filed rate doctrine exists for reasons independent of the type of plaintiff maintaining the action. Those reasons include that: (1) legislatively appointed regulatory bodies have institutional competence to address rate-making issues; (2) courts lack the competence to set utility rates; and (3) the interference of courts in the rate-making process would subvert the authority of rate-setting bodies and undermine the regulatory regime.

Counsel: [**1] Counsel for Reorganized Debtors: Edward A. Smith, Esq., CADWALADER, WICKERSHAM & TAFT LLP, New York, NY; Mark C. Ellenberg, Esq., David F. Williams, Esq., Washington, DC.

California Attorney General: Bill Lockyer, Esq., Mark Breckler, Esq., Irene K. Tamura, Esq., Martin Goyette, Esq., STATE OF CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL, Sacramento, CA.

People of the State of California: Steven H. Felderstein, Esq., Paul J. Pascuzzi, Esq., Christa K. McKimmy, Esq., FELDERSTEIN FITZGERALD WILLOUGHBY & PASCUZZI LLP, Sacramento, CA.

Judges: ARTHUR J. GONZALEZ, United States Bankruptcy Judge.

Opinion by: ARTHUR J. GONZALEZ

Opinion

---

[*527] MEMORANDUM OPINION SUSTAINING DEBTORS' OBJECTION TO PROOFS OF CLAIM NOS. 12172-12174 AND 12252-12257 FILED BY BILL LOCKYER, ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

ARTHUR J. GONZALEZ, United States Bankruptcy Judge.

The Attorney General of the State of California (the "State") filed separate [*528] proofs of claim in unliquidated amounts on behalf of the People of the State of California (the "People") against Enron Corporation ("Enron Corp.") and certain of its affiliated entities, (collectively, the "Debtors") in the following nine cases: Enron (Claim No. 12173); ENA [**2] (Claim No. 12172); EPMI (Claim No. 12174); EESI (Claim No. 12255); Enron Energy Services, LLC (Claim No. 12254); Enron Energy Services Operations, Inc. (Claim No. 12257); Enron Energy Marketing Corp. (Claim No. 12256); and Enron Capital & Trade Resources International Corp. (Claim No. 12253) (collectively, the "Claims"). The Claims are based upon allegation that the Debtors improperly and illegally manipulated energy markets in California, overcharged for energy, and violated state and federal laws and regulations.

The issues before the Court are whether the Claims are preempted by the Federal Power Act (the "FPA") and precluded by the filed rate doctrine. The Court finds that because the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("FERC") has exclusive jurisdiction over interstate sales of wholesale electricity, the state laws sought to be enforced by the State in the prosecution of the Claims are preempted by the FPA. Further, the filed rate doctrine precludes consideration of such Claims.

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. The Debtors

Commencing on December 2, 2001, and from time to time continuing thereafter, the Debtors filed voluntary petitions for relief under [**3] chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"). On July 15, 2004, the Court entered an Order confirming the Debtors' Supplemental Modified Fifth Amended Joint Plan of Affiliated Debtors (the "Plan") in these cases. The Plan became effective on November 17, 2004.

B. The Claims

This litigation arises out of the California energy crisis of 2000-01. Prior to the crisis, the California legislature had passed Assembly Bill 1890 <sup>1</sup> to create two non-governmental entities, the California Power Exchange (the "PX") and the California Independent System Operator (the "ISO"), to operate markets and manage the sale of electricity. The PX and the ISO were organized under California law, but regulated by FERC. California v. Dynegy, Inc., 375 F.3d 831, 850 \(9th Cir. 2004\). The central transactions, wholesale sales of energy in interstate commerce, were governed by FERC approved rules and a FERC "jurisdictional" ISO and PX. Further, the centralized wholesale spot electricity markets operated by the ISO and the PX were established subject to FERC review and approval. Since August 2, 2000, FERC has commenced refund, partnership and gaming proceedings [**4] to investigate certain of the Debtors. FERC found that they engaged in gaming <sup>2</sup> in the form of inappropriate trading strategies and engaged in the deliberate submission of false information or the deliberate omission of material information. Enron Power Mktg., Inc., et al., 106 FERC P 61,024 \(2004\). Both proceedings [*529] are ongoing, including the determination of remedies by FERC.

On October 11, 2002, the State filed the Claims on behalf of the People, alleging that the Debtors have improperly and illegally manipulated energy markets in California, overcharged for energy, [**5] and violated state and federal laws and regulations during the west coast power crisis of 2000 and 2001. The State maintains that the Debtors' alleged conduct in the electricity market constitutes a violation of state antitrust law, specifically, the Cartwright Act,<sup>3</sup> the Unfair Competition Law,<sup>4</sup> and the California Commodity Law.<sup>5</sup> As a result of the Debtors' misconduct, as set forth in the Claims, the State seeks disgorgement, restitution, damages, civil and criminal penalties, and other relief, in an undetermined and unliquidated amount.

[**6] On March 4, 2005, the Debtors filed an objection to the Claims filed by the State, seeking to disallow the state claims on the ground that the FPA preempts state law and the filed rate doctrine precludes consideration of these claims.

On April 11, 2005, the State filed its response to the Debtors' objection, requesting the Court hold in abeyance the Debtors' objection to the Claims because FERC has not resolved and concluded many issues raised by the Debtors' objections in its refund, partnership and gaming proceedings. The State contends that it is authorized

<sup>1</sup> 1996 Cal. Stat. 854

<sup>2</sup> The ISO tariff, through the ISO's Market Monitoring and Information Protocol defines gaming, in part, as "taking unfair advantage of the rules and procedures set forth in the PX or the ISO tariffs, Protocols or Activity Rule . . . to the detriment of the efficiency of, and of consumers in, the ISO markets." Am. Electric Power Service Corp., et al., 103 FERC P 61,346 \(2003\).

<sup>3</sup> HN1 The Cartwright Acts prohibits agreements "to limit or reduce the production, or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity." CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 16720\(b\).

<sup>4</sup> HN2 The Unfair Competition Law prohibits unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business acts and practices. CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 17200.

<sup>5</sup> HN3 The California Commodity Law prohibits fraudulent acts or conduct in connection with the purchase or sale of a commodity. CAL. CORP. CODE §§ 29536-37.

under state law<sup>6</sup> to act as the representative of the People in bringing such actions. The State argues that it does not intend to infringe on FERC's jurisdiction. Instead, the State maintains that it seeks the enforcement of state law, a determination of the Debtors' liability under that law, and whatever relief may be afforded under those statutes.

[**7] A hearing on this matter was held before the Court on May 18, 2005 (the "Hearing"). At the Hearing, the State argued that the Court would not have to determine a rate. Rather, it contends that the Court can determine liability, and thereafter, can refer the matter to FERC for a determination of remedies.

II. The Parties' Contentions

The Debtors argue that the state law claims in the electricity market are preempted by the FPA because through the FPA, Congress vested in FERC exclusive jurisdiction over the transmission and sale of wholesale electric energy and a fortiori, over whether market participants' conduct violates FERC approved tariffs. Further, the Debtors argue that the filed rate doctrine precludes the state law claims because under the doctrine, once FERC determines that a rate is "just and reasonable," neither the states nor courts can modify that rate. Moreover, the Debtors contend that the state law claims still require the Court to either determine a nonmanipulated rate or to adjudicate whether a tariff was violated.

The State counters that the FPA does not occupy the field completely. In supporting its assertion, the State cites to [\[\*530\] California v. Federal Power Commission, 369 U.S. 482, 8 L. Ed. 2d 54, 82 S. Ct. 901 \(1962\)](#), [**8] Otter Tail Power Co. v. United States, 410 U.S. 366, 35 L. Ed. 2d 359, 93 S. Ct. 1022 \(1973\), and Public Util. Dist. No 1 v. IDACORP Inc., 379 F.3d 641 \(9th Cir. 2004\) to contend that the FPA does not preclude operation of other laws, or judicial adjudication of certain issues relating to wholesale energy markets regulated by FERC. Accordingly, the State maintains that the Court may decide whether the Debtors' various fraudulent gaming and market manipulation activities violate the Unfair Competition Law, the California Commodity Law, and the Cartwright Act.

Additionally, the State challenges the Debtors' assertion that it is impossible for the Court to avoid the determination of a nonmanipulated rate or the adjudication of whether a tariff was violated, if the state law claims are allowed to proceed before the Court. The State maintains that the state law claims here are unrelated to the ISO tariff. Thus, the State argues that the Court would not have to determine a nonmanipulated rate because FERC has done so. The State further seeks to hold the Debtors accountable for violations of state anti-fraud and consumer protection laws resulting from employing fraudulent and deceptive schemes. The [**9] State requests the Court to determine liability and then subsequently remand to FERC for a determination of remedies. According to the State, because the filed rates are not at issue before this Court, the filed rate doctrine should not preclude the state law claims. In addition, the State reasons that the filed rate doctrine applies only if rates are properly filed.

III. DISCUSSION

A. Legal Standard of Preemption

HN5 [↑] "Federal preemption of state law is rooted in the Supremacy Clause, Article VI, clause 2, of the United States Constitution." Transmission Agency of N. Cal. v. Sierra Pac. Power Co., 295 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2002). Where Congress manifests an intent to occupy an entire regulatory field, any remedy sought outside of the congressional scheme is considered completely preempted. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 481 U.S. 58, 63-64, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55, 107 S. Ct. 1542 \(1987\). Federal courts have rarely identified legislation which has been found to completely preempt state jurisdiction. Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams, 482 U.S. 386, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318, 107 S. Ct. 2425 \(1987\).

---

<sup>6</sup> HN4 [↑] Pursuant to CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 17204; CAL. GOVT. CODE § 12658; CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE §§ 16750\(c\), 16754, 16760, the State can prosecute violations of these state laws on behalf of the People.

Here, neither party raises the argument that complete preemption is applicable, nor is there any evidence in the [**10] record that would support the conclusion that Congress intended for complete preemption to apply in this case. HN6[↑] In the absence of an express preemption by Congress, state law is preempted (1) "when Congress intends that federal law occupy a given field." Silkwood v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 464 U.S. 238, 248, 78 L. Ed. 2d 443, 104 S. Ct. 615 (1984) ("Field Preemption"), and (2) "to the extent that state law actually conflicts with federal law, that is, when it is impossible to comply with both state and federal law, or where the state law stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment of the full purposes and objectives of Congress." Id. ("Conflict Preemption").

B. Preemption

1) Field Preemption

The Debtors, in support of their position that the state law claims should be barred by FERC's exclusive jurisdiction, cite to Grays Harbor, Dynegy, and Snohomish. These cases addressed FERC's exclusive jurisdiction and its remedial power concerning the wholesale electricity market. The state law claims in the instant [*531] case, alleging violations of state antitrust and unfair competition law, are nearly identical to those involved in the cited cases, and for the reasons set forth in those cases, [**11] field preemption is applicable here.

The Dynegy court ruled that HN7[↑] "state actions against wholesale electricity suppliers alleging violations of California's unfair business practices law are preempted by FPA because the conduct the state sought to condemn was expressly governed by the ISO tariffs and they encroach upon the substantive provisions of the tariff, an area reserved exclusively to FERC, both to enforce and to seek remedy." 375 F.3d at 852.

The Court finds that the statute's framework under the FPA supports the conclusion in Dynegy that FERC has been granted broad authority by Congress, in addition to the authority to determine the "just and reasonable rates" for wholesale power. The statute delegates to the Federal Energy Commission "exclusive authority to regulate the transmission and sale at wholesale of electric energy in interstate commerce except those which Congress has made explicitly subject to regulation by the states. . . . Retail sales of electricity and wholesale intrastate sales are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the states." Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. § 824-824m.

The State does not dispute that the transactions [**12] at issue involved wholesale interstate sales. Further, there has been no evidence presented or any representation by either party that the sales that gave rise to this dispute should be characterized as either retail sales of electricity or wholesale intrastate sales. HN8[↑] The statute provides that upon a determination by FERC that "any rate charge, or classification, demanded, observed, charged, or collected by any public utility for any transmission or sale subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, or that any rule, regulation, practice, or contract affecting such rate, charge, or classification is unjust, unreasonable, unduly discriminatory or preferential, the Commission shall determine the just and reasonable rate, charge, classification, rule, regulation, practice, or contract to be thereafter observed and in force, and shall fix the same by order." Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. § 824e (emphasis added).

Moreover, pursuant to the statute, HN9[↑] FERC possesses broad remedial authority to address anti-competitive behavior, specifically through profit disgorgement and refunds. Further, FERC can proceed by rulemaking rather than case-by-case adjudication, [**13] and can rely on general findings of systemic monopoly conditions and the resulting potential for anti-competitive behavior, rather than evidence of monopoly and undue discrimination on the part of individual utilities. Federal Power Act, §§ 205, 206(a), as amended, 16 U.S.C.A. §§ 824d, 824e\(a\); Department of Energy Organization Act, § 403(c), 42 U.S.C.A. § 7173\(c\).

In addition, after the deregulation of California energy markets, the central transactions, the wholesale sales of energy in interstate commerce, were governed by FERC approved rules and a FERC jurisdictional ISO and PX. Having examined FERC's regulatory authority over the deregulated electricity market in California, the Snohomish court concluded that "FERC is doing enough regulation to justify federal preemption of state laws under the market-based system of setting wholesale electricity rates." Snohomish, 384 F.3d 756, 760-61. For instance,

(1) FERC continued to oversee wholesale electricity rates by reviewing and approving a variety of documents filed by the PX and the ISO. FERC approved [*532] the market-based tariffs only upon a showing that the seller [*14] lacked or had mitigated its market power. (2) FERC required each seller to file quarterly reports under FPA § 205(c), 16 U.S.C. § 824d\(c\). (3) FERC reviewed and approved detailed tariffs filed by the PX and the ISO, which described in detail how the markets operated by each entity would function. Id.

In addition, "each participant in the PX and the ISO markets was required to sign an agreement acknowledging that the tariff filed by either the PX or the ISO would govern all transactions in that market." Id.

The Court also recognizes that HN10<sup>7</sup> "entities that transact through the ISO or [the] PX and engage in improper practices" are in violation of filed tariffs. . . . FERC and the Market Surveillance Unit are directed by the ISO's Market Monitoring and Information Protocol to refer matters to the FERC for enforcement." 103 FERC P 61,346.

[**15] The State does not contest FERC's jurisdiction in the electricity market. Rather, the State argues that field preemption is not applicable because courts have referred the state law claims related to filed tariffs to regulatory commissions. In supporting its assertion, the State cites the Supreme Court's decisions in Otter Tail Power and California v. Federal Power Comm'n. In both cases, the Supreme Court found that Congress does not intend to bar the government from bringing actions in violation of antitrust laws related to filed tariffs before regulatory commissions.

Having reviewed these cases, the Court disagrees with the State's argument and finds that two important differences exist. First, both cases discussed issues of the interaction between federal administrative law and federal antitrust law; thereby no state law preemption issue was presented in these cases. In California v. Federal Power Commission, a gas company filed a motion to dismiss the antitrust suit pursuant to the Clayton Act, § 7 as amended 15 U.S.C.A. § 18, or in the alternative, to stay it, pending completion of the proceedings for its authority to acquire another company's [*16] assets pursuant to the Natural Gas Act (the "NGA"), § 7(c) as amended 15 U.S.C.A. § 717f\(c\), before the Power Energy Commission. 369 U.S. at 483. In Otter Tail Power, the government brought an action against an electric power company to enjoin violations of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.A. § 2. 410 U.S. at 368. In order to protect market competition in certain cases, Congress did not expressly displace federal antitrust laws. The Court will not address whether Congress has left room for enforcement of state antitrust laws because the State does not argue that state antitrust law and federal antitrust law would be impacted the same way. Further, the Court notes that the Ninth Circuit in Snohomish and Dynegy did not discuss the issue of the similarity between California antitrust law and Sherman Act. In Snohomish, consumer utility in Washington sued generators and traders of wholesale electricity, for violations of California state antitrust and consumer protection laws. 384 F.3d 756. In Dynegy, Attorney General of the State of California brought state court actions against wholesale electricity suppliers for violations of California's unfair business practices law. 375 F.3d 831.

Second, and more importantly, a critical distinction between the instant matter and the two cited cases is that there is a regulatory scheme against anti-competitive behavior [*533] that has been entrusted to FERC. As the Court discussed above, the statute under 16 U.S.C.A. §§ 824d, 824e\(a\) provides FERC with broad remedial authority to address anti-competitive behavior. In fact, FERC has exercised this power to act in the proceedings instituted against the Debtors concerning alleged market manipulation during the energy crisis. FERC has asserted that it "can order" [*17] disgorgement of monies above the post-October 2, 2000 refunds ordered in the California Refund HN11<sup>7</sup> Since 1998, the ISO and the PX tariffs have contained provisions that identify and prohibit "gaming" and "anomalous market behavior" in the sale of electric power. "Anomalous market behavior" is (1) behavior that departs significantly from the normal behavior in competitive markets that do not require continuing regulation or (2) as behavior leading to unusual or unexplained market outcomes. Circumstances include a) withholding of generation capacity under circumstances in which it would normally be offered in a competitive market; b) unexplained or unusual redeclarations of availability; c) unusual trades or transactions; d) pricing and bidding patterns that are inconsistent with prevailing supply and demand conditions; and e) unusual activity or circumstances relating to imports from or exports to other markets or exchanges." 103 FERC P 61,346 \(2003\).

---

7

Proceeding, if it finds violations of the ISO and the PX tariffs and finds that a monetary remedy is appropriate for such violations. It can additionally order additional disgorgement of unjust profits for tariff violations that occurred after October 2, 2000." 103 FERC P 61,346. Further, HN12 [↑] "implicit in Commission orders granting market-based rates to the marketers is a presumption that a company's behavior will not involve fraud, deception or misrepresentation. Companies failing to adhere to such standards were and are subject to revocation of their market-based rate authority." 106 FERC P 61,024.

In contrast, the court in California v. Federal Power Commission concluded that the NGA did not contain a provision to immunize the carriers involved in the mergers from the Clayton Act. 369 U.S. at 485. "The Commission's standard, set forth in § 7 of the NGA, will serve the public convenience and necessity.' If existing natural gas companies violate the antitrust laws, the Commission is directed by § 20\(a\) to transmit such evidence' to the Attorney [**18] General." Id. at 486. Similarly, the Court in Otter Tail Power found that the limited authority of the Federal Power Commission to order interconnections was not intended to be a substitute for the Sherman Act. 410 U.S. at 375. Moreover, the Supreme Court in Carnation Co. v. Pacific Westbound Conference, 383 U.S. 213, 383 U.S. 932, 15 L. Ed. 2d 709, 86 S. Ct. 781 \(1966\) declined to grant antitrust immunity to a shipping company because "the provisions of the Shipping Act, 46 U.S.C.A. § 801, can not reasonably be construed as an implied repeal of antitrust regulation of the shipping industry's rate-making activities." Id. at 217. The Shipping Act does not give the Federal Maritime Commission (the "FMC") any mandate to regulate rate competition and the statutory scheme was designed to minimize the role of the FMC. Square D Co. v. Niagara Frontier Tariff Bureau, 476 U.S. 409, 422, 90 L. Ed. 2d 413, 106 S. Ct. 1922 \(1986\).

The State further argues that the state law claims related to wholesale energy have been allowed by courts in Grays Harbor and Gulf States Utils. Co. v. Alabama Power Co., 824 F.2d 1465 \(5th Cir. 1987\). The courts in both cases [**19] concluded that the state claims concerning contractual disputes were not within the scope of FERC's jurisdiction. The viability of the State's comparison depends on the substantial similarity of facts between the case before the Court and those two cited cases. The Court finds that the facts here are distinguishable. First, the state law claims in the cited cases were related to contractual issues, which exclusively fall within a state's jurisdiction. The court in Grays Harbor granted the utility leave to amend its complaint to seek declaratory relief only as to issues of contract formation. 379 F.3d. at 652-53. Similarly, the court in Gulf States held that executed contract performance, such as the failure to negotiate in good faith and fraud, were not preempted by the FPA. 824 F.2d at 1474. Here, no evidence or argument presented before the Court demonstrates that there is an issue involving contractual disputes. Second, contract formation issues would not necessarily intrude upon the [*534] rate-setting jurisdiction of FERC. Grays Harbor, 379 F.3d. at 653. Therefore, field preemption bars the State from pursuing its state law claims before [**20] the Court.

2) Conflict Preemption

As to conflict preemption, for the foregoing reasons, the Court disagrees with the State that the FPA only provides FERC with authority to determine the "just and reasonable" rates for wholesale power. Instead, FERC has broad authority concerning anti-competitive activities related to the filed rate. Accordingly, conflict preemption also bars the State from pursuing its state law claims before the Court.

C. Filed Rate Doctrine

Another threshold question before the Court is whether the Court would have to determine a tariff. HN13 [↑] The filed rate doctrine is essentially a rule of jurisdiction whose applicability is circumscribed by both the congressionally mandated jurisdiction of the regulatory agency and the occurrence of the triggering event of filing a rate or tariff. The filed rate doctrine is applicable where rates were filed with a federal regulatory agency and where the offending transactions are carried out with reference to a filed tariff. E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Encana Energy Servs., Inc., Case No.CV F 03-5412 AWILJO. at 15. The Court recognizes that the filed rate doctrine "forbids a regulated entity from charging rates [**21] for its service other than those properly filed with the appropriate federal regulatory authority." Ark. L.A. Gas Co. v. Frank Hall, 453 U.S. 571, 577-78, 69 L. Ed. 2d 856, 101 S. Ct. 2925 \(1981\). The Court also acknowledges that the purpose of the doctrine is "preservation of the agency's primary jurisdiction over reasonableness of rates and the need to insure that regulated companies charge only those rates of which the agency has been made cognizant." *Cleveland v. Federal Power Comm'n, 174 U.S. App. D.C. 1, 525 F.2d 845, 854 \(D.C. Cir. 1976\).*

The first argument made by the State is that the filed rate doctrine is inapplicable because no properly filed rates were on file during the period when the alleged conduct occurred. However, the State relied on the following finding in *California v. FERC, 383 F.3d 1006, 1016 \(9th Cir. 2004\)* to support its position "without the required filings, neither FERC nor any affected party may challenge the rate. Pragmatically, under such circumstances, there is no filed tariff in place at all." Id. This argument, however, inappropriately equates the Debtors' alleged violation of the filing requirements with no-filed tariffs. FERC required each seller to file [**22] quarterly reports pursuant to FPA § 205(c) 16 U.S.C. § 824d\(c\) on transaction-specific information about its sales and purchases at market-based rates. The court in Grays Harbor concluded HN14 "while market-based rates may not have historically been the type of rate envisioned by the filed rate doctrine, they do not fall outside the purview of the doctrine." 379 F.3d at 651.

Further, the Court agrees with the opinion of the California v. FERC court which concluded that HN15 "the reporting requirements are an integral part of a tariff, with FERC's implied enforcement mechanisms sufficient to provide substitute remedies for the obtaining of refunds for the imposition of unjust, unreasonable and discriminatory rates." 383 F.3d at 1016. On August 13, 2002, FERC's Initial Report in Docket No. PA02-2-000 concluded that the Debtors engaged in the deliberate submission of false information or the deliberate omission of material information.<sup>8</sup> Then, [*535] FERC concluded that such behavior constituted market manipulation and resulted in unjust and unreasonable rates and violated the express requirements in the orders allowing the Debtors to make sales [**23] at market-based rates. 106 FERC P 61,024. As noted by FERC, implicit in Commission orders granting market-based rates is a presumption that a company's behavior will not involve fraud, deception or misrepresentation. Companies failing to adhere to such standards were and are subject to revocation of their market-based rate authority. The Debtors were expressly directed, when they were granted market-based rate authority, to inform the FERC promptly of changes in status (which would include changes in their generation market shares) that reflect a departure from the characteristics that the FERC relied upon in granting market-based rate authority. Id.

Moreover, the Court in California v. FERC, indirectly recognized [**24] the application of the filed rate doctrine when marketers had not properly reported to FERC where such improper reporting affected the reasonableness of the tariff approved by FERC. 383 F.3d at 1016. Without the availability of retroactive refunds, "parties aggrieved by the illegal rate would have no FERC remedy, and the filed rate doctrine would preclude a direct action against the offending seller. That result does not comport with the underlying theory or the regulatory structure established by the FPA." Id.

The second argument made by the State is that the filed rate doctrine is not applicable because the issue presented before the Court is distinguishable from those in Grays Harbor and Snohomish. The plaintiff in Snohomish brought an action against a company that engaged in market manipulation during the energy crisis in violation of state antitrust and unfair competition law. The court confirmed that the filed rate doctrine applies because the court could not determine the rates that "would have been achieved in a competitive market." 384 F.3d at 761. Similarly, the court in Grays Harbor rejected the request from the plaintiff for [**25] a determination of the "fair price." 379 F.3d at 645. Here, the State argues that it is not asserting a price which should be paid in a competitive market as the benchmark for a calculation of a remedy. Rather, the State maintains that the remedy would be unrelated to the ISO tariff and the Court would not have to determine a non-manipulated rate because FERC has done so. The State argues that it is merely requesting the Court to determine liability, and thereafter, remand to FERC for a determination of remedies.

<sup>8</sup> FERC found that the Debtors failed to inform FERC in a timely manner of changes in their market shares that resulted from their gaining influence/control over others' facilities, as required under their market-based rate authorization. 106 FERC P 61,024.

The Ninth Circuit in California v. FERC examined the substance of the law and remanded to FERC for the determination of remedies. The court there declined to order refunds to a state because the court reasoned it was more appropriate for FERC to consider its remedial options in the first instance. 383 F.3d at 1018. The substantive law examined by the court in California v. FERC concerned whether retroactive refunds were legally available. Id. As such, no liability issue was raised and determined by that court. However, the Court finds that determining the liability or the legal right of the State against the Debtors for violation of the [\[\*\*26\]](#) antitrust laws would have to be measured by the tariff. Therefore, the filed rate doctrine would be applicable.

[\[\*536\] **HN16**\[!\[\]\(7196df618003dfe69225b54d4938115c_img.jpg\)](#)

In addressing the right of action that a violation of the antitrust laws give to one who has been injured in its business or property, the Supreme Court in Keogh v. Chicago & N.W.R. Y. Co., 260 U.S. 156, 67 L.Ed. 183, 43 S.Ct. 47 \(1922\), stated that "injury implies violation of a legal right." Id. at 163. The Supreme Court concluded that "the legal rights of [a] shipper as against [a] carrier in respect to a rate are measured by the published tariff." Id. at 163. Justice Brandeis explained "[a] rate is not necessarily illegal because it is the result of a conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Anti-Trust Act. What rates are legal is determined by the Act to Regulate Commerce. Under Section 8 of the latter act . . . the exaction of any illegal rate makes the carrier liable to the person injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of any such violation." Id. at 162. Thus, the finding of liability in antitrust laws would be integral to the Court's determination of whether the Debtors [\[\*\*27\]](#) are liable due to their violations of state antitrust law and unfair competition law. For instance, the Court could not determine the overcharge claim owed by the Debtors for any electricity market manipulation without first deciding the reasonableness of the filed tariff.

The Supreme Court case, Arkansas Louisiana, further supports the Court's position that the filed rate doctrine should apply here. "In asserting that the filed rate doctrine had no application, respondents in Arkansas Louisiana contended that the state court has done no more than determine the damages they have suffered as a result of the breach of a contract by a gas company." 453 U.S. at 579. The Supreme Court rejected this argument by reasoning that "the mere fact that respondents brought this suit under state law would not rescue it, for HN17 when Congress has established an exclusive form of regulation . . . there can be no divided authority over interstate commerce. . . . Under the filed rate doctrine, FERC alone is empowered to make that judgment, and until it has done so, no rate other than the one on file may be charged." [Id. at 580-84.

Moreover, to award monetary relief, [\[\*\*28\]](#) the Court would have to determine a "fair price." Thus, the filed rate doctrine bars the Court from awarding monetary damages sought by the State. Nonetheless, the Court finds that injunctive relief would also be unavailable to the State. The Court agrees with the Ninth Circuit's decision in Snohomish, which declined to grant injunctive relief because such relief is barred by the filed rate doctrine and preemption principle. 384 F.3d at 762. HN18 "Remedies for breach and non-performance of FERC-approved operating agreements in the interstate wholesale electricity market fall within the exclusive domain of FERC." [Dynegy, 375 F.3d at 836.

The decisions from the Second Circuit in Sun City Taxpayers' Association v. Citizens Utilities Co., 45 F.3d 58 \(2d Cir. 1995\) and Wegoland Ltd. v. NYNEX Corp., 27 F.3d 17 \(2d Cir. 1994\), provide an additional basis for dismissal of the Claims sought by the State. The Second Circuit in Sun City Taxpayers' Association affirmed the decision from the district court, which had declined the plaintiff's invitation to find a fraud exception to the filed rate doctrine. In determining whether [\[\*\*29\]](#) the filed rate doctrine applied, the court focused on the impact the court's decision would have on agency procedures and rate determination. Sun City Taxpayers' Ass'n v. Citizens Utils. Co., 847 F.Supp.281, 291 \(D. Conn. 1994\). The Second Circuit in Wegoland recognized that HN19[ the filed rate doctrine exists [\[\*537\]](#) for reasons independent of the type of plaintiff maintaining the action. Those reasons include that (a) legislatively appointed regulatory bodies have institutional competence to address rate-making issues, (b) courts lack the competence to set utility rates, and (c) the interference of courts in the rate-making process would subvert the authority of rate-setting bodies and undermine the regulatory regime. 27 F.3d at 21.

Therefore, having considered the policy objectives, the Court finds it is inappropriate to frustrate FERC's jurisdiction afforded by Congress. The Court lacks authority to impose a different rate than the one approved by a federal agent. Any other conclusion departing from this principle would undermine the filed rate doctrine. The Court, therefore, rejects the State's challenge to the application of the filed rate doctrine. Accordingly, the [**30] filed rate doctrine bars the relief sought by the State.

V. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court concludes that the state electricity market manipulation claims are preempted by the FPA and precluded by the filed rate doctrine. Therefore, the Court sustains the Debtors' objection to the Claims filed by the State.

Counsel for the Debtors is directed to settle an order consistent with this Court's Memorandum Opinion.

Dated: New York, New York

June 14, 2005

Arthur J. Gonzalez

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

---

End of Document

Stand Energy Corp. v. Columbia Gas Transmission Corp.

United States District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia, Charleston Division

June 14, 2005, Filed; June 14, 2005, Entered

CIVIL ACTION NO. 2:04-0867, consolidated with civil action nos: 2:04-0868; 2:04-0869; 2:04-0870; 2:04-0871; 2:04-0872; 2:04-0873; 2:04-0874

Reporter

373 F. Supp. 2d 631 *; 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11776 **; 2005-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P74,859; 166 Oil & Gas Rep. 147

STAND ENERGY CORPORATION, Plaintiff v. COLUMBIA GAS TRANSMISSION CORPORATION, et al., Defendants.

Subsequent History: [\[\*\*1\]](#) As Amended September 15, 2005.

Motion granted by, Dismissed by, in part Stand Energy Corp. v. Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20865 \(S.D. W. Va., July 5, 2005\)

Prior History: Case 2:04-cv-00867.

Stand Energy Corp. v. Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64477 \(S.D. W. Va., Jan. 6, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

rates, Shippers, tariff, Select, Pipeline, anti trust law, natural gas, damages, filed rate doctrine, motion to dismiss, transportation, preempted, regulated, output, violations, Energy, field preemption, antitrust claim, antitrust, failure to state a claim, preemption, prices, cases, plaintiff's claim, fair dealing, good faith, preferential, customers, independent cause of action, pipeline system

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\), a defending party may move to dismiss if the pleading party has failed to state a claim for which relief may be granted. A Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion tests the sufficiency of the pleading. It does not resolve factual disputes, the merits of a claim, or the applicability of defenses.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN2 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

373 F. Supp. 2d 631, *631L<sup>A</sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11776, **1

In considering a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss, the claims must be viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party and all allegations accepted as true. Dismissal is appropriate only when it appears beyond a doubt that no set of facts would entitle the pleader to relief.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Dismissal > Involuntary Dismissals > Failure to State Claims

HN3 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

The Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is viewed with disfavor and rarely granted.

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Distribution & Sale

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Common Carriers

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Exports & Imports

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Marketing & Transportation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Natural Gas Act > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Natural Gas Transportation

Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > Federal Powers

HN4 [] Natural Gas Industry, Distribution & Sale

Under § 717b of the Natural Gas Act, transporters and sellers of natural gas in interstate commerce are regulated by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. 15 U.S.C.S. § 717b. They must file their rates with the Commission and may charge only such rates as found by the Commission to be "just and reasonable." 15 U.S.C.S. § 717c\(a\). They may not grant any "undue preference or advantage," and they must file any change in their rates or services with the Commission in advance. 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 717c\(b\) and 717c\(d\). The Commission retains broad regulatory authority to determine the reasonableness of any rates or services. At its core, the filed rate doctrine recognizes the authority extended to the Commission, and not the courts, to determine the reasonableness of the rates stated in the filing. The doctrine achieves two goals - restricting the regulated entity to charging only the approved rates and preserving the regulatory agency's authority to determine those rates.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Natural Gas Act > Certificates of Need

HN5 [down] Exemptions & Immunities, Filed Rate Doctrine

The filed rate doctrine applies to more than just rates; it extends to the services, classifications, charges, and practices included in the rate filing. 15 U.S.C.S. § 717c\(c\). Similar statutory provisions have been found to support applying the doctrine to services that may not literally involve rates or rate-setting. Rates, however, do not exist in isolation. They have meaning only when one knows the services to which they are attached. Any claim for excessive rates can be couched as a claim for inadequate services and vice versa. In addition to barring suits challenging filed rates and suits seeking to enforce rates that differ from the filed rates, the filed-rate doctrine also bars suits challenging services, billing, or other practices when such challenges, if successful, would have the effect of changing the filed tariff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

HN6 [down] Filed Rate Doctrine, Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

A claim for compensatory damages may implicate the filed rate doctrine where it has the effect of challenging the filed rate. Even though the complaint may not explicitly challenge the filed rate, the court must consider whether the damages sought would effectively provide plaintiffs with a different rate than the one contained in the tariff. Courts therefore cannot permit any claim to go forward that, if successful, would require an award of damages that would have the effect of imposing different rates upon different consumers. Similarly, authorizing a court to award damages that would effectively impose a rate different from that dictated by the tariff would usurp the Federal Communications Commission's authority to determine what rate is reasonable.

Communications Law > Federal Acts > Federal Communications Act > Tariffs

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Natural Gas Act > General Overview

Transportation Law > Carrier Duties & Liabilities > Tariff Interpretation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Filed Rate Doctrine > Public Utilities & Telecommunications Carriers

HN7 [down] Federal Communications Act, Tariffs

The filed-rate doctrine precludes courts from deciding whether a tariff is reasonable, reserving the evaluation of tariffs to the Federal Communications Commission, but it does not preclude courts from interpreting the provisions of a tariff and enforcing that tariff. If the filed-rate doctrine were to bar a court from interpreting and enforcing the provisions of a tariff, that doctrine would render meaningless the provisions of the Federal Communication Act allowing plaintiffs redress in federal court. The Natural Gas Act contains a similar provision allowing suits in federal court. 15 U.S.C.S. § 717u.

Constitutional Law > Supremacy Clause > General Overview

373 F. Supp. 2d 631, *631L<sup>2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11776, **1</sup>

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Natural Gas Act > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Administrative Proceedings > Preemption

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Distribution & Sale

Energy & Utilities Law > Natural Gas Industry > Marketing & Transportation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Natural Gas Transportation

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Rates > General Overview

HN8 [blue icon] Constitutional Law, Supremacy Clause

Every state statute that has some indirect effect on rates and facilities of natural gas companies is not preempted. In determining whether the effect of a state claim results in preemption, the United States Supreme Court has articulated the following test: When a state regulation affects the ability of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to regulate comprehensively the transportation and sale of natural gas, and to achieve the uniformity of regulation which was an objective of the Natural Gas Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 717, or presents the prospect of interference with the federal regulatory power, then the state law may be preempted even though collision between the state and federal regulation may not be an inevitable consequence.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

HN9 [blue icon] Regulated Industries, Energy & Utilities

Immunity from the antitrust laws is not lightly implied.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

HN10 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Exemptions & Immunities

The existence of a regulatory structure designed to deter and remedy anticompetitive harm significantly reduces the need to apply traditional antitrust principles.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN11 [blue icon] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In ruling on a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss, the court must ascertain whether the complaint covers all of the elements that comprise the theory for relief.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN12 [blue icon] Private Actions, Standing

Injury to competition, is an essential element of every antitrust claim. An antitrust claim must assert that a defendant's conduct constitutes an unreasonable restraint of trade, not merely an economic injury to the plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

HN13 [blue icon] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

Competitors are not injured by mere price fixing whether the conspiracy sets maximum or minimum prices. To this end, price-fixing agreements are illegal but do not cause injury to competitors.

Counsel: For Stand Energy Corporation, PLAINTIFF CLASS: Natural Gas Marketing Customers Of Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation ("TCO") That Were Damaged By An Illegal Gas Scheme Perpetrated By Defendants, Plaintiff: Joshua I. Barrett, Lonnie C. Simmons, Molly McGinley Han, Rudolph L. DiTrapano, DITRAPANO BARRETT & DIPIERO, Charleston, WV.; Robert C. Sanders, LAW OFFICE OF ROBERT C. SANDERS, Upper Marlboro, MD.

For Triad Energy Resources Corporation, Energy Marketing Services, Inc., AGF, Inc., Advantage Energy Marketing, Inc., 1564 East Lancaster Avenue Business Trust, Nicole Gas Marketing, Inc., AtlantiGas Corporation, Consol Plaintiffs: Joshua I. Barrett, Lonnie C. Simmons, Molly McGinley Han, Rudolph L. DiTrapano, DITRAPANO BARRETT & DIPIERO, Charleston, WV.; Robert C. Sanders, LAW OFFICE OF ROBERT C. SANDERS, Upper Marlboro, MD.

For Columbia Gas Transmission Corporation, Columbia Gulf Transmission Company, Columbia LNG Corporation, CLNG Corporation, Columbia Energy Services Corporation, Defendants: G. Hamilton Loeb, PAUL HASTINGS JANOFSKY & WALKER, Washington, DC.; Johnny M. Knisely, II, Thomas R. Goodwin, GOODWIN & GOODWIN, [**2] Charleston, WV.

